Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the Delegate from Alaska if this contemplates that the Government of the United States in the future will construct this road through Canada or only the portion that goes through Alaska?

Mr. DIMOND. To the best of my knowledge, there is no effort on the part of anyone to have the Government of the United States build the portion of the road situated in Canada. I cannot answer for anyone except myself and repeat the statements of those with whom I have conversed.

Mr. TREADWAY. How long will the road be in Alaska which the Government will have to build if the Commission makes a favorable report?

Mr. DIMOND. One hundred and eighty-three miles.

Mr. TREADWAY. Too much.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States is requested, through such channels as he may deem proper, to negotiate and enter into an agreement or agreements between the Governments of the United States and of the Dominion of Canada, for the survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the Pacific northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia and Yukon Territory, in the Dominion of Canada, and the Territory of Alaska; in cooperation with the Government of the Dominion of Canada to cause a survey or surveys to be made to determine the most practicable route for such highways, as well as specifications and estimates of the probable cost thereof, and plans for financing its construction and maintenance.

SEC. 2. The President is hereby authorized, upon the conclusion of the negotiations and the execution of the agreement or agreements herein authorized, to designate such existing agency of the Government of the United States as he may select for this purpose, or such officials or agency as he may specially appoint or create for the purposes of this act, to carry on the work of survey and location of the route for such highway, and of the construction thereof after such route shall have been determined and approved by the President. And such agency or officials, so designated or appointed by the President hereunder, shall be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to communicate directly with a like agency or officials to be appointed by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, for the purpose of coordinating and expediting the work of such survey, location, and construction of such highway.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $100,000 for carrying on such negotiations and for making such surveys, locations, plans, and specifications; this sum, when appropriated, to remain continuously available until expended.

SEC. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the further sum of $2,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the President, through such agency as the President may designate hereunder, for the construction of the road or roads, within the Territory of Alaska, to connect the existing road system in the Territory of Alaska with the city of Dawson, in the Yukon Territory, Dominion of Canada: Provided, That no money shall be appropriated pursuant to the authorization contained in this section until the agreement or agreements provided for in section 1 have been entered into.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, line 23, strike out sections 3 and 4.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read as follows: "An act relative to the proposed survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and the Territory of Alaska."

PENSIONS FOR BLIND PERSONS IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5711) to provide pensions for needy blind persons of the District of Columbia and authorize the appropriations therefor, with a Senate amendment, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I may state that the amendment of the Senate simply changes the administration of the matter from a welfare board to the District Commissioners, and compels the children and grandchildren of blind persons who are able to take care of their parents or grandparents to protect them by keeping them off this list. They are to be responsible for them under the language of the bill.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what provision is made in the bill that will bring about that result? Does the bill require proper affidavits and proper penalties for violation?

Mr. PALMISANO. That is more a matter of administration.

Mr. McFARLANE. I understand that, but that is very important if we are to keep these people and their relatives from defrauding the Government in many instances. I know we found that to be true in Texas under similar laws.

Mr. PALMISANO. Of course, this is a District matter.

Mr. McFARLANE. We find a lot of them may thimblerig the Government as they do all over the United States.

Mr. PALMISANO. Of course, the Commissioners themselves will prescribe the rules and regulations, and no doubt will see to that.

Mr. McFARLANE. Are proper penalties for violation provided in the bill?

Mr. PALMISANO. They are not eligible unless they come within the rules and then in case of death, they have the right, if there is any estate, to recoup whatever the District has paid.

Mr. McFARLANE. Does the bill require all such assets to be properly itemized at the time they are declared eligible?

Mr. PALMISANO. Of course, the records of the Commission will show the amounts they receive.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMERCIAL AIRPORT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, with a Senate amendment, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Mr. PALMISANO, Mr. NICHOLS, and Mr. DIRKSEN.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 7199) to provide for the donation of certain Army equipment to posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with a Senate amendment, and disagree to the Senate amendment.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is this request?

Mr. McSWAIN. The request is to disagree to a Senate amendment which was offered by Senator GORE, who states he will move to recede when the bill comes over to the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

SURPLUS FEDERAL REAL PROPERTY

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2888) to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman explain this measure.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, this bill, which has been passed by the Senate and reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the House of Representatives, provides for the disposition of space outside the District of Columbia which has been declared surplus. It matches similar legislation now on the statute books with reference to the disposition of space within the District of Columbia.

Frequently a Government agency outside the District has space available and unused and if some other department cannot use it then the Government has to rent additional space when it really has space available for the purpose.

Mr. SNELL. Is that practically all your bill does—give them the right to do what the gentleman has just stated?

Mr. LANHAM. That, and also, after property has been declared surplus and there is no need for it, they can lease it temporarily and thereby get some revenue from it, or they can sell it if the necessity arises.

Mr. SNELL. Our experience has been in the disposition of surplus material from the Army and Navy that the matter has not been very well guarded, and we have not looked after it as carefully as possible, and I do not want to make the same mistake in regard to real estate.

Mr. LANHAM. This is an effort to look after that very thing and save money for the Government by not renting space when other space is available.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we know the Government has many buildings that have not been used for Government purposes, and they lease these buildings to individuals, who in turn rent them for the purpose of storage, thus competing with people who are engaged in that particular line of business. Has the gentleman in mind any particular buildings that are going to be turned over to someone who might make some money out of a proposition of this kind?

Mr. LANHAM. I may say to the gentleman that a representative of private building interests appeared before the committee, and I am offering a committee amendment which makes it entirely satisfactory to them.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this bill authorize the sale of any Government property.

Mr. LANHAM. It only authorizes the sale of Government property which has been declared surplus and in excess of needs and for which time has determined there is no use.

Mr. McFARLANE. What department is going to have the right to decide whether it is surplus?

Mr. LANHAM. The Treasury Department; and any agency can protest such decision, and it is subject to review by the President.

Mr. McFARLANE. Can they sell at a private sale?

Mr. LANHAM. The provisions of the bill are similar to the ordinary sales of this kind by the Government.

Mr. McFARLANE. Does it require public advertising or can they sell at private sale and thimblerig the Government?

Mr. LANHAM. The bill provides for public sale to the highest responsible bidder after the Department has publicly advertised it.

Mr. McFARLANE. Then it is a public sale after due publicity.

Mr. LANHAM. Yes.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Will this apply to the obsolete Army posts? There are 55 of them.

Mr. LANHAM. Military and naval reservations are excepted from the operation of the bill.

Mr. HOEPPEL. They should be included.

Mr. LANHAM. Well, we could take that up later, but they are exempted from the present bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding any other provisions of law, whenever any real property located outside of the District of Columbia, exclusive of military or naval reservations, heretofore or hereafter acquired by any Federal agency, by judicial process or otherwise in the collection of debts, purchase, donation, condemnation, device, forfeiture, lease, or in any other manner, is, in whole or in part, declared to be in excess of its needs by the Federal agency having control thereof, or by the President on recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Director of Procurement, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized (a) to assign or reassign to any Federal agency or agencies space therein: Provided, That if the Federal agency to which space is assigned does not desire to occupy the space so assigned to it, the decision of the Director of Procurement shall be subject to review by the President; or (b) to lease such real property on such terms and for such period not in excess of 5 years as he may deem in the public interest; or (c) to sell the same at public sale to the highest responsible bidder upon such terms and after such public advertisement as he may deem in the public interest.

SEC. 2. Whenever after investigation it is determined by the Director of Procurement that any such real property should be used for the accommodation of any Federal agency or agencies, the Director of Procurement is authorized to make any repairs thereto or alterations thereof which he deems necessary or advisable and to maintain and operate the same. To the extent that the appropriations of the Procurement Division not otherwise allocated are inadequate for such repairs, alterations, maintenance, or operation, the Director of Procurement may require each Federal agency to which space has been assigned therein pursuant to the provisions of section 1 of this act to pay promptly by check to the Procurement Division out of its appropriation for rent, either in advance of or upon or during occupancy of such space, all or part of the estimated or actual cost of such repairs, alterations, maintenance, and operation: Provided, That the total amount so to be paid shall be determined and equitably apportioned by the Director of Procurement among the Federal agencies to whom space has been so assigned: Provided further, That the amount so charged against any Federal agency shall be computed at a rate not in excess of that paid as rent by such agency immediately preceding such assignment for space in lieu of which space is so assigned to it, and if it is less the difference shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts: And provided further, That in the event such space is not assigned in lieu of existing space, the amount so charged shall be computed at a rate not in excess of that which the Director of Procurement determines, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, would have been paid as rent for corresponding space during the current fiscal year, and if it is less the difference shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. If a Federal agency subject to this proviso disagrees with the amount the Director of Procurement so determines would have been paid as rent, the determination of the Director of Procurement shall be subject to review by the President.

SEC. 3. The Director of Procurement, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is further authorized to procure space by lease, on such terms and for such period not in excess of 5 years as he may deem in the public interest, for the housing of any Federal agency or agencies outside of the District of Columbia, and to assign and reassign space therein in the same manner as is authorized with respect to surplus real property by section 1 of this act, and to require the Federal agencies to whom space is assigned therein to pay the total expenditures required under such lease during its entire term in the manner specified in section 2 of this act.

SEC. 4. The Director of Procurement, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. The term "Federal agency", as used in this act, means any executive department, independent establishment, commission, board, bureau, division, or office in the executive branch, or other agency of the United States, including corporations wholly owned by the United States.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 8, after the word "condemnation", strike out the word "device" and insert the word "devise."

Page 2, line 9, after the letter "(b)", insert "pending the sale", followed by a comma.

Page 4, line 8, after the word "Columbia", strike out the comma and insert "except the Post Office Department" with a comma.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table, and a similar House bill was laid on the table.

PUBLICATION OF STATISTICS OF TOBACCO

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2215) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. RICH. I will ask the gentleman to explain the bill.

Mr. CHAPMAN. The purpose of this is to make some amendments to the present law in regard to tobacco statistics. The history of the legislation is that a number of years ago the statistics law was passed authorizing the Government to collect statistics as to the amount of tobacco in the hands of tobacco dealers and manufacturers each year, for statistical purposes and for the benefit of the Department of Agriculture and of the tobacco growers.

After a few years' experience we found that those statistics were of comparatively little value, for the reason that some manufacturers, according to reliable information, would take the cheapest grades of tobacco, unsalable and unusable tobacco, even down to the floor sweepings gathered up from the warehouse floors, and keep that tobacco in stock merely for statistical purposes, and with no intention of using it in the manufacture of tobacco products. That was the strongest legislation which it was possible to obtain at that time. Afterward we secured an amendment providing that they should make reports not only of the aggregate amount of tobacco on hand but also should report by groups of grades, which in the case of burley amounted to six groups, namely, A, B, C, X, S, and N. That is the present law.

We have found that system inadequate for obvious reasons, although it also was the best obtainable at the time of its adoption. I shall take as an example "U. S. type 31", according to the Government classification. That is burley tobacco, which, blended with the bright leaf of North Carolina, goes into the manufacture of most of the popular brands of cigarettes, of which burley leaf forms the base. The most important group of burley is the B group. There are numerous classifications within the B group of burley tobacco, according to color and quality, and those groups range in price from $2 per hundred pounds to around $30 per hundred pounds, so that when the report goes out that the manufacturers have in stock a certain number of million pounds of B group of burley tobacco it does not tell how much of that tobacco is the $2 quality and how much is the $30 quality. The farmer wants the reports to differentiate between tip, leaf, and filler. That means something to him.

That enables them to manipulate the market, and it keeps the Government in the dark and the grower in the dark. I had an experience in 1933, when my colleague from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] and I spent several weeks in Washington during the recess of Congress working with Dr. J. B. Hutson, his assistants in the Tobacco Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and representative Kentucky tobacco growers, in conference with the spokesmen of the principal tobacco manufacturers, trying to agree on a price which they would pay for that tobacco upon delivery by the growers before any processing tax was collected.

We ran into this difficulty all the way through. Their representatives would say that they had a certain number of million pounds, but we had no way of knowing what the quality or value of that tobacco was. We believe this bill will prevent the recurrence of that difficulty.

The Agriculture Committee reported this bill unanimously. It was prepared by me in collaboration with important groups of tobacco growers and the representatives of the Department of Agriculture. No opposition has been expressed to it by any part of the tobacco trade. Its purpose is to assist tobacco growers, and the growers and their representative are for it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What additional expense will there be for the Government?

Mr. CHAPMAN. We estimate that there will be very little, if any, additional expense. In requiring these grades to be reported, according to color and quality, thereby furnishing the information needed and desired by the Department of Agriculture and the tobacco growers, it will place an additional burden upon the trade in making those reports, and additional work on the Department of Agriculture in collecting and publishing them. But we believe that is compensated for by the fact that we provide for eliminating the requirements of the present law, that they report these groups by separating them into old crops and new crops, which differentiated has been of no practical value to growers of tobacco.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I imagine the main purpose of the bill is to provide additional jobs for Democrats?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Not at all. It is not contemplated that it will require much, if any, additional force. These reports are invaluable and are greatly needed by the tobacco growers of the country and at the same time it is estimated that there will be little, if any, increase of work and expense to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. As long as it does not require any more employees, I shall not object.

Mr. McFARLANE. For the benefit of the gentleman from Massachusetts, let me say that if it did provide any additional jobs, the Democrats would not get them.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am not so optimistic as that.

Mr. CHAPMAN. The bill provides also that no statistics shall be required of anyone owning or having in stock less than 50,000 pounds of leaf tobacco. That protects the small dealer from making reports that would be of no benefit to the growers.

Tobacco growers want this bill passed. Most of the county control committees selected by the growers to administer the production-control program of the A. A. A. have endorsed it. We believe, as they believe, that it will benefit them very much.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Does this apply to burley tobacco only?

Mr. CHAPMAN. No; it applies to all tobaccos. With the approval of the Department of Agriculture one of the amendments written into the bill was that which includes Puerto Rican tobacco for the protection of cigar-tobacco producers in a State like that which the gentleman from Pennsylvania so ably represents.

Mr. HAINES. Will the gentleman say whether he is going to ask for four reports a year as in the past?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Yes; and also for the publication of an annual report.

Mr. HAINES. I think it is a lot of foolishness to have four reports a year. It is ridiculous.

Mr. CHAPMAN. We exempt from the operation of the law the small manufacturers.

Mr. HAINES. The cigar manufacturers do not need four reports a year.

Mr. CHAPMAN. There is not a line in this bill to injure any honest manufacturer, and all who have considered its provisions are convinced that its enactment will be of great benefit to the producers of this great money crop upon which millions depend for a living and which pays nearly half a billion dollars annually into the coffers of the Federal Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will report the committee amendment.

There was no objection, and the Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture', approved January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"'That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to collect and publish statistics of the quantity of leaf tobacco in all forms in the United States, owned by or in the possession of dealers, manufacturers, quasi-manufacturers, growers' cooperative associations, warehousemen, brokers, holders, or owners, other than the original growers of tobacco. The statistics shall show the quantity of tobacco in such detail as to types, groups of grades, and such other subdivisions, as to quality, color, and/or grade for particular types, as the Secretary of Agriculture shall deem to be practical and necessary for the purposes of this act, shall be summarized as of January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year, and an annual report on tobacco statistics shall be issued: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall not be required to collect statistics of leaf tobacco from any manufacturer of tobacco who, in the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, according to the returns of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, manufactured less than 35,000 pounds of tobacco, or from any manufacturer of cigars who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, manufactured less than 185,000 cigars, or from any manufacturer of cigarettes who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding year, manufactured less than 750,000 cigarettes: And provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture may in his discretion omit the collection of statistics from any dealer, manufacturer, growers' cooperative association, warehouseman, broker, holder, or owner who does not own and/or have in stock, in the aggregate, 25,000 pounds or more of leaf tobacco on the date as of which the reports are made. For the purposes of this act, any tobacco which has deteriorated on account of age or other causes to the extent that it is not merchantable or is unsuitable for use in manufacturing tobacco products shall be classified with other nondescript tobacco and reported in the "N" group of the type to which it belongs.'

"SEC. 2. Section 2 of the said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture shall establish standards for the classification of leaf tobacco, and he is authorized to demonstrate such standards, to prepare and distribute samples thereof, and to make reasonable charges therefor. He shall specify the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades, which shall be included in the returns required by this act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall prepare appropriate blanks upon which the returns shall be made, shall, upon request, furnish copies to persons who are required by this act to make returns, and such returns shall show the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades and such other information as the Secretary may require.'

"SEC. 3. Section 5 of the said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 5. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have access to the tobacco records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and of the several collectors of internal revenue for the purpose of obtaining lists of the persons subject to this act and for the purpose of aiding the collection of the information herein required, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the several collectors of internal revenue shall cooperate with the Secretary of Agriculture in effectuating the provisions of this act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have access to the stocks, stock records, and internal-revenue records of all persons or firms subject to this act and may make such examinations and inspections as he shall deem necessary for the purposes of this act.'"

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROTECTION OF DOMESTIC SOURCES OF TIN

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of H. R. 4754, to provide for the protection and preservation of domestic sources of tin.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. FADDIS. This is a bill to prohibit the exportation of tin scrap from the United States, except on permission of the President. Various foreign countries have been draining us of the tin scrap within the United States, which tin scrap is our only source of secondary tin metal, as we produce no virgin tin in the United States. They are destroying our detinning industry in doing so.

Mr. TABER. That particular bill was up for consideration last year, as I remember it, and we went into it quite thoroughly and we found that the amount of exports were comparatively small and it was not a good thing.

Mr. FADDIS. The gentleman is mistaken. The bill was passed last year and it was vetoed by the President because of a pending tin investigation by another committee. Since that time that committee has found that they cannot get their legislation in shape to pass at this time and they want this bill to protect it until it does get through. There is a great deal of tin scrap exported from the United States all the time.

Mr. TABER. Why should there be such a lot of tin scrap exported? Are foreign sources prepared to pay much more than domestic sources?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes; because of the fact that in getting this tin scrap there are certain foreign nations that also get high-grade steel along with the tin scrap that they use for armor plate. In order to do that and also in order to destroy our detinning industry they will pay exorbitant prices for it. It is not the fact that they want the tin. The fact is that they want to destroy the detinning industry in this Nation, which acts as a reserve in time of war.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Is it a fact that scrap tin went from $2 a ton to $18 a ton? Japan is buying most of this tin. From 23 to 30 percent of all the tin used in this country is reclaimed tin.

Mr. TABER. How much is raw tin?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Raw tin—about one-quarter of 1 percent is produced in this country.

Mr. FADDIS. Does the gentleman mean what is the price of raw tin?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. FADDIS. Raw tin has taken a tremendous jump in the last few days. I could not tell the gentleman exactly the price, but I think it is about $125 per hundred.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. Can the gentleman tell us what caused tin to jump that way?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes. It is a combination on the part of the nations of the world which control the tin deposits, of which we have none whatever. We produce no tin in the United States, except from our detinning plants.

Mr. TABER. This bill prohibits exportation?

Mr. FADDIS. Except on permission of the President. It provides that our supply of tin scrap can be protected in case war should be pending. Then we can stop the exportation of tin scrap from the country in order that we may have that much tin within the country. At times, as high as 45 percent of the tin we have used in the United States came from the detinning of tin scrap.

Mr. TABER. I understand that the people who operate canning factories have been obliged, because of the situation that was created, in order to get by, to put in plants of their own, and that there were only two of those detinning plants in the United States which operated, and that they had an unduly depressed price for scrap tin. There is a great deal in that situation.

Mr. FADDIS. I think the gentleman is mistaken in the number of detinning plants. There are two in New Jersey; there is one in Pittsburgh; there are several in Chicago. There are quite a few detinning plants in the country.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. RICH. What is the object of trying to prohibit the exportation of any products that we might have in this country today when we have been talking about trying to secure the business of foreign countries? If the people in this country want to sell their tin and can get more in foreign countries than they can from people who want to buy it in this country, why should they not have the privilege of selling it to foreign countries?

Mr. FADDIS. It is a matter of protecting the industry within the United States, which acts as a reserve in time of war.

Mr. RICH. What industry?

Mr. FADDIS. The detinning industry. If the detinning industry in the United States is destroyed, then in case of emergency we have nothing to fall back upon, because we produce no tin in this country.

Mr. RICH. Would the country suffer if we shipped this tin out? People could get it from other sources.

Mr. FADDIS. We would be forced to import that much more. If we can keep our detinning plants running, we can employ just that many more men.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS]?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PENSIONS TO WIDOWS OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8421) granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 23, strike out lines 21 to 24, inclusive.

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Sarah A. Martin, widow of Edgar C. Martin, late of Company K, Sixth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Belle Shanholtzen McGary, widow of Wilson McGary, late of Battery F, First Regiment Ohio Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ella A. Barker, widow of James H. Barker, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lucy W. Farwell, widow of Selah B. Farwell, late of Company A, Thirty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lottie Flint, widow of Samuel H. Flint, late of Company D, Twelfth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Bordwell, widow of Rufus Bordwell, late of Company A, One Hundred and Seventeenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lydia C. Wark, widow of George D. Wark, late of Company D, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Helen R. Benson, widow of Emry J. Benson, late of Company C, One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Regiment Ohio National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Celia K. Crow, widow of Benjamin F. Crow, late of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Margaret Ledgerwood, widow of Samuel Ledgerwood, late of Company E, Fifty-eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Anna M. Shumaker, widow of John H. Shumaker, late of Company B, Twenty-fifth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Jermima E. Trowbridge, widow of Lorenzo Trowbridge, late of the Battery, Thirteenth Wisconsin Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Pearl F. Warren, widow of Valentine F. Warren, late of Company A, Thirty-sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Belle Harmon, widow of James A. Harmon, late of Company A, Thirty-fifth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elnora Shirk, widow of William A. Shirk, late of Company E, Thirteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Emeline Valentine, widow of Jefferson Valentine, late of Company K, Thirty-sixth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Ida Cox, widow of Andrew Cox, late of Company F, Twelfth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary C. Smith, widow of John H. Smith, late of Company D, Fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Martha A. Childs, widow of Addison Childs, late of Company A, Thirtieth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Ann Fox, widow of Clarence K. Fox, late of Troop M, Third Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Florence L. Collins, widow of Austin F. Collins, late of Company C, Ninety-ninth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Carrie L. Warner, widow of Peter Warner, late of Company D, Thirty-sixth Regiment Iowa Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Nightingale, widow of William H. Nightingale, alias William H. Raymond, late of Company C, Seventieth Regiment New York Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Christiana L. Todd, widow of Silas Newton Todd, late of Company D, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Alice H. Palmer, widow of George R. Palmer, late of Company I, Nineteenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Angie L. Moulton, widow of Charles E. Moulton, late of Troop G, First Regiment District of Columbia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Nellie Fredericks, widow of Louis N. Fredericks, late of Company A. Twelfth Regiment Michigan Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elsie Blanchard, widow of David B. Blanchard, late of Troop E, First Regiment Maine Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary L. Bryant, widow of William H. Bryant, late of the Nineteenth Unassigned Company Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ida Miller, widow of Alfred F. Miller, late of Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Minnie Phelps, widow of Charles E. Phelps, late of Company K, Fifteenth Regiment Michigan Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Minnie L. Stewart, widow of Jeremiah P. Stewart, late of Company B, Forty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Annie J. Maddox, widow of John H. Maddox, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Abbie V. Hull, widow of Americus K. V. Hull, late of Telegrapher's Corps, Civil War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary A. Phillips, widow of William T. Phillips, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Beesie Kirkman, widow of Lorenzo D. Kirkman, late of Company C, Eighty-first Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Josephine Morton, widow of Edward R. Morton, late of Troop I, Ninth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elizabeth J. C. Young, widow of James S. Young, late of Company C, Nineteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Lee Pryor, widow of John M. Pryor, late of the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ann E. Rickards, widow of T. M. Rickards, late of Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Theresa Elizabeth Mapes, widow of Rufus Mapes, late of Company I, Second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Angeline M. Rolfe, widow of Lemuel Rolfe, late of Company C, Twenty-fifth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Addie M. Mandeville, widow of Charles R. Mandeville, late of Company G, One Hundred and Fifty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Perry, widow of William Perry, late of Company —, One Hundred and Ninety-third Regiment New York Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Juriah Hyden, widow of Allen C. Hyden, late of Company C, Three Forks Battalion Kentucky State Troops, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mattie Sebastian, widow of Charles Sebastian, late of unassigned company, One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Maggie Wilson, widow of John W. Wilson, late of Company C, South Cumberland Battalion Kentucky State Troops, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elianor Green, widow of William F. Green, late of Company D, Seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ella Noe, widow of George Noe, late of Company F, Twenty-eighth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lydia Ann Hollingsworth, widow of Henry C. A. Hollingsworth, late of Company F, One Hundred and First Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Minnie Harrison, widow of John P. Harrison, late of Company K, Ninth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Nancy C. Buck, widow of Bethewel A. Buck, late of Troop D, Fifth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elizabeth M. Runnels, widow of Elisha Runnels, late of Troop I, Twelfth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Jennie Alexander, widow of William J. Alexander, late of Troop A, Second Wisconsin Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Matilda Davison, widow of Burnett Davison, late of Company B, One Hundred and Twelfth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lottie A. Torrance, widow of Stiles C. Torrance, late of Company E, One Hundred and Third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Clara V. Crossland, widow of George T. Crossland, late of Battery L, First Illinois Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary P. Champion, widow of Orison B. Champion, alias George McDonald, late of Company G, First Regiment Delaware Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ida Lott, widow of Gamaliel Lott, late of Troop D, Third Missouri Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Sarah J. Lake, widow of ———, late of Company I, Sixteenth Michigan Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Martha C. Smith, widow of Justin M. Smith, late of Troop L, Fifth Regiment ——— Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Annie W. Austin, widow of Lloyd W. Austin, late of Company G, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Militia Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Elsie M. Cotton, widow of Dennet Cotton, late of Company K, Twenty-eighth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and upon reaching the age of 60 years, $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Lina Buckley, widow of George W. Buckley, late of the Eleventh Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Harriet V. Carson, widow of Harlan P. Carson, late of Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-third Regiment Illinois Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Margaret E. Lackey, widow of John H. Lackey, late of Company C, South Cumberland Battalion Kentucky State Troops, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Emily S. Marlett, widow of Charles T. D. Marlett, late of Company H, First Regiment Minnesota Mounted Rangers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mariah A. House, widow of William House, late of Company A, Thirtieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Ida R. Haynes, widow of Asbury F. Haynes, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Maine Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Kitty A. Miller, widow of James Miller, late of Company F, Eighty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Laura A. Spanswick, widow of Frank Spanswick, late of Company H, Fourth Kentucky Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Charlotte C. Oliver, widow of William Oliver, late of Company H, Twentieth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Troutman, widow of William D. Troutman, late of Company G, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Indiana Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Amanda Bastian, widow of Huston N. Bastian, late of Company H, One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Dora J. Mayberry, widow of William H. Mayberry, late of Company G, Twenty-fourth Regiment Missouri Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mattie M. Jarrett, widow of Philip Jarrett, late of Company I, One Hundred and Eighty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month, and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Pratt, widow of Alfred Pratt, late of Company D, Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Martha J. Ward, widow of Iverson M. Ward, late of Company D, Sixty-eighth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Jessamine L. Benson, widow of Thomas S. Benson, late of Company A, Twentieth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month, and when she attains the age of 60 years, $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Alice E. Pillsbury, widow of George E. Pillsbury, late of Company D, First Regiment West Virginia Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Emma Williams, widow of Marian Williams, late of Company K, Eighteenth Regiment Illinois Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Mary Hart, widow of John Hart, late of Company B, Seventy-second Enrolled Militia of Missouri, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Martha E. Cox, widow of Warren Cox, late of Company I, Ninth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:

"The name of Dixie Louise Shane, widow of John Wesley Shane, late of Company K, Forty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Ila May Grindell, widow of Pearl L. Grindell, late of Company I, Twenty-eighth Regiment Maine Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Elizabeth Fahrenwald, widow of Charles Fahrenwald, late of Company F, Fifteenth Regiment New York Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Carrie Taylor Shockley, widow of Jasper Taylor, late of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Margaret E. Srout, widow of George Srout, late of Company C, One Hundred and Ninety-third Regiment Ohio Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Lenora B. Easterday, widow of Simon P. Easterday, late of Company D, Ninety-sixth Regiment Ohio Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 72, after line 18, insert:
"The name of Mary L. Robinson, widow of Joseph E. Robinson, late of Company A, Twenty-fifth Indiana Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SECREST]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PENSIONS TO FORMER WIDOWS OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8422) granting pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 1, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive.
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Nancy Jane Ruffin, former widow of Samuel Spires, late of Company E, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Hannah A. Smith, former widow of George H. Hermeling, late of Company G, Fifty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Sarah J. Langdon, former widow of Hiram Lewis, late of Company D, Three Forks Battalion Kentucky State Troops, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Iva B. Erickson, former widow of Jonathan F. Whitson, late of Troop K, Eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Effie Howard, former widow of Ednoch J. Hewitt, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Sarah J. Parker, former widow of Berry Parker, late of Troop D, Eighth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month."
Page 6, after line 4, insert:
"The name of Lucy A. Rose, former widow of Ross Reed, late of Company D, Sixty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SECREST]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WIDOWS OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8423) granting increase of pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman if the appropriate committee has considered this bill?

Mr. SECREST. This bill and the three following bills were considered and unanimously passed in the House. These are Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 6, after line 22, insert:
"The name of Sarah J. Pitts, former widow of Christian Ellendorf, late of Battery F, First Regiment United States Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 6, after line 22, insert:
"The name of Lovina Kenyon, former widow of Andrew F. Kenyon, late of Company K, Eighty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 6, after line 22, insert:
"The name of Ellen Mullis Baker, former widow of Robert Mullis, late of Company E, Ninety-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 6, after line 22, insert:
"The name of Carnelia A. Damrell, former widow of Adonis Anderson, late of Company E, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PENSIONS TO WIDOWS OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 8424, an act granting increase of pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 15, strike out lines 6 to 9, inclusive.
Page 20, strike out lines 18 to 22, inclusive.
Page 22, strike out lines 15 to 18, inclusive.
Page 33, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive.
Page 54, strike out lines 9 to 12, inclusive.
Page 66, strike out lines 11 to 14, inclusive.
Page 75, strike out lines 10 to 13, inclusive.
Page 76, strike out lines 3 to 7, inclusive.
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Lena Bradshaw, widow of John W. Bradshaw, late of Company B, Second West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Minnie Mahler, widow of Paul R. Mahler, late of Company C, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Jane A. McNelly, widow of Matthew McNelly, late of Company B, Fourth Battalion District of Columbia Militia Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Martha J. Morgan, widow of Elijah Morgan, late of Company H, First West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Hannah Morrison, widow of Perry A. Morrison, late of Company F, Twenty-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Mary L. Parker, widow of Robert S. Parker, late of Company H, Forty-fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Mary A. Phillippi, widow of William Phillippi, late of Company H, First Provisional Battalion Pennsylvania Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."
Page 86, after line 8, insert:
"The name of Ellen M. Thomas, widow of John H. Thomas, late of Troop C, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Nancy J. Walker, widow of Adam R. Walker, late of Company A, Sixty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Terressa Willoughby, widow of Francis Willoughby, late of Company A, Twenty-ninth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Drusilla Wright, widow of James F. Wright, late of Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Eliza A. Perry, widow of Henry A. Perry, late of Troop E, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Lydia J. Barton, widow of Thomas J. Barton, late of Company I, Fourteenth Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Fred E. Barton, helpless and dependent son of said Lydia J. Barton, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further, That in the event of the death of Lydia J. Barton, the name of said Fred E. Barton shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $20 per month from and after the date of death of said Lydia J. Barton."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Lizzie Wilford, widow of Louis Wilford, late of Company K, Forty-seventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Fowler, widow of John Fowler, late of Troop I, Thirteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Letha C. Durflinger, widow of Virgil M. Durflinger, late of Company K, Twenty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Polly Fuller, widow of Harry Fuller, late of Company I, Eighty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Rachel Heizman, widow of Christopher Heizman, late of Company I, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Regiment National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Alice V. Keeler, widow of David A. Keeler, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Margaret Jane Loar, widow of Thomas M. Loar, late of Company C, Sixty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Lucy Montgomery, widow of Russell E. Montgomery, late of Troop D, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Anna Robinson, widow of John Robinson, late of Company D, Fifth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Amelia Shultz, widow of John L. Shultz, late of Company A, Twenty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Tennessee F. Maynard, widow of John H. Maynard, late of Troop F, Fifth Regiment Tennessee Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Blanche C. Hurd, widow of Charles E. Hurd, late of Company K, First Regiment Minnesota Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Martha L. Trefethen, widow of Epps A. Trefethen, late of the Sixth Battery, First Battalion Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Charlotte W. Stevens, widow of Alfred A. Stevens, late of Company F, Seventh Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Frances V. Morrill, widow of Warren J. Morrill, late of Company B, Sixth Regiment New Hampshire Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Susie D. Hanscome, widow of John W. Hanscome, late of Troop D, Second Regiment Maine Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary Coles, widow of Samuel Coles, late of Troop I, Thirteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Elizabeth Burrell, widow of Albert M. Burrell, late of Company H, First Battalion, Seventeenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Elizabeth Dunn, widow of Peter Dunn, late of Company E, Seventeenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Catherine Merritt, widow of William Merritt, late of Company A, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Kate O'Donnell Wood, widow of Frederick B. Wood, late of Company A, Twenty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Catherine A. Riley, widow of William Riley, late of Company F, Ninety-second Regiment New York Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Dora White, widow of Frank G. White, late of Company K, Eighty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Annie S. Wynne, widow of John Wynne, late of Company F, Seventy-eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Achsah E. Purinton, widow of Granville Purinton, late of Company C, First Regiment Maine Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary C. Boothe, widow of John A. Boothe, late of Company G, Twenty-seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Louisa J. Rubbendall, widow of Jeremiah Rubendall, late of Battalion I, First Illinois Volunteer Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Anna Olson, widow of Halver H. Olson, late of Company I, Eighty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Emma J. Bratton, widow of Joseph M. Bratton, late of Company E, Twelfth Regiment Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Laurence C. Southwick, widow of George Southwick, late of the First Battery Vermont Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Jasper, widow of Robert D. Jasper, late of Troop C, Ninth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Alzina M. Wilson, widow of Robert B. Wilson, late of Company G, Seventy-second Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary Watkins, widow of Charles M. Watkins, late of Company H, Seventy-first Regiment New York State Militia Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Lucy S. Kemp, widow of Charles B. Kemp, late of Company F, Fifty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Missouri E. Griffith, widow of William L. Griffith, late of Company A, Fourth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Dora Bridges, widow of Owen W. Bridges, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Wooten, widow of John Wooten, late of Troop C, Ninth Regiment Kansas Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Fanny Cunningham, widow of Josephus Cunningham, late of Company H, Seventy-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Amelia Mathias, widow of Hans Mathias, late of Company I, Fifty-third Regiment Illinois Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Lillie Dowdney, widow of Abraham Dowdney, late of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-second Regiment New York Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of May S. King, widow of David W. King, late of Company E, Fifteenth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Mary E. Stevenson, widow of Melvin S. Stevenson, late of Battery F, First Maine Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Page 86, after line 8, insert:

"The name of Ruth A. Dana, widow of Loren C. Dana, late of Company H, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving."

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PENSIONS TO CERTAIN HELPLESS AND DEPENDENT CHILDREN OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8425) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain helpless and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has this bill been considered by the House committee?

Mr. SECREST. Every one of these bills has been considered by the House committee.

Mr. RICH. When consideration was given to them was a quorum present?

Mr. SECREST. There was a quorum present when they were reported to the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 26, strike out lines 17 to 21, inclusive.

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of John C. Denbo, helpless child of Marcus L. Denbo, late of Company D, One Hundred and Forty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Hulda Dodds, dependent child of James Dodds, late of Company H, Tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of William Edward Fugatt, dependent child of Edward Fugatt, late of Company A, Fourth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Alma Blance Shipman, dependent child of Wesly C. Shipman, late of Company F, Nineteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Clarence Edward Shipman, dependent child of Wesley C. Shipman, late of Company F, Nineteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Minnie O. Draper, dependent child of Alvin L. Draper, late of Troop B, First Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Frank C. Comstock, dependent child of Daniel E. Comstock, late of Company K, Twenty-seventh Regiment Massachusetts Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Alzurah Long, dependent child of Samuel Long, late of Troop E, Thirteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Floreilla Roe, dependent child of Eli Roe, late of Company D, One Hundred and Fifty-second Regiment Ohio National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Catherine Ott, dependent child of Jacob Ott, late of Company C, One Hundred and Sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Viola May Snow, dependent child of George Snow, late of Troop D, First Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Earnest G. Harvey, dependent child of Thomas D. Harvey, late of Company B, Sixty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Warren A. Small, dependent child of Nathaniel P. Small, late of Company E, Thirteenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Roland Burkhart, dependent child of Napoleon B. Burkhart, late of Battery —, Thirteenth Regiment Ohio Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of John Doane Gardiner, dependent child of Asa B. Gardiner, late of Ninth and Twenty-second United States Infantry, and First United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Lottie Rumrill, dependent child of Moses C. Rumrill, late of Company G, Seventh Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Jacob R. Stiltner, dependent child of Frederick Stiltner, late of Company I, Thirty-ninth Regiment Kentucky Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Fieldon Adkins, dependent child of James P. Adkins, late of Company G, Forty-seventh Regiment Kentucky Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Sam H. Hadley, helpless child of Edwin Hadley, late of Company C, South Cumberland Battalion Kentucky State Troops, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Joseph F. Haynes, helpless child of John R. Haynes, late of Company B, Third Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Mable Forrer, helpless and dependent child of John Forrer, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Willard Hyser, helpless child of Judson Hyser, late of Company D, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Blanche Walker, helpless child of William C. Walker, late of Company A, Eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Edward Morgan, helpless child of Sylvester Robinson, known as Charles Morgan, late of Company H, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Lizzie Sarver, helpless child of Henry H. Sarver, late of Company I, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Regiment Indiana Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Nellie Minerva Woodward, helpless child of James T. Woodward, late of Company G, Thirty-first Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Frederick L. Long, helpless child of Edward F. Long, late of the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Ada Hooker, helpless child of Enoch Hooker, late of Company K, Forty-fourth Regiment Missouri Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of William Henry Kelly, helpless child of William Kelly, late of Company I, Ninety-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Charles Rufus Koon, helpless child of Isaac Koon, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Hattie Jane Koon, helpless child of Isaac Koon, late of Campany D, Sixth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Fannie R. Sperzel, helpless child of Lewis Sperzel, late of Company K, Ninety-third Regiment Indiana Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of John Wesley Heal, helpless child of Henry A. Heal, late of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Page 29, after line 5, insert:

"The name of Roy Joyce, helpless and dependent child of Minos Joyce, late of Company H, Fourteenth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

The Senate amendments were agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PENSIONS TO CERTAIN SOLDIERS OF THE CIVIL WAR

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8426) granting pensions to certain soldiers of the Civil War, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 5, strike out lines 1 to 4, inclusive.

Page 5, after line 4, insert:

"The name of Taylor C. Lyon, late of Company K, Seventy-seventh Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month."

The Senate amendments were agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SQUAW ISLAND FREIGHT TERMINAL CO.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1817) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., against the United States in respect of loss of property occasioned by the breaking of a Government dike on Squaw Island.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what calendar is this bill on?

Mr. BLOOM. On the Consent Calendar.

Mr. RICH. Why bring it up out of its regular order?

Mr. BLOOM. For the simple reason that it was brought up sometime ago. It was heard by the subcommittee. The objectors at that time [Mr. MCFARLAND and Mr. COSTELLO] have withdrawn their objection. The bill has passed the Senate and has passed the House once before.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims of the United States, notwithstanding the lapse of time or any statute of limitations or other limitations upon the jurisdiction of such court, to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., for just compensation to it for loss of property and/or damages occasioned by the breaking of an inadequate and/or improperly and insufficiently constructed Government dike on Squaw Island between Black Rock Canal and the Niagara River in December 1921 and January 1922.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

POST OFFICE AT COLUMBUS, MISS.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8977) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a site for the erection of a post-office building at Columbus, Miss.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the Post Office Department recommended this building?

Mr. RANKIN. This is not for a building; it is for a site.

Mr. RICH. Why bring the bill up in this way?

Mr. RANKIN. This bill is not for the erection of a building; it is to permit a building to be erected on the sixteenth section.

One hundred years ago, when this land was taken over from the Indians, there was a provision inserted in the law to the effect that every sixteenth section should be leased for 99 years for school purposes. The Post Office Department investigated and has decided they need this bill passed to permit them to build on one of these sixteenth sections.

Mr. RICH. What is the size of this town?

Mr. RANKIN. Between 12,000 and 14,000 population.

Mr. RICH. And the bill has been recommended by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; it has.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the availability of appropriated moneys therefor, is authorized, in his discretion, to acquire a new site in the city of Columbus, county of Lowndes, State of Mississippi, and to construct a post-office building thereon.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury may acquire such site by lease rather than by purchase, if in his discretion it is deemed desirable that the site should be located in section 16, fractional township 18, south of range 18, west of the basis meridian of Madison County, Ala., in which section the said city of Columbus is in large part situated; in which case the Secretary of the Treasury may lease such site from the mayor and city council of the city of Columbus, at such rental as he deems reasonable, for a term of 99 years from the 1st day of August 1921, renewable forever, as provided by acts of the Legislature of Mississippi approved December 13, 1830 (Laws of Mississippi, 1830, ch. II), and March 20, 1914 (Laws of Mississippi, 1914, ch. 462), or may obtain by assignment, by condemnation, or otherwise, an existing lease, for the same term, of such site.

SEC. 3. There is authorized to be appropriated, without regard to the limitations of section 322 of part II of the Legislative Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, approved June 30, 1932, such amounts as may be necessary to pay the installments of rent provided for in a lease obtained pursuant to the authority contained in section 2 of this act: Provided, That the first annual installment of rent and the original purchase price, if any, of such lease shall be paid out of any funds made available for the acquisition of the site and the construction of a building thereon.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SUITS UNDER SECTION 19, WORLD WAR VETERANS' ACT, 1924

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 65, to extend the period of suspension of the limitation governing the filing of suit under section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the resolution?

Mr. RANKIN. I may say to the gentleman from New York that this resolution has been unanimously recommended by the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. It has already passed the Senate, and I am sure the gentleman will have no objection to it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That in addition to the suspension of the limitation for the period elapsing between the filing of the Veterans' Administration of the claim under a contract of insurance and the denial thereof by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs or someone acting in his name, the claimant shall have 90 days from the date of such denial within which to file suit as herein provided. This resolution is made effective as of July 3, 1930, and shall apply to all suits now pending against the United States under the provisions of section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, and any suit which has been dismissed solely on the ground that the period for filing suit has elapsed but wherein the extension of the period for filing suit as prescribed herein would have permitted such suit to have been heard and determined, may be reinstated within 90 days from the date of enactment of this resolution: Provided, That on and after the date of enactment of this resolution, notice of denial of the claim under a contract of insurance by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs or someone acting in his name shall be by registered mail directed to the claimant's last address of record.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANKIN: Page 1, line 4, strike out the word "of" and insert the word "in."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

VETERANS SERVING IN RUSSIA DURING WORLD WAR

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 9116) to extend the provisions of veterans' laws and regulations to persons who served in Russia during the World War, and their dependents.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think a matter of this kind should be explained.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I will ask that the Clerk read the bill. It is short and when read will be self-explanatory I may say to the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding any provisions of Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, and the veterans' regulations issued pursuant thereto, for the purpose of payment of pension for disability not shown to have been incurred in military or naval service, the World War shall be deemed to have ended April 1, 1920, for those persons who served with the United States military forces in Russia.

SEC. 2. Veterans who entered active military service subsequent to November 11, 1918, and who served with the United States military forces in Russia prior to April 2, 1920, and their dependents, shall be entitled to the benefits of Public Law No. 141, Seventy-third Congress, provided they meet the other requirements thereof.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman should make some explanation of the bill. Why should we make special exception to these particular veterans?

Mr. RANKIN. We do not make any special exception, I may say to the gentleman from New York. There are a few of these men involved who were sent to Russia. Of course, so far as they were concerned they did not know whether we had declared war on Russia or not. The average veteran did not ask when he got into the war whether war had been declared on a particular country or not. There are just a few of these men involved who have been deprived of some of the benefits which accrued to other veterans of the World War.

Mr. SNELL. Were they regular enlisted soldiers?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes. I may say to the gentleman from New York and also to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this does not apply to civilians at all.

Mr. FADDIS. Or to railroad employees either?

Mr. RANKIN. No.

Mr. McFARLANE. And it does not cover employees outside of the Government service, but only those who had enlisted in the Army or Navy at that time?

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. SNELL. Why did not these men receive the benefits that the other World War veterans received?

Mr. RANKIN. In the passage of the Economy Act there was a limitation that left these men out. I believe we brought them up to the armistice when as a matter of fact these men were fighting after the armistice closed.

Mr. THURSTON. The facts are that these men served longer than the average World War veteran served and their service was very arduous and in a very cold climate.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mrs. KAHN. When the gentleman says Russia, does that include Siberia, where a number of these men served?

Mr. RANKIN. If they were in the Regular Establishment and served in Siberia at that time this would apply to them.

Mrs. KAHN. It would apply to them?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes. This merely wipes out the discrimination that was caused inadvertently.

Mrs. KAHN. There were men in the Regular Army who were sent over to Siberia and suffered great hardships. They could not get any benefits at all. That is the reason I wanted to make sure this bill covered them and that the word "Russia" would include Siberia.

Mr. MILLARD. Does the bill have the approval of the Veterans' Bureau and of General Hines?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. How many men does this affect?

Mr. RANKIN. I do not know the exact number, but it will be very small.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXCHANGE OF CERTAIN PARK LANDS IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3353) providing for the exchange of certain park lands at and near Western Avenue and West Beach Drive for other lands more suitable to the development of Rock Creek Park and the street system of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, this simply calls for the exchange of private property for park property adjacent to Rock Creek Park so there may be a consolidation. It calls for an exchange of land and there is no money involved.

Mr. SNELL. Here in the District?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Here in the District. It has the endorsement of the District Commissioners.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. We cannot hear back here, and I would like to know what we are doing. Will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. RANDOLPH. As I stated previously, this bill simply calls for an exchange of property. The National Capitol Park and Planning Commission has found there is a certain needed amount of private property which they would like to consolidate with their park property. It is perfectly agreeable with the owner of the private property to make this exchange of land so that there may be no interruption to the park property in Rock Creek Park.

Mr. McFARLANE. What does the exchange involve, and how does the Government come out?

Mr. RANDOLPH. It is an exchange of private property in the amount of 58,500 square feet for 55,000 square feet of Government land.

Mr. McFARLANE. What about the location? What is the valuation of the property for taxation purposes? What is the comparative value of the property to be exchanged? In other words, does the Government win or lose by the trade?

Mr. RANDOLPH. The Government does not lose by the trade. It is an even exchange and consolidates the park property in keeping with the permanent policy for highways in the District of Columbia.

Mr. McFARLANE. I understand all about the consolidation, but I am wondering who is going to get the best of the trade? Is there going to be proper safeguards placed around this transaction to protect the Government?

Mr. RANDOLPH. As Chairman of the Subcommittee on Parks and Playgrounds, I may say it is an equal trade. The District Commissioners believe it is an equal trade, and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission believes it is a fair exchange.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to extend Beach Parkway northward to Western Avenue as provided for by the plans of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for the park system of the District of Columbia and to preserve the flow of water in Rock Creek Park and to extend West Beach Drive to connect Beach Drive and Rock Creek Park with Western Avenue, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to convey by and on behalf of the United States of America to the owners of parcel 78/5, or to such party or parties as said owner or owners shall designate, the title of the United States in and to a piece of land containing approximately 55,000 square feet at and near the intersection of Western Avenue and West Beach Drive as proposed in accordance with the plan of the permanent system of highways of the District of Columbia, being a part of reservation 339: Provided, That the owners of said parcel 78/5 shall furnish the United States of America with a good and sufficient title in fee simple, free of all encumbrances, to that piece of land lying along and east of the center line of West Beach Drive as proposed in accordance with the plan of the permanent system of highways of the District of Columbia, and extending east to the creek immediately north of the present north line of United States reservation 432 and extending north to United States reservation 339 and containing approximately 58,500 square feet: Provided further, That the owners of parcel 78/5 dedicate to the District of Columbia for street purposes the west half, 45 feet in width, of West Beach Drive as proposed in accordance with the plan of the permanent system of highways of the District of Columbia, along their property immediately north of the north line of reservation 432.

SEC. 2. The dedication and transfers provided for in section 1 are designated approximately upon plat file no. 3.9–97 in the files of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The dedication and conveyances shall be by proper deed and other instruments containing full legal description by exact survey of the land exchanged and dedicated as provided for by law.

SEC. 3. Nothing in this act shall be construed as curtailing the power of the Secretary of the Interior to sell the remainder of parcel 4 as provided for in Public Law No. 299, Seventy-second Congress, and should the exchange and dedication as provided for in section 1 fail to become effective the Secretary of the Interior is still authorized to sell the entire area of parcel 4 as provided for in that act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

USE OF PIPE LINES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3270) to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and are hereby, authorized and empowered to grant permission to the Decatur Corporation, a corporation organized in the State of Delaware, owner of that part of square 1067, bounded by L Street SE. on the north, Fourteenth Street SE. on the west, Fifteenth Street SE. on the east, and to the right-of-way of the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington Railroad on the south, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, its successor and assigns, to lay down, construct, maintain, and use not more than five pipe lines for the carriage of petroleum and petroleum products from a point or points north of said railroad right-of-way within square 1067, in and through Fifteenth Street SE. due south to the pier-head line of the Anacostia River.

SEC. 2. That all the construction and use provided for herein shall be under such regulations and rentals as the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may make and establish in connection therewith and all plans and specifications for such construction shall be subject to their approval. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have full authority to designate the location and to cause such repairs or relocation of said pipe lines as the public necessity may require, any such repairs or relocation to be at the expense of the Decatur Corporation, its successors or assigns.

SEC. 3. That no permission granted or enjoyed hereunder shall vest any title or interest in or to the land within Fifteenth Street SE.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATE OF NEBRASKA

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1864) for the relief of the State of Nebraska.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 3646, as amended, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the issue of a duplicate check is hereby authorized and directed, without the requirement of an indemnity bond, said check to be a duplicate of original check numbered 15757, drawn by the disbursing clerk, Department of Agriculture, January 17, 1934, in favor of "State treasurer of Nebraska, trust fund", for $10,451.12 and lost, stolen, or miscarried in the mails.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman should explain this bill. If I recall correctly, the gentleman spoke to me about it, and the bill is just for the purpose of giving a new check for one that was lost.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is correct.

Mr. SNELL. And, as I understand, there is proof that the check has never been cashed or found?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is correct.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AIRPLANE LANDING FIELD IN HAWAII

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7974) to withdraw and restore to their previous status under the control of the Territory of Hawaii certain Hawaiian homes lands now in use as an airplane landing field.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, what does this bill do?

Mr. KING. This land is set aside for Hawaiian home settlement and this particular small area is being used as a commercial airport and we want to restore it to the control of the Territory so it can be developed as such. The bill is introduced at the request of the Governor.

Mr. SNELL. From what committee does this bill come?

Mr. KING. From the Committee on Territories and it was reported unanimously by that committee.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will this bill cost the Government anything?

Mr. KING. Not a cent.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That so much of section 203 of title 2 of the act entitled "Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920", approved July 9, 1921 (42 Stat. 108), as designates the land hereinafter described as "available lands" within the meaning of that act, is hereby repealed and the land restored to its previous status under the control of the Territory of Hawaii.

On the Island of Molokai: Those portions of Hoolehua, apana 2, and Palaau, apana 2, comprising the Molokai airplane landing field as set aside for public purposes by Executive Order No. 307 of the Governor of the Territory of Hawaii, dated December 15, 1927, consisting of 204⅞ acres, more or less, and particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the southeast corner of the said land, from which the azimuth (measured clockwise from true south) and distance to United States Coast and Geodetic Survey Triangulation Station Middle Hill (Kaulapuu) is 272°23'39", 12,720⅞ feet, thence from said point of beginning by metes and bounds; 85°10'30", 3,427 feet; 180°56'30", 2,630⅞ feet, 279°55'30", 4,907⅞ feet, 346°20', 342⅞ feet near west edge of Kakainapahao Gulch; 3°26', 427⅞ feet; 83°24', 1,468⅞ feet; 5°58', 571⅞ feet to the point of beginning.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect upon its approval.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATURALIZATION OF CERTAIN ALIENS

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 286) to authorize the naturalization of certain aliens residing in the United States prior to February 9, 1923, and now married to native-born citizens of the United States.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think we should have an explanation of this joint resolution.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, this bill affects but one alien and it is brought up for the relief of one person who came here as a student, tried to become a citizen and before his citizenship could be made complete, a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States made it impossible for him to do so. He is married to an American girl.

Mr. SNELL. This is not the bill I thought it was. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That notwithstanding the racial limitations contained within section 2169 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 359), and within section 14 of the act of May 6, 1882, as amended (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 363), any alien heretofore ineligible to citizenship because not a free white person or of African nativity or of African descent may be naturalized under this act if he—

(a) Prior to July 1, 1924, was lawfully admitted to the United States;

(b) Prior to February 19, 1923, had filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States;

(c) And who since that date has maintained a legal residence in the United States;

(d) And who has been and now is married to a native-born citizen of the United States; upon compliance with all the requirements of the naturalization laws, except—

(e) No certificate of arrival and no declaration of intention shall be required.

(f) No additional residence shall be required before the filing of the petition for citizenship; and

(g) The petition for citizenship shall be filed with a court having naturalization jurisdiction prior to January 1, 1937.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 7, after the figures "363)", strike out lines 7, 8, and 9, and on page 2, strike out down to and including line 8, and insert: "Kam N. Kathju, if found otherwise admissible to citizenship, may be naturalized under this act."

Page 2, line 17, after the word "to", strike out the words "January 1, 1937", and insert "the expiration of 4 months immediately following the effective date of this act."

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read, "Joint resolution for the relief of Kam N. Kathju."

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 332, a privileged resolution, and ask that the Clerk report the same. I may say that I shall move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the House of Representatives at the earliest possible moment such information as may be in possession of the Post Office Department showing the result of an investigation by said Department of the alleged violation of the postal laws and regulations by the Federal Housing Administration by the unauthorized and illegal use of the "penalty envelop" for purposes other than for official business, and also what action, if any, has been taken by said Department to enforce the law and to inflict penalties upon its violators.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HITLERISM IS FOUNDED ON TYRANNY AND INTOLERANCE

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, Hitlerism is founded on tyranny and intolerance.

Where intolerance flourishes, justice and liberty wither and die.

A system founded on the principles of intolerance, prejudice, injustice, and fear is a menace to the world. For such a system is in direct conflict with the great constructive forces that shape the destiny of nations.

That is why all liberals feel that Hitlerism is something to be condemned by lovers of liberty and justice everywhere.

More particularly should free Americans be aroused to the menace to free thought and free institutions that Hitlerism exemplifies.

This great Nation of ours was founded on the sacred belief in religious and political liberty. A free people, free to choose and follow their own religion, is the foundation of America. With this goes political liberty, social justice, and free speech. When we find these principles throttled and opposed in any nation, through any system, we must protest. For the very spirit of liberty is menaced everywhere when it is menaced anywhere.

We, as Americans, recognize the full right of every people to choose their own form of government, without interference from any other nation. But when a government takes overt steps against sound and just principles recognized as basic, other nations are bound to take notice.

Authorities we are bound to accept assure us that in Germany religious liberty is gone. In that land where a love of freedom broke out in 1919 and was nobly expressed in the Weimar Constitution, we now find persecution, discrimination, tyranny, and all kinds of injustice.

Those who have always respected the sound basis of German character are amazed to find that nation under base and unlightened leadership now denying freedom of religion to their people and taking shocking measures to enforce outrageous edicts.

When to the persecution of her Jewish nationals Germany adds the denial of their right to worship in their own churches to established and recognized Christian creeds, the world stands aghast.

We all recognize that every protest must be made here in this free country; Germany must be made to realize that the people and the Government of the United States deplore and resent those acts of her Government that violate the principles of free speech, free press, and the right for every man and woman to worship according to his or her conscience.

Civilized mankind everywhere stands aghast at the monstrous, brutal, and inhuman pogrom of the present German Government.

I, therefore, urge that every possible measure be taken in this country to influence Hitler into the ways of sanity.

JANESVILLE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including a speech of my father, the Lieutenant Governor of Wisconsin, on the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Janesville, Wis.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following speech of Lt. Gov. Thomas J. O'Malley on the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Janesville, Wis.

As the Governor is absent from the State upon business of great concern to all the people of Wisconsin, it falls to me to represent the State of Wisconsin and to present the congratulations of the chief executive upon this centennial celebration of the settlement and founding of this community.

I appreciate with what mixed views an occasion of this character is considered, especially by those who participate in it. To some it is an excuse for getting together for a good time; to some it is an incentive to temporarily spur business and hustle trade; to some it is an opportunity for old friends and their families to be reunited and to renew the strongest ties of life; to some it is an occasion to bring back the historical facts and traditions of the origin, the struggles, the failures, and the successes of the men and women who have builded this community. In the consideration of the great achievements of these hardy pioneers and of the many years of development, and of the principles which motivated and kept alive the faith of these men and women, we find not only justification for the happiness of the present, but the basis of a new faith to inspire the belief that however worthy and glorious may have been the past a greater and a more glorious future lies ahead.

One hundred years, looking backward, is a short time. Looking forward, it is a long, long time. The sturdy men and women who came out of New York and New England and other places in the East, and from Norway and Ireland, to make the first settlements of this community, standing in the doorway of Henry Jane's log cabin and looking over the fields, could not realize the wonderful changes that were to be wrought not only in the physical aspects of the immediate community, but in the mode of life of the generations to succeed them. Henry Jane, in his day, did not experience great difficulty in running away from and keeping ahead of the railway. Neither he nor any of those hardy pioneers who first hewed the ash and the maple that lined the Rock River ever visioned this present community with great factories, with splendid places of business, with magnificent churches and schools, and above all, a city of more than 22,000 intelligent, educated men and women and children, all of whom now have available to them opportunities for improvement and culture and comforts which were not available to the wealthiest a hundred years ago.

It is not my purpose to attempt any review of the years that have passed since the first white men made settlement at this point on the Rock River. Many here can tell more of the struggles and achievements of the hardy pioneers who tamed the wilderness in this section, of their accomplishments in business, of their contributions to the framing of the constitution and the laws of this State, of their effective promotion of education and religion, of art, and of literature, of how broadly they builded here a community which is not only an honor to, but through all its years has been a great factor in the building of, and in bringing glory to Wisconsin.

Without particularizing as to the work of individuals, I want to say that from the very beginnings of Wisconsin as a Territory of the United States, and as a State, Janesville and Rock County, through the vision and experience of its citizenry and through their devotion to the ideals which brought them in the first instance to this section of the country, always furnished a leadership which not only was honored but was looked up to by the other parts of this State. In law, in medicine, in Government, in the maintenance of its loyalties to the United States, in the leadership which submerged party to the common good, this community has maintained a place of love and affection in the hearts of the people of this State.

Brave, fearless, independent men, fired with one ambition, namely, that they should build here a new civilization which would express in every phase of its life, the highest ideals of American manhood and American womanhood; that would preserve the liberties guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States, and bettered in the constitution of Wisconsin, and that this soil should be maintained always as the home of that perfect and orderly freedom so essential to the success of a democratic form of government.

In looking back to the sacrifices which the men of this community made when the slave power challenged the Government of the United States, I feel justified in saying that Wisconsin again could look to this community for right thinking, for patriotic action, and for individual sacrifices so necessary in times of national stress in order to solve the problems which now confront this State and this country. I have faith that the men of Janesville of today will not fall behind the great examples of sacrifice found in the lives of the pioneers of this community, and of the men who in the Civil War times made supreme sacrifices in order that our Government should be preserved for the welfare of all of its people. With a new expression of an old problem, this State and this country today face a new crisis. It will call for the best there is in each of us, and I have faith that Janesville and Rock County in this hour of trial will be true to its heritage of the true ideals of American manhood, and will do its part to continue our country on a plane to promote the true happiness of all of its people.

TAX-EXEMPT BONDS

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may insert in my extension of remarks on the issue of tax-exempt securities a short letter published in the Hood River paper from a farmer who has suffered foreclosure.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago, on this floor, in discussing the tax bill, I incidentally mentioned that I had signed the petition to discharge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the resolutions offered in this House for adopting a constitutional amendment providing that there be no further issuance of tax-exempt bonds. The resolutions also carried instructions to devise ways and means for taxing, so far as possible, the so-called "tax-exempt securities" now existing. The discharge of the committee would bring before us for immediate action this very important fiscal matter.

Following my brief remarks upon this subject, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of this House defended at considerable length the action of his committee in refusing to bring to the floor for our consideration the constitutional amendment referred to. In reply to the explanation of my colleague from Texas, I wish to say that nothing that he has said so far has in any way, manner, or form shaken my belief that there should be no tax-exempt securities issued in this Nation. I cannot see how he could have made many converts by his remarks.

The Judiciary Committee Chairman first stated that, practically speaking, there were no tax-exempt securities in this country. To this old farmer from the Northwest that was an astonishing statement, even though it came from as great an authority as Judge HATTON SUMNERS, a man who has been favored by many reelections to the Congress and holds such an important chairmanship.

I do not know what he means by that expression, "There are no tax-exempt securities, practically speaking." I have seen the figures stated as high as forty billions. That may not be a large sum to my Texas colleague, but to me, an Oregonian, it is colossal, and it must appear so to all who suffer under the burden of excessive taxation, especially when it bears on real property used for homes and farms.

I do not know that anyone knows the exact amount, but one high in Government authority recently admitted that there were more than fifteen billions of Government securities that were entirely exempt from taxation. The income from the other fifteen billions of Government bonds is partially exempt. Since I have been a Member of Congress we have authorized the issuance of two billions of bonds for farm mortgages and four and three-fourths billions for home loan, making a total of six and three-fourths billions entirely exempt from taxation.

We do know that the Nation's debt now approximates thirty billions, the income of which is only partially taxed. A careful study, with accurate calculations, should be made so that the truth may be known in regard to the exact amount of income-bearing Government securities that bear no part of the burden of government, as well as the amount of securities where the income is partially taxed.

I do not think anyone will deny that the tax-exempt securities and the income from them, practically all exempt from taxation, amount to more than thirty billions. I have heard it stated in this House as high as fifty billions, which is 20 percent of the entire wealth of the Nation.

The three States in the Pacific Northwest that I know best are Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, the old Oregon country, a marvelous section of fertile lands and grassy plains, a magnificent region with untold millions of kilowatts of electricity in our snow-fed rivers not yet harnessed, forests the greatest in the world, and still the assessed value of those three States is only three billions. Tax-exempt securities in the United States is 10 times, perhaps 15 times, the assessed value of this important part of this Federal Union. So I think the statement of the learned judge that "practically speaking, there are no tax-exempt securities", is wholly and entirely erroneous. In his remarks he further stated that he would have to increase the interest on the bonds, if the income became subject to taxation. I will admit this is probably true. He further said that the interest now paid for Government securities is very low, owing to that tax-exempt feature. This is also probably true, but it is certainly no reason why we should build up in this country an aristocracy of tax-exempt bondholders.

PUBLIC DEBT THE WRONG POLICY

Easy credit has ruined many a business man. It is just possible that credit has been too easy for this administration. Our children must pay these debts or repudiate them. Either course spells trouble and possible disaster to our national life to which they are our heirs. Laws of inheritance are never set aside in such cases of debt, nor are the privileged classes likely to lose their gains. We must protect our citizen heirs by a constitutional provision against any tax-exempt bonds, giving assurance that there shall be no class of citizens exempt from the burdens of citizenship while sharing or monopolizing its privileges. Pending the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing for taxation of all State and local bond issues, the Congress should provide that the practice of issuing tax-exempt bonds should cease so far as Federal issues are concerned.

I have, in Oregon, for many years, as State Senator and as Governor, fought the issuance of bonds, which always mean bondage. I fought the road bonds, and lost the cause because the paving companies with their publicity avenues could reach so many more voters. Now Oregon has a great debt, and with no better roads than our neighboring State which refused the bondage. I very much regret the policy of governmental encouragement of bond issues for anything but emergencies. I believe that an interest-bearing debt should not be created for anything which can possibly be financed otherwise. I believe this Congress should take whatever action is possible to discourage and curtail Government loans to States and municipalities because the money used by the lending Government and the borrowing State or city is all furnished by tax-exempt bondholders, and must be repaid by a generation of citizens who are being grievously wronged by this policy.

Those who inherit large sums of money do not know what it cost to earn it, and it is often spent with a too-lavish hand. Full well do I know that the hungry and ragged must be fed and clothed, but perhaps a few millions could have been saved if those in authority had realized that the costs of the program would mount to such heights. I am proud, as all Americans should be, that our Government can borrow money on short-term loans as low as one-eighth of 1 percent per annum and on long terms as low as 2¾ percent per annum.

The people would, if given a chance to vote on it, pass, by a tremendous majority, this proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit tax-free classes. The people do not want a specially favored class in this land of freedom and equality.

The eloquent judge also stated that the proposed constitutional amendment would probably allow the Federal Government to have the right to tax the income from State securities and give the States the same taxing privilege for Federal securities. Why not? I believe this is right. Why should not those who enjoy a certain income, as sure as the existence of government, pay their share? He says that when we admit the element of uncertainty, as we will if we pass this amendment, that we will have to pay a sort of insurance. Perhaps. What of it? Is the evil of that half as great as the building up of a large group in this country which is in no way concerned with the cost of government, because it bears no part of the cost?

He says we must not look at it from one angle. I wonder if he and his committee are not looking at it from the angle of the banker and the investor? I do not claim to know all about it, but I do know that there is danger ahead—and not far ahead, either, and serious danger—in having a portion of our people drawing incomes and freed from paying their part of the burden of government. This Government cannot continue to exist if that portion with little or no net income must bear the larger part of the cost of government.

UNEMPLOYMENT THE RESULT OF MACHINE AGE

One of our great mistakes has been the belief that we were in a depression and that in a few short months, or brief years at least, the clouds would roll by and we could all be again living easily and without financial anxiety—peace and prosperity everywhere. I have never found it possible to believe this dream will come true. The financial condition in which we found ourselves in March 1933, and in which we still find ourselves today, is a condition brought about by the flowering, the fruition of this, the most marvelous civilization of all the ages. Machinery in every shape, manner, and form has retired men and women from vocations and trades they have formerly followed, until idle millions have been piled up in our cities and industrial centers. This condition is aggravated by selling millions of tax-exempt bonds, which have consumed capital that should have been invested in industry and productive enterprises.

Last Monday there appeared in the Washington Post a news item that the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., one of the largest sheet-steel firms in Ohio, had just built a new plant in which they would manufacture sheet steel, using 90 men to do the same work for which they had formerly employed 800. Tell me where those 710 discarded men are going to be and how they are to find work. Will they be in the breadline?

The article further stated that the other steel mills in that vicinity were making the same changes in their operations. A recent article in the Literary Digest states that with modern machinery the Ford plant can bore an 8-cylinder shaft, polish, and complete it in 5 minutes. It formerly took one high-class workman to finish one cylinder an entire day.

On my own ranch, at this time of the year, I formerly employed about 40 men harvesting grain. My son today on that ranch is employing 12 men and harvesting as much each day as I formerly did with 40. Look into the city of Washington, where they are improving parks and streets, and see the mechanical shovels, the concrete mixers, and you can see some of the causes that have thrown us into this new era, this new day, this new age.

PROBLEM CANNOT BE SOLVED BY BORROWING

The problems thrust upon us by such amazing changes cannot be solved by borrowing millions upon millions of money from those who want to hide it, draw an income from it, and be freed from any part of the burden of government. Each must bear his part in the great struggle for readjustment. Times are certainly better than when President Roosevelt was inaugurated, but we are a long, long way from being out of the dark woods.

In that brief speech, which provoked the answer from the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I talked about balancing the Budget. I have no apology to make; I believe that it should be done. I believe it should have been done from the very beginning of this administration. I know it would be a tremendous task. I know it will cause great dislocation and possibly many political disasters, but those are trifling compared to the great work of saving this Government.

The judge said that as a nation we are the greatest borrowers on earth, and he appears to sanction it. I cannot agree that it is desirable to live on borrowed money. I remember reading a history of the French revolution, and one of the causes that the author gave for that great social upheaval was the fact that a large percentage of the land and income-bearing property of France had passed into the hands of persons and groups that were freed either partially or wholly from taxation in any form. The oppression upon the masses finally became so excessive that often three-fourths of the income of the poor people was taken by the authorities in some form of taxation. Finally the strain became too great. The mob came, and down the streets of Paris came the boys from the Gironde singing the Marsellaise.

Those who read Tolstoi will recall how graphically he describes the back-breaking levies of taxes raised for governmental purposes from the peasants eking out a bare living on the steppes of Russia. Finally the revolution came and the proud government of the czars perished.

May I, a Member of this Congress, one who desires to support this administration fully and loyally, plead with the learned judge, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and his 24 associates who, he tells, are so patriotic, loyal, and sound, to reconvene and consider this amendment that the people are demanding?

It is not a matter of party politics. It is and must be a nonpartisan issue. We who love America must fight for equality of taxation as our fathers fought for equality in courts of law. It was a wise man who first said, "Taxation without representation is tyranny." To this age-old statement may I add, "Representation without taxation leads to anarchy."

TAX-EXEMPTION A WRECKING DEVICE FOR GOVERNMENT

The extremely poor cannot pay taxes on their property. Millions more can be reached only by some sort of a sales tax which decreases their consuming power. The rebellion against this most unjust and discriminating form of taxation is now breaking forth. The sales tax cannot last. The extremely rich will put their savings in tax-exempt securities if we continue their issuance. Two elements represented in our Government, with the right to vote and make laws, will continue to be free from all part in the support of government in which they participate as voters. The ability to pay is the only real basis for the formation of a tax program. Who is better able to pay than those whose income is as certain as the existence of government itself?

My dear Judge, and your 24 learned committee members, do not miss your opportunity to write into the Constitution of our land a provision which will lead to equal and equitable taxation on everything in our country, based upon the principle of ability to pay.

My reading and study has convinced me that interest and fixed dividends are two of the largest factors in wrecking this civilization. Certainly tax exemption must be classed with these two wrecking devices. Because of that upturn, taxes are piled high on the few.

It is easy to see why a church, a community center, or a public building should not be taxed. But I cannot, by any process of reasoning, find any justifiable cause for building up in this country a large group of property owners entirely free from the burden of support of our Government.

TAX-EXEMPT-BOND HOLDERS FORECLOSE TAX-PAYING FARMERS

One of our Oregon newspapers recently published a striking letter from one of my old friends just evicted by the Government through its land-bank agency. This statement by A. I. Mason, an orchardist of Hood River, is a striking commentary on our vicious system of establishing a privileged tax-free class:

Today, the 13th day of July 1935, I have witnessed evidence of one of the most dangerous problems ever known to farmers of America. This is the wholesale foreclosure process of farm mortgages, as now being enforced by our so-called "Federal land bank" of the United States. Three farm mortgages were foreclosed, mine being one of them. In my case it was the final chapter of nearly 40 years' struggle to save a little for a rainy day. But now, at the age of 75 years, through no fault of my own, I must turn it over to the non-taxable-bond holder.

Each of these other mortgaged farmers, while not so advanced in years, with all the hopes of every mortgaged farmer, was looking toward provision for that rainy day. They, like myself, were obliged to turn their hard-won earnings over to the Federal land bank to be distributed to the non-taxable-bond holders.

Herein lies the danger ahead for our farmers of America. This system of financing our farmers is so unfair and un-American that it would seem to any fair-minded person that it should be abolished at once and the whole farm-mortgage business turned over to the Government.

Our present land-bank system, as now permitted to feed on our suffering farmers, is private and is controlled, under the protection of our Government, as a shield to protect its highly paid employees, politically appointed.

Our whole national land-bank system is now so securely rooted in our political set-up that it is almost impossible to get our Congress to correct any of its many encroachments upon the American farmer.

Can anyone tell us why the American farmer is compelled to pay his taxes for the support of our schools, our roads, and our Government, while our land-bank bondholders do not contribute one penny for such noble work? Oh, how much longer will the American people permit this crime to be forced upon them?

INVESTIGATION OF SMUGGLING OF ALIENS INTO THE UNITED STATES

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 271, to authorize an investigation of smuggling of aliens into the United States and a study of the land-border patrol of the Immigration Service.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. McFARLANE. Reserving the right to object, I should like to have the resolution explained as to how much of an appropriation will be asked, and what committee will do the investigating?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. This is a very important resolution with respect to the smuggling of aliens into the United States. The Committee on Immigration and Naturalization has had before it for the last 3 or 4 years a number of complaints about organized smuggling groups and the highly elusive methods they use by which aliens are smuggled into this country, particularly along the Mexican border.

For the last 2 or 3 years from across the Mexican border there has been thrown over here 2,400 Chinamen, and we have had to deport them. Twenty-two agents have been shot in cold blood because there are certain regulations. The Committee on Immigration and Naturalization wants to make this investigation for the purpose of discovering, from actual study of conditions in the field, some way of putting some teeth into the law to prevent smuggling of aliens into the United States across our land and water boundaries and over the Mexican border. I submit to my friend from Texas that it is a very worthy investigation, which the resolution proposes being made by a special committee appointed by the Speaker from among the membership of the Immigration and Naturalization Committee.

Mr. McFARLANE. How much will it cost; how much are you asking for an appropriation?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I have not asked for the appropriation, but I am willing to go before the Committee on Accounts just as soon as the investigation is authorized by the adoption of this present resolution.

Mr. McFARLANE. How much does the gentleman anticipate calling for?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I do not think it will cost more than $15,000, and we will bring back to Congress a definite plan whereby practical legislation to curtail this smuggling of aliens can be considered by this House next session.

Mr. McFARLANE. Has the Rules Committee approved of it?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I spoke to the Chairman of the Committee on Rules, and he suggested I bring it up today.

Mr. TABER. Has the committee reported this resolution?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. No. But I am asking unanimous consent of the House for its immediate consideration at this time.

Mr. TABER. I do not see how we can let this come up without a report from a committee, and I object.

INSPECTION OF VESSELS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8598) to provide for the inspection and regulation of vessels engaged in the transporation of inflammable, explosive, and like dangerous cargoes in navigable waters of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I want the bill explained.

Mr. BLAND. At the present time there is no way for the Bureau of Navigation and Inspection to inspect vessels that are engaged in the transportation of inflammable, explosive, and dangerous cargoes. Take the city of New York, for example. Many vessels are engaged there in the harbor in transporting dangerous cargoes. There is no inspection. The evidence shows in one case where a vessel that had become obsolete so far as the War Department is concerned was sold for a negligible sum; it was bought in at a low price and used for carrying dangerous cargoes. In a little while a fire occurred because of a backfire, and it caused the loss of life.

Mr. McFARLANE. What does this bill do to correct that, and how much is asked for?

Mr. BLAND. The bill has no specific appropriation. The sum would be very small. It puts the matter under the present Inspection Service and asks that the Bureau of Navigation and Inspection have the right to inspect those vessels.

Mr. SNELL. I will ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN] in respect to the bill.

Mr. CULKIN. This is the dangerous cargo bill?

Mr. BLAND. Yes.

Mr. CULKIN. I think that is a proper bill and it should pass.

Mr. DONDERO. Does this also apply to the Great Lakes section of the country?

Mr. BLAND. This would apply to any section of the country.

Mr. O'CONNOR. This is the bill H. R. 8598?

Mr. BLAND. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The Port Authority of New York is very much interested. They fear that some of their bridges will be blown up.

Mr. BLAND. Yes; and also that destruction would occur along the water front. There has been some trouble and loss of life because these vessels are not under inspection.

Mr. SIROVICH. This bill has the unanimous report of our committee.

Mr. BLAND. That is true.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no vessel, regardless of size or rig, excepting public vessels of the United States, shall transport on the navigable waters of the United States, from point to point in the continental United States, any inflammable, explosive, or like dangerous cargo, or anchor in such waters or go into drydock for repairs while having on board such dangerous cargo, until such vessel has been inspected by the board of local inspectors to determine that such cargo may be carried on such vessel with safety, and a permit issued to her for the presence on board of such cargo, which permit shall be framed under glass and posted in a conspicuous part of the vessel.

The Secretary of Commerce is authorized and directed to promulgate rules and regulations concerning construction, the appliances, and apparatus for stowage, of vessels used in the transportation of inflammable, explosive, or like dangerous cargo on said vessels in order to preserve life and property while in operation or at anchor. The local board of inspectors shall not issue a permit to any vessel until it finds that said vessel is in substantial compliance with the rules and regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Commerce: Provided, That this act shall not apply to a vessel covered by an unexpired certificate of inspection duly issued in accordance with law by the local inspectors of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation or, if a foreign vessel, by an unexpired certificate of inspection issued under the authority of its own government and recognized under law or treaty by the Government of the United States.

SEC. 2. A penalty of not to exceed $500 may be imposed for each violation of any of the provisions of this act or of any of the rules and regulations promulgated under the authority of this act. The vessel shall be liable for the said penalty and may be seized and proceeded against, by way of libel, in the District Court of the United States for any district within which such vessel may be found.

SEC. 3. This act shall become effective 60 days after its enactment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 10A OF FEDERAL FOOD AND DRUGS ACT

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3194) to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 10A of the act entitled "An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes", approved June 30, 1906, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 10A. The Secretary of Agriculture, upon application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of this act, may, at his discretion, designate inspectors to examine and inspect such food and the production, packing, and labeling thereof. If on such examination and inspection compliance is found with the provisions of this act and regulations promulgated thereunder, the applicant shall be authorized or required to mark the food as provided by regulation to show such compliance. Services under this section shall be rendered only upon payment by the applicant of fees fixed by regulation in such amounts as may be necessary to provide, equip, and maintain an adequate and efficient inspection service. Receipts from such fees shall be covered into the Treasury and shall be available to the Secretary of Agriculture for expenditures incurred in carrying out the purposes of this section, including expenditures for salaries of additional inspectors when necessary to supplement the number of inspectors for whose salaries Congress has appropriated. The Secretary is hereby authorized to promulgate regulations governing the sanitary and other conditions under which the service herein provided shall be granted and maintained, and for otherwise carrying out the purposes of this section. Any person who forges, counterfeits, simulates, or falsely represents, or without proper authority uses any mark, stamp, tag, label, or other identification devices authorized or required by the provisions of this section or regulations thereunder, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction thereof be subject to imprisonment for not more than 1 year or a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, or both such imprisonment and fine."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

AMENDING THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3002), to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 3002, of which the Clerk will report the title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, that is a very comprehensive measure and I would like to have some explanation of it.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that has been rewritten by the Committee on the Judiciary as a substitute for the bill that the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional. The committee has given very careful consideration to the bill. We have in no way reduced the security of the mortgagee. We have left his security intact, but we have made it possible for the bankruptcy court to retain jurisdiction for a period not to exceed 3 years. It is the feeling of the committee that if the farmers have a breathing spell they will be able to work out their own salvation. The bill we passed last year was declared unconstitutional on the ground that it impaired the security of the mortgagee.

Mr. SNELL. Is this the Frazier-Lemke bill?

Mr. LLOYD. This is the bankruptcy amendment bill. The gentleman should not confuse it with the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. It was my understanding that the members of the Committee on the Judiciary of which I am one and particularly the majority members, of which I also am one, would have an opportunity to file a minority report against this bill. I did not know the bill would be taken up under unanimous consent. I am personally opposed to the bill and I most reluctantly have to object. I think the minority should be given opportunity to file a report so that the Members may know what there is in the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

PISGAH NATIONAL FOREST

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1787) to add certain lands to the Pisgah National Forest in the State of North Carolina.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. What is this?

Mr. DOXEY. The Government owns 435 acres for a veterans' hospital. It is surrounded by land already owned by the Government in the Pisgah National Forest. The Veterans' Department wants the Forest Service to take charge of it and maintain it.

The Forest Service said they would be delighted, but that it would take legislation to do it. Therefore, the Senate passed the bill. It came to our Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. SNELL. All it does is transfer from one department of the Government to the other?

Mr. DOXEY. That is all it does.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the tract of land in Buncombe County, N. C., locally known as the "Grove Tract", acquired by the United States on December 19, 1927, for the use of the Veterans' Administration, being approximately 442 acres, be, and the same is hereby, added to the Pisgah National Forest and made subject to all laws and regulations relating to the use and administration of the national forests: Provided, however, That the tract shall be so managed as to conserve and protect the water thereon, which water shall remain available for the use of the Veterans' Administration.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRESCOTT NATIONAL FOREST, ARIZ.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, there is one other bill from the Committee on Agriculture. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of S. 2649, to provide for a recreation area within the Prescott National Forest, Ariz.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized in his discretion to designate and segregate for recreational development any lands not to exceed 4,000 acres within the Prescott National Forest, Ariz., which, in his opinion, are available for such purpose, and he is hereby authorized to enter into such form of cooperative agreement with, or issue such permits to the city of Phoenix, Ariz., for occupancy of said area for recreation purposes as in his opinion will permit the fullest use of the lands for such purposes without interfering with the object for which the national forest was established. Lands so designated and segregated under the provisions of this act shall not be subject to the mining laws of the United States: Provided, however, That such designation and segregation shall not affect valid existing mineral locations of record on the date of such segregation so long as such locations are legally maintained.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR

OMNIBUS BILL H. R. 8060

The SPEAKER. When the omnibus bill was under consideration on July 16 last there was pending as the unfinished business a vote on an amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] upon which a demand for a quorum failed.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 174]

Bankhead	Eaton	Kniffin	Peyser
Berlin	Eckert	Lemke	Ramspeck
Blanton	Eicher	Lesinski	Reece
Boileau	Fernandez	Lucas	Rogers, N. H.
Brewster	Fish	McGroarty	Romjue
Brooks	Gasque	McLean	Rudd
Buckbee	Gassaway	McLeod	Shannon
Buckley, N. Y.	Gillette	McMillan	Smith, Wash.
Bulwinkle	Gingery	McSwain	Snyder
Cannon, Wis.	Goodwin	Maas	South
Carter	Gray, Pa.	May	Sutphin
Cartwright	Greenway	Mitchell, Ill.	Sweeney
Claiborne	Halleck	Montague	Underwood
Clark, Idaho	Hancock, N. C.	Montet	Weaver
Cochran	Hartley	Moritz	Werner
Collins	Higgins, Conn.	Murdock	Wilson, La.
Crowther	Hill, Ala.	Norton	Wilson, Pa.
Dietrich	Hill, Knute	Oliver	Wolfenden
Dirksen	Hook	Parks	Wood
Dockweiler	Kimball	Patman
Dunn, Miss.	Kleberg	Pettengill

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN], the gentleman from Louisiana, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] are in conference with the Senate and detained.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOLAND). Three hundred and forty-seven Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

APPROPRIATION FOR CONVENTIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 392, making appropriations to enable the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to defray certain expenses incident to conventions in the District of Columbia in August 1935.

The Clerk read the title of the House joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 392

Resolved, etc., That for carrying out the provisions of Public Resolution No. 48 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 13, 1935, within the limitations and for the purposes therein expressed, there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $20,000, payable wholly from the revenues of the District of Columbia.

The House joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR

OMNIBUS BILL—H. R. 8060

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 4, line 7, strike all down to and including line 4 on page 6.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 968

For the relief of James P. Spelman

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,471.82 to James P. Spelman in full settlement of the claim which the said James P. Spelman has against the Government of the United States for loss he sustained under a sales agreement entered into on April 27, 1928, with the United States Indian warehouse service, said agreement having been entered into and executed under mistake of fact.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 6, line 9, strike out "$1,471.82" and insert "$429.16."

Page 6, line 15, insert the following: ": Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 6, line 5 to line 2, page 7, strike out all of the paragraph.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, this particular bill would authorize the payment of $429.16 to James P. Spelman. Spelman contracted with the Government to supply paint brushes according to very definite specifications. After he had procured the contract, he claims that he discovered the contract was a little different from what he had anticipated; that he made several bids prior to that time where the specifications were different; and that he had not studied the specifications close enough. As a result he claims he lost money in completing the contract of the Government. Now this bill has been introduced to afford him a refund of the difference between the amount of his contract and that of the next higher bid that was offered to the Government.

I do not believe such refund should be granted, because it will establish a precedent whereby any contractor who receives a contract with the Government and sustains a loss would be justified in coming before Congress and asking us to refund the difference between his bid at the time he received the contract and the amount of money which he would have received had he made the next higher bid. The effect of allowing this claim would be that if a contractor, by reason of a low bid, won a contract, he could then ask the Government to indemnify him for any loss. It would completely nullify the practice of letting contracts under competitive bidding.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. Is not this the case of a mistake as to the kind of material to be furnished?

Mr. COSTELLO. No; it was as to the requirements of the specifications. Changes were made in the type of brushes to be furnished and the contractor in bidding failed to study the changed specifications accurately. As a result he guessed they were the same as the original specifications. That is the reason he claims he suffered a loss.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. If this kind of bill is passed will it not encourage contractors dealing with the Government intentionally to substitute something on their contracts and ask to be paid for the difference in cost, even though they intentionally violated their contract?

Mr. COSTELLO. The gentleman is correct. I think this would be a very dangerous precedent to establish.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 1299

Giving jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co.

That the Court of Claims of the United States be, and hereby is, given jurisdiction to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co., Inc., Kansas City, Mo., for damages and for losses resulting from the cancelation by the depot quartermaster at St. Louis, Mo., of a contract between the United States Quartermaster Corps and the claimant, dated July 1, 1920, for furnishing coal at Camp Funston, Kans., to the Quartermaster Corps.

H. R. 1550

For the relief of Douglas B. Espy

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to reimburse Douglas B. Espy, chief machinists' mate, United States Navy, the sum of $1,033, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the loss of uniforms, clothing, and other personal property belonging to him and his wife, as a result of a fire in the quarters at the naval radio station, Cavite, P. I., on the 15th day of March 1927.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 7, line 16, strike out the word "reimburse" and insert the words "pay to."

On page 7, line 18, strike out "$1,033" and insert "$743.50."

On page 7, line 23, insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HANCOCK of New York: Page 7, line 14, strike out all of lines 14 to 25, inclusive, and all of lines 1 to 10, inclusive, on page 8.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, I have made this motion to strike out H. R. 1550 in order to get the judgment of the House on this type of claims.

The claimant in this case was an enlisted man in the Navy stationed in the Philippines. A fire occurred in the quarters where he was living which caused the destruction of some of his personal belongings. A very feeble attempt was made to base the claim on the theory of negligence. It is claimed that ants infested the quarters where this man lived and ate the insulation off the electric wires, thus causing a short circuit, which set his place on fire. There is no proof of this; it is mere surmise, so you can dismiss it from your minds. As a matter of fact, if there was any negligence, it was on the part of the man himself in not sweeping out the ants' nest from his own clothes locker.

We have a great many claims of this kind. There are a number of items on this calendar where officers of the Army or Navy or the State Department stationed abroad, through fire, earthquake, theft, or some other disaster, lost their personal belongings and ask to be reimbursed out of the Treasury. We ought to establish the policy the House is going to follow in these cases. If the Members feel that we should reimburse all the employees of the Government in the Foreign Service for loss of their personal belongings while stationed abroad, I shall be perfectly content with that judgment; but I think we ought to consider the question before we establish the policy. I have personally objected to paying these claims, but I want the Members to give some thought to the question of making a precedent which will be a guide to the men who examine this calendar. There are items of a similar character here today ranging from a few hundred dollars to several thousand dollars. Personally I do not see that the Government is under any obligation whatever to reimburse men for the loss of personal effects caused by disaster, fire, or theft. It is perfectly possible for these men to take out fire insurance and other forms of insurance, if they wish, to protect themselves. I see no reason why the Government should insure all its employees in the Foreign Service against loss.

There is no provision of law authorizing the payment of such claims except in the case of shipwreck and marine disaster. In such cases the men may be reimbursed for the loss of personal effects.

If we are going to reimburse employees of the Government in the Foreign Service for their personal losses, there ought to be a general law to that effect in order that all may be treated alike. Somebody should be charged with the responsibility of actually examining their claims to determine the real amount of the losses. As it is we have a hit-or-miss system under which an aggressive man will go to his Congressman, ask him to introduce a bill, give him a general idea of what the loss is, and if the Congressman is particularly alert and active he will get his bill through and the man will get his money. The other man who takes his medicine, who is not quite so eager and aggressive, gets nothing.

There ought to be a general law covering cases like this. Personally, I think the amendment that I have offered should be adopted, and the item stricken from the bill along with a great many others of the same character. But, as I say, I want the judgment of the Members of the House on this question. I have no particular pride of opinion. I am glad that we have the opportunity through these omnibus bills to find out what the sentiment of the House is on various classes of bills that come before us. That is all I have to say, and I hope that the Members understand fully what the bill means and the importance of the policy it establishes.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the opposition to this bill has been very ably and forcibly stated by my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York. I have no personal interest in this bill, but as a Member of the Claims Committee which considered it, I want to give you the attitude of the committee. We have a great deal of sympathy for these men in the Army and Navy who are moved about by our Government all over the world and subjected to special hazards such as are covered in this bill. I think I am correct when I say that bills of this character have been passed by preceding Congresses. It is a matter of opinion whether you want to deal fairly with these men. They are moved about every year or every 2 years. They travel here, there, and every place and until some man of the ability, the foresight, and broad-minded attitude of the gentleman from New York gets a general bill through and passed, we are working a hardship on these men in the Army and Navy.

The Navy Department recommends this bill favorably. The Claims Committee proceeded to follow the Navy Department. This appears on page 41 of the omnibus bill report down near the end of the page, if it is desired to refer to this question. My colleague from New York appeared before the subcommittee that put this bill in the omnibus bill and made a very able presentation, just as he has made here on the floor of the House today. It is a question of policy. If you want to be mean, if you want to be penurious, and if you want to count your pennies as against the members of the Army and Navy, then vote for the amendment, but the Committee on Claims did not feel that way about the matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANCOCK of New York) there were—ayes 37, noes 40.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 1771

For the relief of Pauline Fornabaio

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $5,000 to Pauline Fornabaio on account of the death of her husband, Domenico Fornabaio, who was killed June 24, 1927, by a truck owned and operated by the Post Office Department.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 8, line 18, after the word "department", insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. McFARLANE: Page 8, line 11, down to line 5, on page 9, strike out the paragraph.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I hope I will have the attention of the Members of the House for just a minute to explain this bill. This bill provides for the payment of $5,000 for the death of a man by the name of Fornabaio, who was alleged to have been killed by a post-office truck back in 1927. There was no claim filed nor any affidavits secured in this case by anyone until 5 years after the accident. At the coroner's inquest the driver of the Government truck was completely exonerated of any negligence. The facts in this case show upon investigation by the Post Office Department that the driver of the truck was not negligent.

Mr. Speaker, this is typical of certain bills which appear on this calendar. These bills are brought in here and you gentlemen are asked, on affidavits secured 5 years or more after the accident, where the Government has had no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses, to appropriate Government money to settle a disputed case of negligence. These affidavits would not be evidence in any court of law in the country. I hope the Members will give attention to this proposition, because we ought to settle it here and now, because this is typical of a number of bills that are being brought in here in this way.

We are asked on late affidavits to pay out Government money on a disputed question of negligence. I believe it will be agreed that it is wrong to pay Government money where there is a serious doubt as to whether or not the accident was the fault of the Government employee.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. Is it not a fact that the claimant in this case refused to submit affidavits to the Post Office Department?

Mr. McFARLANE. I am not sure about that, but I know that the affidavits were submitted to the committee more than 5 years after the accident occurred. This shows very clearly that there is little or no merit to the claim, yet they come in here and ask that these claims be paid.

Mr. Speaker, I submit this proposition to the House in all sincerity. Where we have a disputed case of negligence on the part of Government employees all of these matters ought to be submitted to a fact-finding body where the Government side of the question may be fully presented. In other words, instead of introducing a bill requiring the payment of money by the Congress, a bill should be introduced asking for permission to go to the Court of Claims to adjudicate the disputed facts. Then, if there is any merit, they can come back here and ask for payment. I submit it is entirely wrong for Members to bring bill after bill of this kind and have them put on this calendar, which is full of such bills, involving questions of disputed negligence, and ask the Members of Congress to appropriate money with which to pay these claims based on affidavits secured years after the accident occurred. The Congress should not back up that sort of a proposition. Of course, the hue and cry is made that there is a widow and orphans—yes; and think of the other side, there are a lot of widows and orphans who will have to rub and scrub to pay taxes to pay such worthless claims as this.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. May I say to the gentleman that I am a member of the Claims Committee and do not vote to report a bill unless the bill has merit. I hope the author of the bill is here to reply.

Mr. McFARLANE. He is here.

Mr. PITTENGER. Is it not a fact that there was a coroner's inquest and that all of the things the gentleman is referring to were established at a one-sided star chamber session of a coroner's proceeding, and the members of the deceased family were not present at all?

Mr. McFARLANE. That is not true, according to the record.

The records on file in the Post Office Department, including the report of the post-office inspector, show that the investigation of this case show that the mail truck which hit Fornabaio was being driven from the Bronxville branch to the post-office garage in Yonkers; that G. M. C. truck was traveling west on right side of Palmer Avenue about 12 to 15 miles per hour. As carrier approached Kimball Avenue he noticed a man standing in the street on Palmer Avenue and talking to another man in a car parked on the south side of Palmer Avenue; that the carrier blew his whistle and as he came within about 12 feet of the man he walked to the middle of Palmer Avenue and continued to talk to the man in the car parked on the south side. The carrier applied brakes and swerved his mail truck to the left to avoid hitting the man who appeared to be confused.

The man was struck by right side of bumper and right mud guard and carried about 20 feet until the mail truck was brought to a stop alongside of a Mack truck which was waiting to cross Palmer Avenue and standing on Kimball Avenue. The man fell from right mud guard of mail truck when brought to a stop and rolled under Mack truck which had moved slightly, so as to have right hand of man caught under left rear wheel of Mack truck. It appears that Fornabaio was talking to a man in a truck who had paid him a check and had hailed a bus to wait on the opposite side of the street.

There are several conflicting affidavits on file by eyewitnesses who state that the post-office truck was traveling at a rate in excess of 35 miles per hour. However, there is proof in the files of the Post Office Department that the truck was equipped with a governor limiting the speed of the truck to 18 miles per hour, and that after the accident the governor and the truck were examined and they were still sealed as they came from the factory and that the truck could not travel over 18 miles per hour.

The Post Office Department is opposed to the passage of this bill due to the fact that Fornabaio's death resulted from his own negligence and that the Government chauffeur was not responsible. At the coroner's inquest, the driver of the Government truck was acquitted. Fornabaio was not crossing at a regular intersection.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, this claim grows out of an accident that happened in Westchester County at a place called Tuckahoe. Here was a man who was receiving his pay check from an automobile parked close to the crosswalk. He started to go across to the north side of the street when two mail trucks appeared going at a terrific speed. There are affidavits from three disinterested witnesses that they were racing. One of the automobiles struck this man.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I shall yield to the gentleman in a moment.

The witnesses stated the automobile went 150 feet before the driver could stop it and it threw the deceased over on the wheels of another automobile.

The gentleman from Texas has referred to the statements of two witnesses who were brought into the coroner's court, which is a criminal court and has nothing to do with any civil action and where the plaintiffs never show their hands, because it is the criminal charge that is tried in such court.

There is a widow left and she is now living on charity. If this accident was caused by a privately owned truck, this widow would have received $25,000 from the courts in the State of New York from the owner of such truck.

Mr. McFARLANE. Is it not true that there were not any affidavits secured in this case until 5 years after the accident happened?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That was the fault of the Government, because you cannot sue the Government. You simply submit your claim, which they did, to the Post Office Department without the affidavits, as no affidavits were requested, and they denied it. I then introduced a bill in the Seventy-second Congress and we are now considering the bill.

I may say to you that this widow is living on charity, her husband having been killed as a result of the negligence of this driver according to the testimony of three disinterested and reliable witnesses, not the kind of witness that went into the coroner's court and testified in order to free the driver.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes; I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. According to the affidavits the gentleman has submitted in this case, one of the affidavits showed that the truck was traveling 35 miles an hour when the truck itself, under seal, could not travel more than 18 miles an hour, and this is the kind of evidence the gentleman is trying this case on and this is what the record shows.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I know that is not true.

Mr. McFARLANE. I know it is true.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is like other statements the gentleman makes, with nothing to back up his statement except talk.

It is very seldom I bring in a case here, and I would not bring this case in if there were not merit in it. This man was killed through the negligence of the driver of this mail truck, and any man who votes against this bill is voting to deprive this widow of what she is legally entitled to, and if this case was tried in the civil courts of New York she would receive at least $25,000.

I am going to leave this up to your good judgment. Three disinterested witnesses claim that this automobile was going at a terrific speed and traveled 150 feet after striking this man.

I ask you to vote down the amendment. [Applause.]

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 1912

For the relief of William J. Ryan, chaplain, United States Army

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William J. Ryan, United States Army chaplain, Fort Winfield Scott, Calif., the sum of $225.75, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for damage to his automobile as the result of an operation of the United States Army on Lincoln Boulevard, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., on April 18, 1929:

With the following committee amendment:

Page 9, line 15, insert: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 1962

For the relief of Albert H. Jacobson

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Albert H. Jacobson, of Miami, Dade County, Fla., the sum of $2,000, to compensate said Albert H. Jacobson for the loss of one master-six Buick sedan, serially numbered 1550359, which said automobile was seized by agents of the United States Government on the 27th day of April 1926 and has never been returned to the said Albert H. Jacobson: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'CONNOR). The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 2386

For the relief of the estate of Harry F. Stern

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the legal representatives of Harry F. Stern the sum of $18,704.89, but such payment shall not be made unless the Secretary of the Treasury receives evidence satisfactory to him that such legal representatives have paid a like sum (plus any penalty imposed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania) to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania before the expiration of 90 days after the date of the enactment of this act. Such sum, payable to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as part of the inheritance tax imposed by the laws of such Commonwealth on the estate of the said Harry F. Stern, was erroneously paid to the United States as part of the Federal estate tax and its recovery has been barred by the statute of limitations.

Mr. PITTENGER (interrupting the reading of the paragraph). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with and that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. TABER and Mr. RICH objected.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the paragraph.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 11, lines 1 to 17, strike out all the paragraph.

Mr. COSTELLO. This claim on behalf of the estate of Harry F. Stern is for a refund of inheritance taxes. The Federal return showed the total amount of tax against the estate to be $48,452. At that time a suit was pending in the court to determine the legality of the law of the State of Pennsylvania demanding 80 percent of the tax should be paid to the State of Pennsylvania rather than to the Federal Government. The law of Pennsylvania was sustained, and as a result out of the $28,000 that was paid to the Federal Government $18,000 is claimed as being erroneously paid to the Treasury instead of the State of Pennsylvania.

By the terms of this bill it would make it possible for the Federal Government to return the sum of $18,000 to the estate of Harry F. Stern. In a case of this sort where the attorney has passed on the inheritance tax and the payment has become final the suit should run against the attorney and not the Federal Government. If the attorney was at fault it is not the responsibility of the Federal Government. For that reason I move to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Claims Committee I am asking this question. I have no interest in Pennsylvania, as it is a long ways from my home. I want to ask the gentleman if it is not a fact, and as a result of the payment to the Federal Treasury, has not the Treasury $18,000 to which it has no legal right? And is it not a fact that the reason why the claim was not made against the Federal Government earlier was due to the long time that the case was before the Court on the constitutional question? They did not know that they were entitled to a refund until it was too late.

Mr. COSTELLO. Will the gentleman tell me when the court in Pennsylvania handed down its decision?

Mr. PITTENGER. I do not know that I can give the gentleman the date, but I have a letter that was written to a colleague.

Mr. COSTELLO. Can the gentleman give the date of the judgment rendered by the Pennsylvania court?

Mr. PITTENGER. No; I cannot. This letter says that the time expired while the suit was pending.

Mr. COSTELLO. While the Government received $18,000 that now may be collected again from the estate by the State of Pennsylvania, still that is no reason why the Federal Government should be forced to pay out this money, nor why we should be called upon to waive the statute of limitations. The same question is raised here in a number of bills asking us to waive the statute of limitations and for the Government to pay back money. We should not do this in every case that comes in without very real justification.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment. The total inheritance tax that was due on this estate was approximately $48,000. At about the same time that Mr. Stern died, a bill was introduced in the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania, and enacted, creating what is known as the "Recapture Act" providing for 80 percent of the inheritance tax to go to the State of Pennsylvania. The attorney for this estate settled the estate and paid the tax within 3 months following the death of Mr. Stern, a notable achievement, and as had been the rate of tax up to that time, sent a check for $20,000 to the State of Pennsylvania, and a check for $28,000 to the Government. The Recapture Act was in the Supreme Court, its constitutionality being in doubt. Everyone knows that you do not get decisions from the Supreme Court overnight. The thing dragged on and finally the Supreme Court upheld the Recapture Act. Neither the estate nor the attorney for the estate was notified until 3 or 4 days after the time limit had expired, prior to which time the attorney could have come to Washington and simply asked for his refunding check and received it. The facts resolve themselves down to this. The Government has $18,000 that it had no right to in the first place, and that it has no right to now.

Mr. EKWALL. As I understand the matter, disregarding the question of the statute of limitations, the Government has some money that it is not entitled to.

Mr. TURPIN. That is the fact.

Mr. EKWALL. That money ought to go to the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. TURPIN. Positively, in all fairness. There was an error, and everybody makes errors, from the highest to the most lowly. This bill has been passed twice by the Senate, it was passed last session, and again this session, and I believe you will concede the Senate is made up of fair-minded, intelligent, and conscientious men.

The bill has been twice approved and favorably reported out of the committee in the House, after close study. I do not understand why anyone should protest against returning this money. If any man here received money to which he was not entitled, and it was called to his attention, I am sure that he would give it back.

Mr. COSTELLO. Is it not a fact that the Government was entitled to the full $48,000 of the inheritance tax, but by reason of the Pennsylvania law $20,000 was paid to the State of Pennsylvania? It was not until subsequently that $28,000 was paid to the Federal Government. The Federal Government collected the money under a right to collect it.

Mr. TURPIN. No; it was an error upon the part of the estate.

Mr. COSTELLO. It was an error on the part of the attorney for the estate.

Mr. TURPIN. Absolutely it was an error; but who made the error is not the question before us.

Mr. COSTELLO. Does the gentleman think that the estate would be willing to waive the statute of limitation had there not been a sufficient amount paid to the Federal Government? In other words, if the situation were reversed, would the estate be willing to waive the statute of limitations?

Mr. TURPIN. Certainly; if it was the honorable thing to do. In all fairness, and in view of the fact that the Senate has passed the bill twice, that both your committee and the Senate committee have favorably reported it twice, I ask that the House vote down the amendment as conscientiously as it would expect an overpaid creditor to be fair with each of you.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 2936

For the relief of J. H. Taylor & Son

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,500 to J. H. Taylor & Son, said sum representing a deduction by the Comptroller General of the United States from the contract price for the purchase of the Atlanta (Ga.) post-office building site.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 11, line 21, strike out the word "to" and insert in lieu thereof "in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States of."

Page 12, line 2, strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 11, line 18, down to and including line 14 on page 12, strike out all of the paragraph.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, this is a claim for $3,500 by Taylor & Son, of Atlanta, Ga. They were real-estate brokers and had a contract with the Government for the sale of a post-office site for $880,000. It turned out that they had no title whatever to the land in question, and the Government had to secure the site through court proceedings, under the right of eminent domain. In condemning and buying in the property the Government lacked $3,500 of paying as much as the original price stipulated to these real-estate brokers, and they come in now and ask the Government to pay them, when they had no title to the property and no legal claim whatever to support their position. In a letter from Mr. Ogden Mills, then Secretary of the Treasury, on February 2, 1933, to Hon. L. M. Black, Chairman of the Claims Committee, he said:

The United States attorney states in letter to the Attorney General dated May 23, 1931, that neither J. H. Taylor nor J. H. Taylor & Sons owned one foot of property included in the new post-office tract, although the contract of purchase was made with them as agents.

It will be noted from copy of the bond executed by J. H. Taylor, that J. H. Taylor & Sons were to receive from the owners of the land a commission of approximately $4,000 should the site be acquired by the United States by direct sale, condemnation, or otherwise. The Treasury Department is without authority to pay commissions for the acquisition of land for Federal building sites.

The Comptroller General, in a decision dated May 13, 1931 (0324682–A–35701), disallowed the claim of $3,500, and the following excerpt is quoted from the aforesaid decision:

"The claimants were not the owners of the two parcels of land in question, nor did they purport to act for the owners. As stated, the United States had to obtain the land through condemnation proceedings. At best, the claimant was a broker in the condemnation proceedings. There was clearly no authority for contracting with the claimant to purchase from him something which he did not own and which he could not obtain—a contract for the purchase of something which the United States had to secure under its constitutional power of eminent domain. Such a contract is even worse than a wagering contract, for in such a case the contractor may be required to deliver the thing specified, while in this case it was known that the contractor was unable to deliver title to the two parcels of land and that it would be necessary for the United States to institute condemnation proceedings to secure such title.

"There was no authority of law for the contract in question, and consequently the contractor is not entitled to the item of $3,500 claimed, which is the difference between $880,000 as guaranteed in the contract and the amount of $876,500 which the United States was required to pay for the land. The item of $3,500 could not be allowed on the theory that the contract should be interpreted as one for the removal of the structures on the two parcels of land, for the item may be more or less than the cost of the removal of the structures and the law has specifically provided that such work shall be done after advertising, which has not been had here. As to the nullity of an alleged contract entered into without authority of law, see American Standard Ship Fittings Corporation v. United States ('/0 Ct. Cls. 679).

"The claim must be and is disallowed."

In view of the foregoing, this Department is not in a position to make a favorable report on the proposed legislation.

They are merely outsiders, but that is typical of a number of these claimants that are coming in here sandbagging the Government.

If the Members of this House want to approve this kind of claim it is entirely up to you. Under the facts they have no merits in their claims, in my opinion. There is no reason in the world why we should pay such a claim as this. The Government had to condemn the property and had to buy it under legal proceedings, yet these people come here and ask us to pay them $3,500 for property which they had no title to, and the facts developed clearly showed they have no authority to contract to sell the Government this land they did not own and did not have any right to contract for the true owners. The Comptroller General held that their contract was worse than wagering, for they knew they could not perform their part and that the Government would be forced to condemn the land to secure title, which was done. There is no reason in the world why it should be paid.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is this for a commission in a condemnation proceeding?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is this the commission they want for a condemnation proceeding?

Mr. McFARLANE. I suppose it is. They probably watched the trial of the case in court, and that is as close as they came to being due anything under the circumstances.

I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. Speaker, the author of this bill, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK], is necessarily detained from the House today due to a serious illness in his family, and he asked me to submit these facts for your consideration.

The claimants, J. H. Taylor & Son, entered into a contract with the Government, according to the letter of Mr. Ogden Mills, who was then Secretary of the Treasury. This letter stipulated in substance as follows:

The Treasury Department, under date of August 18, 1930, accepted the proposal of J. H. Taylor & Son for the sale to the United States of the land comprising the new post-office site for the sum of $880,000.

J. H. Taylor & Son is the claimant.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OWEN. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. This is the statement that comes from the Department on that. The Comptroller General refused the claim because he had no authority to make a contract for land they did not own. The Comptroller General further held that the contract was worse than a wager contract, for in such case the contractor must be required to deliver the thing specified, while in this case it was not known that the contractor was unable to deliver title to the two parcels of land in question and that it would be necessary for the Government to institute condemnation proceedings to clear the title, which they finally did.

Mr. OWEN. Yes, sir; I am reading from the statement submitted over the signature of Ogden Mills, the Secretary of the Treasury:

The Treasury Department, under date of August 18, 1930, accepted the proposal of J. H. Taylor & Son for the sale to the United States of the land comprising the new post-office site for the sum of $880,000. The acceptance contained the following conditions.

Now, J. H. Taylor & Son acted as agent for both the Government and the owners of these several sites that the Government was buying on which to erect a post office in Atlanta. It became necessary to clear title to two pieces of property that were to be selected. Hence, condemnation proceedings were adopted in order to clear the title, so Mr. Mills states in his letter. It was a friendly proceeding. Now, with reference to that, there was an error of $3,500. J. H. Taylor & Son guaranteed the Government against any sum in excess of $880,000. The sum awarded was $876,500.

Mr. COSTELLO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OWEN. I yield.

Mr. COSTELLO. I understood the gentleman to say it was a friendly condemnation suit?

Mr. OWEN. That is my understanding.

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand from reading the report that $800,000 was friendly, but the balance, $75,000, was not obtained in a friendly suit, but, rather, in a hostile suit. Part of it was obtained in a friendly eminent-domain action by the Government, but the balance of it was not.

Mr. OWEN. Yes. So these claimants are out this sum of $3,500. They accepted this contract as the agent of the Government and the property owners for this site. They are out this $3,500, fully expecting the Government to reimburse them up to the sum of $880,000, the sum agreed upon by the Government and by the landowners.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OWEN. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. And if this $3,500 is not paid, the Government breaks faith to that extent?

Mr. OWEN. The Government has paid $876,500, when the Government entered into a contract to pay the sum of $880,000. It has only paid $876,500.

Mr. PITTENGER. So that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MCFARLANE] was just as correct as usual when he tries to kick up a lot of dust about this being an unwarranted claim?

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'CONNOR). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MCFARLANE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCFARLANE) there were ayes 14 and noes 42.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is not a quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 54, nays 278, not voting 98, as follows:

[Roll No. 175]

YEAS—54

Allen	Edmiston	Kocialkowski	Romjue
Amlie	Faddis	Kramer	Sauthoff
Ashbrook	Fletcher	Lewis, Colo.	Scott
Biermann	Ford, Miss.	Luckey	Smith, Conn.
Binderup	Gavagan	McFarlane	Taber
Carpenter	Gehrmann	Maverick	Terry
Chandler	Hancock, N. Y.	Moran	Thom
Citron	Hildebrandt	Nelson	Turpin
Colden	Hoffman	O'Malley	Utterback
Costello	Johnson, Tex.	Patterson	White
Darden	Jones	Pierce	Young
Driscoll	Kennedy, N. Y.	Polk	Zioncheck
Eagle	Kloeb	Ramsay
Eckert	Knutson	Rankin

NAYS—278

Adair	Buckler, Minn.	Crosser, Ohio	Farley
Andresen	Burdick	Crowe	Fenerty
Andrew, Mass.	Burnham	Culkin	Ferguson
Arends	Caldwell	Cullen	Fitzpatrick
Arnold	Cannon, Mo.	Daly	Flannagan
Ayers	Carlson	Darrow	Focht
Bacharach	Carmichael	Deen	Ford, Calif.
Bacon	Cary	Delaney	Frey
Barden	Casey	Dempsey	Fuller
Beam	Castellow	Dickstein	Gearhart
Beiter	Celler	Dies	Gifford
Bell	Chapman	Dingell	Gilchrist
Berlin	Christianson	Ditter	Gildea
Blackney	Church	Dondero	Goldsborough
Bland	Claiborne	Dorsey	Granfield
Bloom	Coffee	Doutrich	Gray, Ind.
Boehne	Cole, Md.	Drewry	Gray, Pa.
Boland	Cole, N. Y.	Driver	Green
Boykin	Colmer	Duffey, Ohio	Greenway
Boylan	Cooley	Duffy, N. Y.	Greenwood
Brennan	Cooper, Ohio	Duncan	Greever
Brewster	Cooper, Tenn.	Dunn, Pa.	Gregory
Brooks	Cox	Ekwall	Griswold
Brown, Ga.	Cravens	Ellenbogen	Guyer
Brown, Mich.	Crawford	Engel	Gwynne
Brunner	Crosby	Englebright	Haines
Buck	Cross, Tex.	Evans	Halleck
Hancock, N. C.	Lundeen	Pittenger	Steagall
Harlan	McAndrews	Plumley	Stefan
Hart	McClellan	Powers	Stewart
Harter	McCormack	Quinn	Sullivan
Healey	McGehee	Rabaut	Sumners, Tex.
Hennings	McGrath	Randolph	Tarver
Hess	McKeough	Ransley	Taylor, Colo.
Higgins, Conn.	McLaughlin	Rayburn	Taylor, S. C.
Higgins, Mass.	McReynolds	Reed, Ill.	Taylor, Tenn.
Hill, Ala.	McSwain	Reed, N. Y.	Thomas
Hill, Samuel B.	Mahon	Reilly	Thomason
Hobbs	Mansfield	Rich	Thompson
Hoeppel	Mapes	Richards	Thurston
Hollister	Marcantonio	Richardson	Tinkham
Holmes	Marshall	Risk	Tobey
Hope	Martin, Colo.	Robertson	Tolan
Houston	Martin, Mass.	Robinson, Utah	Tonry
Huddleston	Mason	Robsion, Ky.	Treadway
Hull	Massingale	Rogers, Mass.	Turner
Imhoff	Mead	Rogers, Okla.	Umstead
Jenckes, Ind.	Meeks	Russell	Vinson, Ga.
Jenkins, Ohio	Merritt, Conn.	Ryan	Vinson, Ky.
Johnson, Okla.	Merritt, N. Y.	Sadowski	Wadsworth
Johnson, W. Va.	Michener	Sanders, Tex.	Wallgren
Kahn	Millard	Sandlin	Walter
Kee	Mitchell, Ill.	Schaefer	Warren
Keller	Mitchell, Tenn.	Schuetz	Weaver
Kelly	Monaghan	Schulte	Welch
Kennedy, Md.	Mott	Scrugham	Werner
Kenney	Murdock	Sears	Whelchel
Kerr	O'Brien	Secrest	Whittington
Kinzer	O'Connor	Seger	Wigglesworth
Kvale	O'Day	Shanley	Wilcox
Lambertson	O'Leary	Sirovich	Williams
Lambeth	O'Neal	Sisson	Withrow
Lamneck	Owen	Smith, Va.	Wolcott
Lanham	Palmisano	Smith, W. Va.	Wolfenden
Lee, Okla.	Parsons	Snell	Wolverton
Lehlbach	Pearson	Somers, N. Y.	Wood
Lemke	Perkins	South	Woodruff
Lewis, Md.	Peterson, Fla.	Spence	Woodrum
Lord	Peterson, Ga.	Stack
Ludlow	Pfeifer	Starnes

NOT VOTING—98

Andrews, N. Y.	Dirksen	Kleberg	Patton
Bankhead	Disney	Kniffin	Pettengill
Blanton	Dobbins	Kopplemann	Peyser
Boileau	Dockweiler	Larrabee	Ramspeck
Bolton	Doughton	Lea, Calif.	Reece
Buchanan	Doxey	Lesinski	Rogers, N. H.
Buckbee	Dunn, Miss.	Lloyd	Rudd
Buckley, N. Y.	Eaton	Lucas	Sabath
Bulwinkle	Eicher	McGroarty	Sanders, La.
Burch	Fernandez	McLean	Schneider
Cannon, Wis.	Fiesinger	McLeod	Shannon
Carter	Fish	McMillan	Short
Cartwright	Fulmer	Maas	Smith, Wash.
Cavicchia	Gambrill	Maloney	Snyder
Clark, Idaho	Gasque	May	Stubbs
Clark, N. C.	Gassaway	Miller	Sutphin
Cochran	Gillette	Montague	Sweeney
Collins	Gingery	Montet	Underwood
Connery	Goodwin	Moritz	Wearin
Corning	Hamlin	Nichols	West
Crowther	Hartley	Norton	Wilson, La.
Cummings	Hill, Knute	O'Connell	Wilson, Pa.
Dear	Hook	Oliver	Zimmerman
DeRouen	Jacobsen	Parks
Dietrich	Kimball	Patman

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah, Mr. BEITER, Mr. HOEPPEL, and Mr. MANSFIELD changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. TURPIN and Mr. COLDEN changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Doughton with Mr. Crowther.
Mr. Buchanan with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Carter.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Goodwin.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. McLean.
Mr. Blanton with Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Miller with Mr. Short.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Maas.
Mr. Connery with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Cavicchia.
Mr. Patman with Mr. Andrews of New York.
Mr. Doxey with Mr. Eaton.
Mr. Moritz with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Parks with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Dirksen.
Mr. Gasque with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Wilson of Louisiana with Mr. Kimball.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Sanders of Louisiana with Mr. Boileau.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Reece.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. May with Mr. Dear.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Pettengill.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Eicher.
Mr. Underwood with Mr. Smith of Washington.

Mr. Kniffin with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. West with Mr. Zimmerman.
Mr. Knute Hill with Mr. Jacobsen.
Mr. Wearin with Mr. Hook.
Mr. Stubbs with Mr. Snyder.
Mr. Gingery with Mr. Dunn of Mississippi.
Mr. Fiesinger with Mr. Rudd.
Mr. Ramspeck with Mr. Dobbins.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Patman with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.
Mr. Disney with Mrs. Norton.
Mr. Dockweiler with Mr. Gassaway.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Sutphin.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Fernandez.
Mr. Dietrich with Mr. O'Connell.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Clark of Idaho.
Mr. Nichols with Mr. Lucas.
Mr. Larrabee with Mr. Biermann.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Buckley of New York.
Mr. Maloney with Mr. Lesinski.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. McGroarty.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Montet.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 3184

For the relief of H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley, State of Washington, the sum of $2,500. Such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States on account of injuries sustained March 10, 1931, as a result of blasting on the North Cispus Road, Ranier National Forest, Wash.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 12, beginning at line 19, strike out "to H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley, State of Washington, the sum of $2,500. Such sum shall be" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "to H. D. Henion the sum of $2,300, to Harry Wolfe the sum of $100, and to R. W. McSorley the sum of $100, in all, $2,500."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 3557

For the relief of Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning

Whereas during the late war with the Imperial German Government 25 shares of the preferred stock of the American Smelting & Refining Co. belonging to Helena C. VonGroning, a native-born citizen of the United States who had married a German subject, and 25 shares of said preferred stock belonging to Stephan VonGroning, her son, were seized by the Alien Property Custodian, together with other property belonging to the said Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning; and

Whereas after the termination of the said war and pursuant to the acts of Congress in such cases made and provided, the said Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning were entitled to the return of their said property and duly filed claims therefor; and

Whereas all of the said property so seized has been returned to the said Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning except the said 50 shares of the preferred stock of the American Smelting & Refining Co., which could not be returned because the said Alien Property Custodian had erroneously delivered the same to a certain Mrs. Henschen, of Hamburg, Germany; and

Whereas the said Helena C. and Stephan VonGroning are entitled in right and justice to recover from the United States the value of said stock, together with the dividends paid thereon since the delivery to said Mrs. Henschen: Therefore

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $11,312.50 in full settlement against the Government, to Helena C. and Stephan VonGroning for and on account of the wrongful transfer of the 50 shares of preferred stock of the American Smelting & Refining Co. seized by the Alien Property Custodian, to Mrs. Henschen, of Hamburg, Germany, instead of to Helena C. and Stephan VonGroning, and for and on account of the failure to return and deliver the same to the said Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning, together with the dividends thereon as required by law.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 13, after line 15, and on page 14, before line 1, strike out the preamble.

Page 14, line 13, after the word "law", insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment, but do so only to make a few observations.

Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose in any sense of the word to object to this bill. I want to draw the attention of the Members of the House to the fact that a bill of this character could not, in common parlance, "get to first base" if it were brought up in the Reichstag or any German assembly.

This bill provides for the payment of American money—American dollars—to a subject of Germany. Let us pause a minute. I say I am not objecting to the bill, but let this sink into the minds of each and every one of you—there is owing to Americans in this country more than $2,000,000,000 as holders of bonds, securities, and contractual obligations against German subjects, entities, corporations, and governmental units. The German Government has refused—deliberately refused in the face of diplomatic protests from this Government—to allow one penny of this indebtedness to be paid to American claimants despite the fact there are vast sums of money held in American banks to the credit of these German subjects, German municipalities, and entities. We can do nothing, however, because of what is known as "blocked marks." No money can be paid to Americans, although there may be standing to their credit millions of marks in German banks. Those marks are "blocked."

Now, think of this: There was on deposit in this country about $65,000,000 to service various German bonds. By absolute fraud, lies, and deceit the German Government imposed upon American bondholders and said it was unable to meet the interest to service those bonds, as a result of which the bonds dropped to ridiculously low figures. The German Government and its agents then deliberately took that interest money on deposit in American banks and bought those bonds at artificially low prices to the extent of $240,000,000 and canceled them. It really stole this interest money and bought the bonds—to the extent of four times the amount of the interest. If a private person would set out to depress by such fraud and deceit the market for its bonds and then go out and buy these bonds at depressed prices he would go to jail.

I say, Mr. Speaker, it is a very serious situation. Americans are unable to get their money due them. Over $2,000,000,000 is tied up in this way—frozen.

We could retaliate, of course; we could refuse to pay claims of the character of this bill; we could visit punishment on the innocent. The Germans do that with "blocked marks." We do not do that, however. I would be the last man in the world to urge you to do that; but certainly we ought to pause in our deliberations to learn something of the situation.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. COSTELLO. In this particular case the Alien Property Custodian actually paid this money to people other than the Von Gronings, to people who had absolutely no right to it. It was due to an error on the part of the Alien Property Custodian and it is perfectly justifiable that we should pay this claim. The gentleman does not feel, I hope, that because somebody else has committed one wrong that, therefore, the United States is justified in committing another wrong.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman very probably was not paying attention to what I uttered a few moments ago when I said I did not oppose this bill. This bill should pass. My only purpose was to contrast our action with what we know would be the action of Germany under similar circumstances. It is interesting to note that Germany tried her tricks upon England, Belgium, and other countries, but to no avail. Those countries threatened retaliation and to set up an exchange control as against Germany. Germany quailed. She failed to carry out her plans and made most important concessions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 3709

For the relief of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co. in the sum of $103,419.23 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for the removal of the old bridge and the construction of a new drawbridge and fender system over the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal near Great Bridge, Va., to comply with the order of the War Department: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to, or received by, any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Beginning with line 15 of page 15, strike out down to and including line 11, on page 16, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims of the United States, notwithstanding any limitations upon the jurisdiction and power of such court, to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co. against the United States, arising out of or incident to the removal of an old bridge and the construction of a new drawbridge and fender system over the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal, now the Virginia cut of the Inland Waterway, near Great Bridge, Va., to comply with orders of the War Department."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 3783

For the relief of George W. Rhine, doing business under the name of Rhine & Co.

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to George W. Rhine, of Alexandria, Va., doing business under the name of Rhine & Co., the sum of $20,000, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for damages resulting from (1) the occupation by the so-called "bonus marchers" during the months of May, June, and July 1932, of certain property owned by the United States in the District of Columbia on which such George W. Rhine was engaged under contract with the United States in wrecking and salvaging work, and (2) the interference by such bonus marchers with such work; such damages representing loss of salvaged material and ordinary sales return thereon, cost of insurance, and continuation of operations at a loss under orders from the Office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, damage to the trucks and other property of such George W. Rhine, and subsequent inability to engage in the business of wrecking buildings due to loss of working capital.

With the following committee amendment:

At the end of line 17 insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 4086

For the relief of Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke"

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke", of the District of Columbia, the owner of the truck hereinafter referred to, the sum of $2,250, to compensate said Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke", for the loss of one Dodge truck, serially numbered A918785, which said Dodge truck was illegally seized and confiscated by agents of the United States Government on the 16th day of April 1928 and which said Dodge truck was appropriated by the United States, and has never been returned to the said Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke": Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 18, line 11, strike out "$2,250" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,750."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. COSTELLO: On page 18, line 5, strike out down to the end of line 4 on page 19, the entire paragraph.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, in connection with this bill the claimant seeks to recover $1,750 for a truck that was taken by the prohibition authorities due to the fact that the truck was being used in the illegal transportation of liquor. The Committee on Claims state in their report that—

Had the claimant been properly represented in court * * * he would have been able to repossess the truck in question.

In other words, we again come to one of these cases where the attorney has failed to properly represent his client. Once again the claimant comes before Congress and asks that the Congress remedy the mistakes his attorney made in an attempt to protect him.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me it is not the duty of the Congress to give redress for the errors that are committed by counsel. If there is any action for damages at all it would lie against the attorney and in no case against the Treasurer of the United States. During the course of the court proceedings the records in this case were changed and we find that numerous erasures were made upon the court records and other writings were inserted. As a result the court record appears to the benefit of the claimant involved in this bill. Who is guilty of the erasures or who made them has not been shown, but they were made for the benefit of the claimant here.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. In the legal proceeding he did not recover title to the truck in question?

Mr. COSTELLO. He not only failed to recover title, but a petition for rehearing was asked, and in order to make it appear that the petition for rehearing was valid the dates on court records were erased and certain other dates inserted. In one instance a Sunday was inserted as a date upon which the court had rendered one of its decisions.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. There is nothing in any of the evidence to show that the claimant was a party to that sort of procedure.

Mr. COSTELLO. The records do not show that the claimant individually had anything to do with these erasures that were made on the court record, but it was done for his benefit. Even though he and his attorney were not guilty of making them, the erasures were made for the claimant's benefit in order to make it appear that he was justified in getting his petition for rehearing before the court, which the court denied. I simply want the Members of Congress to know that this matter has been adjudicated by the courts and the Committee on Claims is presenting it back to the Congress to overrule the decision of the court and allow the man a judgment for the sum of $1,750.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

I may say to the Members of Congress that this claimant lives in the District. In view of the statements which have been made, I should like the Members to give me their attention for a minute. This bill was introduced by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY], Chairman of the Committee on Claims. I made the report.

Mr. COSTELLO. I believe the gentleman wants to be correct. He is the author of the bill.

Mr. PITTENGER. Then I am the author of the bill.

Mr. COSTELLO. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY] made the report.

Mr. PITTENGER. Then, the reverse of what I said is correct. In a preceding Congress I made the report. The gentleman does not know about that, but that is a fact, so that I know exactly what this bill is about, because I wrote the report 3 or 4 years ago. Last year, when the bill was reached on the Private Calendar, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Truax] said that if the claimant would consent to reduce the amount to $1,750 he would have no objection. He was satisfied at that time.

The whole thing in a nutshell is that the Government seized this truck. The claimant, Duke, was acquitted. Anyone who has had anything to do with the prohibition laws knows that when a man is acquitted his automobile goes back to him. They did in this case what they have done on other occasions; that is, turned the truck over to the Treasury Department, which proceeded to wear it out, then they were not in shape to give it back to this claimant. They took advantage of legal technicalities instead of doing justice to Mr. Duke.

There were some changes made in the court records, but there is nothing to show that Duke had anything whatever to do with that matter. He may or may not have been a party.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PITTENGER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. If such a thing is done in connection with the trial of a defendant in court that is for his benefit, it must be done by him or his attorney.

Mr. PITTENGER. That is right, or by someone else.

Mr. McFARLANE. If he is the beneficiary of it, naturally he is charged with the responsibility of his own paper. And where court papers are changed favorable to the defendant, naturally he or his attorney were to blame, and should receive no compensation from this Congress for that kind of conduct if for no other reason.

Mr. PITTENGER. No. The gentleman may draw all the wrong conclusions he wants, but that is one he is not going to draw. The amendment should be defeated. This man had his car taken away from him and it should be given back to him.

Mr. McFARLANE. Why did not the court give it back to him. The court held against him. He could not prove title to the car in court yet he wants Congress to now pay him for it.

Mr. PITTENGER. He may have had a poor lawyer to represent him. However, I am not sitting in judgment on that. I do know he was deprived of his car and he should have the price of it back.

Mr. MILLARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PITTENGER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MILLARD. The Department is of the opinion that the claim is without merit and they do not recommend the enactment of this bill.

Mr. PITTENGER. I say that the Department is wrong more times than it is right and this amendment ought to be defeated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COSTELLO) there were—ayes 14, noes 42.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 97, nays 222, not voting 111, as follows:

[Roll No. 176]

YEAS—97

Amlie	Edmiston	Kocialkowski	Rogers, Okla.
Ashbrook	Ellenbogen	Kramer	Romjue
Barden	Faddis	Lambeth	Russell
Binderup	Ferguson	Lanham	Sauthoff
Cannon, Mo.	Fiesinger	Lewis, Colo.	Scott
Carpenter	Fletcher	Luckey	Secrest
Casey	Ford, Calif.	McClellan	South
Castellow	Ford, Miss.	McFarlane	Starnes
Coffee	Fuller	McSwain	Taber
Colden	Gehrmann	Mahon	Tarver
Cole, N. Y.	Greever	Massingale	Taylor, Colo.
Colmer	Gregory	Maverick	Taylor, S. C.
Cooley	Hancock, N. Y.	Millard	Thomason
Cooper, Tenn.	Hancock, N. C.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Thurston
Costello	Harter	Murdock	Turner
Cox	Hildebrandt	Nelson	Utterback
Cross, Tex.	Hobbs	O'Day	Wearin
Crosser, Ohio	Hoffman	O'Malley	Whelchel
Deen	Hull	Patterson	Whittington
Dies	Imhoff	Pierce	Wood
Dorsey	Johnson, Okla.	Polk	Young
Doxey	Johnson, Tex.	Ramsay	Zioncheck
Driscoll	Jones	Rankin
Duffey, Ohio	Keller	Rayburn
Eckert	Kloeb	Rich

NAYS—222

Adair	Doutrich	Kopplemann	Robinson, Utah
Allen	Drewry	Kvale	Robsion, Ky.
Andresen	Duffy, N. Y.	Lambertson	Rogers, Mass.
Andrew, Mass.	Duncan	Lamneck	Ryan
Andrews, N. Y.	Dunn, Pa.	Lee, Okla.	Sabath
Arends	Eagle	Lewis, Md.	Sadowski
Arnold	Ekwall	Lord	Sanders, Tex.
Ayers	Engel	Ludlow	Schaefer
Bacharach	Englebright	Lundeen	Schneider
Bacon	Evans	McAndrews	Schuetz
Beam	Farley	McCormack	Scrugham
Beiter	Fenerty	McGehee	Sears
Biermann	Fitzpatrick	McGrath	Seger
Blackney	Flannagan	McKeough	Shanley
Bland	Focht	McLaughlin	Sirovich
Bloom	Frey	McLean	Sisson
Boehne	Gasque	McReynolds	Smith, Conn.
Boland	Gavagan	Mansfield	Smith, Va.
Bolton	Gearhart	Mapes	Snell
Boykin	Gifford	Marcantonio	Somers, N. Y.
Boylan	Gilchrist	Marshall	Spence
Brennan	Gildea	Martin, Colo.	Stack
Brewster	Granfield	Martin, Mass.	Steagall
Brooks	Gray, Ind.	Mason	Stefan
Brown, Ga.	Gray, Pa.	Mead	Stewart
Brown, Mich.	Greenway	Meeks	Sullivan
Brunner	Greenwood	Merritt, Conn.	Taylor, Tenn.
Buck	Griswold	Merritt, N. Y.	Terry
Buckler, Minn.	Gwynne	Michener	Thomas
Burdick	Halleck	Monaghan	Thompson
Burnham	Harlan	O'Brien	Tinkham
Caldwell	Hart	O'Connell	Tobey
Carlson	Healey	O'Connor	Tolan
Carmichael	Hennings	O'Leary	Tonry
Cary	Hess	O'Neal	Treadway
Celler	Higgins, Mass.	Owen	Turpin
Christianson	Hill, Ala.	Palmisano	Umstead
Church	Hill, Samuel B.	Parsons	Vinson, Ky.
Clark, N. C.	Hollister	Pearson	Wadsworth
Cole, Md.	Holmes	Perkins	Wallgren
Cravens	Hope	Peterson, Fla.	Walter
Crawford	Houston	Pettengill	Warren
Crosby	Huddleston	Pfeifer	Weaver
Crowe	Jacobsen	Pittenger	Welch
Culkin	Jenckes, Ind.	Plumley	Werner
Cullen	Jenkins, Ohio	Powers	White
Daly	Johnson, W. Va.	Quinn	Wigglesworth
Darden	Kahn	Rabaut	Wilcox
Darrow	Kee	Randolph	Williams
Delaney	Kelly	Ransley	Withrow
Dempsey	Kennedy, Md.	Reed, Ill.	Wolcott
Dickstein	Kennedy, N. Y.	Reed, N. Y.	Wolfenden
Ditter	Kenney	Reilly	Wolverton
Dobbins	Kinzer	Richardson	Zimmerman
Dondero	Kniffin	Risk
Doughton	Knutson	Robertson

NOT VOTING—111

Bankhead	Boileau	Bulwinkle	Cartwright
Bell	Buchanan	Burch	Cavicchia
Berlin	Buckbee	Cannon, Wis.	Chandler
Blanton	Buckley, N. Y.	Carter	Chapman

Citron	Gambrill	Lucas	Richards
Claiborne	Gassaway	McGroarty	Rogers, N. H.
Clark, Idaho	Gillette	McLeod	Rudd
Cochran	Gingery	McMillan	Sanders, La.
Collins	Goldsborough	Maas	Sandlin
Connery	Goodwin	Maloney	Schulte
Cooper, Ohio	Green	May	Shannon
Corning	Guyer	Miller	Short
Crowther	Haines	Mitchell, Ill.	Smith, Wash.
Cummings	Hamlin	Montague	Smith, W. Va.
Dear	Hartley	Montet	Snyder
DeRouen	Higgins, Conn.	Moran	Stubbs
Dietrich	Hill, Knute	Moritz	Sumners, Tex.
Dingell	Hoeppel	Mott	Sutphin
Dirksen	Hook	Nichols	Sweeney
Disney	Kerr	Norton	Thom
Dockweiler	Kimball	Oliver	Underwood
Driver	Kleberg	Parks	Vinson, Ga.
Dunn, Miss.	Larrabee	Patman	West
Eaton	Lea, Calif.	Patton	Wilson, La.
Eicher	Lehlbach	Peterson, Ga.	Wilson, Pa.
Fernandez	Lemke	Peyser	Woodruff
Fish	Lesinski	Ramspeck	Woodrum
Fulmer	Lloyd	Reece

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Buchanan with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Guyer.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Lehlbach.
Mr. Sandlin with Mr. Crowther.
Mr. Driver with Mr. Eaton.
Mr. Green with Mr. Short.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Patman with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Lemke.
Mr. Ramspeck with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Mott.
Mr. Haines with Mr. Schulte.
Mr. Rudd with Mr. Bell.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Chapman.
Mr. Thom with Mr. West.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Claiborne.
Mr. Moran with Mr. Hill, Knute.
Mr. Richards with Mr. Wearin.
Mr. Peterson of Georgia with Mr. Larrabee.
Mr. Hoeppel with Mr. Hamlin.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Chandler.
Mr. Goldsborough with Mr. Dietrich.
Mr. Gillette with Mr. Peyser.

Mr. KELLER and Mr. HOBBS changed their votes from "nay" to "aye."

Mr. STEAGALL changed his vote from "aye" to "nay."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCFARLANE) there were—ayes 161, noes 49.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and seventeen Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So the bill was passed.

PUBLIC WORKS ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a House concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 37).

The Clerk read the House concurrent resolution, as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 37

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill (H. R. 6732) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, the Clerk of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed to make the following changes:

Page 16, line 11, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "4" and insert "3."

Page 25, line 12, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "5" and insert "4."

Page 26, line 2, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "6" and insert "5."

Page 26, line 12, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "7" and insert "6."

Page 26, line 13, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "8" and insert "7."

Page 26, line 14, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "9" and insert "8."

Page 26, line 15, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "10" and insert "9."

Page 26, line 16, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "11" and insert "10."

Page 26, line 18, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "12" and insert "11."

Page 27, line 3, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "13" and insert "12."

Page 27, line 5, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "14" and insert "13."

Page 27, line 12, of the Senate engrossed amendments, strike out "15" and insert "14."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House concurrent resolution?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, as I understand, these are just some changes made necessary on account of the enrollment of the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair so understands.

There was no objection.

The House concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

OMNIBUS BILL—H. R. 8108

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next omnibus bill on the calendar.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8108) for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

Title I—H. R. 531

Granting compensation to Walter F. Northrop

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 to Walter F. Northrop, of Tenafly, N. J., as compensation for injuries sustained by the said Walter F. Northrop when shot by a soldier at Edgewater, N. J., November 15, 1919.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 7, strike out the figures "$10,000" and insert "$2,500."

Page 1, line 8, after the words "New Jersey", strike out "as compensation" and insert "in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States."

Page 2, line 3, insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, beginning with line 3, strike out everything to and including line 15, on page 2.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, the amendment which I have offered is for the purpose of striking this item from the bill. The facts in connection with this case are these: The claimant, while the guest of the driver of a taxicab, was shot by a passenger.

There is nothing in the evidence or in the report which shows that the man who did the shooting was a soldier of the United States Army, except that he wore a uniform.

Admitting that this is prima facie evidence, the fact remains that a most extensive search was made by both military and civil authorities to locate this alleged soldier, but without any success whatever. It seems very unusual that if the man was actually a soldier in Camp Merritt that no trace was ever found of him there.

We may admit for the purpose of argument that this man was a soldier, but the further fact remains that at the time the shooting took place he was off duty, traveling around in a taxicab in the evening, apparently for recreation or pleasure, and the shooting was not in any way connected with his duty as a soldier.

He was not on duty, he was not in camp, and had gone to several places in the taxicab in the course of the evening.

I have every sympathy for the man who suffered this injury, but the fact remains that if we are going on record as holding that the United States Government is responsible for the acts of its employees, either military or civil while off duty, then we have gone a great ways.

There is no difference, as I see it, between this case and a case where an employee of the Treasury Department might happen to murder someone or run over someone with his car while off duty. In other words, the question is, Are we going to hold that the Government of the United States is responsible for the tortious acts of its employees when they are off duty?

Mr. McFARLANE. That is the question I was just going to ask. If we are to pass this kind of legislation it is going to make the Government of the United States an insurer for the tortious acts of all employees while they are off duty.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPE. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. Were you in the committee room when the author of the bill was there and made the statement that he made the claim against the Government on the fact that this was probably a shell-shocked soldier, and if the Government had exercised proper supervision, it would not have occurred.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I am rather surprised that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] should take the view he does of this case, and so, too, am I surprised at the statement of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE]. Both have gone off on the wrong theory.

This man who did the shooting wore the uniform of the United States Army. There is proof of that before the committee. You will find it in the report. It was a regulation uniform of the United States Army. Therefore, the presumption is that he was a United States soldier. This soldier, on the night of the shooting, in November 1919, left Camp Merritt, N. J. It should be borne in mind that that camp was an embarkation camp during the World War and served as a debarkation camp for the American Expeditionary Forces when they came back from the war. The returning soldiers went there to be looked over by physicians, to be passed on, as to their fitness condition, to find out whether they were shell shocked or mentally or otherwise affected as a result of their service on the battlefields of Europe. They were not kept there very long. When they were examined and if found defective in any way they were given hospitalization, and if found fit they were sent to the camps nearest their homes, to be discharged.

What did this soldier do? First of all, bear in mind that the prima facie evidence is that this man was a soldier of the United States Army, and we have to presume that as a matter of law, if we are to look at this as a jury. This soldier, responsible for the sad plight of Walter Northrop, presented himself at the Tenafly railroad station near Camp Merritt—and, remember, there was a military police in and around the camp and railroad station, looking for imposters and men absent without leave. The proof is that he accosted the driver of a taxicab who had Northrop with him, and said he wanted to go to Closter, which is nearby, to see his girl.

He hired the taxicab and he was driven to Closter by the driver, Northrop going along in the front seat with the driver, the soldier occupying the rear seat. When they got to Closter he did not know the whereabouts of any girl and ordered the taxi driver to Pearl River, N. Y. There, without leaving the cab, he asked to be driven to Edgewater, in New Jersey, and at the foot of Fort Lee Hill he shouted to stop the cab, that his hat had dropped out. Walter Northrop, who will be benefited by your act if this bill be passed, stepped out of the taxi as it stopped to get the hat and thereupon without warning the soldier shot him in the back, the bullet striking his spine. He is one of the finest boys you could ever meet in your life, but he is hopelessly paralyzed and for the rest of his natural life.

When residents in the neighborhood came to the scene the soldier was leaning over the back of the front seat as if he had put on the brake of the car. The soldier had also shot and killed the chauffeur. Asked what had happened, he said that "somebody must have run into us." He then got out of the car, said "get the police", and walked down toward the river and was never heard or seen again, although an extensive search was made for him. No one knows whether he jumped in or not or whatever became of him. All of these facts constitute evidence of derangement. That soldier was deranged. It is the only fair inference to be drawn from the facts and circumstances. A United States Army veteran returning from the World War would not do that sort of thing if he was out for recreation or pleasure, as the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] says. I fail to perceive how he can ask you to believe any such thing—that a man in the uniform of the United States Army coming back from overseas would go out for recreation or pleasure as he says, such a short distance from the great debarkation camp, and deliberately commit murder for which there was no motive. There was no attempt at robbery and he did not run or flee from the scene of the tragedy.

I do not charge to a soldier of the United States any such cold-blooded murder, unprovoked and without reason. This man was not an imposter. He was too close to the camp. An impostor might pose at a distance from the camp but would hardly do so at the threshold of the camp. This, Mr. Speaker, is a meritorious case on the law and the facts. The man was wearing the uniform of the United States Army. All of the facts tend to show that the man was deranged, and if he was, it was neglect of duty on the part of the officers of the camp who let him out with the result that it devolved upon us to right the wrong resulting in the sad and serious injuries sustained by Walter Northrop. The case is most deplorable, and I urge the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HOPE) there were—ayes 45, noes 70.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title II—H. R. 1830

For the relief of Julia Santiago

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and in full settlement against the Government, to the legal guardian of Julia Santiago, of San Juan, P. R., the sum of $8,000 for injuries of a permanent nature arising out of a gunshot wound inflicted by Private Agustín Alvarez, United States Army, at San Juan, P. R., on June 30, 1924.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 21, strike out the words "the legal guardian of", and in line 22 strike out "$8,000" and insert "$2,500 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States."

Page 3, line 2, strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HANCOCK of New York offers the following amendment: Page 2, strike out all of title II.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, the facts in the case now under consideration are somewhat similar to those in the bill just passed. The House is in a peculiarly generous mood this afternoon, and I assume that this bill will be passed also. There is this distinction which can be made between the two. In the bill we are now considering there is no claim that the soldier involved was acting under orders or in any way within the scope of his duty. An American soldier stationed in Puerto Rico went to town on leave, became drunk, got into a fight with two of his noncommissioned officers, drew his gun, and tried to shoot one or both of them. Unfortunately he hit a passer-by, a little girl, who was very seriously and perhaps permanently injured, although there is some doubt about that fact. The soldier was court-martialed for shooting the girl, but the case was dismissed because the court found there was not sufficient evidence to justify conviction. If we are going to pay claims like this purely out of sympathy, there being no obligation whatever resting on the Federal Government to pay, then let us consider the advisability of passing a bill to reimburse that taxicab driver who got a judgment against a Member of Congress a year ago because of injuries alleged to have been received in an altercation with him.

I understand judgment was rendered for something like $2,000, which remains unpaid. Certainly that Congressman was not acting as a Member of Congress when he got into a fight with a taxicab driver. Neither was this soldier acting as a member of the Army when he got into a fight with the noncommissioned officers off duty.

Mr. EKWALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I yield.

Mr. EKWALL. He certainly was not acting as a Member of Congress when he won a fight, that is a cinch.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. It depends on which side of the House he sits.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I yield.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman made the statement that Congress seems to be in a good spending mood. Did the gentleman ever know of anybody that was a freer spender than this Congress?

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, the regular order.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Now, let us just assume that a clerk in the War Department going home tonight has an accident and injures somebody on the street. Is there any reason why the Federal Treasury should reimburse that injured party? There is no reason why this little girl, painfully injured as she was, should be reimbursed at the public expense. There is no theory on which payment of any such claim can be justified.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. Cannot this distinction be drawn? Does not the gentleman think that when the Government has a group of soldiers or sailors, it owes a little different duty to the public than in the case of a clerk in one of the departments?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. When the soldier is under orders, yes; and when he is under control of an officer, yes; when he is on leave, no.

Mr. PITTENGER. This man was down town and was drunk, was he not?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. He certainly was not ordered to go down town and get drunk.

Mr. PITTENGER. But should not the Government have done something to supervise him so that he would not?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I say "No." Of course, that is a matter of opinion.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HANCOCK].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANCOCK of New York) there were ayes 63 and noes 40.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title III—H. R. 3596

For the relief of William H. Ames

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William H. Ames, of Boston, Mass., in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $5,000 for medical expenses and permanent injuries sustained by said William H. Ames when the automobile in which he was riding on November 5, 1919, was struck by an American Railway Express Co. wagon when the said company was under the control of the Director General of Railroads of the United States: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 3, line 21, strike out "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,000."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McFARLANE: Page 3, line 15, strike out title III.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. McSWAIN) there were ayes 75 and noes 82.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House can adjourn without a quorum. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 177]

Adair	Clark, Idaho	Fulmer	McMillan
Andrews, N. Y.	Cochran	Gambrill	Maas
Bankhead	Collins	Gassaway	Maloney
Barden	Connery	Gillette	May
Bell	Corning	Gingery	Miller
Berlin	Crowther	Goldsborough	Mitchell, Ill.
Binderup	Culkin	Goodwin	Montague
Blanton	Cummings	Hamlin	Moran
Boileau	Darden	Harlan	Moritz
Bolton	DeRouen	Hartley	Mott
Boykin	Dietrich	Higgins, Conn.	Nichols
Brennan	Dingell	Hook	Norton
Brooks	Dirksen	Kerr	Oliver
Buckbee	Ditter	Kimball	Owen
Buckley, N. Y.	Dockweiler	Kleberg	Parks
Bulwinkle	Driver	Lambertson	Patman
Burnham	Duffey, Ohio	Lamneck	Patton
Cannon, Wis.	Dunn, Miss.	Lea, Calif.	Richardson
Carter	Eaton	Lemke	Peyser
Cartwright	Eicher	Lloyd	Ramspeck
Chandler	Faddis	Lucas	Reece
Chapman	Fernandez	McGroarty	Richardson
Claiborne	Fish	McLeod	Rogers, N. H.

Rudd	Smith, Wash.	Sweeney	Underwood
Schulte	Snyder	Thom	White
Shannon	Stubbs	Tolan	Wilson, La.
Short	Sutphin	Treadway	Wilson, Pa.
Smith, Va.

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and twenty-one Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. McSWAIN, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. McSWAIN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, filed a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 8632) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River, to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley, to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley, to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933, for printing under the rule.

PUBLIC GRAZING LANDS

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah, from the Committee on Public Lands, filed a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 3019) to amend sections 1, 3, and 15 of an act to stop injury to public grazing lands, and for other purposes, for printing under the rule.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6732) entitled "An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21 to the foregoing bill.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 7167) entitled "An act to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, authorize appropriations, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. KING, Mr. COPELAND, and Mr. CAPPER to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2681. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Lake Champlain at or near West Swanton, Vt.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 37. Concurrent resolution authorizing the Clerk of the House of Representatives, in the enrollment of H. R. 6732, to make certain changes in said bill.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes on the amendment.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, in offering this amendment to strike out title III of this bill, I do so for this reason: This bill authorizes payment of a $2,000 claim to a man for an injury suffered November 5, 1919. The man was riding in a car which was struck by an American Railway Express Co. wagon. For that injury suffered back in 1919 he asks us now to pay him this sum of money.

The Department calls to our attention these facts: That this party was offered the opportunity of filing his claim for injury but did not do so until after the statute of limitations had run. The Department calls to our attention that if in the present status of this bill we allow this claim to be paid it will serve as a precedent for similar claims being filed long after the statute of limitations has run and perhaps the Government side of the case and its evidence have been destroyed.

For the reasons given for the enactment of the statute of limitations on all matters of this nature I think we ought not to set this kind of precedent. I think we ought to strike this claim out, that it should be disallowed. I hope the committee will vote for the amendment to strike out this section.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Did the Department say whether or not the claim was justified, whether or not the man was entitled to payment for the injuries?

Mr. McFARLANE. The Department called to our attention the fact that he did not file his claim with the Department until long after the statute of limitations had run.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. That does not answer my question.

Mr. PITTENGER. He cannot answer it, either.

Mr. McFARLANE. Answering the gentleman, I may say that the Government offered the claimant $1,000 in settlement of the claim but the claimant did not accept it nor did he file his claim within the statutory period, but comes in here at this late hour asking settlement of injury suffered in 1919.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. The answer to my question, then, is that the claim is justified.

Mr. McFARLANE. I do not know whether it is justified or not. If he had a justifiable case he ought to have tried it in the Court of Claims and have the matter adjudicated instead of letting it run along and coming to Congress asking Congress to give this to him on self-serving affidavits served long after the accident. No such affidavits are admissible in court and Congress should stop paying these claims of disputed negligence. According to Mr. A. M. Hartung in a letter to Mr. S. F. Andrews of the United States Railway Administration, dated February 5, 1930, he said:

> I enclose our office file in this matter which please return after it has served your purpose. You will see that the accident occurred about 5:40 p. m., November 5, 1919, during a snow and sleet storm, and that it was probably due to the negligence of Mr. Ames in driving too rapidly to permit him to stop in time to avert a collision with our vehicle. Our driver had just made a call at the Ginn Publishing Co.'s place of business in First Street, Cambridge, and was driving from First Street onto Commercial Street. There was a question, however, as to whether our driver had not made too short a turn onto Commercial Street, and as we were unable to locate any disinterested witnesses we thought it advisable to effect a settlement with Mr. Ames.
>
> Dr. George W. Morse examined Mr. Ames on January 30, 1920, and his report was to the effect that Mr. Ames received a severe injury of the right upper arm, the effects of which were rapidly disappearing, and that in his opinion there would be no permanent disability, and that he would probably be entirely well in 2 weeks.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I shall take but 1 minute only. I am sorry to take any time, but my colleague from Massachusetts asked me to explain this bill.

I may say that some 4 years ago I handled this matter when the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Irwin, was Chairman of the Claims Committee. At that time the Claims Committee favorably reported this bill.

There is one simple answer to the statement of my colleague, the gentleman from Texas. In the first place, if there were not so many objectors to meritorious bills this would have been passed long ago, so there is no point to his argument that there was delay in filing the claim. Secondly, the claim agent of the Government, who was the claim agent of the express company, fooled along with this aged man until after the statute of limitation had run. He did not say they would pay him $1,000. The old man claimed $4,000. His injuries were very serious. The day after the statute of limitations ran the agent told the old man to "Go to hell", that the Government did not owe him anything and would not pay him anything.

I want to say that, under these circumstances, the gentleman is "barking up the wrong tree", and his amendment ought to be defeated. The vote is "no" on this amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title IV—H. R. 3662

For the relief of certain claimants who suffered loss by fire in the State of Minnesota during October 1918

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in accordance with certifications of the Comptroller General of the United States under this act, to each claimant or its or his heirs, representatives, administrators, executors, successors, or assigns, the amount of whose loss on account of fire originating from the operation of railroads by the United States in the State of Minnesota on or about October 12, 1918, has been determined by court proceedings or by the Director General of Railroads, the difference between the amount of such loss so determined and the amount actually paid by the United States to such claimant less any amount paid to such claimant by any fire insurance company on account of such fire: Provided, That notwithstanding the terms and conditions of any policy of insurance, or the provisions of any law, no fire insurance company, except farmers' mutual fire insurance companies shall have any rights in and to funds herein appropriated, the payments herein provided for, nor to any right of subrogation whatsoever. That said farmers' mutual fire insurance companies shall be paid in the same manner and to the same extent as other claimants: Provided further, That no person who makes claim under this act by virtue of having acquired and succeeded to the rights of the original claimant through purchase and assignment from said claimant of said claim, shall receive more than the amount actually paid for such claim and assignment.

SEC. 2. No payment under the provisions of this act shall be made unless an application therefor is filed with the Comptroller General of the United States by or on behalf of the person entitled to payment within 2 years after the date of the enactment of this act. The Comptroller General of the United States shall determine the amount due on any application, and the person entitled thereto under this act, and shall certify such determination to the Secretary of the Treasury, which determination shall be final. The Comptroller General shall promulgate rules and regulations as to the identity of claimants, the validity of assignments, and all other matters in connection with the determination of the amounts due and the persons to whom such amounts shall be paid under this act. The amount to be paid under this act shall be ascertained from the records of the Director General of Railroads, and such records shall be conclusive evidence of the amount of any such loss, the amount paid by the United States with respect thereto, and the amount paid by any insurance company with respect thereto. Such records shall also be conclusive evidence of the person entitled to payment, except that if any judicial proceeding in which final judgment has been rendered the right of any person to succeed to the rights of the person who suffered the loss by the fire has been determined, such judgment shall be conclusive as to the heir, representative, administrator, executor, successor, or assignee, as the case may be, entitled to payment.

SEC. 3. The words "person" and "claimant", as used in the act, shall include an individual, two or more persons having a joint or common interest, company, partnership, and municipal and private corporations.

SEC. 4. Any person or group of persons individually or collectively who charge or collect, or attempt to charge or collect, either directly or indirectly, any fee or other compensation for assisting in any manner any person in obtaining the benefits of this act in excess of 10 percent of the amount of the claim actually paid under this act, shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year or both.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COX: Beginning on page 4, line 15, strike out everything down to and including line 8 on page 7.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this bill is the notorious Minnesota fire-claim case, in behalf of which a lobby has been maintained here during the whole of the present administration. It is inconceivable that a group of men and women devoted to the public interest could for a moment consider the adoption of this bill were they acquainted with the facts in the case. It will be recalled from a previous examination of this bill and from what has been stated on the floor with reference thereto that the claim grows out of a fire in the State of Minnesota which occurred in 1918, which was alleged to have been the result of the negligent setting of fire to the forests by a railroad then under the control of the Government. Many thousands of these claims were filed.

Mr. KVALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KVALE. The gentleman refers to an allegation when it is not an allegation. It is a fact substantiated time and time again in the courts and through other agencies.

Mr. COX. Anyway, there was a very terrible fire that took place in the State, which destroyed a great deal of property and cost many lives.

Claims were filed against the Government with the view of making collection to the extent of the damage alleged to have been sustained. Many of these cases were tried in the State courts of the State of Minnesota, with the result that findings were made against the Government on the facts in the case. Yet the record is full of testimony to the effect that there were other fires which may have caused the damage and with which the Government had no connection whatsoever.

After many of these test cases were tried with findings against the Government, the representatives of the Government proposed a settlement. A settlement was made as between the Government and all of the claimants and the matter was ended. Many years subsequent to the adjudication of the rights and after settlement was made as between the parties, these people come back and ask Congress to reopen the case and make settlement upon the basis of the amount of claims as originally made.

Mr. Speaker, let me make the observation that except for the political significance of the measure it would never have gotten this far.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. The gentleman and I are both interested, I believe, as supporters of the war-minerals claims bill. I assure him there are no more politics in the present measure than in the other.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this bill is commonly referred to as a bare-faced bid for the political support of a State. Whether this be true or not it is the giving away of more than sixteen millions of the people's money.

Mr. PITTENGER. I take exception to that statement.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. I challenge the statement.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this amendment should prevail. The bill ought to be defeated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

In reference to what the gentleman just said that this is a political bill, may I say that the bill was introduced in the House many, many years before the present administration came into power. It was introduced in this session by myself, a Democrat, by Mr. KVALE, a Farm-Laborite, and by Mr. PITTENGER, a Republican. All of the Representatives from Minnesota, regardless of party, have supported this bill unanimously.

On October 12, 1918, fires that started from the use of the railroads by the Government burned over 2,000 square miles of timber and woodland in northeastern Minnesota. Five hundred people lost their lives in that fire. Thirty million dollars' worth of property was destroyed. Litigation resulted, which remained in the courts of Minnesota for several years. Finally test cases involving the various areas concerned with in this bill got to the Supreme Court of Minnesota and that court determined liability against the Government.

Up to that time the Director General of Railroads had led these people to believe that if these test cases were decided against the Government he would pay 100 cents on every dollar of damages sustained. After the test cases were decided, he said:

No; I will not do that. I will pay you 50 percent of what you actually lost.

Mr. KVALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RYAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KVALE. He said also:

Unless you agree to accept 50 percent or nothing, you will get exactly nothing, and unless you go out and force all of your associates to make the same agreement none of you will get anything.

Mr. RYAN. He said if they did not take this 50 percent they could try their cases in the courts, which would have taken 10 years in the State of Minnesota. The courts in the area affected by these fires, taken together with all of the courts in the State, could not have tried all of these cases.

The Government sent out its adjusters to determine these losses. They determined how much the people had lost, how many cattle, chickens, hogs, and other property they had lost, and settled upon a figure as to the actual loss sustained. They then paid 50 percent of that loss.

Mr. Speaker, some of the Members say that this was a compromise settlement. People who had been living in tarpaper shacks for 10 or 12 years, with no resources and who were destitute, were told to try their cases in the courts when they had no money or opportunity to try them.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RYAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. The gentleman from Georgia stated that other fires may have done the damage. That question was all tried out in the courts and decided against the Government?

Mr. RYAN. Yes; very extensive evidence was taken on that matter.

Mr. KVALE. On page 15 of the report will be found a letter showing that the whole thing has been carefully investigated by the Attorney General at the request of the President, and that the President himself personally has given his stamp of approval to the justice of this claim.

Mr. RYAN. That is true. This matter involved extensive hearings on the part of the Committee on Claims. It has been reported by that committee several times. The bill has passed the Senate twice. The Attorney General of the United States has made an investigation and has reported that these claims have merit.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RYAN. I yield.

Mr. SABATH. The evidence disclosed also that these people were absolutely wiped out and were penniless, and it was due to this fact that they were obliged to accept the settlement of 50 cents on the dollar.

Mr. RYAN. That is true.

There was no question about the liability being determined, and there was no compromise on the amount, because the Government agents determined the amount and paid half, and we are asking in this bill that they pay the other half, without interest; and remember that we are asking only that they pay what the Government agents determined was due.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. RYAN. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. In response to the suggestion of the gentleman from Georgia that this is an old bill, is it not a fact that this bill was introduced in Congress within 2 years after the last settlement made by the Government?

Mr. RYAN. Yes; that is true.

Mr. PITTENGER. And objections have prevented its consideration ever since.

Mr. RYAN. A vote for this bill is a vote to correct a great injustice which has been done to thousands of Minnesota citizens.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is this vote on the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia to strike out the paragraph?

The SPEAKER. It is.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Cox) there were—ayes 64, noes 100.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and thirty-eight Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 130, nays 168, answered "present" 1, not voting 131, as follows:

[Roll No. 178]

YEAS—130

Adair	Driver	Lamneck	Ransley
Arnold	Duffey, Ohio	Lanham	Rich
Ashbrook	Eagle	Lesinski	Richards
Beam	Eckert	Lewis, Colo.	Robertson
Biermann	Edmiston	Ludlow	Russell
Bland	Ellenbogen	McAndrews	Sanders, Tex.
Boehne	Farley	McClellan	Schaefer
Brown, Ga.	Fiesinger	McFarlane	Secrest
Buchanan	Fletcher	McGehee	Shanley
Cannon, Mo.	Ford, Calif.	McLean	Smith, W. Va.
Carpenter	Ford, Miss.	McReynolds	South
Casey	Gasque	McSwain	Spence
Castellow	Gavagan	Mahon	Starnes
Chapman	Granfield	Mason	Taber
Church	Green	Meeks	Tarver
Citron	Griswold	Merritt, Conn.	Taylor, Colo.
Clark, N. C.	Halleck	Millard	Taylor, S. C.
Colden	Hancock, N. Y.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Terry
Cole, N. Y.	Higgins, Mass.	Moran	Thom
Colmer	Hill, Ala.	Murdock	Thomason
Cooley	Hobbs	O'Brien	Turner
Cooper, Tenn.	Hoffman	O'Day	Umstead
Costello	Hollister	O'Neal	Utterback
Cox	Holmes	Parsons	Vinson, Ky.
Cravens	Huddleston	Patterson	Weaver
Cross, Tex.	Imhoff	Pearson	West
Crosser, Ohio	Johnson, Tex.	Perkins	Whelchel
Darrow	Johnson, W. Va.	Peterson, Ga.	Whittington
Deen	Kee	Pettengill	Williams
Dies	Kelly	Pierce	Young
Ditter	Kloeb	Polk	Zimmerman
Dondero	Kniffin	Powers
Doxey	Lambeth	Rankin

NAYS—168

Allen	Dunn, Pa.	Kinzer	Reilly
Amlie	Ekwall	Knutson	Rogers, Mass.
Andresen	Engel	Kocialkowski	Rogers, Okla.
Andrew, Mass.	Evans	Kopplemann	Romjue
Andrews, N. Y.	Fenerty	Kramer	Ryan
Arends	Ferguson	Kvale	Sabath
Ayers	Fitzpatrick	Lee, Okla.	Sadowski
Bacharach	Flannagan	Lehlbach	Sandlin
Bacon	Focht	Lemke	Sauthoff
Beiter	Frey	Lloyd	Scott
Binderup	Gearhart	Lord	Sears
Blackney	Gehrmann	Luckey	Seger
Bloom	Gilchrist	Lundeen	Sirovich
Boland	Gildea	McCormack	Smith, Conn.
Brewster	Gingery	McKeough	Snell
Brown, Mich.	Goldsborough	McLaughlin	Somers, N. Y.
Brunner	Gray, Ind.	Mapes	Stack
Buck	Greenway	Marcantonio	Steagall
Buckler, Minn.	Greenwood	Marshall	Stefan
Burdick	Greever	Martin, Colo.	Stewart
Burnham	Gregory	Martin, Mass.	Taylor, Tenn.
Cannon, Wis.	Guyer	Massingale	Thomas
Carlson	Gwynne	Maverick	Thompson
Cavicchia	Hart	Merritt, N. Y.	Thurston
Christianson	Harter	Michener	Tobey
Coffee	Healey	Monaghan	Tonry
Cole, Md.	Hess	Nelson	Turpin
Cooper, Ohio	Higgins, Conn.	Nichols	Wadsworth
Crawford	Hildebrandt	O'Connell	Walter
Crosby	Hill, Samuel B.	O'Connor	Warren
Crowe	Hope	O'Leary	Wearin
Cullen	Houston	O'Malley	Welch
Daly	Hull	Palmisano	Werner
Delaney	Jacobsen	Peterson, Fla.	Wilcox
Dempsey	Jenckes, Ind.	Pfeifer	Wilson, La.
Dingell	Jenkins, Ohio	Pittenger	Withrow
Dobbins	Johnson, Okla.	Plumley	Wolcott
Dorsey	Kahn	Rabaut	Wolfenden
Drewry	Keller	Ramsay	Wolverton
Driscoll	Kennedy, Md.	Randolph	Wood
Duffy, N. Y.	Kennedy, N. Y.	Reed, Ill.	Woodruff
Duncan	Kenney	Reed, N. Y.	Zioncheck

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Wigglesworth

NOT VOTING—131

Bankhead	Buckbee	Claiborne	DeRouen
Barden	Buckley, N. Y.	Clark, Idaho	Dickstein
Bell	Bulwinkle	Cochran	Dietrich
Berlin	Burch	Collins	Dirksen
Blanton	Caldwell	Connery	Disney
Boileau	Carmichael	Corning	Dockweiler
Bolton	Carter	Crowther	Doughton
Boykin	Cartwright	Culkin	Doutrich
Boylan	Cary	Cummings	Dunn, Miss.
Brennan	Celler	Darden	Eaton
Brooks	Chandler	Dear	Eicher

Englebright	Kerr	Mott	Scrugham
Faddis	Kimball	Norton	Shannon
Fernandez	Kleberg	Oliver	Short
Fish	Lambertson	Owen	Sisson
Fuller	Larrabee	Parks	Smith, Va.
Fulmer	Lea, Calif.	Patman	Smith, Wash.
Gambrill	Lewis, Md.	Patton	Snyder
Gassaway	Lucas	Peyser	Stubbs
Gifford	McGrath	Quinn	Sullivan
Gillette	McGroarty	Ramspeck	Sumners, Tex.
Goodwin	McLeod	Rayburn	Sutphin
Gray, Pa.	McMillan	Reece	Sweeney
Haines	Maas	Richardson	Tinkham
Hamlin	Maloney	Risk	Tolan
Hancock, N. C.	Mansfield	Robinson, Utah	Treadway
Harlan	May	Robsion, Ky.	Underwood
Hartley	Mead	Rogers, N. H.	Vinson, Ga.
Hennings	Miller	Rudd	Wallgren
Hill, Knute	Mitchell, Ill.	Sanders, La.	White
Hoeppel	Montague	Schneider	Wilson, Pa.
Hook	Montet	Schuetz	Woodrum
Jones	Moritz	Schulte

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Maas (for) with Mr. Wigglesworth (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Smith of Virginia with Mr. Treadway.
Mr. Sisson with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Boylan with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. Cary with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Risk.
Mr. Fuller with Mr. Robsion of Kentucky.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Tinkham.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Lambertson.
Mr. Mead with Mr. Englebright.
Mr. Jones with Mr. Schuetz.
Mr. Barden with Mr. Tolan.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Robinson of Utah.
Mr. Schrugham with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Wallgren with Mr. Faddis.
Mr. Lewis of Maryland with Mr. Owen.
Mr. Hennings with Mr. Mitchell of Illinois.
Mr. White with Mr. Boykin.
Mr. Darden with Mr. Hancock of North Carolina.
Mr. Quinn with Mr. McGrath.
Mr. Gray of Pennsylvania with Mr. Carmichael.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Brennan.

Mr. McANDREWS and Mr. PARSONS changed their votes from "no" to "aye."

Mr. GREEVER, Mr. FOCHT, and Mr. NELSON changed their votes from "aye" to "no."

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Speaker, on this vote I have a pair with the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MAAS], who, if present, would vote "no." I therefore withdraw my vote and answer "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MINNESOTA FIRE-CLAIMANTS BILL

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD in connection with this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, the so-called "Minnesota fire-claimants bill" is known as "H. R. 3662." It is now a part of H. R. 8108, which is an omnibus claims bill, and in this bill is designated as follows: "Title IV—H. R. 3662. For the relief of certain claimants who suffered loss by fire in the State of Minnesota during October 1918."

Briefly summarized, the facts which give rise to this legislation are as follows:

On October 12, 1918, the United States Government, through its Director General of Railroads, was operating the railroads in this country. On October 12, 1918, Government-operated railroads set various fires along their rights-of-way in northeastern Minnesota. A holocaust resulted, burning over an enormous amount of territory, destroying property and life. The Director General of Railroads denied liability on the part of the United States Government, and set up various defenses. Litigation ensued. The courts held against the Government, in various cases in test areas. Up to this time, the Government had refused to make any adjustment of the loss.

Negotiations were then entered into for an adjustment of the loss, although the Director General of Railroads had indicated that if liability was established against the Government, the loss would be paid in full.

The Director General finally announced that settlements would be made in areas selected by him; that before settlements were made, he would send his own investigators into the field, investigate every claim against the Government, determine for himself the amount of the loss, and then pay a percentage of that loss. When the claimants protested, he told them "they could take it or leave it."

Thousands of law suits were pending. It was impossible for the courts to try them. The expense involved and the fact that many years of litigation would be necessary left no other alternative for the fire claimants except to take the amounts offered. They were then told that in every case they must agree in the estimate by the Director General of Railroads as to the amount of damage; that they must agree in writing to accept in full settlement of their loss a percentage of said amount; that they must then agree to have judgment entered against the Government for that percentage, and that they must then satisfy that judgment.

According to my information, this procedure was followed in practically all cases, if not in all instances. At any rate, the Director General admitted at the hearings before the House committee in connection with H. R. 5660, Seventy-first Congress, second session, that there was a basis for legal claim in connection with every settlement he made, and that he determined the amount of loss each claimant suffered, and paid only a portion of that loss.

This bill, H. R. 3662, included in title IV of the omnibus bill, H. R. 8108, applies to every claimant with whom the Government made settlement for loss incurred by fires set by Government-operated railroads in the area affected by the bill on October 12, 1918. While negotiations may have been carried on between the claimants on the one hand, and the Director General of Railroads on the other hand, his testimony shows that the railroad claim agents, who were then Government claim agents, investigated every claim and determined for themselves the amount of loss. The purpose of this bill, which was prepared in consultation with legislative counsel in the House of Representatives, is to pay to each such person or claimant the difference between the amount they received and the amount that the Director General fixed as their actual loss.

The bill is fair and just and ought to pass. The Director General admitted in his testimony in March 1930 that there was a basis for a legal claim against the Government in every case that he settled, and the evidence clearly shows that the Government itself determined the amount of loss and the percentage of payment. This bill covers every such case. The legislative counsel drafted it for that purpose, and that was the intention when it was introduced. It does not cover any claim which was not made against the Government at that time, and where the Government did not make a partial payment.

In response to those who say that these people had their legal rights, let me call attention to the fact that the vast majority of these claims are small in amount, and the cost of trying any one lawsuit would amount to thousands of dollars. This was due to the fact that numerous witnesses had to be called to trace the course of the fire, and as I recall, in one lawsuit, it took several months to present the testimony. Then, the courts refused to try these cases. They took the position that other litigation occupied their time. It was suggested, at one point during the efforts to secure payment to the fire claimants, that the State legislature pass a law and create many additional judgeships, so as to have some of these cases proceed to trial, because they had been pending for 2 or 3 years, at that time.

It was estimated that it would take all of the courts in the State of Minnesota, doing nothing else, 10 years to try the fire claims. The State legislature took no action on the matter of providing for additional judges, when the poor and penniless people agreed to accept what the Director General said he would pay them. Those who will benefit from the passage of this bill, for the greater part, are people in ordinary circumstances. A great many people now on relief rolls will benefit by the passage of this measure. It is proper for this great Government of ours to pay its honest obligations, and a vote for this bill is a vote to do just that and no more.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title V—H. R. 8725

To carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the claim of the Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $331,879.25, as reimbursement for repairing and reconditioning the steamships Princess Matoika, Pocahontas, Susquehanna, Potomac, America, and George Washington, as found by the Court of Claims and reported in Senate Document No. 141, Seventy-third Congress, second session.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 7, line 17, strike out the words "as reimbursement" and insert "in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States."

Page 7, line 23, insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I have not abused the privilege of this Well, and I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 5 minutes out of order at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, August 17, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] made some misstatements relative to the meat strike in Detroit that should be corrected. I was not present at the time he spoke but was informed of his remarks and tried to find them in the RECORD. They did not appear until this morning in the Appendix.

I am sure the gentleman is fair and does not desire to willfully misrepresent to the House.

In the first place, the gentleman is under the misapprehension that this strike is aimed at the farmer. This is not true. The Congressmen from Detroit have voted wholeheartedly to increase the purchasing power of the farmer and to help him out of his miserable condition. The women have not criticized the farmer or opposed the plan to help him because they realize that they are partners in misery. They are not fighting the farmer; and the gentleman from Missouri should not make such accusations. They are fighting against the tremendous increase in prices—that is between the price of what the farmer gets and what the consumer has to pay. Their fight is aimed at the packers, processors, and middlemen.

It is a fact that there is no processing tax on beef and that the increase in both beef and pork to the consumer has been entirely out of reason with what the farmer receives. Cows can be purchased today for 4½ cents per pound, and yet the price of meat has increased 350 percent, in some instances, to the consumer, in the last 2 years. These women want to investigate the packers and processors and this request is reasonable. If the packers are gouging the public, certainly this Congress and the people are entitled to know.

Meat is a necessity to the man who labors hard.

The gentleman refers to the increase in the hourly wage that is paid to the automobile worker. The reports that I have received from the workers themselves do not bear this out since the N. R. A. went out of existence. We must realize that there is an oversupply of labor in Detroit; that a great number of people are on relief work; that in thousands of cases these workers receive only $10 or $12 per week and must pay rent and buy food and clothing out of that. They cannot afford to pay those exorbitant prices for meat on that kind of wage. I agree with the gentleman that if they received 70 cents per hour and worked regularly that there should be no complaint. But I challenge the gentleman to show that the husbands of these meat-striking wives receive any such wages.

With the advanced machinery and the mass-production system that has been developed, the automobile worker is indeed fortunate who can receive employmuent 4 or 5 months out of the year. The First District of Michigan, where this strike originated, was the darkest district on the depression map of America. There were areas where 9 out of 10 families were hungry and absolutely destitute, entirely dependent on public charity or welfare. I can show you photographs of people sleeping in the Perrien Park, using old newspapers to protect themselves from the frost and cold; children going through alleys ransacking garbage pails looking for something to eat.

These people are grateful to President Roosevelt and this Democratic administration that these conditions have been eliminated.

There are two resolutions pending before this Congress relating to the high price of meat that should be passed immediately. The first is Senate Joint Resolution No. 9, authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the monopolistic, oppressive, and unfair methods and practices of various middlemen, warehouses, processors, manufacturers, packers, and handlers who are responsible for these high prices.

This resolution was passed by the Senate and reported out of my Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on July 23, 1935. It has since been reported out by the Rules Committee and should be brought out on the floor of the House.

If the gentleman from Missouri wishes to be of real service to the farmers in his district and to the consumers in my district he will cease attacking the housewives and work diligently for the passage of this resolution.

The other is a House resolution introduced by my colleague, Congressman DINGELL, asking for a House investigation.

I was deeply hurt to have these women referred to as foreigners and Communists. I resent very much having such remarks made about the people in my district. The city of Hamtramck, where this strike originated, cast a vote of about 11,000 in the last Presidential election. About 10,000 of these votes went for Roosevelt. In fact, in precinct no. 11, city of Hamtramck, Roosevelt received 637 votes and Hoover zero.

This is the strongest Democratic district in the State of Michigan.

Some people would still label a man a foreigner even though he were a third or fourth generation American simply because he carries the name that his forefathers brought from Poland, Italy, Russia, Rumania, or Czechoslovakia.

Perhaps to please them we should pass a law to change all these names to Jones, so that they would be like Pop-Eye's friend, "Whimpy", just one of the Jones boys.

Let me remind the gentleman that this district sent as many soldiers to the battle front in the last war as any district of equal population in the United States of America.

Let me say again, this is not a fight between the consumers and the farmers. This is a fight in the interest of both the consumer and the farmer. They are both entitled to know where this vast difference between the prices to the consumer and what the farmer receives goes to; that the present disparity between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays be so equalized as to make meat within the purchasing power of the consumer.

I have no quarrel with the independent butcher. As a rule they have tough going from chain-store competition as it is. They have been the unfortunate victims of this meat strike. Senate Joint Resolution 9 should be passed quickly so as to put an end to this meat strike, and I hope that the gentleman from Missouri, and the other Congressmen representing agricultural districts, will support it. [Applause.]

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 7, line 9, strike out all of title V.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCFARLANE) there were—ayes 29, noes 67.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present, and object to the vote upon the ground that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present. The call is automatic. The Doorkeeper will close the doors. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 177, nays 102, not voting 151, as follows:

[Roll No. 179]

YEAS—177

Adair	Fenerty	Ludlow	Schaefer
Allen	Fiesinger	McAndrews	Schneider
Amlie	Fletcher	McClellan	Scott
Andrew, Mass.	Ford, Miss.	McFarlane	Sears
Arnold	Gasque	McGehee	Secrest
Ashbrook	Gearhart	McKeough	Seger
Bacon	Gehrmann	McLean	Smith, Conn.
Biermann	Gilchrist	Mahon	Smith, W. Va.
Blackney	Gingery	Mapes	Snell
Bland	Goldsborough	Marcantonio	Spence
Boehne	Gray, Ind.	Martin, Mass.	Starnes
Brewster	Greenway	Mason	Steagall
Brown, Ga.	Greenwood	Massingale	Stefan
Brown, Mich.	Gregory	Maverick	Stewart
Buchanan	Griswold	Meeks	Taber
Burnham	Guyer	Michener	Tarver
Carlson	Hancock, N. Y.	Millard	Taylor, Colo.
Carpenter	Hess	Mitchell, Tenn.	Taylor, S. C.
Castellow	Hill, Ala.	Monaghan	Terry
Chapman	Hobbs	Murdock	Thom
Church	Hoffman	O'Day	Thomas
Citron	Hollister	O'Neal	Thomason
Coffee	Holmes	Owen	Thurston
Colden	Hope	Parsons	Tobey
Colmer	Huddleston	Pearson	Umstead
Cooley	Hull	Perkins	Utterback
Cooper, Tenn.	Imhoff	Pettengill	Vinson, Ky.
Costello	Jenckes, Ind.	Pierce	Wadsworth
Cox	Jenkins, Ohio	Polk	Wallgren
Crawford	Johnson, Okla.	Powers	Wearin
Crosby	Johnson, Tex.	Randolph	Welch
Cross, Tex.	Johnson, W. Va.	Rankin	Whelchel
Crosser, Ohio	Jones	Reed, Ill.	Whittington
Crowe	Kee	Reed, N. Y.	Wigglesworth
Darrow	Keller	Reilly	Wilcox
Dies	Kinzer	Rich	Williams
Disney	Kloeb	Richards	Withrow
Ditter	Lambeth	Robertson	Wolfenden
Dobbins	Lamneck	Rogers, Mass.	Wolverton
Doxey	Lanham	Rogers, Okla.	Wood
Driscoll	Lesinski	Romjue	Woodruff
Eagle	Lewis, Colo.	Russell	Young
Edmiston	Lewis, Md.	Sanders, Tex.	Zimmerman
Engel	Lloyd	Sauthoff	Zioncheck
Farley

NAYS—102

Andresen	Delaney	Gray, Pa.	Lord
Andrews, N. Y.	Dempsey	Green	Lundeen
Arends	Dickstein	Gwynne	McCormack
Beam	Dingell	Halleck	McLaughlin
Beiter	Dorsey	Hart	McReynolds
Bloom	Duffey, Ohio	Healey	Martin, Colo.
Boland	Duffy, N. Y.	Higgins, Conn.	Merritt, N. Y.
Boykin	Dunn, Pa.	Higgins, Mass.	Nelson
Brunner	Eckert	Hildebrandt	Nichols
Buck	Ekwall	Hill, Samuel B.	O'Brien
Buckler, Minn.	Ellenbogen	Houston	O'Connell
Burdick	Englebright	Jacobsen	O'Connor
Casey	Evans	Kahn	O'Leary
Cavicchia	Ferguson	Kelly	Palmisano
Christianson	Fitzpatrick	Kennedy, Md.	Patterson
Clark, N. C.	Focht	Kennedy, N. Y.	Peterson, Fla.
Cole, Md.	Frey	Kenney	Pfeifer
Cole, N. Y.	Fuller	Kniffin	Pittenger
Cullen	Gavagan	Knutson	Plumley
Daly	Gildea	Kocialkowski	Rabaut
Deen	Granfield	Kvale	Robsion, Ky.
Ryan	South	Tonry	West
Sadowski	Stack	Turpin	White
Shanley	Taylor, Tenn.	Walter	Wilson, La.
Sirovich	Thompson	Werner	Wolcott
Somers, N. Y.	Tinkham

NOT VOTING—151

Ayers	Dear	Kleberg	Quinn
Bacharach	DeRouen	Kopplemann	Ramsay
Bankhead	Dietrich	Kramer	Ramspeck
Barden	Dirksen	Lambertson	Ransley
Bell	Dockweiler	Larrabee	Rayburn
Berlin	Dondero	Lea, Calif.	Reece
Binderup	Doughton	Lee, Okla.	Richardson
Blanton	Doutrich	Lehlbach	Risk
Boileau	Drewry	Lemke	Robinson, Utah
Bolton	Driver	Lucas	Rogers, N. H.
Boylan	Duncan	Luckey	Rudd
Brennan	Dunn, Miss.	McGrath	Sabath
Brooks	Eaton	McGroarty	Sanders, La.
Buckbee	Eicher	McLeod	Sandlin
Buckley, N. Y.	Faddis	McMillan	Schuetz
Bulwinkle	Fernandez	McSwain	Schulte
Burch	Fish	Maas	Scrugham
Caldwell	Flannagan	Maloney	Shannon
Cannon, Mo.	Ford, Calif.	Mansfield	Short
Cannon, Wis.	Fulmer	Marshall	Sisson
Carmichael	Gambrill	May	Smith, Va.
Carter	Gassaway	Mead	Smith, Wash.
Cartwright	Gifford	Merritt, Conn.	Snyder
Cary	Gillette	Miller	Stubbs
Celler	Goodwin	Mitchell, Ill.	Sullivan
Chandler	Greever	Montague	Sumners, Tex.
Claiborne	Haines	Montet	Sutphin
Clark, Idaho	Hamlin	Moran	Sweeney
Cochran	Hancock, N. C.	Moritz	Tolan
Collins	Harlan	Mott	Treadway
Connery	Harter	Norton	Turner
Cooper, Ohio	Hartley	Oliver	Underwood
Corning	Hennings	O'Malley	Vinson, Ga.
Cravens	Hill, Knute	Parks	Warren
Crowther	Hoeppel	Patman	Weaver
Culkin	Hook	Patton	Wilson, Pa.
Cummings	Kerr	Peterson, Ga.	Woodrum
Darden	Kimball	Peyser

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Warren with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Maas.
Mr. Cravens with Mr. Bacharach.
Mr. Drewry with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Marshall.
Mr. Sandlin with Mr. Ransley.
Mr. Cannon of Missouri with Mr. Merritt of Connecticut.
Mr. Boylan with Mr. Dondero.
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Luckey.
Mr. Greever with Mr. Ashbrook.
Mr. O'Malley with Mr. Ramsay
Mr. Sabath with Mr. Turner.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Moritz.
Mr. Ayers with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Caldwell with Mr. Duncan.
Mr. Richardson with Mr. Ford of California.
Mr. Patton with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.

Mr. DOBBINS, Mr. BROWN of Michigan, Mr. ALLEN, and Mr. GREGORY changed their votes from "no" to "aye."

Mr. KELLY changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. SIROVICH changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LEE of Oklahoma, for the remainder of the week on account of going to Claremore, Okla., to deliver the funeral oration at the Will Rogers memorial services.

To Mr. MAY for today on account of temporary illness.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR

OMNIBUS BILL—H. R. 8108

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title VI—H. R. 4178

For the relief of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $968,748.12 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for losses sustained by the said International Manufacturers' Sales Corporation of America, Inc., during the years 1918 and 1919 while engaged, at the invitation of the United States Government, in furnishing articles of necessity to the Siberian population of Russia under and in pursuance to the plan formulated by the War Trade Board in the fall of the year 1918 for extending economic aid to the Siberian population of Russia, said losses having been incurred through the inability of the said International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., to exchange the Russian rubles received from the sale of said articles of prime necessity into American dollars because of the regulation issued by the Federal Reserve Board under date of February 14, 1919, under authority of the Executive order of January 26, 1918, prohibiting the exportation or importation of Russian rubles or the transfer of funds for their purchase by persons or dealers in the United States.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 8, line 19, after the word "settlement", insert "of all claims against the Government of the United States."

Page 9, line 11, strike out the period, insert a colon, and the following: ": Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Beginning on page 8, line 11, strike out all of title VI.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, the present bill is for the relief of the International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America. This company during the time of the great World War had sent to Russia a large shipment of shoes, in an attempt to sell them in Russia. As the price in Russia completely disappeared, it was proposed by the company to reship the shoes back to America, as they knew that because of the high prices in this country they could sell their shoes at a profit. At that time President Wilson proposed to bring relief to the Russians. He therefore had the agent of the United States War Trade Board in Russia contact Mr. Postnikoff, the head of this shoe company, and had him dispose of these shoes through the War Trade Board. In that way the War Trade Board agent took over the shoes and sold them to the Russians and collected from the Russians the entire purchase price in Russian rubles. The entire amount was paid to Mr. Postnikoff. He deposited it in a bank in Russia. At about this time a ruling was issued by the Federal Reserve Board prohibiting the exchange of American dollars into Russian rubles. The American dollar at that time was the sole medium of exchange or the basis whereby all currencies were valued throughout the world. Due to this ruling of the Reserve Board it was impossible for the International Sales Co. to exchange their Russian rubles for American dollars. As a result of that ruling, the claimant is now here before Congress asking that this Congress reimburse the International Sales Co. for the amount of Russian rubles which he lost in the bank in Russia.

The amount of this claim is $968,748.12. The only question that arises here is whether this Congress wishes to assume the obligation and decide that it is up to the Treasury Department to reimburse the International Sales Co. because of the fact that the Russian ruble was worthless, because it was impossible to exchange into any other currency, and because of the fact that the sales company was unable to do anything with these Russian rubles which they had on deposit in the bank in Russia.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. Yes.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Is it a fact that the International Sales Co. could not change the rubles into any money?

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand that because of the fact that the United States Government prohibited the exchange of Russian rubles into American dollars it was also impossible to get pounds sterling or French francs, since the American dollar was the medium of exchange.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I do not understand that to be the fact, but I am willing to take the gentleman's word for it.

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand it was not possible to make any exchange of Russian rubles into any other currency.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. In other words, the reason this man did not convert his property into cash was because of an order of the United States Government?

Mr. COSTELLO. The order of the United States Government was made in order to protect American currency. The currencies of the countries throughout the world were in a complete turmoil. Values had disappeared, and the only means whereby values were estimated was in terms of the American dollar.

Mr. HOBBS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. HOBBS. If the sale had gone through as originally planned, what money would the shoe company have received?

Mr. COSTELLO. Which sale does the gentleman mean? The sale contemplated when the shoes were first shipped to Russia?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. COSTELLO. The first sale that was planned would have called for payment to the International Sales Co. in rubles. In this particular instance, the first sale did not carry out because the price of commodities in Russia had completely disappeared and the American Government made possible the second sale.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. It was presented before the Claims Committee, of which I was a member, which heard this matter.

Mr. COSTELLO. All bills that are presented in both the first and second as well as the third omnibus claims bill have been presented to the Claims Committee, have been passed upon by the Claims Committee and have been reported to the House and are now before the House. It is presumed that the Claims Committee acted in perfect good faith in passing upon the claims when they were before them, and I commend the committee for the work it has done during the present session.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] has expired.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, may I first make a parliamentary inquiry?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Is there an amendment pending to strike this section of the bill?

The SPEAKER. There is.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The statement of the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] is so eminently fair that I was a little in doubt as to whether his motion was to strike this section from the bill.

I have no interest, near or remote, in this proposal, other than to see done what I believe to be justice. I happened, several years ago, to sit as a subcommittee of the Committee on Claims, for the purpose of hearing this claim. I did hear it at great length, in much detail, during a great deal of time. I am thoroughly convinced——

Mr. TABER. Would the gentleman yield right there for a question?

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. In just a moment.

Mr. TABER. The question is if any other claims of this character have been allowed by the Government?

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. The gentleman has been here longer than I have. I cannot answer that question.

Mr. TABER. Not in my time.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. I do not know whether such a claim has been allowed or not.

Mr. TABER. Not that I ever heard of.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Well, this is a new day, you know; a new deal. [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. I cannot yield right now until I get a little farther with my statement.

This bill was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR]. I am having this to say about it simply because I acted as a subcommittee of the Committee on Claims.

There are three distinct facts which I think support the justice of this bill. First, these shoes were diverted by the owner from Vladivostock, where they were, almost, by accident. At the request of the Government agent at Vladivostok they were shipped into interior Siberia and sold for the purpose of relieving a condition that the administration was trying to relieve, in pursuance of which policy this Congress had appropriated five million or more dollars. The owner of these shoes sent them into Siberia at the invitation of the Government and sold them in pursuance of the Government's policy.

Mr. COSTELLO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Pardon me; I cannot yield now.

This Government was trying to maintain order in Siberia and keep that government from going the route that the government in European Russia had gone. These goods were shipped into interior Siberia under the supervision of the Government agent by trains that were being used by the Red Cross. They had to be sold on terms. They were sold on terms. Every dollar of the money was collected in Russian rubles and put in banks throughout Siberia—into many banks. The amount was much larger in Russian rubles than the amount of this bill, which represents the fair exchange value of Russian rubles at that time.

These facts were testified to before the subcommittee by gentlemen from the State Department and from the Federal Reserve Board. At that moment the Federal Reserve Board issued the order that appears upon page 32 of the report, prohibiting absolutely the importation or exportation of Russian rubles or exchange based thereupon, so that the owner of this money found himself unexpectedly and suddenly absolutely unable to get from Russia to the United States the money that he had deposited in those banks in Siberia.

The result was, after trying the Army, the Y. M. C. A., and every other agency in that country which might be interested in purchasing Russian rubles, and after trying to convert them into French or English exchange, he was unable to get a dollar of his money out of those banks; the whole of Siberia went Bolshevik, all the banks broke, and this claimant lost every dollar arising from the sale of goods made at the request of this Government and as the direct result of the order of the Federal Reserve Board prohibiting the importation or exportation of rubles or dealing in exchange based thereon.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'CONNOR: Page 8, line 10, after the word "of", strike out "$968,748.12" and insert in lieu thereof "$968,740.12."

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, obviously this is an amendment reducing the amount, so I may explain the bill to the House.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the amendment is not offered to the amendment, and thus is not in order.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, it is a perfecting amendment.

Mr. TABER. No; it is not a perfecting amendment.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The amendment offered was to strike out the entire clause.

Mr. TABER. It should have been offered as a perfecting amendment before the motion to strike was offered.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the motion to strike out the entire paragraph can be held in abeyance until this perfecting amendment is acted upon.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands this is a perfecting amendment to the paragraph.

Mr. TABER. And that it should be considered ahead of the amendment to strike out the paragraph.

The SPEAKER. And, of course, this motion would have precedence over a motion to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. TABER. It would if it were offered at the same time the motion to strike out the paragraph was offered, but it was not offered until the other amendment had been adopted.

The SPEAKER. It is not necessary that it be offered in advance of the motion to strike out the paragraph. The Chair thinks the amendment has been offered in time, and overrules the point of order.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, my only purpose in rising is to explain to the House that this bill was inherited by me from my predecessor. This company has been knocking at the gates of Congress for 17 or 18 years. I have never gone into the details of this bill as has the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARK], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], but these gentlemen who have, say it is absolutely justified on its merits. It has passed the Senate in three Congresses. It has been objected to in the House solely because of the amount involved. I realize the amount is large, but as I have maintained on this floor, if our Government does a wrong to one of its citizens, whether it is to the extent of $5 or $5,000,000,000, it should reimburse the citizen. In this case the Federal Reserve System and the State Department say that our Government did a wrong to this man and his company which cost him this money. No one has attempted to dispute this fact.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. PITTENGER. Is it not a fact that three different Secretaries of State have favorably recommended action on this bill?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes. The Federal Reserve Board has always. Now, that is the situation. I probably know less about this bill than any member of the Claims Committee who has studied the bill, but those who have studied the bill support it whole-heartedly and favor it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. McFARLANE) there were—ayes, 53, noes 110.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present, and make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-seven Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 9, lines 13 and 19, strike out the figures "10" and insert the figure "5."

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, this amendment simply reduces the attorney's fee from 10 percent to 5 percent. If allowed at the rate of 10 percent, it would be approximately $100,000.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I offer another amendment to this section, which I send to the desk:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. McFARLANE: Strike out "968,748.12" wherever it appears in the bill and insert "$500,000."

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I believe that if all the facts in this case were known to the Members of Congress in the short time we have to debate this matter, we would strike out the full amount rather than giving them half or a little more, as this amendment does. This is a war claim from away back in 1918. If it had any merit at all, it would have been paid long before now. The most that can be said about this bill is that it is a moral obligation. This money had been placed in a bank and left there for more than a month when this order of the Federal Reserve, that has been mentioned, was given. I do not think there is any moral obligation that requires the United States to pay any amount. Very little information can be secured from the State Department because they do not have any information about this matter, apparently. Since the House has voted to pay this amount, I think the Members should be given the opportunity of saying whether or not $500,000 is a reasonable sum to pay in this instance. I think it is more than liberal. I think it is more than generous. I see no reason why the Government should pay any amount in this case, but if we are going to have the Government pay something, I believe $500,000 is a very liberal amount.

Mr. Speaker, I trust the amendment I have offered will be adopted.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. It is fair to assume there were a great many American companies and American individuals which held money in Russian banks at the same time and were caught in the same manner. This is only the beginning of what it is going to cost the Government. It is probably fair to assume there will be a great many claims of the same sort based on the same theory, and this will result eventually in the Government's paying out not $500,000 or $1,000,000, but an untold sum.

Mr. McFARLANE. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. I am sure our grandchildren will be paying claims which will be brought in here on a similar statement of fact. This is going to set a precedent for the payment of any number of claims of this kind and character. Where is it going to end? Who is going to furnish the money? How are the taxpayers of this country ever going to raise the money to pay these so-called "moral obligations"?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Did the gentleman point out that the International Sales Co. had this money under their own control in banks over there for a period of 1 month before this order came out and as reasonably prudent people should have gotten this money out of Russia?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes. I tried to call that fact to the attention of the House. There is no reason why we should be responsible for the negligence of those people; yet, that is what we are doing. We are putting an additional liability upon the poor overburdened taxpayers of this country for the negligence of this company. I cannot understand why we should do that.

Mr. ENGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ENGEL. I lost $300 in the French Exchange while serving in the American Army in France during the war. It seems that if we are going to pay claims like this I should put in a claim for the amount due me.

Mr. McFARLANE. The gentleman has a better claim than the one we are considering.

This is going to set a precedent for the payment of many millions of dollars on just such worthless, flimsy bills. I hope the House will adopt my amendment and save at least $468,748.12.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has been indulging in a post mortem principally as to the merits of the bill. If the gentleman had offered his amendment calling for the payment of $500,000 in the beginning I would have opposed it, and stated that we should give this man the amount which Congress after Congress has determined, after an exact calculation. The gentleman from Texas or nobody else is entitled to stand up here and compute the amount arbitrarily which that concern is entitled to. They are entitled to the whole amount or nothing. There is no basis for figuring a less amount. An amendment was offered cutting the attorney's fee in half. I did not oppose that matter, because as far as I am concerned the attorney's fee may be nothing. Now it is sought to inject into the bill an arbitrary fixing of the claim at the last minute after the bill has virtually passed. Now, if the House wants to do that they should not have committees to consider what the amount of these claims should be.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman from Texas stated that this company had the money in the bank for 30 days, a bank that they had selected in Russia. Ordinary prudent people would have removed the money long before. I would like to know if the gentleman from Texas thinks these folks left the money in the bank in Russia for the purpose of fixing it so that they could get American exchange and file a claim against the Government?

Mr. O'CONNOR. That matter has been gone into many times. The Federal Reserve and the State Department time and time again said it was their order which caused this loss. The loss was the amount stated in the bill. The loss was not $500,000 or $600,000, or $700,000.

Mr. NICHOLS. Did not this company make an effort after it found they could not exchange the rubles for American dollars to get exchange in the English pound or the franc or any other exchange they could secure? They say that was the only exchange in Russia at that time. Could they not get it into any exchange?

Mr. O'CONNOR. These rubles were absolutely worthless, as the Federal Reserve admits.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. In the event they held these rubles in Russian banks for 60 days and the rubles had advanced as far as the American dollar was concerned, and they made a million dollars, would they have turned that money over to the United States.

Mr. McFARLANE. I do not believe that enters into the matter at all.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. They took a chance and lost.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. McFARLANE) there were—ayes 78, noes 92.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and eight Members present, not a quorum.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 120, nays 156, not voting 153, answered "present" 1, as follows:

[Roll No. 180]

YEAS—120

Allen	Doxey	Keller	Pettengill
Amlie	Eagle	Kelly	Pierce
Arends	Engel	Kinzer	Polk
Arnold	Englebright	Kloeb	Rankin
Ayers	Fiesinger	Kniffin	Rich
Beam	Fletcher	Lamneck	Robertson
Blackney	Ford, Miss.	Lanham	Rogers, Okla.
Bland	Gearhart	Lesinski	Romjue
Brewster	Gehrmann	Lewis, Md.	Sauthoff
Brown, Ga.	Gilchrist	Luckey	Schneider
Buchanan	Gray, Ind.	Ludlow	Scott
Carlson	Green	McClellan	South
Carpenter	Gregory	McFarlane	Starnes
Casey	Griswold	McGehee	Steagall
Castellow	Halleck	McSwain	Stefan
Church	Hancock, N. Y.	Mahon	Taber
Coffee	Hess	Mapes	Tarver
Colden	Hill, Ala.	Massingale	Taylor, Colo.
Cole, N. Y.	Hobbs	Meeks	Taylor, S. C.
Colmer	Hoffman	Michener	Terry
Cooley	Hollister	Millard	Thom
Cooper, Tenn	Huddleston	Mitchell, Tenn.	Thomas
Costello	Hull	Moritz	Thomason
Cox	Imhoff	Murdock	Wearin
Crawford	Jacobsen	Nelson	Whelchel
Cross, Tex.	Jenckes, Ind.	O'Brien	Whittington
Darrow	Jenkins, Ohio	O'Neal	Williams
Deen	Johnson, Okla.	Owen	Withrow
Disney	Jones	Patterson	Zimmerman
Doughton	Kee	Pearson	Zioncheck

NAYS—156

Adair	Driscoll	Knutson	Reilly
Andresen	Duffey, Ohio	Kocialkowski	Richards
Andrew, Mass.	Duffy, N. Y.	Kramer	Robsion, Ky.
Andrews, N. Y.	Duncan	Kvale	Rogers, Mass.
Ashbrook	Dunn, Pa.	Lambeth	Russell
Bacharach	Eckert	Lea, Calif.	Ryan
Bacon	Edmiston	Lewis, Colo.	Sabath
Barden	Ekwall	Lundeen	Sadowski
Beiter	Ellenbogen	McAndrews	Sandlin
Biermann	Evans	McCormack	Schulte
Bloom	Farley	McKeough	Sears
Boehne	Fenerty	McLaughlin	Seger
Boland	Ferguson	McLean	Shanley
Boylan	Focht	McReynolds	Sirovich
Brown, Mich.	Frey	Marcantonio	Smith, Conn.
Brunner	Gasque	Martin, Colo.	Smith, W. Va.
Buck	Gavagan	Martin, Mass.	Snell
Buckler, Minn.	Gildea	Mason	Somers, N. Y.
Burdick	Gingery	Maverick	Spence
Cannon, Wis.	Granfield	Mead	Stack
Cavicchia	Greenway	Merritt, N. Y.	Stewart
Celler	Greenwood	Monaghan	Thompson
Chapman	Guyer	Nichols	Tonry
Christianson	Gwynne	O'Connell	Turpin
Citron	Haines	O'Connor	Umstead
Clark, N. C.	Hart	O'Leary	Utterback
Cole, Md.	Healey	Palmisano	Vinson, Ky.
Cooper, Ohio	Higgins, Conn.	Parsons	Wadsworth
Crosby	Higgins, Mass.	Patman	Weaver
Crosser, Ohio	Hildebrandt	Perkins	Werner
Cullen	Hill, Samuel B.	Peterson, Fla.	White
Daly	Holmes	Pfeifer	Wigglesworth
Delaney	Hope	Pittinger	Wilcox
Dempsey	Houston	Plumley	Wilson, La.
Dickstein	Johnson, W. Va.	Powers	Wolcott
Dies	Kahn	Rabaut	Wolfenden
Dingell	Kennedy, Md.	Randolph	Wolverton
Dobbins	Kennedy, N. Y.	Reed, Ill.	Wood
Dorsey	Kenney	Reed, N. Y.	Young

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

O'Day

NOT VOTING—153

Bankhead	Cravens	Gassaway	Lucas
Bell	Crowe	Gifford	McGrath
Berlin	Crowther	Gillette	McGroarty
Binderup	Culkin	Goldsborough	McLeod
Blanton	Cummings	Goodwin	McMillan
Boileau	Darden	Gray, Pa.	Maas
Bolton	Dear	Greever	Maloney
Boykin	DeRouen	Hamlin	Mansfield
Brennan	Dietrich	Hancock, N. C.	Marshall
Brooks	Dirksen	Harlan	May
Buckbee	Ditter	Harter	Merritt, Conn.
Buckley, N. Y.	Dockweiler	Hartley	Miller
Bulwinkle	Dondero	Hennings	Mitchell, Ill.
Burch	Doutrich	Hill, Knute	Montague
Burnham	Drewry	Hoeppel	Montet
Caldwell	Driver	Hook	Moran
Cannon, Mo.	Dunn, Miss.	Johnson, Tex.	Mott
Carmichael	Eaton	Kerr	Norton
Carter	Eicher	Kimball	Oliver
Cartwright	Faddis	Kleberg	O'Malley
Cary	Fernandez	Kopplemann	Parks
Chandler	Fish	Lambertson	Patton
Claiborne	Fitzpatrick	Larrabee	Peterson, Ga.
Clark, Idaho	Flannagan	Lee, Okla.	Peyser
Cochran	Ford, Calif.	Lehlbach	Quinn
Collins	Fuller	Lemke	Ramsay
Connery	Fulmer	Lloyd	Ramspeck
Corning	Gambrill	Lord	Ransley
Rayburn	Scrugham	Sumners, Tex.	Underwood
Reece	Secrest	Sutphin	Vinson, Ga.
Richardson	Shannon	Sweeney	Wallgren
Risk	Short	Taylor, Tenn.	Walter
Robinson, Utah	Sisson	Thurston	Warren
Rogers, N. H.	Smith, Va.	Tinkham	Welch
Rudd	Smith, Wash.	Tobey	West
Sanders, La.	Snyder	Tolan	Wilson, Pa.
Sanders, Tex.	Stubbs	Treadway	Woodruff
Schaefer	Sullivan	Turner	Woodrum
Schuetz

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GUYER and Mr. COOPER of Ohio changed their votes from "aye" to "no."

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Crowe with Mr. Burnham.
Mr. Fitzpatrick with Mr. Ditter.
Mr. Fuller with Mr. Lord.
Mr. Johnson of Texas with Mr. Marshall.
Mr. Kopplemann with Mr. Taylor of Tennessee.
Mr. Sanders of Texas with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Secrest with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Welch.
Mr. Warren with Mr. Woodruff.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, I offer a short qualifying amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLARD: Page 8, line 18, after the figures add the following: "Payable in the so-called 'new Roosevelt mills.'"

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title VII—H. R. 4799

To provide for the reimbursement of certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed as a result of the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum or sums, amounting in the aggregate not to exceed $38,122.89, as may be required by the Secretary of the Navy to reimburse, under such regulations as he may prescribe, certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps, for losses of and damages to reasonable and necessary personal property resulting from the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931:

With the following committee amendment:

Page 10, line 11, strike out "$38,122.89" and insert in lieu thereof "$38,487.04."

After line 18, insert the following:

Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCFARLANE) there were—ayes 126, noes 74.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 146, nays 115, answered "present" 1, not voting 168, as follows:

[Roll No. 181]

YEAS—146

Amlie	Ayers	Blackney	Brown, Mich.
Andresen	Bacharach	Bloom	Brunner
Andrew, Mass.	Bacon	Boland	Buck
Andrews, N. Y.	Beiter	Boylan	Buckler, Minn.

Burdick	Frey	McAndrews	Sadowski
Cannon, Wis.	Gasque	McCormack	Sauthoff
Carlson	Gavagan	McKeough	Schneider
Cavicchia	Gehrmann	McLaughlin	Schulte
Celler	Gilchrist	McReynolds	Seger
Christianson	Granfield	Marcantonio	Shanley
Cole, Md.	Gray, Pa.	Martin, Colo.	Sirovich
Cole, N. Y.	Greenway	Martin, Mass.	Smith, Conn.
Cooper, Ohio	Greenwood	Maverick	Snell
Crosby	Guyer	Mead	Somers, N. Y.
Crowe	Gwynne	Merritt, N. Y.	Spence
Cullen	Haines	Michener	Stack
Daly	Halleck	Monaghan	Steagall
Delaney	Hart	Nichols	Stewart
Dempsey	Healey	O'Connell	Thomas
Dickstein	Hildebrandt	O'Connor	Thompson
Dingell	Hill, Samuel B.	O'Day	Thurston
Ditter	Holmes	O'Leary	Tonry
Dobbins	Houston	O'Neal	Turpin
Dorsey	Hull	Palmisano	Utterback
Driscoll	Jenkins, Ohio	Perkins	Vinson, Ky.
Duffey, Ohio	Kahn	Pfeifer	Wadsworth
Duffy, N. Y.	Kennedy, Md.	Pittenger	Weaver
Duncan	Kennedy, N. Y.	Plumley	Welch
Dunn, Pa.	Kenney	Rabaut	Werner
Eckert	Kinzer	Reed, Ill.	White
Edmiston	Knutson	Reed, N. Y.	Wilcox
Ekwall	Kocialkowski	Reilly	Wilson, La.
Ellenbogen	Kramer	Robsion, Ky.	Withrow
Englebright	Kvale	Rogers, Mass.	Wolcott
Evans	Lea, Calif.	Ryan	Wolfenden
Fenerty	Lemke	Sabath	Wolverton
Ferguson	Lundeen

NAYS—115

Adair	Disney	Lambeth	Randolph
Allen	Doxey	Lanham	Rankin
Arends	Eagle	Lesinski	Rich
Ashbrook	Engel	Lewis, Colo.	Richards
Barden	Farley	Luckey	Robertson
Biermann	Fiesinger	Ludlow	Rogers, Okla.
Bland	Fletcher	McClellan	Romjue
Boehne	Focht	McFarlane	Russell
Brewster	Ford, Miss.	McGehee	Scott
Brown, Ga.	Gingery	McSwain	Sears
Buchanan	Gray, Ind.	Mahon	Smith, W. Va.
Cannon, Mo.	Green	Mapes	South
Carpenter	Gregory	Massingale	Starnes
Casey	Griswold	Meeks	Stefan
Castellow	Hancock, N. Y.	Millard	Tarver
Church	Hill, Ala.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Taylor, Colo.
Citron	Hobbs	Moritz	Taylor, S. C.
Clark, N. C.	Hoffman	Murdock	Terry
Coffee	Huddleston	Nelson	Thom
Colden	Imhoff	O'Brien	Umstead
Colmer	Jacobsen	Owen	Wearin
Cooley	Johnson, Okla.	Parsons	Whelchel
Cooper, Tenn.	Johnson, W. Va.	Patman	Whittington
Costello	Jones	Patterson	Williams
Cox	Kee	Pearson	Wood
Crawford	Keller	Pettengill	Young
Cross, Tex.	Kloeb	Pierce	Zimmerman
Darrow	Kniffin	Polk	Zioncheck
Deen	Kopplemann	Powers

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Taber

NOT VOTING—168

Arnold	DeRouen	Higgins, Conn.	Montet
Bankhead	Dies	Higgins, Mass.	Moran
Beam	Dietrich	Hill, Knute	Mott
Bell	Dirksen	Hoeppel	Norton
Berlin	Dockweiler	Hollister	Oliver
Binderup	Dondero	Hook	O'Malley
Blanton	Doughton	Hope	Parks
Boileau	Doutrich	Jenckes, Ind.	Patton
Bolton	Drewry	Johnson, Tex.	Peterson, Fla.
Boykin	Driver	Kelly	Peterson, Ga.
Brennan	Dunn, Miss.	Kerr	Peyser
Brooks	Eaton	Kimball	Quinn
Buckbee	Eicher	Kleberg	Ramsay
Buckley, N. Y.	Faddis	Lambertson	Ramspeck
Bulwinkle	Fernandez	Lamneck	Ransley
Burch	Fish	Larrabee	Rayburn
Burnham	Fitzpatrick	Lee, Okla.	Reece
Caldwell	Flannagan	Lehlbach	Richardson
Carmichael	Ford, Calif.	Lewis, Md.	Risk
Carter	Fuller	Lloyd	Robinson, Utah
Cartwright	Fulmer	Lord	Rogers, N. H.
Cary	Gambrill	Lucas	Rudd
Chandler	Gassaway	McGrath	Sanders, La.
Chapman	Gearhart	McGroarty	Sanders, Tex.
Claiborne	Gifford	McLean	Sandlin
Clark, Idaho	Gildea	McLeod	Schaefer
Cochran	Gillette	McMillan	Schuetz
Collins	Goldsborough	Maas	Scrugham
Connery	Goodwin	Maloney	Secrest
Corning	Greever	Mansfield	Shannon
Cravens	Hamlin	Marshall	Short
Crosser, Ohio	Hancock, N. C.	Mason	Sisson
Crowther	Harlan	May	Smith, Va.
Culkin	Harter	Merritt, Conn.	Smith, Wash.
Cummings	Hartley	Miller	Snyder
Darden	Hennings	Mitchell, Ill.	Stubbs
Dear	Hess	Montague	Sullivan
Sumners, Tex.	Tinkham	Underwood	West
Sutphin	Tobey	Vinson, Ga.	Wigglesworth
Sweeney	Tolan	Wallgren	Wilson, Pa.
Taylor, Tenn.	Treadway	Walter	Woodruff
Thomason	Turner	Warren	Woodrum

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Boileau (for) with Mr. Thomason (against).
Mr. Maas (for) with Mr. Taber (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Burch with Mr. Treadway.
Mr. Blanton with Mr. Marshall.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Lord.
Mr. Arnold with Mr. Eaton.
Mr. Miller with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Carter.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Connery with Mr. Hess.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Kimball.
Mr. Corning with Mr. McLean.
Mr. Cravens with Mr. Short.
Mr. Parks with Mr. Tinkham.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Johnson of Texas with Mr. Reece.
Mr. Crosser of Ohio with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Risk.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Mott.
Mr. Sanders of Texas with Mr. Wigglesworth.
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Driver with Mr. Ransley.
Mr. Sandlin with Mr. Hollister.
Mr. Fuller with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Crowder.
Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Dirksen.
Mr. Warren with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. Kelly with Mr. Lambertson.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Taylor of Tennessee.
Mr. Goldsborough with Mr. Lehlbach.
Mr. Snyder with Mr. Hope.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Goodwin.
Mr. Sisson with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Gearhart.
Mr. Fitzpatrick with Mr. Dondero.
Mr. Drewry with Mr. Burnham.
Mr. Ramspeck with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Dear with Mr. Moran.
Mr. Lucas with Mr. Claiborne.
Mr. Boykin with Mr. Lamneck.
Mr. McGrath with Mr. Caldwell.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Larrabee.
Mr. Bean with Mr. Mason.
Mr. Carmichael with Mr. Dietrich.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Patton.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Richardson.
Mr. Schuetz with Mr. Eicher.
Mr. Gillette with Mr. Sweeney.
Mr. West with Mrs. Jenckes of Indiana.
Mr. Tolan with Mr. Hook.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Stubbs.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Gildea.
Mr. Faddis with Mr. Scrugham.
Mr. Dockweiler with Mrs. Norton.
Mr. Maloney with Mr. Chapman.
Mr. Binderup with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.
Mr. McGroarty with Mr. Bell.
Mr. Cary with Mr. Darden.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Peterson of Georgia.
Mr. Rudd with Mr. Schaefer.
Mr. Smith of Connecticut with Mr. Ford of California.
Mr. Greever with Mr. Hamlin.
Mr. Hoeppel with Mr. Turner.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Hill, Knute.
Mr. Hennings with Mr. Underwood.
Mr. Smith of Washington with Mr. Gambrill.
Mr. Robinson of Utah with Mr. Smith of Virginia.
Mr. May with Mr. Dunn of Mississippi.
Mr. Clark of Idaho with Mr. Peterson of Florida.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Lewis of Maryland.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Chandler with Mr. Fernandez.
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina with Mr. Wallgren.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Harlan.
Mr. Gassaway with Mr. Secrest.
Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts with Mr. Sutphin.
Mr. Sanders of Louisiana with Mr. Ramsay.
Mr. Quinn with Mr. Peyser.

Mr. DIES changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. DITTER changed his vote from "no" to "aye."

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote "aye."

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present and listening when his name was called?

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. I am afraid I cannot qualify.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I have a pair with the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MAAS]. I voted "no." If Mr. MAAS were present, he would vote "aye." I withdraw my vote of "no" and answer "present."

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, if Mr. THOMASON were present he would vote "no."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

BUREAU OF NAVIGATION AND STEAMBOAT INSPECTION

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution for printing under the rule.

House Resolution 355

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 8599, a bill to provide for a change in the designation of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, to create a marine casualty investigation board and increase efficiency in administration of the steamboat inspection laws, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill, and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

AMERICAN SEAMEN IN MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution for printing under the rule:

House Resolution 356

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 8597, a bill to amend section 13 of the act of March 4, 1915, entitled "An act to promote the welfare of American seamen in the merchant marine of the United States; to abolish arrest and imprisonment as a penalty for desertion and to secure the abrogation of treaty provisions in relation thereto; and to promote safety at sea;" to maintain discipline on shipboard, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

LOAD LINES FOR AMERICAN VESSELS IN COASTWISE TRADE

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution for printing under the rule:

House Resolution 357

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 6036, a bill to provide for the establishment of load lines for American vessels in the coastwise trade, and for other purposes. That after general debate which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority members of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

ORDER OF BUSINESS—RECESS

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution for printing under the rule:

House Resolution 358

That during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress it shall be in order for the acting majority leader or the Chairman of the Committee on Rules to move that the House take a recess, and said motion is hereby made of the highest privilege; and it shall also be in order at any time during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress to consider reports of the Committee on Rules, as provided in clause 45, rule XI, except that the provision requiring a two-thirds vote to consider such reports is hereby suspended during the remainder of this session of Congress.

OMNIBUS BILL

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 2644.

The SPEAKER. Is that in the omnibus bill?

Mr. TURPIN. Yes; it was passed on July 29 in the Senate.

The SPEAKER. There were several of those bills, and the Chair asks the gentleman to withhold his request until tomorrow.

THE TAX BILL AND YOUR LIFE INSURANCE

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address I delivered last Friday night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered by me over the National Broadcasting System, August 16, 1935:

I have been asked to talk to you tonight about the tax bill and how it alters your life-insurance policy. I have received many requests from all over the country—and especially from the women—to explain why there should be delay and changes made in the tax bill before its final passage. I realized early that the bill, which was misleadingly called a "tax the wealthy" bill, in reality would do grave injustice to all—the so-called "little man" as well as the big, and most particularly would it hurt the widows and dependents.

Since the passage of the revenue bill by the House of Representatives on August 5, and since its future harmful effects have become known, I have received a great number of protests from Federal employees' organizations, business men, and especially from women, about the injustice of the proposal to tax life insurance. One such came from an association representing 100,000 Federal employees banded together for the purpose of group insurance. Others came from the North, the South, the East, and the West—from farmers' wives, industrial workers, and small merchants. Women are organizing everywhere. They have so much at stake they are aroused and alarmed. Ninety-five percent of life-insurance policies go to women and dependents.

The people who protest are not large policyholders. They are average American citizens who have taken out insurance with the thought of providing immediate protection for their families in the event of death. Some of them hold policies for only $200, or less, to cover burial expenses.

Under the provisions of the bill as it passed the House these small policies will be affected. One of the strongest selling points any life-insurance agent has is the promise of prompt payment in case of death. You and I know that great stress is laid upon this. We have seen the agent exhibit facsimiles of checks which have been paid the day following the decease of the policyholder. If the House bill becomes law, prompt payments will not be possible, for no insurance company will dare to pay the policy until the Government has been satisfied that the amount is not sufficient for taxation or the exact tax has been determined. Obviously this will mean months of delay.

Of course, the insurance companies might assume personal liability for the tax, but they would not, and it is unreasonable to expect them to. The delayed payment will cause real distress and will place more people on relief, for they will not be able to borrow from the banks. No bank will loan upon the policy until it finds the amount of the tax.

The danger of the delayed payment of insurance required under the bill is very great also in the case of many large estates. It frequently happens when men die they have large loans on collateral. If their death is at the time of a depressed security market, only a prompt payment on account can prevent the sale of the collateral, and thereby save the whole estate from wreckage. Insurance often offers the only source of money for such a payment.

People have asked why this provision was allowed to remain in the bill in the House of Representatives. There is but one answer, and that is lack of careful and complete study of the measure both in committee and on the floor of the House. While the bill was under consideration, Representative HANCOCK, Republican Member from New York, introduced an amendment which would have nullified to a large extent this unfair provision. The amendment failed of adoption. This is the first time in history that a revenue bill has been forced through Congress in this way. On the floor of the House, in spite of the able and vigorous attacks on the bill by Congressman TREADWAY, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, and others, it was hurried through to a vote, and passed.

Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee had not even seen the bill when it was reported. They knew nothing of what it contained. It should not have been a political issue.

It is distinctly an economic question. There is no doubt but that the enormous expenditures by the present administration make an increase in taxes inevitable sometime. But these should be raised in an orderly way, and such a bill should be carefully thought out. It is my belief that today, if all the provisions of this bill were known, there would be more protests against its passage than there have been against any legislation which has come before the House.

The amount of revenue raised by the entire bill is so small that it is almost infinitesimal when compared with the amount which will have to be raised to pay for some of the ill-considered expenditures and extravagances of the administration. It has been said that this bill will produce only sufficient revenue to run the Government for a few weeks.

The unfairness of it is evident. Any citizen who is affected by legislation should have the opportunity to present his objections or his suggestions to the committee prior to the reporting of the bill. If this had been done in this instance, I believe that this insurance feature of the bill, as well as some others which are unfair, would not have been permitted to remain.

Is it to be wondered at that the people of America are frightened? Some of the letters I have received are pitiful in their tone of desperation and fear of loss of security. Americans have always been accustomed to provide for emergencies. The average citizen carries life insurance with the idea that it will be available to his dependents in the crucial period immediately following his death, when the remainder of his estate, if he has one, may be tied up in probate court. One man wrote me: "I have nothing to leave my wife and children but my life insurance. I have scraped and maneuvered through this depression to keep up the premiums. Now, I find that the administration is contemplating either a delay in the payment of this money or a tax upon it. What can I do?"—and there are thousands all over the United States in a similar plight.

You have no idea how bitter, how outraged, these people feel. They do not object to paying just taxes. They are willing to contribute their share to lift the burden from the Government, because they know that sometime these tremendous expenditures which have been made must be paid for by taxation. But they will not countenance any law that interferes with the protection of those dependent upon them. From the days of the Stone Age man has fought to protect his own from the attacks of others. One of his first instincts was to provide for his family in event of his death. The men have a vital interest in this matter.

Americans are more generous, more interested, in safeguarding their wives and families than are the men of any nation in the world. If this bill should become law, the men of this country will fight steadily, as will the women, until the law is repealed.

It seems incredible that such a thing could happen in our country. It is the ruthless taking away of things like this that has undermined the confidence of patriotic citizens. It is outrageous. It is confiscatory. It must be rectified.

I could not even smile when one indignant mother wrote me that she had changed her complaint of the high cost of living to the high cost of death. She was in dead earnest and ready to fight for justice.

There is another feature of the bill which is not a life-insurance matter but about which the women are greatly frightened. This provision also shows the necessity for careful study and argues for delay in passing such a measure. This also affects women and dependents, as does the proposed tax on insurance. This is subsection 6 of paragraph A of section 203, found on page 18. Frequently on the purchase of real estate or the opening of a savings account it is put in the joint name of husband and wife in such form that at the death of either it goes to the other automatically and without going through the courts or the laws relating to estates. The money in most cases with which the account is built up or the real estate bought comes from the earnings or other income of the husband, plus the savings of the wife from money given her by the husband.

Under the language of the section above referred to, the wife would have in such a case to prove either that the money was originally her own or that she gave the husband "full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth." To put a widow to the proof that her housekeeping, her thrift, and her other services to her husband constituted an "adequate consideration in money's worth" would be intolerable. This is also thoroughly un-American.

Securities are sometimes similarly purchased and put in the joint name with right of survivorship, but this is less frequent than real estate and savings accounts.

This whole section should be changed radically. Of course, as to savings accounts in joint names, the bank would be in the same position of inability to pay the survivor without taking liability for the tax until the estate was settled and the tax paid, and therefore the cash funds carried in the joint name for emergency use would be unavailable in the time of greatest need.

There are other features of the revenue bill which affect those of you who carry life insurance. Under the provision for an increased graduated corporation tax the increase will take away about two and one-half million dollars more from the insurance companies. Especially does this affect those who carry policies in mutual companies, for it will mean a decrease in the amount of dividends paid. Some companies have been very hard hit financially in these trying days, and it might put them in jeopardy. This would mean the loss of your security and the ruin of your plans for the future.

The fact that 63,000,000 people are holders of life insurance, beneficiaries, and dependents shows the tremendous expression of confidence in life insurance. It represents also a confidence of the people in the future of our country and their faith in the justice of our form of government. Life insurance is more than a savings account. It is a definite provision for the future. The Congress of the United States should not be allowed to jeopardize that security.

That is why I plead and fight for a delay in the passage of this unfair bill. There is no vital or pressing need for its immediate enactment. A delay in its enactment can do no possible harm and will do great good.

I believe a full discussion of the bill will point unmistakably to the inadvisability of this hasty action. A measure which affects the lives of so many people in so vital a way should not be treated as hastily considered emergency or "must" legislation. Each step of the way should be considered from every angle. We do not expect that the debts of our great Government can be paid from the pittances left to widows, children, and other dependents.

Every American is familiar with the quotation, "Taxation without representation." The very foundation of the independence of this country was based on that principle. This is a government of the people and for the people and by the people. The people must not be taxed without representation.

To quickly draft such legislation and force it through Congress without even permitting sufficient debate is taxation of the people without representation. It is not only the way of autocracy but also the method of a dictator. It certainly is not representative government. The people of our country must not tolerate this kind of legislation. It is un-American. It is not American justice. Our American Revolution was fought because of taxation without representation.

Yesterday afternoon the Senate passed the revenue bill in record time. It was railroaded through after only 2 days of consideration. In the Senate the House bill was somewhat changed and these differences between the two measures will have to be adjusted in conference. The lack of even an attempt at definite defense by the majority party of the Senate was very marked and unique in legislative history. It looked as if they were ashamed of it. "Get rid of the bill" seemed to be the slogan.

While the Senate bill is bad, it is better in respect to the insurance feature than the one passed by the House. I firmly believe that if enough protests are made the entire measure can be deadlocked in conference and delayed sufficiently to permit calm and sane deliberation next January. It is delay for wiser legislation for which we must fight.

BANG'S DISEASE ELIMINATION

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from the secretary of the Minnesota Livestock Sanitary Board.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following letter received by me from Charles E. Cotton, secretary of the Minnesota Livestock Sanitary Board. This letter is inserted in the RECORD at the request of that board.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
LIVESTOCK SANITARY BOARD,
St. Paul, August 13, 1935.

Hon. ELMER J. RYAN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: At a recent special meeting of this board I was directed to write this letter to you and request that you present it to the House of Representatives in order that it can be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

Under date of June 6, 1935, as directed by this board, I wrote a letter to United States Senator THOMAS D. SCHALL, requesting him to present it to the United States Senate in order that it could be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I informed Senator SCHALL that the Minnesota State Livestock Sanitary Board made this request of him for the reason that on March 22, 1935, he made a statement to the United States Senate regarding the attitude of the United States Department of Agriculture relative to a remedy for Bang's disease of cattle. Following his statement to the Senate he presented a letter written by the late John Thompson, who was then editor of Wallace's Farmer and the Iowa Homestead, published at Des Moines, Iowa, and also another letter, both of which with his introductory remarks were published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on pages 4251 and 4252 on March 22, 1935.

I did not hear from Senator SCHALL until after writing him under date of June 21. On July 1 I received a telegram from Senator SCHALL as follows: "Your letter will go into RECORD next week." I acknowledged receipt of his telegram and requested him to have his office mail me a copy of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD in which my letter would be published. I did not hear from the Senator, and under date of July 26 I again wrote him informing him that at the regular quarterly meeting of this board

I was directed to again request him to "immediately advise if you cannot see your way clear to introduce this letter, in order that this board can take further action." Senator SCHALL has not replied to my letter of July 26. For this reason I again referred it to this board, and, as above stated, I was directed to request that you introduce this letter.

In all fairness to the work in the control and elimination of cattle affected with Bang's disease that the Federal Government, in cooperation with the various States, is now carrying out, and also in all fairness to the livestock interests of the United States, it is very important that this letter refuting the statements made in the letter written by the late John Thompson become a matter of record of this present session of Congress.

We wish to correct statements contained in the letter of the late John Thompson referring to experiences of S. L. Bennett & Sons, of Owatonna, Minn., in the attempt to free their dairy herd from Bang's disease. Mr. Thompson's letter stated, in effect, that after the Bennett herd had been under the care and supervision of this board, without result, for a period of 2 years, the herd was finally cleaned up through the use of the Bowman remedy. This statement is contrary to fact, as the only contact or service rendered by this board to S. L. Bennett & Son's herd was to extend the service of our laboratory to make the agglutination blood test of the cattle in the herd in May 1932. They failed to have the 10 animals that gave suspicious reactions subjected to a retest within 60 days, as we recommended, in order to determine whether they were safe animals to remain with the clean animals in the herd. They also did not endeavor to segregate the reacting animals from the remainder of the herd. The Thompson letter leaves the reader with the impression that after this board had failed to clean up the Bennett herd the Bowman treatment was resorted to and the herd became disease free.

The services of this board to the Bennett herd, which terminated following the test of the herd in May 1932, were resumed when, on April 17, 1935, Mr. Bennett requested this board to retest the herd he now owned. One of our State field representatives collected the blood samples of all the cattle in the herd, and the test was made at our laboratory on April 20, disclosing 4 animals that reacted positively and 10 animals giving suspicious reactions of the 40 animals tested. In this test there were only 12 cattle that were in the herd when our laboratory made the test in May 1932, thus proving that the herd is still infected with the disease. Of the 41 animals tested in this herd by our laboratory in May 1932, 8 gave positive reactions, 10 suspicious, and 23 gave negative reactions; the 8 animals were identified by our official Bang reactor tags immediately following the test.

All the cattle that gave a positive reaction to our laboratory test in May 1932 with the exception of one animal, and all the suspicious animals with the exception of three, were sold or disposed of prior to February 5, 1934. Mr. Bennett's own sales records bear proof that the Bowman remedy did not cure the animals our tests had found to be affected or suspicious. Mr. Thompson's claims relative to the efficiency of the Bowman remedy in cleaning up the Bennett herd are unfounded, as all of the positive reactors with the exception of one animal, and all the suspicious animals to our test in May 1932 with the exception of three, were disposed of, and the disease still remains in the herd, as is disclosed by the recent retest of this herd in April 1935. In this last test 1 of the 4 animals that gave a positive reaction was the only one of the 8 animals that gave a positive reaction to our test in May 1932 that had been retained in the herd.

We have a statement of Harvey Bennett, one of the owners of this herd, which includes a statement that seven of the eight animals that gave a positive reaction to the blood test made by our laboratory in May 1932 and which were tagged with our official Bang reactor tags, were disposed of contrary to the rules and regulations of this board, and also that all but three of the animals that gave a suspicious reaction in that test were sold and removed from the herd prior to February 5, 1934. His reason given for the disposal of these animals was that they were not successful in getting them to breed, that they developed mastitis and other affections of their udders. During this interim, May 1932 to February 1934, they disposed of 25 of their animals for these reasons. He further states that the service of this board in the control and elimination of Bang's disease in their herd was limited to the one blood test that was made at our laboratory, and that they did not carry out our request and recommendation that the 10 animals giving suspicious reactions be retested.

If you or any Member of the House or Senate wish to obtain the complete data of the Bennett herd, including a copy of the above statement of the owner, records of test, etc., we will be pleased to furnish the same.

Trusting that you will comply with this request by this board, I am,

Very respectfully,

CHAS. E. COTTON,
Secretary and Executive Officer
Minnesota Live Stock Sanitary Board.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include certain excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FENERTY. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 3462. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, approved March 4, 1913," and for other purposes;

H. R. 5711. An act to provide aid for needy blind persons of the District of Columbia and authorizing appropriations therefor;

H. R. 6510. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act;

H. R. 6623. An act to amend the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia in relation to providing assistance against old-age want;

H. R. 7617. An act to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8421. An act granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8422. An act granting pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8423. An act granting increase of pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8424. An act granting increase of pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8425. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain helpless and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War; and

H. R. 8426. An act granting pensions to certain soldiers of the Civil War.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 3050. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Lake Champlain between Rouses Point, N. Y., and Alburg, Vt.; and

S. 3105. An act to amend the act approved June 12, 1934, relating to the granting of the consent of Congress to certain bridge construction across the Tennessee River at a point between the city of Sheffield, Ala., and the city of Florence, Ala.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 258. An act for the relief of Emma B. Hine;

H. R. 607. An act for the relief of Florence Overly;

H. R. 616. An act for the relief of Homer J. Williamson;

H. R. 704. An act for the relief of Thelbert Davis;

H. R. 760. An act for the relief of John L. Hoffman;

H. R. 830. An act for the relief of Sanford Madison Strange;

H. R. 1368. An act for the relief of Virden Thompson;

H. R. 1420. An act to provide for the Andrew Johnson Homestead National Monument;

H. R. 1437. An act for the relief of August A. Carminati;

H. R. 1714. An act for the relief of Russell H. Lindsay;

H. R. 1880. An act for the relief of Ivan H. McCormack;

H. R. 2024. An act for the relief of officers and soldiers of the volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace, April 11, 1899;

H. R. 2118. An act for the relief of John P. Seabrook;

H. R. 2126. An act for the relief of Hugh G. Lisk;

H. R. 2130. An act for the relief of John M. McNulty;

H. R. 2319. An act for the relief of Oswald Orlando;

H. R. 2411. An act for the relief of E. F. Purvis;

H. R. 2432. An act for the relief of the Weis-Patterson Lumber Co., Inc.;

H. R. 2443. An act for the relief of Milton Hatch;

H. R. 2476. An act to grant a patent to Albert M. Johnson and Walter Scott;

H. R. 2555. An act to extend to Sgt. Maj. Edmund S. Sayer, United States Marine Corps (retired), the benefits of the act of May 7, 1932, providing highest World War rank to retired enlisted men;

H. R. 2690. An act for the relief of John B. Grayson;

H. R. 2730. An act for the relief of Thomas Harris McLaughlin;

H. R. 2970. An act for the relief of Jose Munden;

H. R. 3147. An act for the relief of Will A. Helmer;

H. R. 3202. An act for the relief of W. H. Greene;

H. R. 3282. An act for the relief of Nina Drips;

H. R. 3509. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Nick Vasilzevic;

H. R. 3546. An act for the relief of Sarah Elizabeth Ballentyne;

H. R. 3759. An act for the relief of E. H. Jennings;

H. R. 3965. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of Prince Royal, Sr., Kathleen Royal Hayes, Victor A. Royal, Lucile Royal, Prince Royal, Jr., Maggie Fields Ramsey, and R. J. Ramsey;

H. R. 3967. An act for the relief of Raymond Parramore;

H. R. 4513. An act to authorize payment of claims for unauthorized emergency treatment of World War veterans;

H. R. 4568. An act for the relief of Forrest D. Stout;

H. R. 4827. An act for the relief of Don C. Fees;

H. R. 4831. An act for the relief of L. E. Geary;

H. R. 4860. An act for the relief of Judson Stokes;

H. R. 4923. An act for the relief of Maj. E. Leslie Medford, United States property and disbursing officer for Maryland;

H. R. 5099. An act for the relief of Albert Henry George;

H. R. 5122. An act for the relief of R. C. McCoy, J. L. Garner, C. G. Kauffman, W. G. Smiley, R. A. Burks, C. W. Brazzelton, R. F. Brazzelton, Dave Cash, Mrs. A. W. Dykes, Jim Thereldkeld, R. R. Crain, J. B. Tolson, J. C. Rogers, S. K. Broach, Albert Easterling, J. L. Rivers, F. C. Wilson, E. C. Finley, W. W. Mitchell, J. G. Carey, Carl Graves, Jerome Dupree, J. R. Mitchell, J. L. Mitchell, and J. C. Russell;

H. R. 5325. An act for the relief of Ira L. Reeves;

H. R. 5347. An Act for the relief of Bertha Moseley Bottoms;

H. R. 5375. An act relating to the compensation of certain charwomen;

H. R. 5415. An act to confer jurisdiction on the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of North Carolina to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of the Pamlico Timber Corporation against the United States;

H. R. 5492. An act for the relief of Henry Scipper;

H. R. 5550. An act for the relief of Malachy Ryan;

H. R. 5654. An act to authorize the Court of Claims of the United States to hear and determine the claim of Samuel W. Carter;

H. R. 5816. An act for the relief of May C. Gustin;

H. R. 5838. An act to place David J. Fitzgerald on the retired list of the United States Army as a first lieutenant;

H. R. 5971. An act for the relief of Charles Pine;

H. R. 6177. An act for the relief of Brooker T. Wilkins;

H. R. 6267. An act for the relief of Wint Rowland;

H. R. 6268. An act for the relief of W. C. Wright;

H. R. 6269. An act for the relief of W. H. Keyes;

H. R. 6275. An act for the relief of John Livingston and Mrs. John Livingston;

H. R. 6602. An act for the relief of Dr. Ernest B. Dunlap;

H. R. 6869. An act authorizing the Chippewa Indians of Wisconsin to submit claims to the Court of Claims;

H. R. 7099. An act for the relief of Rocco D'Amato;

H. R. 7438. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction and operation of certain bridges across the Monongahela, Allegheny, and Youghiogheny Rivers in the county of Allegheny, Pa.", approved June 4, 1934;

H. R. 7520. An act for the relief of David A. Trousdale;

H. R. 7577. An act for the relief of Mrs. William E. Smith and Clara Smith;

H. R. 7938. An act to authorize the transfer of the Otter Cliffs radio station on Mount Desert Island in the State of Maine as an addition to the Acadia National Park, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7955. An act to establish a new division of the northern district of Georgia with terms of court to be held at Newnan, Ga.;

H. R. 7998. An act to exempt from taxation official compensation of certain foreign representatives and to provide for the deductibility from income of certain dividends on preferred stock owned by the United States or instrumentalities thereof;

H. R. 8026. An act to establish and promote the use of standards of classification for tobacco, to provide and maintain an official tobacco inspection service, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8492. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8519. An act requiring contracts for the construction, alteration, and repair of any public building or public work of the United States to be accompanied by a performance bond protecting the United States, and by an additional bond for the protection of persons furnishing material and labor for the construction, alteration, or repair of said public buildings or public work;

H. R. 8580. An act to amend the law with respect to the time for jury service in the police court of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 8581. An act to amend the law providing for exemptions from jury service in the District of Columbia;

H. R. 8668. An act providing for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida at Fort Pierce, Fla.;

H. R. 8710. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lend to the reunion committee of the United Confederate Veterans 3,000 blankets, olive drab, no. 4, and 3,000 canvas cots, to be used at their annual encampment to be held at Amarillo, Tex., in September 1935;

H. R. 8790. An act to amend section 6 of the act of February 28, 1925;

H. R. 8845. An act to authorize the incorporated town of Cordova, Alaska, to construct, reconstruct, enlarge, extend, improve, renew, and repair certain municipal public structures, utilities, works, and improvements, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any amount not exceeding $50,000, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8991. An act to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to exchange certain property rights now vested in the United States at Veterans' Administration facility, Perry Point, Md., for certain property and rights of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. in that vicinity;

H. J. Res. 129. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution for the relief of Porto Rico", approved December 21, 1928, to permit an adjudication with respect to liens of the United States arising by virtue of loans under such joint resolution;

H. J. Res. 189. Joint resolution relating to the continuance on the pay rolls of certain employees in cases of death or resignation of Members of the House of Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners; and

H. J. Res. 257. Joint resolution to amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution for the relief of Porto Rico", approved December 21, 1928, as amended by the Second Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1929, approved March 4, 1929.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

THE PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE TOWARD SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS COMMENDABLE AND PRAISEWORTHY

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Speaker, the 13th of August, 1935, will be memorable in the annals of veteran history as the day on which our President captured the hearts of the Spanish-

American War veterans and their dependents through his approval of the Smith bill, H. R. 6995, on the thirty-seventh anniversary of the capture of Manila by the American forces under General Merritt and Admiral Dewey, both Civil War veterans.

I am confident that if the President had been accurately advised, the Economy Act in its application to Spanish War veterans would not have been so drastic, but that the Spanish War veterans would have been extended the same consideration in the Economy Act as was extended to Civil War and Indian war veterans. In this connection it is significant that 9,657 Spanish War veterans under the age of 55 years were removed from the pension rolls regardless of where they had served during the Spanish-American War on the suggestion of a Member of Congress, a distinguished World War veteran, who told me that he personally advised the President in reference to this age restriction, as he did not believe there were any Spanish War veterans under 55 years of age.

The denial of pension to this large group of 9,657 Spanish War veterans under 55 years of age, many of whom had served in Cuba and the Philippines and were suffering serious disability, worked unusual hardships upon them. My limited time prevents giving specific details of unusual distress and loss of property as a result of the Executive order on this subject. I took the matter up immediately with the President and later met him personally and explained in detail the unfairness of the pension inhibition against Spanish War veterans under 55 years of age. In my presence he personally figured the cost involved in the restoration of this group to the pension rolls, indicating to me a most commendable open-mindedness and an outstanding sense of fairness, which was further demonstrated by his action on January 19, 1934, in issuing an Executive order restoring this worthy group of Spanish War veterans to the pension lists.

As a further illustration of the President's fairness where the veteran question is fully presented to him I am pleased to recall that on my personal request after carefully considering the facts which I presented to him in reference to the subject he authorized reciprocal hospital treatment for retired personnel of the service in Army or Navy hospitals. This was indeed an act of justice toward this worthy group of veterans of 2 or more wars.

My object in discussing this subject today is to combat the criticism which some few periodicals have directed against the President because of his approval of pension restoration to Spanish War veterans and their dependents.

It is a matter of official record that the passage of H. R. 6995 was not a partisan matter. Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, and Farmer-Laborites all joined in passing this measure in the House of Representatives without a dissenting vote, and in the Senate, it was passed by an overwhelming vote of 74 to 1, thus emphasizing in the minds of the American people the fact that the Congress of the United States is not ungrateful to the veterans of our wars.

Under leave to insert in the RECORD, at this point I wish to include the White House press release on the subject of the bill restoring Spanish War veterans and their dependents to former benefits. I quote:

AUGUST 13, 1935.

The President, in signing today H. R. 6995, a bill reenacting laws dealing with pensions granted to veterans and the dependents of veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, and the Boxer Rebellion, made clear the definite distinction between legislation relating to veterans of early wars and the veterans of the World War.

The Congress on many occasions has recognized that because of the complete absence of any system or policy initiated during or immediately following the Civil War, the Indian wars, and the Spanish-American War, and because of lack of adequate medical care from the point of view of modern standards the veterans of these earlier wars could be compensated and taken care of only through some form of pension system.

In the case of the World War, however, the Congress at the very beginning of the war adopted an entirely new system of care and benefits. This new system applied to all who fought in the World War, extended to them additional compensation if they had dependents, as well as insurance, hospitalization, vocational rehabilitation, and the adjusted-service certificates (the bonus).

The veterans of the Spanish-American War, now approaching an average age of 62 years, had none of these advantages, except hospitalization, in recent years. Their case, therefore, cannot be compared to the case of World War veterans. For the same reason, the approval of this bill establishes no ground or precedent for pensions for the World War group; theirs is an entirely different case.

There are some inequalities involved in this legislation, but the President recognizes the fact that the Spanish-American veterans were once on the rolls under prior legislation, that they are approaching advanced age, that their disabilities are increasing.

The President's action today is taken appropriately on the anniversary date of the occupation of Manila by the American forces.

I served during the Spanish-American War and have been directly and indirectly associated with the Army and a student of the veteran question since that time. I am not, however, myself in receipt of pension, nor will I benefit personally from the enactment of H. R. 6995, and it is, therefore, merely as an American citizen and a taxpayer, interested only from the standpoint of justice, that I am taking this opportunity to express my deep appreciation to the President for his action in signing the bill to restore Spanish-American pensions to their former level, which, in my opinion, merits not only the gratitude of the Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents but the approval of all fair-minded Americans.

REPEAL OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION ACT

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I approve of the major objectives of this bill, as indicated in the report of the Committee on the Judiciary, especially as it is a measure intended to supplement Title III of the National Prohibition Act, which survived repeal of the eighteenth amendment and is now being affirmed and strengthened by the Congress. The purpose of that Title was to protect and promote the uses of alcohol—pure and denatured—in the arts, sciences, and industries. In fact, Section 13 of such Title III carries a Congressional mandate as follows:

The Commissioner shall from time to time issue regulations respecting the establishment, bonding, and operation of industrial-alcohol plants, denaturing plants, and bonded warehouses authorized herein, and the distribution, sale, export, and use of alcohol which may be necessary, advisable, or proper, to secure the revenue, to prevent diversion of the alcohol to illegal uses, and to place the nonbeverage-alcohol industry and other industries using such alcohol as a chemical raw material or for other lawful purpose upon the highest possible plane of scientific and commercial efficiency consistent with the interests of the Government, and which shall insure an ample supply of such alcohol and promote its use in scientific research and the development of fuels, dyes, and other lawful products.

Alcohol is second only to water in importance to the chemical industry. Our Government classifies its production as a "key" industry in time of war. As the United States Treasury Department said in a publication entitled "The Uses of Alcohol as an Essential Chemical in the Arts, Sciences, and Industries", dated June 30, 1932:

The aim of this publication is to present facts relating to alcohol as an indispensable chemical product and to show its importance to every civilized person. * * *

The diversified uses are so numerous that it is not possible to elaborate all of them in technical detail in the limited space of this booklet.

So let us review very briefly some of the hundreds of ways in which the average individual comes in close touch daily with products made with alcohol.

Take, for example, the average business man. Observe him through an entire day. It will be seen that alcohol enters vitally into the manufacture of most of his necessities, luxuries, or conveniences.

Figuratively, he touches alcohol directly or indirectly, everywhere, although many alcoholic products may not contain alcohol in their marketed form.

His first step upon arising is to use soap that contains a trace of alcohol. Alcohol has been used in making his mercerized underwear. His shirt, lisle, and artificial-silk socks; the dye with which his suit is colored; the colors of his necktie; and the buttons which hold his collar have been made with alcohol at some stage of manufacture.

Alcohol is used in making the fabric of his hose supporters and his suspenders. His belt buckle reflects the use of alcohol in the lacquer. Alcohol is in his shaving cream. The silver backing to the mirror before which he shaves has been produced with alcohol. The toilet water or bay rum which he dashes on his face is largely alcohol.

Alcohol also enters into making the handle of his hairbrush. It has played a part in the process of making the soles of his shoes. Shoe polish contains alcohol. The lacquer with which his watch-chain is protected has been treated with alcohol. It enters into the manufacture of the rims of his glasses.

When he comes downstairs before breakfast he looks at his thermometer to decide whether he will need his overcoat. If he does, and the coat is cravenetted, it will have been waterproofed with alcohol.

At breakfast his chair and the table from which he eats have been finished with varnish made with alcohol. He walks on an alcohol mixture when he steps on his varnished floor on the way out.

Alcohol is in the glue which holds his felt hat together. Alcohol is used in the finish if he wears a straw hat. He finds it has been used in the finish of the cane which he carries or in the umbrella which he uses on rainy days.

Alcohol has been used in making the lacquer on the automobile he enters. On a winter's day there is a plentiful supply of antifreeze alcohol in his radiator.

Alcohol enters into the manufacture of the goods with which his automobile is upholstered. His hand on the steering wheel touches a product made with alcohol. The billboards which confront him on his route to work contain dyes made with alcohol in their colorings.

Arriving at his office, he sits down to a desk varnished or lacquered with an alcohol mixture. It is in the ink with which he signs his name. He touches it again if he signs with a rubber stamp.

It enters into making the lacquer on his typewriter, his ashtray, his telephone, his filing cabinets, adding machine, check protector, and the clock or watch he carries. Alcohol has been used in making the ink on every piece of printed matter which comes to his desk, including his letterheads, his checks, his office forms, the circulars he reads, the calendar on the wall, and the postage stamps on his mail. Alcohol has been used in making the mucilage which stands beside his inkwell. It is used in the finish on his desk lamp and in the filaments of every light bulb. The women shoppers who pass him on the street reveal alcohol uses. It is used in making the flowers on their hats and the coloring of their clothes. Alcohol is used in the manufacture of their face creams, rouge, lipstick, eyelash beautifier, eyebrow pencil, shampoo, toilet soap, bath salts, cuticle remover, and vanity cases.

He confronts it at dinner just as he did at breakfast, and finds it is used in making much of the seasoning and flavorings of his food. Alcohol is used in the manufacture of flavors for his after-dinner cigar. Going to a movie in the evening, he is again reminded of the use of alcohol in every inch of the film that is being run. It is in the aluminum lacquer with which the silver sheet is painted, and protects the finish of the instruments used by the orchestra.

Should he meet with an accident or be taken ill before he gets home, there will be alcohol in practically every liniment or lotion or prescription he may buy at the drug store. If he goes to the hospital and is put under ether or chloroform, they, too, are made with alcohol.

When he reaches home he will listen in on the radio. Alcohol is used in making the insulating panel on his radio set. At the end of a busy day he refreshes himself with an alcohol rub, uses an alcohol hair tonic, and brushes his teeth before retiring with a dentifrice containing alcohol.

Alcohol is with us from the cradle to the grave, in the baby's rattle and the embalmer's fluid. One of the great romances of modern industry is the story of industrial-alcohol manufacture and application to thousands of comforts and utilities that enter into the fabric of our commercial and social life.

I voice the hope and expectation of all scientific societies and trade organizations concerned with the manufacture, distribution, sale, or use of industrial alcohol that the Treasury Department will so discharge its duty under these statutes as to give to Section 13 of Title III of the National Prohibition Act the widest possible scope and effect in furtherance of the congressional intent.

HAWAII'S PLEA FOR STATEHOOD

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following statement made by me before the House Committee on the Territories, House of Representatives, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, on Friday, May 31, 1935, which committee had under consideration H. R. 3034, as introduced by me, a bill "To enable the people of Hawaii to form a constitution and a State government":

When the great English circumnavigator, Capt. James Cook, discovered the Hawaiian Islands in 1778, he started a train of events that has logically and in natural sequence led up to this moment, when I stand before you as the representative of the people of those islands asking the Congress of the United States to grant their plea for admission into the Union as a sovereign State.

Hawaii was made known to the world when America was just beginning its long fight for independence; when the United States of America had yet to be born out of the aspirations of the Thirteen Colonies to perpetuate that independence; when the western empire was yet to be carved out of the wilderness and organized into States that were taken into the Union on terms of equality with the original group; and when this Nation had yet to absorb into its vast domain the many peoples that found here a refuge against tyranny and an opportunity to enjoy the fruits of liberty, denied them in their former homes.

The Nation created in that period has endured since then, because its principles of government were based on fundamentals of democracy, and because its institutions applied those principles to all alike. The right of a free people to rule themselves, the right of the governed to participate in their government, is the keystone of this edifice of freedom. New lands were promptly organized as Territories and as promptly admitted as States; new peoples were offered the privilege of joining with their predecessors in allegiance to this Nation, and in sharing with the older peoples the duties and responsibilities, and the rights, of American citizenship.

Thus has America grown great, in moral leadership, in area, in population, and in wealth. Soon the young Nation had spanned a continent, and faced the Pacific Ocean as well as the Atlantic. A war fought to gain the blessings of freedom to a neighboring people brought America out of its continental isolation, to the position of a colonial empire, a condition not previously experienced nor contemplated. Now comes the time when America must decide what place in the Nation these new communities may take; whether the American ideal and the historical precedents shall be followed; or whether a new, an undemocratic and un-American policy shall be adopted.

As an American; as one whose Yankee forebears helped conquer the wilderness to create this Nation, and fought to throw off the colonial yoke; whose immediate ancestors helped bring Hawaii under the American flag; and one who speaks for a people loyal to that flag, proud to serve it, and anxious to do so as full-fledged citizens; I say there can be only one answer. When a community can show it possesses the fundamental necessities for self-government, this Nation can only answer, "The right to become a State is yours. We grant you that inestimable right on proof of your capacity for self-government, of your ability to maintain a republican form of government for your people, of your loyalty to the National Government, and of your desire to share its burdens."

Hawaii is in every respect fit for statehood. In area it exceeds three States, and is nearly equal to two others. In population, it exceeds that of four States, and is running a close race with four others. In taxes it pays into the Federal Treasury more than some 16 States and five times more than is expended upon it for local purposes. As an organized Territory for over 35 years it has developed into a modern American community, on a par with any other part of the Union by the ordinary standards of American life.

Historically, Hawaii has even a better claim to an affirmative answer to its plea. From the time of Captain Cook, to the time of annexation in 1898, Hawaii maintained itself as an independent nation; first as a monarchy, and later as a republic. Through the influence of the American missionaries who first brought Christianity to Hawaii in 1820, through its own Hawaiian leaders, and through the work of later missionaries of different religious sects, Hawaii has been a Christian nation for over 100 years. Its government follows the best western models. Its statute law was adopted from that of New York; its public-school system from Massachusetts. Its language is English. It has no other background than that of independence until it came under the American flag. At the time of annexation, its entire body of law and its administrative organization was incorporated as part of the new Territorial government with a minimum of adjustment. Its president became the first governor, and its public-service employees retained their positions with practically no changes.

The reason for this is the fact that the influence of America, closer by far to Hawaii than any other nation, had been paramount for many years. There had been times when perhaps Hawaii's destinies might have been diverted into other channels. Russia showed some interest in the islands when that nation was still in possession of Alaska and had outposts in California. France had at one time the desire to add Hawaii to its South Pacific establishment. Great Britain might easily have become Hawaii's ruler but for its own indifferent policy and the active efforts of Hawaii's American colony to prevent such an end to their hopes. But certainly from 1875 to the time of annexation the entire trend of Hawaiian history was toward union with America.

In every step toward such a consummation it was recognized that Hawaii had certain inalienable rights, that her status must be an honorable one under the American flag, and that the surrender of her sovereignty to the United States carried with it an obligation on the part of the latter to see that the citizens of Hawaii should have no just cause of complaint as to the treatment accorded them. These considerations were accepted by America, were incorporated in the joint resolution of annexation, and were further expressed and carried out in the organic act.

There is no argument against Hawaii as to size, as to numbers, as to wealth, as to its capacity to maintain a republican form of government, nor as to the historical obligation of the United States to at some time grant it statehood. I quote the late great Champ Clark, former Speaker of the House, that "a perpetual chrysalis existence as a Territory is repugnant to the genius of our institutions and out of harmony with our entire history. Home rule has been our policy from the beginning."

What, then, might be the arguments against our plea? Is it the racial ancestry of our citizenry? Is that an argument that can be raised against a community already under the American flag any more than it can be raised against any other part of the United States? In a population of 368,336 we have only 62,336 alien people. All the rest are citizens or American nationals, of whom 299,744 are native-born Americans.

Is it a doubt as to the loyalty of our citizenry? How anyone can possibly seriously doubt that loyalty is inconceivable. Our absolute American patriotism during the World War, in every phase of the national effort, the National Guard, the Naval Volunteers, the Liberty-bond drives, the food-conservation exactions, is a matter of record. Are we to be found lacking through fear or suspicion of our people without just cause? Is a community that will soon be peopled almost entirely by native-born citizens, whose young formative years have been thoroughly American, to be judged in advance as to their loyalty when every item of evidence shows its complete assimilation of American ideals? In all sincerity as one with 20 years' service in the Navy and a wide acquaintance with mainland communities, I doubt if there is under the America flag a more loyal part of America than Hawaii. We accepted annexation whole-heartedly, with all its implications, its burdens, and responsibilities; and we have welded our people into a community united in a spirit of devotion to America, its institutions and ideals, that needs only a brief acquaintance to be recognized.

There is no nationalistic group in Hawaii, no other desire than to continue to be a part of America. There is no group among its citizens looking toward any other nation under whose flag it might work out its destiny. Hawaii is as American as Maine or Texas, as Florida, or Washington.

Perhaps the last question that might arise is, "Do the people of Hawaii desire statehood at this time?" Yes; of course they do. They have desired this culmination of their aspirations since that day in Honolulu when the Hawaiian flag was hauled down and the American flag was hoisted in its place. The platforms of both political parties in Hawaii have always carried a plank in favor of statehood; the biennial legislatures invariably petition Congress for statehood; my bill is but a repetition of similar bills introduced by my predecessors, and no candidate has ever attempted to run for office without pledging his support of this desire. In other words, the people of Hawaii, the great majority of them, ardently desire statehood. The Hawaiian people as a whole will never be satisfied with any other political organization but that of a sovereign State of the Union.

The people of Hawaii already share every burden that is laid upon the people of America. Every Federal law of national import applies to Hawaii as it does to continental United States. At the time of annexation American immigration and tariff laws became effective in Hawaii immediately. The whole body of Federal taxation is just as much in force in the Territory as in any other part of the Union. Whether it be income taxes, inheritance taxes, or other internal-revenue imposts, customs, or gas taxes; or today's processing taxes and code levies, Hawaii pays its share on exactly the same basis as the rest of the country. Indeed, the only difference the change of status would make is in Hawaii's participation in national elections and in the deliberations of the United States Congress and the election rather than the appointment of some of the Territorial officers.

As to Hawaii's place in the scheme of national defense, the question of statehood has no adverse effect on that important phase of Hawaii's value to the Nation. Other communities contain major military establishments without destroying the liberties of the adjacent civilian population. I have yet to hear of any military authority seriously advocating that the Hawaiian people must be denied their civil rights as a measure of national defense; that an area greater than Connecticut and Rhode Island, with nearly 400,000 people, organized into a highly developed community, representing hundreds of millions of dollars of capital, and responsible for an average annual trade of $200,000,000, should be denied any degree of self-government as a preventative measure. Such hypotheses are the talk of jingoes, of an occasional irresponsible layman, of unauthorized and self-appointed spokesmen for the military services. The national defense will be loyally supported by the people of Hawaii whatever their status, and their cooperation would be obtained in the fullest degree if their condition were the most honorable attainable, that of citizens of a sovereign State.

GET THE FARMER OUT OF THE MUD

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following radio address delivered by me on National Grange Hour, WMAL and associated stations, August 17, 1935:

During my entire time in the Legislature of the State of New York, which has covered a period of some 20 years, I have campaigned for better highways and my slogan has been "Get the Farmer Out of the Mud."

When I arrived in Washington at the beginning of the session this year it was my great desire to be a member of the Committee on Roads. I received this appointment and have endeavored to assist in getting appropriations for all highways and for farm-to-market roads in particular.

Our committee reported a bill carrying an appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for highways, three hundred million of this amount was to be for farmers' back roads. Opposition grew up to this three hundred millions for the farmers' roads, and it was eventually eliminated from the bill.

About this time the $5,000,000,000 appropriation for public works was passed, and it came to my mind that we could appropriate $600,000,000 from this fund to build farm-to-market roads.

I got in touch with the National Grange office, Mr. Brenchman, and Mr. McCloskey, and members of other farm and road organizations and they agreed with me that this was a good project and have given me their whole-hearted support in bringing this about.

I called on Harry L. Hopkins, F. E. R. A. Administrator, and succeeded in interesting him in this proposition. I also called on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Thomas MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Roads, and President Roosevelt, and interested them in this plan.

If we can have just a good stone and gravel road to every back farm, we can keep our people living there and they can get to town at any season of the year. This will make the farm lands more valuable and make it much easier for the people to live on the back farm. If the locality wants it, a hard surface can be put on these roads either at the time they are constructed or later.

We have many people out of work, and this will be one of the best projects we can have, to build these stone and gravel roads to the back farms, and give employment to people out of work.

We can construct these roads where stone and gravel is near at hand for from $1,000 to $2,500 per mile. Build a road of at least 12 inches in thickness and this kind of a road would be impossible to ever cut through. We have constructed this kind of a road in my section for the past 25 years, and with little care during the time, they are good roads yet.

The principles governing the construction of these roads will be promulgated by the Federal Works Administration under Harry L. Hopkins. In each State there is a State works progress administrator. The States themselves are divided into districts with district directors. There are over 300 of these districts in the country.

The money that will be spent in this connection will be in addition to the regular Federal-aid appropriation for farm-to-market highways amounting to $125,000,000, which will be disbursed under supervision of the United States Bureau of Roads. This work is not carried out through the State highway departments or the departments of public works in any of the States.

Applications for projects are made by the town supervisor and town board for town projects; by county board of supervisors for county projects, or in States where they have county commissioners the applications are made through the county commissioners.

There are no rigid rules and regulations governing the expenditure of these available funds. There are, however, provisions that must be met:

1. There must be a real need for unemployment relief.
2. There must be an economic need for the work proposed.
3. A specific program must be proposed.
4. Expenditure of money must be under competent supervision.

Furthermore, in formulating projects, the sponsoring agency should confer with the local district office of the W. P. A. for information concerning the number and occupation of persons on relief rolls who are to be put to work.

Sponsors should utilize the facilities of local and State planning boards in the formulation of projects.

The sponsoring governmental agency is expected to contribute equipment, materials, and services to the maximum amount possible. The priority of the project will depend in part on the amount of such contributions and the extent to which they increase the proportion of labor cost to the total Federal funds required for the project.

The project application when completed is filed with the district director of the W. P. A. When approved by the district director, this is passed on to the State director for his approval, and if approved by the State director the application is forwarded to Washington for the approval of the Works Progress Administrator, the Allotment Board, the President of the United States, the Treasurer, and the Comptroller General.

When the project has been approved by all of these departments and returned to the local office, work can be started immediately, provided there are men on the relief rolls who have no other employment.

It is estimated that this may take from 20 to 30 days, or possibly more, to pass this through the various departments in Washington. The time that is taken to approve the plans is very important, especially at this season of the year when men are out of work and cold weather will soon be coming on. I believe that there should be some shorter route to get the plans approved and underway so men can get to work. This is a problem that the department should work out without delay.

There is a demand for roads of the type that will stand up during all kinds of weather and which may be constructed at a reasonable outlay per mile.

The number of miles of farm-to-market roads constructed during this year and next depends to a great extent on the number of unemployed in the rural sections and the promptness of the local officials in getting the work started.

In addition to the funds that will be expended on dirt roads, Congress appropriated a sum not exceeding $800,000,000 for highway construction and grade-crossing elimination. The President has allocated $400,000,000 for these purposes, to be divided about equally. It is stipulated in the works relief appropriation that not less than 25 percent of the money apportioned for highways shall be spent on secondary roads.

There are more than 3,000,000 miles of highways outside of cities in the United States. Out of the total, 422,582 miles are on Federal and State highway systems. Of the remaining 2,646,000 miles, 564,000 are improved to some extent. The remainder, more than 2,000,000 miles, are mud roads, a large percentage of which would be passable under favorable weather conditions, but cannot be depended upon throughout the year. Over 4,000,000 farms, two-thirds of the total in the United States, are located on these unimproved roads, which provide the only means of communication and transportation of crops, livestock, and other agricultural products from farm to markets.

This plan of building farm-to-market roads applies to every State in the Nation and many States have their set-up ready and are approving plans to start the work at once.

Next year the work will get going in full speed and many farmers who are now on mud roads will have a good hard road to travel over. While this is a relief measure at present we are planning to make it permanent and continue this work until every farmer is "out of the mud" and living on a good hard good.

RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, the religious situation in both Mexico and Germany presents in its fullest light the entire doctrine of intervention. We can best put our thoughts into focus by defining intervention as "the interference by one nation with the political independence of another, irrespective of the will of that other, in what concerns either its domestic affairs or its intercourse with foreign states."

Obviously, according to the best thought in the family of nations, a state has the right to enjoy political independence with whatever form of government it desires, and live its own life in its own way.

However, with the increase of transportation and communication, and especially the opportunities that are possible in aerial improvements, the affairs of one state are more and more closely linked with those of others in the great family of nations.

It might be readily said that no event in any nation can happen without a repercussion in another.

Obviously a nation may treat its own nationals as it will, even though it shock the sensibility of the entire outside world. But it cannot stop world opinion. In dealing with its own nationals a nation is given the utmost freedom. But when, however, the conduct of a state, through its own suggestions, is so heinous and so tyrannical as to directly affect numerous classes of subjects in other states, who may be connected by blood, there is a growing demand for interposition.

Certainly we know that where such treatment results in the immigration of those affected nationals into other lands that the nations to which they have gone have a right to protest against increased burdens of relief. This is an admitted right in international law.

Obviously, the situation in Germany is such that millions of American citizens connected by blood, race, and religion with those oppressed in Germany are deeply concerned over the situation. Obviously, in all cases for the most part Germany is treating its own nationals, and we are face to face with the great problem of international law, but this should not prevent us from raising our voices in protest and declaring to the world that we view these acts as reprehensible in an enlightened civilization. This is the more true in America, where differences of religion have produced toleration and minorities have ample protection. Let world opinion speak.

WHY THE INTERNATIONAL MANUFACTURERS SALES CO. CLAIM SHOULD NOT BE PAID

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, we have under consideration a bill for the relief of the International Manufacturers Sales Co., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee.

Under authority granted me to extend and revise my remarks in the RECORD I am going to enclose a letter from the Comptroller General to Senator Howell, then Chairman of the Senate Committee on Claims, dated July 30, 1930, which gives a fair history of this bill. There were also printed hearings before the Committee on Claims of the House with respect to this same bill when it was being considered in the Seventy-first Congress. The hearings contained a fairly complete history of the claim in a statement by Mr. Francis M. Anderson, assistant to the Solicitor of the Department of State, beginning on page 13 of the hearings. It will be noted that the shoes in question had been in Vladivostok, Siberia, for a period of 2 months before the War Trades Board was organized to relieve the distress of the Siberians. The Executive order creating the War Trades Board stated that the Board would cooperate with American firms in shipping and disposing of goods in Siberia. It will be noted from the committee hearings that the International Sales Co. had been doing business in Siberia for several years prior to the war. It has been claimed by the proponents of the bill that this company, out of the goodness of its heart, practically heeded a request of a United States Government agent having authority and went into Russia to sell these shoes at the request of the Government. The records of the State Department do not substantiate this. The only statement that substantiates this is the statement of Mr. Posnikoff himself. This company had good stores and probably 40 warehouses throughout Russia, and the Bolshevist uprising occurred and they lost all that material. The Bolshevists took it and paid nothing for it. Siberia at that time had not been overrun by the Bolshevists.

The transaction in question could not be considered as a transaction coming under the War Trades Board, for the company had the goods already there. They had to get rid of them, and the only alternative was to get rid of them under the arrangements which they carried out with the people of Siberia. As the result of that arrangement, which was purely a business transaction, they lost money due to a situation in Russia over which our Government had no control. If the International Sales Co. had made a profit of a million dollars instead of losing that amount, they would not have given the United States Government one penny.

The company sold over 107,000 pairs of shoes to the Siberian Government at a price of $10.80 per pair. This included cost of manufacture, transportation from Boston to Vladivostok, and cost of transportation and distribution to points in Siberia, some of which were 3,000 miles away from Vladivostok, and included a reasonable profit according to Mr. Postnikoff. The cost of transportation per pair of shoes and distribution amounted to approximately $5 and if Congress sees fit to pass this bill, the taxpayers of the United States should not be made to bear the burden of the transportation of the shoes, which would have been lost to claimant even though the United States Government had entered into a binding agreement with Mr. Postnikoff, for the Government would only have been liable for the actual cash value of the shoes at Vladivostok as Postnikoff himself stated that he was getting ready to ship the shoes back out of the country.

I think that after you hear the excerpts read from the Comptroller General's report, you will feel convinced that the taxpayers of the United States Government do not owe this concern one penny, either from a legal or moral standpoint, and that if anything is given it will be a mere gratuity.

EXCERPTS FROM LETTER WRITTEN BY J. R. M'CARL, COMPTROLLER GENERAL, TO HON. R. B. HOWELL, CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS, UNITED STATES SENATE, JULY 30, 1930, RELATIVE TO THE CLAIM OF THE INTERNATIONAL MANUFACTURERS SALES CO.

I am unable to recommend favorable action on the bill.

It may be stated that the matter has never been before this office nor the former Comptroller of the Treasury for consideration as a claim, and there are no papers, etc., on file in this office with reference thereto. Hence, this report is based entirely on the records which accompany your request.

It appears that in the fall of 1918, with the approval of the President of the United States, a provisional plan was formulated by the War Trade Board for the purpose of extending economic aid to the Siberian population in Russia; that the War Trade Board was intrusted with carrying out this plan and was placed in control of the supplies licensed for exporting to Vladivostok, one August Heid being appointed as Chief of the Vladivostok Bureau and representative of the War Trade Board in that city; and that the supplies to be shipped were to be obtained partly by the use of revolving fund placed at the disposal of the Board by the President. The plan for the relief is fully set forth in an "Aide Memoire" and a telegram to the American consul at Vladivostok, Siberia, both dated October 10, 1918.

In order to carry out the plan of aid as outlined, supra, American merchants, manufacturers, and so forth, were invited to sell goods in Siberia and advised that they could obtain information as to the method of selling goods, and so forth, from the Vladivostok Bureau of the War Trade Board, and pursuant to said invitation one A. S. Postnikoff, then in Vladivostok and representing himself as being the president of the International Manufacturers Sales

Co. of America, Inc., discussed with Mr. Heid in detail the plan of relief of the Siberian people. Mr. Postnikoff informed Mr. Heid that his company (International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc.), had a quantity of shoes in Vladivostok and Mr. Heid encouraged the sale of said shoes as being in line with the United States Government's plan of supplying the needs of the Siberian population (see in this connection par. 5 of Mr. Heid's affidavit of Dec. 16, 1921); and that in December 1918, and January and February 1919, said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., sold and delivered approximately 107,471 pairs of shoes at a price of $10.80 per pair, the statement of account therefor as furnished by the said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., being made up as follows:

To whom sold	Pairs of shoes	Price in rubles and dollars	Amount in—
			Rubles	Dollars (18 cents per ruble)
Ekaterinburg Zemstvo	18,886	(1)	1,133,160	$203,968.80
Irkutsk Cooperative Society	20,517	(1)	1,231,020	221,583.60
Omsk Provincial Government	46,959	(1)	2,817,540	507,157.20
Tomsk Provincial Zemstvo	21,109	(1)	1,266,540	227,977.20
Total	107,471		6,448,260	1,160,686.80

[1] 60, or $10.80, at the rate of 18 cents per ruble.

In the price of $10.80 per pair of shoes are included: Railroad freight from Boston, Mass., to Vancouver, British Columbia; ocean freight from Vancouver, British Columbia, to Vladivostok, Siberia; rail and marine insurance; customs duty in Vladivostok; rail transportation to Tomsk, Omsk, Irkutsk, and Ekaterinburg (the latter town about 3,260 miles from Vladivostok); cost of handling; and other overhead expenses, which in all amounted to approximately $4.65 per pair.

From the amount of rubles, 6,448,260, 3,000,000 were deposited in three Omsk banks, 1,000,000 in each, and the balance of rubles, 3,448,260, in two Vladivostok banks.

It appears that under date of February 14, 1919, pursuant to an Executive order dated January 26, 1918—Executive order prescribing rules and regulations under section 5 of the Trading With the Enemy Act and supplementing rules and regulations theretofore prescribed—the Federal Reserve Board issued the following regulation:

"Until otherwise instructed, the exportation or importation of Russian rubles or the transfer of funds for their purchase by 'person' and 'dealers' in the United States as described under the Executive order of the President of January 26, 1918, is prohibited."

Following the ruling of the Federal Reserve Board, supra, the Siberian Government issued a ruling prohibiting ruble exchange, the effect of which was to allow withdrawals from the banks only in the amount of 1,000 rubles per week.

The said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., states that by reason of the said regulation of the Federal Reserve Board of February 14, 1919, it was unable to convert the rubles into American dollars—this despite its every effort to do so; that as a result thereof the rubles had to remain and still remain in Russian banks, and in the meantime the depreciation in value of rubles has reduced the amount to practically nothing, meaning a total loss to the company; and that the total amount received by reason of the sale of said shoes and on deposit, including interest to the 1st of January 1922, on the basis of an exchange of 18 cents in American money, amounts to $1,308,816.46.

The substance of above appears in a printed pamphlet entitled "Statement Explanatory of Senate Bill S. 3588 and House Bill H. R. 10064", Seventy-first Congress, second session, by said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., hereto attached, marked "Exhibit A" (pp. 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15). As will be seen (p. 14), the company admits it has no legal claim against the United States by reason of said matters, but urges it has a moral claim.

"* * * in conversation with Mr. A. S. Postnikoff, I encouraged the sale of shoes because it would be in line with the United States Government's plan of supplying the needs of the Siberian population."

As to the matter of profit (b) and (c), and the statement by the said company that no profit was made and that the transaction was purely a relief measure, attention is invited to a telegram dated March 17, 1919, from the American consul at Vladivostok to the Department of State, as follows:

[Paraphrase of telegram from American consul at Vladivostok to Department of State]

MARCH 17, 1919.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington.

Routine 151, War Trade Board 116:

The shoes mentioned in your telegram no. 127 were property of the International Manufacturers Sales Co. of New York. There were 26,000 pairs of the shoes. They were products of the M. A. Packard Co., of Brockton, Mass., and Thomas G. Plant Co., of Boston. A. S. Postnikoff, who is president of the Sales Co., is in Vladivostok now and came highly recommended by the Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing; L. D. Snow, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; and with the endorsement of five influential American banks. He has pledged that the shoes would be sold at a small profit, not in excess of 10 percent. Eleven thousand pairs have been reported as sold. Mr. Heid advises that he will send more information later.

CALDWELL.

See also telegram of July 12, 1919, from the American Minister at Peking to the Department of State, as follows:

[Paraphrase of telegram from American Minister at Peking to Department of State]

OMSK, July 12, 1919.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington.

The following message, no. 322, and dated July 12, 7 p. m., has been received from Omsk:

Reference is made to the Department's telegram of March 22, 6 p. m. The following is a copy of a telegram which I have sent to Mr. Heid:

"The municipality of Tomsk has made a complaint to me to the effect that the International Sales Co., of America, through its agent, Postnikoff, sold to the Tomsk municipal supplies committee a quantity of shoes valued at 300,000 rubles. At the time the order was placed Mr. Postnikoff presented a letter of introduction signed by Mr. Robert Lansing, and written at the request of Senator Joshua Walcott, of Delaware. The shoes were brought to Siberia last winter as the property of the War Trade Board on a Red Cross train. They were in charge of a man named Fishman. After the delivery of the goods the municipal authorities at Tomsk found them to be very inferior to the samples presented at the time the order was placed. Fishman has disappeared, and the authorities at Tomsk have refused to accept the shoes. They have requested the American vice consul at Tomsk, Mr. Dille, to inform the proper authorities of their attitude. In January of this year, it should be noted, a similar transaction was effected by Mr. Fishman in Ekaterinburg. Fishman is said by Mr. Heid, of the War Trade Board, to have had no connection with the board. Have you any information in regard to this matter? Harris."

REINSCH.

As to (d), (e), (f), and (g), there is no doubt but that the amounts due for the shoes were deposited in various banks and that rubles are at the present time practically worthless; and while the United States assisted and arranged for the transportation of the shoes to the various municipalities, etc., it had nothing whatever to do with the payment for the shoes. On the contrary, payment therefor appears to have been arranged and controlled by representatives of the said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., and no suggestion appears on the part of the representatives of the United States as to what disposition could be made of the money after receipt thereof. While the regulation of February 14, 1919, supra, issued by the Federal Reserve Board, did prevent the exportation or importation of rubles or the transfer of funds for their purchase by persons and dealers in the United States, it did not prevent the withdrawal of such funds from the banks in which they were deposited in Siberia; but it was because of the subsequent regulation issued by the Siberian Government that prevented such withdrawal. There must also be considered in connection with the depreciation of rubles and the exchange thereof for American money that the establishment of the medium of exchange or currency was specifically brought to the attention of all allied Ambassadors in the Aide Memoire of October 10, 1918, supra. Furthermore, it is conclusively shown that the said International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., is made up of 42 American concerns and was incorporated in the State of Illinois in 1910 and reincorporated in the State of New York in 1916, and that the sole and only purpose of the corporation was to carry on a general sales business in Russia and other European countries; that since the incorporation, and up to and including the time of the transactions in question, it has been doing business in Russia and other foreign countries and had maintained at practically all times a representative in Russia; that for some time prior to the formulation of the plan of extending aid to Siberia by the United States the said company was doing business through its representative then in Russia and was thoroughly familiar with conditions that existed, especially with reference to the possibility of the overthrow of the Government and the establishment of a new medium of exchange, thereby making the then existing exchange or currency practically of no value whatever. In fact, prior to the sale in question it had lost considerable money on account of the sale of shoes and supplies in other parts of Russia by reason of the depreciation in value of rubles.

Mr. A. S. POSTNIKOFF,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: The Department refers to your letters of February 17 and February 20, 1922, and to your conversations with members of the Solicitor's office and the Russian Division concerning the desire of the International Manufacturers' Sale Co. of America, Inc., to obtain reimbursement of losses said to have been sustained by it in connection with the sale of shoes in Siberia from November 1918 to the end of April 1919. You stated that the operations of the company in Siberia were conducted in accordance with plans outlined by the War Trade Board in October 1918 and with the personal encouragement of Mr. August Heid, a special assistant to the Department of State, acting as head of the Russian bureau of the War Trade Board at Vladivostok; that Mr. Heid assured you that there would be no trouble in obtaining American dollars in exchange for the Kerensky and imperial rubles in which payment was made for the shoes; and that you were surprised to learn at the conclusion of the sale that, in consequence of an order of the Federal Reserve Board dated February 14, 1919, you could neither bring the rubles to the United States nor exchange them in Siberia for American dollars. You requested a letter from the Department for presentation to Congress with a petition for relief.

The only information which the Department possesses with reference to the Siberian operations of the International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., is that which was supplied by you. The records of the Department show that a provisional plan for rendering economic aid to Russia was approved by the President prior to October 3, 1918, and that under this plan, the execution of which was intrusted to the War Trade Board, supplies required by Russian civilians were to be licensed for export to Vladivostok for distribution and sale in Russia under the control of the War Trade Board. The records show that Mr. Heid, a special assistant to the Department stationed at Vladivostok for the performance of duties assigned by him by the War Trade Board, was instructed that in exercising the control which he would be given over the manner, place, and terms of the sale of supplies exported in pursuance of the plan above mentioned, he should bear in mind that while a profit must be allowed the exporter which would be reasonable in view of the risks involved, it was of the utmost importance that excessive profits be avoided and that no basis be permitted for charges of exploitation. The War Trade Board, it should be stated in this connection, was not incorporated with the Department until July 1, 1919.

The Department does not perceive that the circumstances attending the Siberian operations of the International Manufacturers Sales Co. of America, Inc., as set forth in your letters and conversations, were such as to impose upon this Government any obligation to indemnify you and the company for the losses said to have resulted from an order of the Federal Reserve Board. The spirit in which the operations were apparently conducted is, however, appreciated, and in the losses sustained you have the Department's sincere sympathy.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

F. M. DEARING
(For the Secretary of State).

NOT SO MANY DRUNKEN DRIVERS SINCE LEGAL BEER AND REPEAL

Mr. HESS. Mr. Speaker, there has been persistent propaganda by professional drys since legal beer and repeal of the eighteenth amendment that there has been an alarming increase in drunken drivers on the public streets and highways.

It is a gratifying fact that a survey of the police records of 324 cities of the United States, having a combined population of 36,547,027, shows a big decline in arrests of intoxicated drivers in 1933 and 1934 as compared with the four typical prohibition years of 1928, 1929, 1930, and 1931. The statistics from these police departments, when grouped by States, show a decrease in arrests of intoxicated drivers from 20 to 40 percent, with few minor exceptions.

In my home State, for example, complete statistics from 30 of the larger cities, having a population of 2,634,000, show a decrease of 23.3 percent. Forty-three New York cities, with a population of 8,895,828—more than two-thirds of the entire State—show a decline of 33 percent. Other States reporting big decreases are: Connecticut, 32.2 percent; Washington, D. C., 26.6 percent; Illinois, 33.8 percent; Indiana, 35.5 percent; Iowa, 40 percent; New Jersey, 15 percent; Texas, 33 percent; Virginia, 33 percent; Wisconsin, 24.5 percent; and Michigan, 34 percent. Of the larger States, Pennsylvania alone showed an increase—29 percent.

The official records from the 324 cities show the following number of arrests for drunken driving:

1928	24,996
1929	24,947
1930	24,816
1931	24,899
1932	19,351
1933	19,033
1934	23,683

The 4 years which show the highest number of arrests were 1928, 1929, 1930, and 1931—which may be properly classified as typical prohibition years. The year 1932 was the year of changing public opinion, or perhaps more properly speaking, the year in which the people determined to repeal national prohibition. Under act of Congress beer was legalized in April 1933, hence that year may be designated the beer year. Repeal became effective in December 1933, and consequently 1934 was the first repeal year in which the sale of all alcoholic liquors was legal so far as the Federal Government was concerned.

The average number of arrests for the four typical prohibition years was 24,814, and for the beer and repeal years, 21,359—the average decrease for the entire group of cities being 14 percent. The highest record, 24,996 in 1928, was 5,961 in excess of the beer year of 1933, and 1,316 in excess of the repeal year of 1934.

The records show a decided improvement in the matter of drunken drivers since legal beer and repeal, in spite of the insistence of the professional drys that just the opposite would be true.

Unfortunately, automobile accidents take a frightful death toll. Since 1926 the record has been above 20,000 deaths every year. In 1930, according to Census Bureau records, deaths from such accidents were 31,678. In 1931, they were 32,429; in 1932 they dropped to 28,361, and rose again in 1933 to 31,363. No later figures for the entire country have been compiled by the Census Bureau, except for the 86 cities each having a population in excess of 100,000 which make weekly reports to the Bureau.

The combined population of the 86 cities is 37,424,402. The Census Bureau reports, which go back only to 1930, show the following number of deaths in these 86 cities:

1930	8,984
1931	9,120
1932	8,001
1933	8,215
1934	9,042

About 25 percent of these deaths results from accidents outside of the limits of the cities. The Census Bureau statistics for the first 32 weeks of 1935 show a slight decrease in the number of death from traffic accidents when compared with corresponding periods of 1930, 1931, and 1934. Here is that record for six such periods:

1930	5,113
1931	5,384
1932	4,711
1933	4,590
1934	5,156
1935	5,100

The three groups of Census Bureau figures show the highest record of automobile fatalities in 1930 and 1931, when the Volstead Act and the eighteenth amendment were unrepealed. The Census Bureau record for the entire country for 1934 has not been completed.

Some private organizations estimate the number of deaths in 1934 at 35,500, but this has not been confirmed by Government records. At the same time they estimate the number of persons killed by accidents in and around the home at 33,000, thus indicating that there were only 2,500 more deaths from automobile accidents last year than from home accidents. These statistics were recently read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by a member—Mr. LUNDEEN—from Minnesota.

When the fact is considered that more than 25,000,000 automobiles and trucks were in operation last year, and that, on the basis of gasoline consumption, they traveled approximately 215,000,000,000 miles, it is quite remarkable that there were so few more deaths than from accidents in the homes.

All analysts of automobile accidents generally agree that high speed and carelessness are the principal causes of automobile accidents, and that drunken driving is a negligibile factor—figuring perhaps in 3 percent of accidents. On the basis of police statistics back to 1928, the drunken driver must have been more of a menace to public safety before legal beer and repeal than since that time.

Since 1925 the horsepower of the low-priced cars has been more than quadrupled, and of the medium- and high-priced cars doubled. Practically all automobiles now have a potential speed of 80 miles an hour. When accidents occur at high rates of speed the danger of death or serious injury is greatly increased. The American Automobile Association has prepared a table showing the increase in horsepower of the three different classifications of automobiles. Here it is:

	Low-priced cars	Medium-priced cars	High-priced cars
1925	20	70	83
1926	20	78	83
1927	20	78	105
1928	40	78	105
1929	40	90	105
1930	40	98	105
1931	40	100	120
1932	60	108	145
1933	80	112	158
1934	92	118	160

When all the factors in the automobile-traffic problem are given proper consideration it will be seen that the great majority of the people have the good sense not to drive under the influence of liquor. The attempt on the part of the professional drys to make it appear that legal beer and repeal increased the danger from accidents on the public highways must be classed as propaganda without facts to support it. Both the police statistics and Census Bureau records refute the propaganda.

It is particularly gratifying to me that Ohio cities reporting in the survey should make such an excellent record. Thirty cities reported statistics complete from 1928 to 1934, showing a drop of 23.3 percent in the arrest of drunken drivers. These cities have a population of 2,634,000—more than one-third of the population of the State. They show an average of 1,506 arrests for drunken driving in the 4 typical prohibition years, as compared with 1,154 for the beer and repeal years. Here is the Ohio record:

	Prohibition years, National and State				Year of changing opinion, 1932	Beer, 1933	Repeal, 1934
	1928	1929	1930	1931
Akron	261	275	184	130	123	155	194
Ashtabula	13	19	17	20	12	13	18
Barberton	80	55	65	49	18	25	24
Bellevue	2	1	1	2	2	3	5
Cambridge	21	33	42	19	14	22	31
Canton	119	79	53	56	20	19	23
Cincinnati	139	77	70	50	47	43	46
Cleveland	381	279	169	131	115	70	146
Cleveland Heights	50	58	56	49	48	37	40
Dayton	71	96	53	72	81	94	109
Delphos	13	2	3	0	2	7	7
East Liverpool	36	37	36	26	31	21	30
Findlay	8	11	12	16	13	12	18
Hamilton	57	43	36	39	24	29	41
Kenton	6	4	9	5	4	11	15
Lakewood	121	137	118	132	129	144	155
Lorain	23	29	21	10	7	3	11
Mansfield	77	68	49	40	33	50	65
Marietta	44	33	20	29	29	22	46
Massillon	65	41	51	23	25	20	52
Middletown	95	91	57	43	46	43	55
New Philadelphia	19	8	8	14	6	5	18
Norwalk	13	2	13	7	2	2	1
Piqua	8	17	19	16	14	18	6
Ravenna	1	5	4	1	5	1	3
Sandusky	19	10	12	17	21	6	13
Springfield	63	81	55	58	23	23	46
Van Wert	0	0	0	0	2	4	0
Youngstown	67	53	35	43	27	57	89
Zanesville	45	39	31	30	27	13	30
	1,917	1,683	1,297	1,127	720	972	1,337
INCOMPLETE REPORT FROM 9 ADDITIONAL CITIES, POPULATION 727,300
Columbus	------	------	145	175	138	112	138
Delaware	------	------	------	------	------	------	3
Elyria	------	39	36	30	25	11	32
Galion	------	0	------	1	1	3	7
Lima	------	------	------	13	24	19	17
Newark	------	------	------	28	21	16	44
Struthers	------	25	15	11	5	6	10
Tiffin	------	------	------	9	13	9	29
Toledo	------	------	------	220	151	148	236

As another illustration I offer the record of New York:

New York cities representing two-thirds of the State's population show a drop of 33 percent in arrests of drunken drivers since legal beer and repeal.

Official police statistics from 43 cities, complete from 1928 to 1934, show an average of 2,273 arrests annually during the four typical prohibition years, as compared with 1,419 in the beer and repeal years.

Population of reporting cities, 8,985,828; of entire State, 12,583,066.

	Prohibition years, national and State				Year of changing opinion, 1932	Beer, 1933	Repeal, 1934
	1928	1929	1930	1931
New York City	1,511	1,434	1,399	1,214	874	835	887
Buffalo	314	302	363	326	154	76	147
Auburn	66	28	24	25	33	22	14
Batavia	18	7	4	14	10	4	11
Beacon	1	2	2	0	0	0	1
Binghamton	33	28	43	44	22	20	37
Corning	14	15	13	9	6	1	10
Cortland	5	7	11	10	14	10	8
Depew	3	1	4	2	1	2	2
Freeport	38	19	16	9	19	15	15
Glens Falls	13	10	20	12	4	5	9
Gloversville	9	4	5	2	5	6	11
Herkimer	6	2	5	8	4	3	4
Hornell	0	3	0	2	6	1	15
Ithaca	13	4	11	9	8	5	4
Jamestown	24	50	44	26	25	11	25
Kingston	25	9	5	10	7	6	8
Little Falls	3	11	9	7	1	2	1
Lockport	22	24	7	10	9	8	5
Mechanicville	0	0	0	3	0	0	1
Medina	2	1	2	2	0	0	0
Newark	0	4	14	1	6	7	3
Newburgh	16	13	19	17	10	9	20
New Rochelle	27	29	24	31	38	32	38
North Tarrytown	1	1	0	0	2	2	1
North Tonawanda	9	8	5	4	0	1	4
Oneida	10	4	2	4	1	2	1
Ossining	3	6	4	4	3	2	2
Peekskill	15	5	15	2	2	11	6
Plattsburgh	9	14	18	18	17	15	14
Portchester	12	20	8	21	10	19	35
Poughkeepsie	20	29	27	17	17	15	31
Rensselaer	0	1	2	2	0	1	1
Rochester	65	88	72	83	63	52	89
Rome	21	15	19	10	8	3	20
Salamanca	16	12	6	2	6	18	11
Saranac Lake	13	17	12	8	7	11	9
Schenectady	36	34	28	28	35	21	25
Solvay	15	7	10	11	8	5	3
Tarrytown	0	2	1	0	5	7	5
Tonawanda	4	2	3	4	2	2	3
Utica	14	10	10	9	7	7	3
Watertown	16	15	26	25	13	11	14
Total	2,439	2,297	2,312	2,045	1,462	1,285	1,553
INCOMPLETE REPORTS FROM 9 ADDITIONAL CITIES, POPULATION 351,352
Canandaigua	------	9	17	11	12	11	14
Johnson City	------	------	------	------	------	------	30
Malone	------	------	------	------	------	6	4
Middletown	------	4	0	11	5	0	1
Niagara Falls	------	28	19	33	14	25	45
Norwich	------	------	------	5	2	9	8
Oswego	------	------	------	4	7	6	3
Troy	------	------	10	8	8	22	10
Yonkers	------	------	26	28	18	11	11

I also offer the complete record of the 324 cities, and the record of 77 additional cities which furnished some statistics, together with other records relating to the problem of automobile traffic accidents:

OFFICIAL STATISTICS ON INTOXICATED DRIVERS

Official records, complete from 1928 to 1934, inclusive, of arrests of drunken drivers as reported by the police departments of 324 cities having an estimated 1933 population of 36,547,627, show the following result:

Prohibition years, National and State:
1928	24,996
1929	24,947
1930	24,816
1931	24,899
Year of changing opinion, 1932	19,351
Legal-beer year, 1933	19,035
Repeal year, 1934	23,683
Averages
Average for prohibition years	24,914
Average for beer and repeal years	21,359
Comparisons
Highest record, 1928 (prohibition)	24,996
Lowest record, 1933 (legal beer)	19,035
Excess of 1928 (prohibition) over 1933 (beer)	5,961
Excess of 1928 (prohibition) over 1934 (repeal)	1,316

SUMMARY OF RECORDS OF CITIES OF DIFFERENT POPULATION CLASSIFICATION

Six cities of 1,000,000 or more population (1933 Census Bureau estimate) of 16,556,300:

Prohibition years, National and State:
1928	5,935
1929	5,428
1930	5,822
1931	5,422

SUMMARY OF RECORDS OF CITIES OF DIFFERENT POPULATION CLASSIFICATION—Continued

Year of changing opinion, 1932 4,029
Legal-beer year, 1933 4,042
Repeal year, 1934 4,860

Fifty-three cities of approximately 100,000 population and over, but less than 1,000,000, with total population (1933 Census Bureau estimate) of 13,335,610:

Prohibition years, National and State:
1928 10,525
1929 10,938
1930 10,915
1931 11,093
Year of changing opinion, 1932 8,832
Legal-beer year, 1933 8,329
Repeal year, 1934 10,273

Two hundred and sixty-five smaller cities. Estimated population, 1933, of 215 of these cities having a population in excess of 10,000, is 6,655,117:

Prohibition years, National and State:
1928 8,476
1929 8,481
1930 8,179
1931 8,348
Year of changing opinion, 1932 6,490
Legal-beer year, 1933 6,664
Repeal year, 1934 8,550

Record of cities of 1,000,000 or more population

Prohibition years, National and State					Year of changing opinion	Legal-beer year	Repeal year
	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
New York City	1,511	1,434	1,399	1,214	874	835	887
Chicago	1,144	990	1,103	959	741	658	695
Philadelphia	816	994	1,470	1,697	1,210	1,327	1,949
Los Angeles	957	930	1,022	797	709	865	489
Detroit	1,126	783	659	624	374	287	694
Cleveland	381	279	169	131	115	70	146
	5,935	5,428	5,822	5,422	4,029	4,042	4,860

Yearly average, prohibition years 5,521
Average, beer and repeal years 4,451

Records of cities of approximately 100,000 and over, but less than 1,000,000

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Boston, Mass.[1]	.....	705	611	651	599	565	672
Baltimore, Md	356	289	335	410	279	327	302
Washington, D. C	389	352	316	342	265	224	288
San Francisco, Calif	317	299	228	203	152	118	151
Denver, Colo	281	212	306	547	280	385	156
Hartford, Conn	221	209	161	150	136	114	137
Louisville, Ky	897	730	836	790	771	663	885
Grand Rapids, Mich	403	287	312	258	173	149	179
Minneapolis, Minn	383	394	509	642	405	278	438
St. Paul, Minn	187	178	228	199	125	136	205
Omaha, Nebr	425	408	410	488	374	367	544
Newark, N. J	72	106	82	78	44	37	46
Jersey City, N. J	65	59	70	74	68	61	44
Buffalo, N. Y	314	302	363	326	154	76	147
Rochester, N. Y	65	88	72	83	63	52	89
Akron, Ohio	261	275	184	130	123	155	194
Cincinnati, Ohio	139	77	70	50	47	43	46
Portland, Oreg	235	314	380	365	358	153	172
Providence, R. I	137	137	106	120	149	80	130
Houston, Tex	67	161	130	201	185	130	183
Richmond, Va	263	297	328	231	213	194	280
Little Rock, Ark	247	211	202	184	147	167	206
Atlanta, Ga	685	726	617	669	682	796	1,070
Wichita, Kans	224	254	280	233	141	185	272
Springfield, Mass	164	174	152	141	129	87	122
Flint, Mich	450	444	311	297	243	245	316
Atlantic City, N. J	47	52	70	108	76	81	77
New Haven, Conn	129	156	132	155	49	40	32
Gary, Ind	101	77	104	109	34	39	39
South Bend, Ind	151	126	122	100	75	65	83
Jacksonville, Fla	244	115	136	125	92	147	185
Highland Park, Mich	152	198	164	159	167	158	187
Knoxville, Tenn	40	99	160	202	114	130	156
Norfolk, Va	147	171	150	153	138	95	180
Madison, Wis	108	79	79	140	138	114	129
Oakland, Calif	108	90	46	57	111	88	294
Bridgeport, Conn	53	63	66	67	40	41	73
Cambridge, Mass	19	16	15	20	21	17	15
Lynn, Mass	91	122	102	122	91	89	100
Worcester, Mass	129	199	180	195	155	164	196
Duluth, Minn	16	16	28	56	63	24	61
Camden, N. J	39	40	36	31	35	29	28
Elizabeth, N. J	57	67	52	34	26	34	37
Trenton, N. J	72	65	54	52	29	36	49

[1] Boston, Mass., not included in 1928 totals. Average of 655 arrests in 3 succeeding years should be added for a more accurate comparison.

Average, prohibition years 10,883
Average, beer and repeal years 9,301

Records of cities of approximately 100,000 and over, but less than 1,000,000—Continued

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Utica, N. Y	14	10	10	9	7	7	3
Canton, Ohio	119	79	53	56	20	19	23
Allentown, Pa	16	18	15	21	16	13	17
Fort Worth, Tex	49	19	9	8	12	28	32
Roanoke, Va	382	228	259	256	208	205	134
Dallas, Tex	197	177	384	210	114	100	33
New Orleans, La	123	142	137	170	196	194	237
Seattle, Wash	194	127	64	62	87	200	190
Milwaukee, Wis	541	699	739	554	413	385	418
	10,585	10,938	10,915	11,093	8,832	8,329	10,273

Record of arrests of drunken drivers, 1928–34, inclusive, in 253 cities of less than 500,000 population as reported by their police departments. Census Bureau estimate of the 1933 population of 209 of these cities of 10,000 or more population is 6,351,717. Included in this list are 44 cities of less than 10,000 population. Census Bureau makes no estimates of the population of such cities. The Bureau made no estimates of population for 1934:

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Bakersfield, Calif	5	13	13	25	29	60	150
Modesto, Calif	25	17	31	28	17	22	26
Richmond, Calif	25	38	32	23	26	57	66
Santa Ana, Calif	34	29	51	53	44	55	54
Santa Clara, Calif	7	4	7	15	8	6	6
San Leandro, Calif	0	0	0	1	1	4	4
Derby, Conn	15	19	14	8	12	10	14
East Hartford, Conn	41	30	43	55	37	36	54
Enfield, Conn	2	3	8	5	7	3	1
Manchester, Conn	47	41	57	43	29	54	63
Meriden, Conn	38	23	33	36	30	16	27
Middletown, Conn	14	3	14	29	19	19	24
Milford, Conn	21	14	10	6	7	14	15
Norwich, Conn	47	37	35	26	18	22	27
New London, Conn	61	69	55	68	36	47	57
Stamford, Conn	54	43	50	44	29	20	16
Stratford, Conn	55	60	69	69	50	48	16
Willimantic, Conn	15	15	7	16	10	16	5
Wilmington, Del	164	159	179	129	133	94	129
Boise City, Idaho	32	13	18	31	19	13	32
Pocatello, Idaho	26	22	27	21	21	16	42
Cairo, Ill	18	16	19	15	20	18	15
Oak Park, Ill	72	73	58	48	23	24	44
Quincy, Ill	22	19	18	15	10	12	15
Rockford, Ill	199	165	188	120	50	82	131
Rock Island, Ill	64	75	45	45	35	41	38
Waukegan, Ill	116	88	64	68	60	62	76
Elkhart, Ind	66	53	26	31	20	14	26
Goshen, Ind	9	3	10	9	2	3	2
Logansport, Ind	2	4	1	6	4	6	19
Madison, Ind	4	4	10	5	6	10	2
Marion, Ind	14	3	11	12	6	15	31
New Albany, Ind	14	13	18	27	23	18	6
Vincennes, Ind	5	8	10	39	22	41	30
Whiting, Ind	23	22	10	20	14	20	18
Burlington, Iowa	9	11	12	4	3	2	10
Cedar Rapids, Iowa	53	99	134	104	57	24	56
Fort Dodge, Iowa	16	17	7	11	9	19	24
Fort Madison, Iowa	8	4	3	3	4	6	2
Keokuk, Iowa	23	41	14	26	9	20	22
Sioux City, Iowa	12	24	18	25	15	25	36
Kansas City, Kans	139	142	172	129	106	114	91
Newport, Ky	47	15	19	2	6	11	7
Auburn, Maine	6	7	15	20	13	8	24
Augusta, Maine	25	38	39	38	39	31	48
Brewer, Maine	2	2	6	3	2	6	3
Calais, Maine	2	1	2	3	2	1	1
Lewiston, Maine	40	51	42	58	44	55	62
Portland, Maine	59	73	49	74	49	65	80
Rockland, Maine	5	1	1	3	5	8	9
Westbrook, Maine	9	5	7	4	8	7	10
Hagerstown, Md	42	60	42	66	64	49	46
Abington, Mass	7	7	9	11	10	8	24
Adams, Mass	28	23	31	20	27	19	38
Athol, Mass	8	11	16	17	9	13	17
Brookline, Mass	26	49	51	48	35	39	65
Chelsea, Mass	41	64	45	69	26	31	18
Chicopee, Mass	51	49	34	40	19	28	47
Clinton, Mass	9	7	10	13	8	11	9
Concord, Mass	22	16	25	26	18	26	25
Danvers, Mass	20	29	23	19	21	21	27
Dedham, Mass	34	35	36	40	28	26	20
Easthampton, Mass	13	6	5	9	2	4	11
Gloucester, Mass	13	34	26	22	21	18	36
Haverhill, Mass	57	50	62	57	45	41	46
Lawrence, Mass	68	69	50	53	34	44	37
Leominster, Mass	18	30	29	16	18	16	28
Lowell, Mass	100	85	92	111	73	96	109
Malden, Mass	39	40	61	43	41	41	68
Marblehead, Mass	7	15	16	14	10	15	15
Marlborough, Mass	19	24	28	33	21	28	27
Medford, Mass	67	32	52	69	68	61	100
Melrose, Mass	9	15	14	13	9	15	15
Methuen, Mass	29	34	27	35	24	21	25
Natick, Mass	13	16	27	27	12	9	28
Needham, Mass	18	16	25	25	13	17	21
Newburyport, Mass	9	12	9	15	8	17	19
Newton, Mass	81	66	74	63	84	61	86
North Adams, Mass	15	11	7	6	5	4	10
Northbridge, Mass	8	12	3	14	11	6	20
Orange, Mass	3	5	1	1	2	5	6

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Pittsfield, Mass.	27	99	69	62	30	44	45
Plymouth, Mass.	23	24	20	21	12	17	21
Quincy, Mass.	81	78	76	117	82	91	141
Reading, Mass.	40	32	41	39	32	24	36
Revere, Mass.	12	41	25	11	12	26	28
Salem, Mass.	29	33	24	37	15	5	19
Southbridge, Mass.	7	11	5	10	4	5	11
Swampscott, Mass.	12	13	12	13	9	7	12
Taunton, Mass.	40	38	49	60	31	31	49
Wakefield, Mass.	40	30	28	31	18	11	17
Waltham, Mass.	59	43	39	50	44	51	81
Ware, Mass.	7	10	10	5	9	8	2
Westfield, Mass.	47	57	61	57	46	46	65
Winchendon, Mass.	7	4	13	7	5	4	9
Winthrop, Mass.	1	2	3	2	4	2	5
Alma, Mich.	1	1	1	3	4	1	2
Alpena, Mich.	21	22	8	14	10	12	9
Ann Arbor, Mich.	18	30	16	18	22	22	25
Cadillac, Mich.	5	2	3	5	7	6	3
Grand Haven, Mich.	9	6	10	9	7	9	9
Holland, Mich.	4	6	7	2	7	5	13
Ishpeming, Mich.	11	15	13	11	8	12	8
Jackson, Mich.	98	55	58	63	20	24	35
Kalamazoo, Mich.	97	83	65	56	41	36	59
Lansing, Mich.	162	192	163	156	134	107	166
Laurium, Mich.	0	0	2	0	0	0	0
Menominee, Mich.	2	4	3	12	7	10	4
Owosso, Mich.	0	2	8	13	10	9	1
Pontiac, Mich.	146	99	69	65	50	30	53
Saginaw, Mich.	164	159	161	139	76	83	54
Albert Lea, Minn.	6	8	10	20	10	15	26
Brainerd, Minn.	2	3	5	5	8	5	1
Mankato, Minn.	6	4	2	12	19	19	47
Owatonna, Minn.	6	5	9	16	2	2	24
Rochester, Minn.	11	9	16	10	44	45	49
Greenwood, Miss.	5	17	6	6	5	3	4
Vicksburg, Miss.	29	24	26	21	31	34	33
Livingston, Mont.	15	3	3	5	5	3	7
Billings, Mont.	25	17	23	27	45	31	25
Beatrice, Nebr.	13	13	9	8	3	4	5
Lincoln, Nebr.	56	35	49	73	48	62	52
Berlin, N. H.	17	19	18	10	6	13	17
Dover, N. H.	11	8	8	11	8	7	30
Laconia, N. H.	27	16	22	27	21	28	22
Manchester, N. H.	53	59	38	52	40	35	67
Rochester, N. H.	8	12	3	6	16	22	27
Somersworth, N. H.	1	8	6	6	7	4	10
Asbury Park, N. J.	10	16	18	11	10	5	7
Clifton, N. J.	3	5	6	4	1	6	8
East Orange, N. J.	61	81	64	43	47	31	41
Hackensack, N. J.	9	22	14	14	12	12	23
Haddonfield, N. J.	0	1	2	1	2	0	0
Montclair, N. J.	24	16	17	23	10	12	8
Nutley, N. J.	4	3	2	7	7	14	17
Passaic, N. J.	19	33	25	19	36	54	64
Roselle, N. J.	9	8	6	9	4	13	13
South River, N. J.	9	7	6	3	4	6	8
Summit, N. J.	28	20	8	14	21	14	16
Westfield, N. J.	6	2	5	13	6	7	6
West Orange, N. J.	2	2	3	3	2	1	1
Albuquerque, N. Mex.	186	130	172	138	107	147	136
Auburn, N. Y.	63	28	24	25	33	22	14
Batavia, N. Y.	18	7	4	14	10	4	11
Beacon, N. Y.	1	2	2	0	0	0	1
Binghamton, N. Y.	33	28	43	44	22	20	37
Corning, N. Y.	14	15	13	9	6	1	10
Cortland, N. Y.	5	7	11	10	14	10	8
Depew, N. Y.	3	1	4	2	1	2	2
Freeport, N. Y.	38	19	16	9	19	15	15
Glens Falls, N. Y.	13	10	20	12	4	5	9
Gloversville, N. Y.	9	4	5	2	5	6	11
Herkimer, N. Y.	6	2	5	8	4	3	4
Hornell, N. Y.	0	3	0	2	6	1	15
Ithaca, N. Y.	13	4	11	9	8	5	4
Jamestown, N. Y.	24	50	44	26	25	11	25
Kingston, N. Y.	25	9	5	10	7	6	8
Little Falls, N. Y.	3	11	9	7	1	2	1
Lockport, N. Y.	22	24	7	10	9	8	5
Mechanicville, N. Y.	0	0	0	3	0	0	1
Medina, N. Y.	2	1	2	2	0	0	0
Newark, N. Y.	0	4	14	1	6	7	3
Newburgh, N. Y.	16	13	19	17	10	9	20
New Rochelle, N. Y.	27	29	24	31	38	32	38
North Tarrytown, N. Y.	1	1	0	0	2	2	1
North Tonawanda, N. Y.	9	8	5	4	0	1	4
Oneida, N. Y.	10	4	2	4	1	2	1
Ossining, N. Y.	3	6	4	4	3	2	2
Peekskill, N. Y.	15	5	15	2	2	11	6
Plattsburg, N. Y.	9	14	18	18	17	15	14
Portchester, N. Y.	12	20	8	21	10	19	35
Poughkeepsie, N. Y.	20	29	27	17	17	15	31
Rensselaer, N. Y.	0	1	2	2	0	1	1
Rome, N. Y.	21	15	19	10	8	3	20
Salamanca, N. Y.	16	12	6	2	6	18	11
Saranac Lake, N. Y.	13	17	12	8	7	11	9
Schenectady, N. Y.	36	34	28	28	35	21	25
Solvay, N. Y.	15	7	10	11	8	5	3
Tarrytown, N. Y.	0	2	1	0	5	7	5
Tonawanda, N. Y.	4	2	3	4	2	2	3
Watertown, N. Y.	16	15	26	25	13	11	14
Durham, N. C.	102	121	125	140	86	91	102
Gastonia, N. C.	39	35	34	49	37	61	42
Wilmington, N. C.	66	61	72	147	82	66	66
Winston-Salem, N. C.	177	269	196	418	388	252	251
Fargo, N. Dak.	45	34	41	59	3	16	56
Grand Forks, N. Dak.	15	27	17	20	20	15	18
Ashtabula, Ohio	13	19	17	20	12	13	18
Barberton, Ohio	80	55	65	49	18	25	24
Bellevue, Ohio	2	1	1	2	2	3	5
Cambridge, Ohio	21	33	42	19	14	22	31
Cleveland Heights, Ohio	50	58	56	49	38	37	40
Dayton, Ohio	71	96	53	72	81	94	109
Delphos, Ohio	13	2	3	0	2	7	7
East Liverpool, Ohio	36	37	36	26	31	21	30
Findlay, Ohio	8	11	12	16	13	12	13
Hamilton, Ohio	57	43	36	39	24	29	41
Kenton, Ohio	6	4	9	5	4	11	15
Lakewood, Ohio	121	137	118	132	129	144	155
Lorain, Ohio	23	29	21	10	7	3	11
Mansfield, Ohio	77	68	49	40	33	50	65
Marietta, Ohio	44	33	20	29	29	22	45
Massillon, Ohio	65	41	51	23	25	20	52
Middletown, Ohio	95	91	57	43	46	43	55
New Philadelphia, Ohio	19	8	8	14	6	5	13
Norwalk, Ohio	13	2	13	7	2	2	1
Piqua, Ohio	8	17	19	16	14	18	6
Ravenna, Ohio	1	5	4	1	5	1	3
Salem, Ohio	26	7	14	29	14	17	22
Sandusky, Ohio	19	10	12	17	21	6	13
Springfield, Ohio	63	81	55	58	23	23	45
Van Wert, Ohio	0	0	0	0	2	4	0
Youngstown, Ohio	67	53	35	43	27	57	89
Zanesville, Ohio	45	39	31	30	27	13	30
Lawton, Okla.	28	40	52	32	30	38	55
Astoria, Oreg.	9	18	7	15	6	5	4
Berwick, Pa.	1	3	4	0	1	2	2
Bradford, Pa.	4	8	14	7	9	5	12
Chambersburg, Pa.	10	9	8	8	2	6	9
Harrisburg, Pa.	87	88	68	74	81	82	80
Lebanon, Pa.	9	29	12	13	11	8	8
Munhall, Pa.	3	3	5	3	3	4	3
Norristown, Pa.	21	16	28	19	12	17	24
Pottstown, Pa.	7	1	0	2	0	3	6
Titusville, Pa.	4	2	9	2	2	1	9
York, Pa.	8	6	4	1	51	38	40
Newport, R. I.	27	38	32	66	20	13	31
Pawtucket, R. I.	45	69	68	35	21	42	76
Westerly, R. I.	12	7	3	14	7	6	21
Woonsocket, R. I.	31	21	23	24	10	13	19
Charleston, S. C.	140	159	88	92	108	172	153
Columbia, S. C.	128	151	133	168	149	121	211
Greenville, S. C.	164	182	118	116	128	120	170
Huron, S. Dak.	10	16	11	11	12	12	9
Watertown, S. Dak.	4	7	8	7	13	15	12
Beaumont, Tex.	28	38	12	30	73	42	29
Brigham, Utah	1	2	0	1	0	0	0
Burlington, Vt.	24	14	11	24	10	16	26
Rutland, Vt.	14	19	18	18	14	11	11
Springfield, Vt.	7	6	11	7	5	5	22
St. Johnsbury, Vt.	9	14	9	8	3	5	0
Charlottesville, Va.	67	91	72	56	54	49	78
Lynchburg, Va.	84	91	87	73	52	77	75
Newport News, Va.	71	67	71	113	54	62	69
Petersburg, Va.	75	67	79	65	38	41	36
Aberdeen, Wash.	123	91	96	50	25	48	47
Everett, Wash.	50	44	57	41	19	31	41
Wenatchee, Wash.	20	31	41	41	31	30	32
Hoquiam, Wash.	49	33	31	25	18	28	31
Clarksburg, W. Va.	54	51	29	29	50	38	76
Ashland, Wis.	26	31	41	32	16	19	19
Beaver Dam, Wis.	18	12	17	26	15	17	14
Beloit, Wis.	65	32	32	26	10	23	27
Berlin, Wis.	6	5	10	5	9	2	3
Delavan, Wis.	15	11	27	11	21	9	22
Eau Claire, Wis.	27	39	40	47	30	27	37
Janesville, Wis.	18	18	28	29	23	21	37
La Crosse, Wis.	48	50	51	61	45	55	50
Manitowoc, Wis.	13	21	10	14	4	7	13
Marinette, Wis.	31	24	26	33	14	21	23
Menasha, Wis.	18	11	7	11	8	4	2
Menominie, Wis.	2	3	3	5	4	4	2
Oshkosh, Wis.	11	14	18	26	27	34	27
Racine, Wis.	17	21	25	27	30	68	76
Sheboygan, Wis.	55	27	33	29	31	22	24
Sturgeon Bay, Wis.	9	11	19	15	6	3	10
Wasau, Wis.	20	11	11	24	14	14	26
West Allis, Wis.	101	108	217	127	85	60	80
Total	8,476	8,481	8,179	8,348	6,490	6,664	8,550

Incomplete records from police departments of 77 additional cities. These records are given as a matter of information, but since they are not complete they cannot be used in comparative statistics. Population of 60 of these cities of 10,000 and over, 3,375,866.

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Berkeley, Calif.	------	40	51	56	58	61
Sacramento, Calif.	------	------	18	22	14	80
Greeley, Colo.	------	------	------	------	17	17
Rockville, Conn.	2	3	3	1	5	4
Tampa, Fla.	------	268	339	268	344	438
Athens, Ga.	------	------	31	------	------	64
Evansville, Ind.	------	------	77	53	61	55
Fort Wayne, Ind.	------	86	60	48	50	76
Richmond, Ind.	------	------	56	43	35	32
Ames, Iowa	------	------	9	8	13	17
Clinton, Iowa	------	------	18	12	8	34
Davenport, Iowa	------	81	26	12	[1] 104	[1] 123

[1] Reckless driving.

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Mason City, Iowa						14
Eldorado, Kans				3	11	21
Emporia, Kans			3	7	7	8
Newton, Kans			3	2	4	6
Covington, Ky			4	3	9	11
Lexington, Ky			109	85	83	123
Alexandria, Va			19	17	15	40
Monroe, La			78	71	71	93
Bath, Maine	9	7	5	7	1	4
Belmont, Mass			29	30	17	36
Braintree, Mass			12	19	21	29
Everett, Mass			50	23	31	38
Fitchburg, Mass				22	26	43
New Bedford, Mass	68	58	77	61	84	79
Saugus, Mass		24	17	29	35	49
Somerville, Mass					75	93
Wellesley, Mass		24	27	20	24	29
Muncie, Ind			38	18	14	18
Bay City, Mich			118	45	67	119
River Rouge, Mich					24	20
St. Joseph, Mich				11	11	11
Traverse City, Mich			9	3	16	14
Wyandotte, Mich			25	15	27	31
Crookston, Minn	1	1	9	8	0	3
Cape Girardeau, Mo					8	12
Clinton, Mo						1
St. Joseph, Mo					23	33
Norfolk, Nebr					18	15
Garfield, N. J					8	20
Kearney, N. J		12	12	9	18	8
Red Bank, N. J			8	5	6	9
Secaucus, N. J				1	1	1
Town of Union, N. J	24	33	19	12	15	14
Canandaigua, N. Y	9	17	11	12	11	14
Johnson City, N. Y						30
Malone, N. Y					6	4
Middletown, N. Y	4	0	11	5	0	1
Niagara Falls, N. Y	28	19	33	14	25	45
Norwich, N. Y			5	2	9	8
Oswego, N. Y			4	7	6	3
Troy, N. Y		10	8	8	22	10
Yonkers, N. Y		26	28	18	11	11
Rocky Mount, N. C				49	44	38
Columbus, Ohio		145	175	138	112	138
Delaware, Ohio						3
Elyria, Ohio	39	36	30	25	11	32
Galion, Ohio	0	0	1	1	3	7
Lima, Ohio			13	24	19	17
Newark, Ohio			28	21	16	44
Struthers, Ohio	25	15	11	5	6	10
Tiffin, Ohio			9	13	9	29
Toledo, Ohio			220	151	148	236
Oklahoma City, Okla				220	244	366
Coatesville, Pa					4	5
Erie, Pa			21	38	45	66
Reading, Pa					33	56
Anderson, S. C		44	59	60	78	82
Sumter, S. C				3	14	33
Galveston, Tex	53	33	29	23	16	26
Sherman, Tex		3	3	3	3	2
Bellingham, Wash		32	31	16	27	25
Charleston, W. Va			142	110	113	119
Antigo, Wis			52	4	2	4
Kenosha, Wis		43	44	29	31	30
Merrill, Wis		32	30	19	15	18

STATE OF MISSOURI, PERCENTAGE OF INTOXICATED DRIVERS INVOLVED IN ACCIDENTS

Statistical record compiled by the Missouri State Highway Commission of accidents in which persons were either killed or injured in Missouri from 1928 up to November 1, 1934.

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Drivers involved in accidents in which persons were killed or injured	15,014	14,040	11,935	10,206	8,706	9,800	8,590
Total fatalities	836	807	880	929	713	852	755
Drunken drivers involved in these accidents	359	252	240	241	186	186	116
Percentage of drunken drivers involved	+2.4	+1.8	+2.0	+2.3	+2.1	−1.9	−1.4

Deaths and death rates from all motor-vehicle accidents

[As officially reported by the U. S. Census Bureau]

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Total deaths	26,680	29,873	31,678	32,429	28,361	[1] 31,363
Rate per 100,000 of population	23.4	25.7	26.7	27.2	23.6	25.0

[1] The 1933 report includes 1,355 deaths from Texas. Texas not included in earlier reports.

Deaths and death rates from all motor vehicle accidents in 86 cities of 100,000 or more

[Combined population of the 86 cities, 1933 Census Bureau estimate, 37,424,402]

	1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
Total deaths	8,984	9,120	8,001	8,215	9,042
Rate per 100,000 of population	28.0	28.1	24.5	25.2	(1)

[1] Death rate not computed as Census Bureau made no population estimates for 1934.

Deaths from automobile accidents in 86 cities of 100,000 or more

[Beer only was legal April to December 1933]

1930	6,298
1931	6,352
1932	5,350
1933	6,594
1934	6,127

Deaths and death rates from alcoholism

[United States Census Bureau reports]

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Total deaths	4,627	4,339	4,158	3,993	3,049	3,297
Rate per 100,000 of population	4.0	3.7	3.5	3.5	2.5	2.6

STATISTICS ON AUTOMOBILE REGISTRATIONS AND GASOLINE CONSUMPTION, 1928–34

From the records of the Bureau of Roads, United States Department of Agriculture (1934 records supplied by American Automobile Association).

	Registrations	Gasoline consumption
1928	24,493,124	10,178,344,771
1929	26,501,443	13,400,180,062
1930	26,523,779	14,751,308,978
1931	25,814,103	13,400,180,062
1932	24,114,977	14,250,173,295
1933	23,827,290	14,224,321,270
1934	24,926,185	16,617,050,000

These records show the registration of 1,098,895 more motor vehicles in 1934 than in 1933, and the consumption of 2,392,728,730 gallons more of gasoline in 1934 than in 1933.

Estimating 13 miles of motor-vehicle travel to the gallon of gasoline, it would appear that automobiles, trucks, etc., traveled 30,096,650,000 more miles in 1934 than in 1933, and approximately that much more than in 1932, 1931, and 1930. Total distance traveled was more than 215,000,000,000 miles.

Not all States taxed gasoline in 1928 and 1929. Records of consumption for those years are not complete.

TAXATION OF WINE AND THE REVENUE—H. R. 191

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, when the eighteenth amendment was suddenly and somewhat dramatically repealed, the Congress was presented with the question of enacting suitable tax legislation which would provide adequate revenue for the Federal Government without unduly restricting the now legalized consumption of wine. Almost everyone at the beginning of the year 1934 had an exaggerated idea of what the consumption of any alcoholic beverage would be, once prohibition restrictions were released, and accordingly had exaggerated ideas of what taxation could be borne. An interdepartmental committee had suggested to the Congress that the tax rate on wines could start at 16 cents per gallon on still wine of less than 14 percent alcoholic content and be progressively graduated upward. This proposal was so out of line with all preceding taxation on wine that I appeared at the joint hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House and the Committee on Finance of the United States Senate in December 1933 to suggest, first, that at least the dry wines should be considered as foods and not taxed at all; and, secondly, if a tax were to be levied, that it should start at a much lower rate than that suggested by the interdepartmental committee.

The Committee on Ways and Means adopted a schedule of taxation starting with 10 cents a gallon on dry wines of less than 14 percent alcoholic content, 20 cents on the sweet wines of 14 percent to 21 percent alcoholic content, and graduated upward. This tax compared with 4 cents a gallon tax on dry wines during the prohibition era and 10 cents a gallon on sweet wines. It will thus be seen that, though the committee accepted a reduction from the interdepartmental estimates, it was still penalizing wine makers more even than it had under the eighteenth amendment. I have no quarrel with that judgment of the Committee on Ways and Means; all taxation on alcoholic liquors at that time was a matter of guess, and it might have been thought that the people of the United States would choose to drink wine even under the heavy tax imposed.

Such has not proved to be the case. The present rates are so high as to continue to encourage illicit manufacture and sale of wine and deprive the Treasury of revenue. As against an average annual consumption of wine in the United States prior to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment of 51,000,000 gallons, the year 1934 showed a consumption of tax-paid wine of only 21,000,000 gallons. Nearly as much wine, testimony before our committee showed, is being made in basements out of fresh grapes, shipped chiefly from California, and it is being sold through underground and bootlegging channels. These figures can be checked, because we know from railroad loadings how many cars of wine grapes, distinct from table grapes, left California in 1934. Knowing the amount of wine that each ton of grapes will make, it has been an easy thing to calculate, making necessary allowance for shrinkage, waste, and spoilage, that at least 21,000,000 gallons of tax-free illicit wine has gone into commercial channels. Home wine makers are at present entitled to manufacture 200 gallons of wine tax free. It would have taken 110,000 families to have made up legitimately the amount of wine that was made from wine grapes shipped east from California in the year 1934. This is highly improbable. I do not think I need go further to convince you that most of these grape shipments must have been illicitly manufactured into wine and sold tax free.

Is it not important to adopt a policy of reasonable taxation, so that the movement of these grapes and this wine may be through tax-paid channels? The policy of the Nation since its foundation has been to encourage the use of milder alcoholic beverages. Prior to the World War no tax at all was imposed upon wine. The bill which I have introduced, and which has been approved by the Ways and Means Committee, will only bring back the rates on still wine to the tax rate in effect during the prohibition era. Certainly it will be an encouragement to the cause of temperance to make the cost of wine, with a relatively light alcoholic content, as cheap as possible.

While I come from California, it should be realized the problem is not a local problem. Grape growers in New York, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Arkansas, and elsewhere are dependent upon the sale of their grapes to vintners. Every cent of tax that the vintner has to pay is reflected in a decreased price of about $1.50 a ton to the grower for his grapes. This amount is often the difference between profit and loss in the production of grapes.

That the rate of tax has an actual effect upon the sales of wine was shown by a table presented to the committee comparing for 1934 the consumption in several States with low taxes with several States with high taxes.

States with relatively low tax rates

State	Population (1930 census)	Tax rate per gallon	Wine consumed	Per capita consumption
New York	12,588,066	10 cents	[1] 6,500,000	0.52
Connecticut	1,606,903	10 cents	522,000	.32
California	5,677,351	2 cents	14,058,643	2.34
Massachusetts	4,249,614	10 cents	649,000	.15
New Jersey	4,041,334	10 cents	[1] 985,000	.24
Louisiana	2,101,593	5 and 10 cents	[1] 750,000	.35
Rhode Island	687,497	20 cents / Now 5 and 10 cents	109,066	.16
Total	30,952,258		23,573,709

[1] Figures not final but close estimates.

States with high tax rates and restrictive regulations that consume little commercial taxable wine

State	Population (1930 census)	Tax rate per gallon	Wine consumed	Per capita consumption
Pennsylvania	9,631,350	Approximately 75 cents.[1]	484,000	0.05
Wisconsin	2,930,006	25 cents	312,000	.10
Minnesota	2,563,953	10 and 20 cents	231,000	.09
Illinois	7,630,654	10 and 25 cents	950,000	.12
Indiana	3,238,503	50 cents [2]	50,000	.01
Virginia	2,421,851	Approximately 50 cents.[1]	136,000	.06
Total	28,416,317		2,118,000

[1] State stores; figures represent amount added to cost on sales.
[2] Now reduced to 25 cents.

There is no essential difference between California and the other States with the exception that there wine has been recognized as a food, taxed as a food, and also like a food is little burdened with regulation. Other States that have fixed high tax rates have found that they are deriving little revenue from them. In this past spring and summer many of them have reduced their taxes to a basis comparable with my proposed bill. The House and the Senate have themselves approved this plan by reducing the rates on both still and sparkling wines in the District of Columbia beverage-control bill. A program which has been worked out by the Wine Institute, an organization formed to promote standards of quality and encourage consumption of wine in the United States, calls for an effort to have the States limit their taxation on wine to the same amount that the Federal Government taxes, and to have the Federal Government's rate start as it does in this bill, or 5 cents on still wine of less than 14 percent alcoholic content. If the program is adopted generally, it will make the tax rates uniform throughout the country and so promote a uniform distribution and consumption.

Wine is a food. Normally it is drunk with meals. I doubt if any of you have ever seen a man order a glass of wine as he would a cocktail or a highball. It has definite food value, and it should be regarded as such a food and taxed accordingly. I urge all of you to take this opportunity of setting an example to the States of the Union by seeing that the Federal Government shall no longer overtax what is indeed a food and drink combined. The passage of this bill will mean a slight loss to the Treasury based on 1934 figures of consumption, but I confidently believe, and the members of my committee agree with me, that the legitimate sales of taxed wine will be materially increased by this program of reduced National and State taxes to the point where our annual pre-prohibition consumption of 50,000,000 gallons per annum will be equaled or exceeded. Thus the paper loss will be more than made up and there will be a net gain in revenue to the Treasury.

In addition to the general tax reduction, the bill provides for remedying two injustices now existing in law of double taxation.

Vermouth is made from still wine, on which the normal tax has been paid, when it is removed from storage to a rectifying plant, where it is steeped with herbs. A rectifying tax is there paid. The finished product, however, is still classed as wine and is required to pay a second tax when removed for sale. This bill does away with the second or duplicating tax. This has been accepted by the Treasury.

A similar duplicate tax exists in the case of liqueurs and cordials containing over 24-percent alcohol. The spirits that go into them have already been taxed at the full rate, and under present law the finished products, if over 24-percent alcoholic content, are again taxed the full rate on spirits. This bill removes this duplication, which I believe was unintentionally put into the Liquor Taxing Act of 1934.

Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the House, the passage of this bill will do more to stimulate the consumption of tax-paid wines than any other legislation that can be enacted at this Congress. It will have a beneficial effect not only by permitting the sale of a beverage that is a food at a reasonable price but by showing that the Congress intends to encourage the wine industry, as it formerly did, in the interests of temperance, and all of this will be accomplished without the loss of a cent to the Treasury.

THE TRUTH ABOUT M'CORMACK AND KRAMER BILLS—FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS PRESERVED

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, it is strange that so much misunderstanding and misinformation have gone abroad concerning the McCormack bill and the Kramer bill. Many people—editors and private citizens—write as though these bills in some way infringe freedom of speech or freedom of the press. There is absolutely no foundation for such impression. Just why such impression has been created in order to delay and to try to defeat action on these bills I am unable to say.

Now, Mr. Speaker, take up the Kramer bill first. This bill, as amended by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, consists of less than five lines, and provides that any person who knowingly and willfully advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence shall be subject to indictment, trial, and punishment. Now, mark the language carefully. It simply means that any person who shall advocate civil war shall be subject to punishment. Civil war is nothing but an attempt to overthrow the existing Government by force and violence. Whoever advocates civil war should be guilty of treason. Certainly no sane person can properly object to a law which proposes to punish people who knowingly and willfully urge the overthrow of our Government by force and violence in civil war.

Mr. Speaker, advocating the outbreak of civil war in order to overthrow the Government by force and violence is a very different thing from advocating an amendment to the Constitution which might be so radical as to change our form of government. The latter is entirely in the right and privilege of every citizen. It is the fundamental principle of the Declaration of Independence. That right to urge the change in our form of government by amendment to the Constitution is recognized and preserved in the Constitution itself. But revolution at the ballot box is a very different thing from revolution by bayonet and bullet and poisonous gas and bombs and every other destructive instrumentality of modern war. Surely any fair and reasonable person can see the difference, and can see that the Kramer bill is but an expression of the power that must remain in every government to preserve itself and to punish those who would try by any sort of advocacy to bring about civil war.

M'CORMACK BILL

Now, Mr. Speaker, as to the McCormack bill, there is an equally grave misunderstanding. As amended by the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives, this bill merely provides that whoever, with intent to incite disaffection among our soldiers and sailors, shall urge any such soldiers and sailors to disobey the laws or regulations governing them shall be subject to indictment, trial, and punishment. Where is there anything in this which interferes with any freedom of speech or of press that any law-abiding citizen wants? Who wants to have the right to urge soldiers and sailors to disobey the laws or regulations governing them? Why should any man object to having soldiers and sailors obey the laws and regulations governing them? What is the use of having soldiers and sailors unless they will obey the laws and regulations governing them? The only conclusion that I can come to as to why any person should oppose the simple provisions of the McCormack bill is that such person does not wish us to have an efficient Army and Navy. Such person evidently wishes the privilege of undermining the morale of our soldiers and sailors by inculcating sedition and sentiments of mutiny among them. We all know how human beings are subject to influence. We know how easy it would be for a designing and crafty person to enlist the interest of soldiers and sailors by professing great sympathy for them, and, having gained their confidence, to implant in their minds and hearts feelings of disloyalty and the purpose to disobey.

Now, Mr. Speaker, unless we can count upon the obedience of our soldiers and sailors, there is no use having an Army and a Navy. We would but deceive ourselves and sustain a great expense without adequate return by maintaining an Army and a Navy whose personnel would refuse to obey when the time for action came.

So, Mr. Speaker, despite the pretense of learning and the flourish of patriotic sentiment, despite the pretense of fear that freedom of speech or freedom of the press may be impaired by either the McCormack bill or the Kramer bill, there is nothing about them that any loyal American citizen can fairly and reasonably object to. Some people have raised a great hue and cry against any proposed legislation to have school teachers take an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Why any person in any capacity should object to taking an oath to defend the Constitution of our Republic and the constitutions of the respective States is more than I can understand. I am perfectly willing and should be glad to take the oath every morning to support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of South Carolina. Each of these has provisions for their proper amendment. I have heretofore advocated amendments to the Federal Constitution and amendments to the State constitution, and I may in the future, if I live long enough, advocate other amendments. Just now I am not advocating any amendment to either of these constitutions. But the right of amendment is sacred. Since the right of amendment exists, whoever would seek to overthrow either of these governments by force and violence is an outlaw, is a traitor, is an enemy to society, and should be appropriately punished. I do not see any use of having a police force unless the police obey the laws and regulations governing them. Armies and navies are in a wider sense police forces, either domestic or international. It was an old common-law doctrine that a person who enticed from the employment of another person a servant should be guilty of a crime. Whoever should persuade a soldier or a sailor to desert either in peace or in war commits a grave offense against both the country and the soldier. But desertion is no worse than disobedience. In fact, in a certain sense disobedience is worse than desertion. To continue in the employ of the Government, to continue to receive its money, its food, its clothing, and its shelter, and then when the critical time comes to refuse to obey laws and regulations, is worse than the man who deserted. The one who deserts advises us in advance of his disloyalty, and we know we cannot count upon him, and we replace him with a soldier or a sailor whom we regard as loyal.

Now, Mr. Speaker, all we are trying to do is to take every reasonable precaution that our soldiers and sailors are loyal and will obey the law and regulations. If it is not a crime, it ought to be a crime for any citizen to urge and advise any other citizen to disobey any law. And yet it should all the more be a crime for any person to urge a policeman or a fireman or a soldier or a sailor to disobey the law and regulations governing them. These are selected groups who have volunteered to serve the public, and our security depends upon their loyalty and their obedience to law and regulations. Therefore, let those who oppose the McCormack bill say that they are willing to oppose a bill which would punish any person for advising or urging a policeman or fireman to do his duty. A pedestrian is held up by a robber. The pedestrian cries to a policeman to protect him. The policeman refuses to do it because John Smith urges the policeman not to do his duty. What would the pedestrian think of John Smith? My house is on fire and I summon the fire department, but they refuse to respond and stand by and see the hungry flames lick my possessions into ruins, because John Smith has advised the firemen not to do their duty. By the same token some disorder arises, or even the invasion of our country occurs, and when our soldiers and sailors are ordered to act to suppress insurrection, or to repel invasion, they refuse to do so, they mutiny, because John Smith has been urging and advising them to disobey the laws and regulations governing them. What would you think of John Smith? What are we going to do with such John Smiths over this country?

What 100-percent American claims for such John Smith the right to urge and advise policemen and firemen and soldiers and sailors to refuse to do their duty? We understand there are about 30,000 Communists in this country, and according to the literature they put out, every one of them is such a John Smith, urging and advising soldiers and sailors to disobey the laws and regulations governing them. Do any of our law-abiding citizens, acting through a misconception and a misunderstanding of the provisions of the Kramer bill and the McCormack bill, join with these communistic John Smiths in their efforts to incite disaffection and disobedience and mutiny among our soldiers and sailors?

FARM RECOVERY NEEDS

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, with this congressional session about to close, I again desire to call to your attention and to the attention of the leaders and Membership of the House the deplorable economic situation of the American farmer and the need for more adequate legislation to bring economic equality to the men and women who produce our food.

Unfortunately the farmers get a great deal of lip service from demagogues, but there are entirely too few men who have the interests of the farmers at heart and are willing to sit down around a table and work out a sane, substantial, and workable legislative program to meet the farm problem. There is greater need now than ever for effective farm organizations and particularly a vigorous, well-directed, and well-supported cooperative movement.

VICTIM OF TARIFF INJUSTICES FOR YEARS

The depression for the farmer dates back even earlier than 1920. As a result of tariff policies of the two old parties, the farmer operated his business under decidedly disadvantageous bargaining conditions for many years prior to the depression affecting the farmer in 1921. The tariff laws favored the eastern and industrial sections of the country, compelling the farmer to buy his machinery, clothing, and other necessities at prices held high by the tariff walls as well as by great financial combinations and trusts, which controlled prices. The farmer, on the other hand, got scant tariff protection and had to sell his product at the buyer's price, while he bought his own goods at the seller's price. Prior to the depression of 1921, due to this unfavorable situation, the farmer was sometimes able to break even by working unusually long days and by living in a very thrifty and economical manner.

Today with most industrial tariff rates sky-high, the duty on farm products is so low that the country is being flooded with foreign farm produce and the American farm market is being destroyed as a result of these importations. As I pointed out on March 2, the American farm market is further threatened by the negotiations being held behind closed doors of the State Department, looking toward the signing of a reciprocal trade treaty with Canada. Under the terms of the Reciprocal Trade Act which was passed in 1934, when I was not a Member of this House, the authority to raise and lower tariffs as much as 50 percent is vested in the State Department and the President.

DANGER IN RECIPROCAL TRADE TREATIES

There is even greater danger to American agriculture because under the most-favored-nations treaties we have agreed to extend tariff concessions to most of the leading countries if they are extended to one of the countries. For instance, the State Department may reduce the rate on agricultural products imported from Canada, and at the same time the same concession must be extended to Australia, Argentina, and the other countries with which we have signed the most-favored-nations agreements. I pointed out in March that our purchases of Canadian agricultural, dairy, and animal products, according to official Canadian figures, reached a value of $62,000,000 during the 11-month period from April 1933 to February 1934. On March 23 I called the attention of the State Department to later figures released by the foreign agricultural service of the Department of Agriculture, showing that in the last 6 months of 1934 the importations of butter into the United States more than doubled, as compared with a similar period in 1933. Barley malt imports jumped from 74,443,000 pounds to 98,980,000 pounds. At that time I gave more recent figures for the month of January 1935, showing that during that month alone 7 pounds of butter were imported for every pound which came into the country during the entire previous year.

I read now from the latest foreign trade survey issued on August 24 by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, showing that in July of this year imports increased 13 percent, whereas usually in the month of July there is a seasonal decline of 3 percent. This report shows further that importations of butter for the first 7 months of the year 1935 jumped to 21,677,000 pounds as compared with imports of 435,000 pounds for the same period in 1934. There was brought into this country up to August 1, 1935, 67,202,000 pounds of meat products as compared to importations of 32,069,000 during the same 7-month period a year before. Sharp increases are also shown in other farm-produce importations.

These figures show conclusively that we must renew our opposition to reduction of farm tariff rates under reciprocal trade agreements and fight the pressure being brought on the State Department to sell the Midwest farm markets down the river for the benefit of the eastern industrial interests which have in the past always manipulated tariffs so as to enrich themselves at the expense of the farmers in Wisconsin and other States in our section. We must do more than this, however. We must secure prompt action by the President under the authority vested in him to protect the American farm market and prepare a legislative program which will prevent our farm markets from being destroyed by foreign competition.

DELIBERATE DEFLATION IN 1921

After fighting an uneven battle for many years, the farmer was plunged into a real depression in 1921 as a result of the deliberate action of Federal Reserve officials prompted by Republican and Democratic politicians, doing the bidding of the financial pirates who had control over our credit system. Since this deliberate deflation of the farmer by the credit manipulators agricultural interests have experienced a steady depression extending over a 15-year period. The effect of the tariff policies mentioned above and the depression forced upon the farmer in 1921 is graphically illustrated by the following figures showing a steady increase in the number of farms operated by tenants instead of owners:

	Percent
1890	23
1900	35
1910	37
1920	38
1925	39
1930	42

In 1890 over half—52 percent—of the farmers owned their farms free and clear of debt. At the present time less than one-third—31.3 percent—of the farmers own their farms free of debt. The net farm income per family has decreased rather steadily from 1927, when the average net income for a farm family was $940, to 1932, when the net farm-family income reached a new low of less than $250.

It can be readily seen that at this average rate of income it has been necessary for the farmer to draw upon any credits that he may have and mortgage to the limit the last dollar's worth of property in his possession in order to exist. It is unnecessary for me to now repeat the staggering number of foreclosures in which farmers have lost their homes.

COURT DECISION BLOCKS FARM AID

An attempt was made to improve the farm credit situation by passage of the Frazier-Lemke bill in 1934. This law was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, however, and the new Frazier-Lemke moratorium bill, which we have just enacted and which has not yet been signed by the President, gives scant protection from foreclosure to the debt-ridden farmers.

To keep within the constitutional limitations, as viewed by the present Supreme Court, as you all know, this House was precluded from making this legislation as strong and beneficial for the protection of debt-burdened farmers as I am sure we would like to have done.

Under the terms of this Moratorium Act the farmer must go into the bankruptcy court in the usual manner. His property then becomes subject to court jurisdiction and may be held for 3 years, at the discretion of the judge. The farmer has a right to retain possession during the moratorium period, paying a reasonable rental, and may redeem his property at any time during the 3-year period or within 90 days after sale.

PASS FRAZIER-LEMKE REFINANCING BILL

In order to give any genuine farm credit relief it will be necessary to enact the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill, which gives the farmer a better opportunity to refund his indebtedness by payment of lower interest rates. This bill provides for interest rates of 1½ percent and payment of 1½ percent in reduction of the farm debt.

Despite a continued drive on the part of the progressive Members of Congress from Wisconsin and other liberals from the Farm Belt, it was not possible to force a vote on the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill at this session of Congress. While more than the necessary 218 Members indicated their interest in the bill at various times, the pressure was so strong that signatures on the petition to force a vote were withdrawn, and the 218 signatures necessary to get the bill out on the floor for action were never secured at any one time.

I want to serve notice now that the fight for passage of this bill will be continued, with a view to force its consideration by the House at the earliest possible time.

TEXT OF FARM-PRICE RESOLUTION

We have just passed a resolution directing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation of agricultural and commodity prices. Under the terms of this resolution the Commission is directed to investigate and report at the next session of Congress—

First. (1) The extent of the decline in agricultural income in recent years, including the amount and percentage of such decline;

(2) The extent of the increases or decreases in recent years in the income of the principal corporations engaged in the sale, manufacturing, warehousing, and/or processing of the principal farm products, as compared with the decline in agricultural income, including the amount and percentage of such changes; and

(3) The proportion of total consumer cost of representative products manufactured or processed from the principal farm products which is represented by the proceeds received by (a) the farmer; (b) the manufacturers, processors, and warehousemen; and (c) the distributors.

Second. The financial position of the principal corporations engaged in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, distribution, and marketing of the representative major products manufactured from such principal farm products, including—

(1) The capitalization and assets of such corporations and the means and sources of the growth of such capitalization and assets;

(2) The investment, costs, profits, and rates of return of such corporations;

(3) The salaries of the officers of such companies; and

(4) The extent to which said corporations avoid income taxes, if at all, and the extent to which officers receiving such salaries paid income taxes thereon.

Third. The extent of concentration of control and of monopoly in the manufacturing, processing, warehousing, distribution, and marketing of representative major farm products which is maintained or has been obtained by any corporation or other organization, including—

(1) Methods and devices used by such corporations for obtaining and maintaining their control or monopoly of the manufacturing, marketing, processing, warehousing, and distribution of such commodities, and the proportions of any such major farm commodity handled by each of the large units involved; and

(2) The extent to which fraudulent, dishonest, unfair, and injurious methods are employed in the grading, warehousing, and transportation of such farm products, including combinations, monopolies, price fixing, and manipulation of prices on the commodity exchanges.

Fourth. The extent to which the cooperative agencies have entered into the processing, warehousing, and marketing of representative major farm products and the general effects of such cooperative agencies upon the producer and consumer.

Fifth. The extent to which other countries have adopted or promoted processing, warehousing, and marketing agencies of a public, quasi-public, or cooperative sort for the simplification and cheapening of the processing, warehousing, and marketing of agricultural products, and other administrative agencies which may have been set up for the protection of the farmer-producer and the consumer.

Sixth. Any conclusion and/or recommendations with regard to increasing the income of farm producers or other recommendations with regard to the improvement of the economic position of farmers or consumers growing out of the inquiry.

Everyone who has any knowledge of farm prices and retail prices knows that there is too great a spread between the amount the producer receives and the amount that the consumer pays. Recent figures show that in 1928, the farmer got 47 cents of the consumer's dollar; the distributor and processor 53 cents. Only 2 years later, in 1931, before the depression had gotten under full way, the farmer got 38 cents out of the consumer's dollar instead of 47 cents, while the processor and distributor got 62 cents. Stepping up again in 1932, just 12 months later, the farmer got only 33 cents while the distributor and processor got 67 cents.

FARMER'S SHARE DECREASES

In other words, from 1928 to 1932, the share of the farmer fell from 47 cents out of the dollar to 33 cents. Now, if you multiply that by billions, you get an indication of the colassal slump in agricultural income and the colossal increase in the distributor's share. This downward drift has been checked to some extent in 1933 and 1934, but even now the farmer is getting only about 36 cents out of every dollar spent by the consumer.

Figures compiled by the various Government departments show a sharp increase in dividends and enormous salaries being paid to officials of huge dairy, packing, and other combines of processors handling the farmer's produce. Obviously there must be fundamental and drastic readjustments in order to give the farmer cost of production, which is essential to any business. If the farmer continues in the status of a serf producing below cost, there can be no national recovery.

I believe that the Federal Trade Commission survey will give us detailed facts on these inequalities, which are now self-evident. Upon the basis of the information collected in this investigation, we must at the very beginning of the next session enact legislation to save the American farm industry.

FARM AND CITY PRODUCERS SHOULD UNITE

At this point let me add, Mr. Speaker, that the farmer producer as a class must organize in order to get results for his group. He must fight this battle shoulder to shoulder with that other great group of producers, the American laboring men. Interests of these two great groups of producers are similar. Divided they will only be the pawns of other interests in the future as in the past.

There is now a close relationship between the organized farm and labor groups. Both groups, however, should extend their membership and influence. Their continued, closer, united, and more vigorous cooperative efforts are essential.

MUST FIGHT INEQUALITIES

The fight will be a strenuous one, as the vested interests, which have exploited both labor and the farmer for years, will not yield without a last ditch fight. We saw the influence of the lobbyists of the vested interests during this session as in past sessions.

Farm organizations and those Members of Congress genuinely interested in bringing about beneficial and fundamental readjustments to help American agriculture must join in preparing and submitting at the very beginning of the next session of Congress an adequate and workable farm program. These fundamental inequalities and maladjustments must be corrected.

THE MATANUSKA VALLEY COLONIZATION PROJECT OF THE FEDERAL EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DIETRICH. Mr. Speaker, after my recent trip to Alaska and my personal inspection of the Matanuska Valley colony, sponsored and developed by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, I am utterly at a loss to understand the criticism which has been heretofore directed against this project. I can only assume that such criticism by men of great learning is due to the fact that they are misinformed, or that they are deliberately attempting to belittle and retard this project for other reasons.

Upon my arrival at the colony I was forcefully struck by the look of happiness and confidence which showed so plainly on the faces of the pioneer citizens who now compose this settlement. I interviewed many of the families in the colony, and all of them were confidently and enthusiastically looking to the future.

It is true that after the 200 families were first sent to this section they met with some unexpected and unavoidable difficulties. These difficulties were due to the sinking of a large supply ship loaded with necessities for the colony and to the fact that the strike in the lumber industry in the Northwestern States prevented immediate shipment of lumber to the colonists for the building of their permanent homes. These difficulties have now been overcome, and the colonists are busily building their permanent homes. All of them will be comfortably and substantially housed before winter weather commences.

It is also true that some few families have returned to the States. I found that these families were unfit either physically or by nature to carry on and that they lacked the qualities necessary to stand the acid test of frontier life.

I found that a community center is under construction which will provide hospital facilities, a trading center, and entertainment for the citizens of this community. Roads are being constructed to connect the various stations of the settlement, and a large number of wells have been sunk which provide pure water.

The Matanuska Valley is located about 125 miles in a direct line from the southern coast of Alaska and about 40 miles from Anchorage, which is on the west coast. I am told that owing to the close proximity of this region to the warm Japan current in the Pacific Ocean, the climate is comparatively mild and ranges in temperature from 85° above to 20° below zero. The unusually long days during the growing period tend to cause crops to yield abundantly, and the total annual rainfall ranges from 12 to 20 inches.

The fertility of the soil in the Matanuska Valley has been amply demonstrated by the agricultural university, which conducts an experimental farm near the center of the valley, as well as by actual crops produced by earlier settlers in the valley. The surface soil is a black loamy clay, ranging from 20 inches to 15 feet, and is very fertile.

The native timber is mainly spruce, which is ideal for building log houses, many of which have already been built in a very substantial and attractive manner. The roots of the timber lay close to the surface, which makes the clearing of land very easy, and at a cost of about $65 per acre.

The valley is suitable for most any kind of farming—dairying, mutton, and pork. Vegetables and most grains are very productive. Berries yield in abundance. Poultry raising should be profitable.

I found that oats yield from 50 to 90 bushels per acre; barley, 25 to 40 bushels per acre; and spring wheat, from 25 to 45 bushels per acre.

While I was in the valley gardens were flourishing and the vegetables grown in this section have no parallel in any part of the States. The production of cabbage is seldom equaled in any region. The quality of the cabbage grown in the valley is excellent, and heads weighing as much as 35 pounds each are grown.

I am fully convinced that the Matanuska Valley can support a large number of settlers. They can make easy disposition of their products, and it is estimated that there is a market for a million and a quarter of food products alone.

I share with the citizens of the Matanuska Valley colony their spirit of optimism, and I congratulate and commend the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in making possible to these citizens a happy and substantial future.

POTATO-CONTROL BILL

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Speaker, the growing tendency to regiment the farmers of America through a system of crop-production control is becoming more and more apparent. Already 14 basic farm commodities have been subjected to Federal regulation and supervision. The potato is the latest farm product to be placed under Federal control of production. When and where this policy or system of regimentation will end no one can determine. The number and variety of crops being brought under governmental authority is continually increasing. This fact greatly disturbs thoughtful farmers. They can readily see in the continued expansion of this policy a time, not distant, when a farmer will not be permitted to plant what and how much he may desire without first obtaining the consent of a governmental agency. In the past American farmers have enjoyed freedom of action. Government control of crop production restricts, curtails, and rescinds this long-established American principle.

The plan to control production of potatoes, as provided by the Senate amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act, is neither fair nor just to the vast majority of growers who raise potatoes on their farms or in truck gardens.

This legislation was sought by the large commercial potato growers. The hearings conducted by the committee revealed that there are but a comparatively few thousand of such, located in a few counties in a small number of States, as against approximately 4,000,000 farmers, located in every county and State, who plant potatoes and sell them as occasion may require or as the result of the yield may determine. No national farm organization sought the enactment of this law in its present form. It was opposed by many who spoke in behalf of the great body of farmers who are not classed as commercial growers. It is a commercial growers' measure. To benefit this small class, millions of other farmers are regulated, supervised, and controlled in the growing of one of the most used of all vegetables.

The plan, as provided in the bill, is far more drastic than all previous crop production control measures in that it is compulsory and not voluntary. Other measures affecting basic crops generally require the consent of a certain percentage of the growers before the plan becomes effective. Potato control is effective without such consent first having been obtained. It does, however, provide a referendum, after the first year of its operation, as to whether it shall be continued. But even this provision is unfair to the small general farmer in providing that every producer is entitled to one vote for every 60 pounds of potatoes apportioned to him during the preceding allotment year. In other words, to perpetuate their special privileges, a few producers, a few counties, a few localities in a few States which now produce a high percentage of the whole crop will be allowed to vote by bushel and not per capita. This is a system based on property or production suffrage and not individual suffrage. If you produce 20,000 bushels of potatoes, you get 20,000 votes. The intention is, of course, to destroy any influence the small potato growers might have in determining the future course of the act and to continue the subjection of the small grower.

The hearings showed that last year nearly one-fourth of the potatoes that were shipped in carload lots came from the State of Maine and that the greater part of that crop came from one county. Under the plan of voting provided by the terms of this bill, it will be possible for that one county, together with a few more large producing counties in other States, to control protato production in the entire United States. Nothing could be more unfair or inequitable. Men, not bushels, should vote. The effect of the bill is to give immediately to a few counties a preferred status in the enjoyment of the potato business in this country. Never again, as long as this bill remains the law of the land, can 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 American farmers raise or sell potatoes without restraint, even in a small way in their own small communities, or trade them for the necessities of life. They will be continually subject to Government regulation and the will of a few large potato-producing counties of the Nation.

A further study of the bill reveals such a vast number of details to be complied with or severe penalties to be incurred, all of which have been designed to make control of production effective, that no one can doubt that the farmer who desires to grow potatoes hereafter is regimented beyond any possibility of free or individual action.

Every farmer who seeks to raise potatoes must procure a permit and a production allotment or quota from the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington. The amount he will be privileged to raise will be based upon the amount previously raised on that particular farm over a fixed period of years. For every bushel sold in excess of this allotment he will be required to pay a tax of 45 cents. Such a tax is prohibitive. It was meant to be so. It was fixed at an amount that would make it impossible for anyone to profitably grow any potatoes in excess of his fixed quota.

The bill does provide a so-called "exemption", but it is a misnomer in fact, because the language of the bill allows no exemption unless the farm produces less than 300 pounds of potatoes. In case of any farm for which average sales are 300 pounds or less, then such average sales shall be exempt from any percentage reduction and the farm shall receive an apportionment equal to such average sales. This small allotment of 300 pounds or less is allowed free of taxation. But even if this exemption is granted such small grower, before sale, is required to put his potatoes into expensive packages and to get exempt stamps and attach the stamps to the packages and comply with other intricate rules and regulations.

As a matter of fact no exemption is granted to any individual farmer, but only to the farm. It goes with the farm and not with the farmer. This is also true of all other allotments or quotas given by the Secretary of Agriculture even to the largest. It attaches to the farm and no farmer can remove from the particular farm and take with him to another farm the allotment made to the previous farm. The effect of the bill is to freeze potato production to designated farms and fixed amounts. No tenant could move on to a farm and raise potatoes unless that farm possessed through the owner a potato allotment already in effect. Nor could the son, daughter, or wife of any farmer raise any potatoes, even in a small garden patch, unless there was a production allotment that permitted the same.

Why has no sustantial exemption been made for the small potato grower? Why is less consideration given to him than to the grower of cotton or to the man who raises hogs? The values of exemptions allowed in all other allotment bills are substantial in amount and might run up to hundreds of dollars. The value of 300 pounds of potatoes is negligible. There is all through this bill an evident intent to protect the large commercial grower. This explains many of the unusual features to be found in this and no other production-control measure.

The affidavits to be taken and the proofs to be submitted before an allotment is made, or a quota received, the details to be complied with in operating under the allotment, the questions to be answered, the books and records to be kept, the reports to be made, and the innumerable requirements to be fulfilled, before the farmer is free and clear of the severe penalties provided, make for the average farmer an almost impossible barrier to be overcome. Many will give up in disgust. All of which will be to the benefit of the few large commercial growers.

The bill is extremely interesting in its endeavor to preclude any possibility of bootlegging potatoes. All through the hearings are expressions that indicate a fear that many farmers will refuse to be bound by what some term "un-American principles", and will be inclined to raise and sell potatoes as free men. To prevent this, or, at least, reduce it to a minimum, the most intricate of details are required to be complied with, and penalties are provided which, in some instances, are even more severe than were adopted to prevent the bootlegging of intoxicating liquor during prohibition.

Every individual farmer selling or trading in potatoes will be required to put all potatoes into packages of the kind and character fixed by rules and regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and affix such stamps and tags upon them as shall be designated by the Secretary. Even as to the 5 bushels of so-called "free allotment" allowed by a generous Government it will be necessary to purchase packages for them, if sold, and to secure and put exempt stamps on all such packages. The effect of all this trouble and red tape will be to take the small and limited growers out of the market.

The penalties that have been provided are almost unbelievable in their severity. Every farmer who grows potatoes, even though not sold, will be required to make returns, render statements, give information, and keep such records as the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary. Failure to do so may be punished by a fine of $1,000, or 1 year in jail, or both. A similar fine is provided for any person who offers to sell potatoes not properly packaged, or offers to sell potatoes in packages not properly stamped. These same penalties apply to the person who buys or even offers to buy any such potatoes. Never in all the days of prohibition was any penalty provided for the person who bought intoxicating liquors. It applied only to the one who sold. This statute, however, works both ways in its effort to stop bootlegging of potatoes. A fine may be imposed for failure to destroy stamps on packages, or for placing potatoes in a package which has been previously used or stamped without first destroying the stamps formerly used. The number and variety of fines makes possible a method of drastic enforcement seldom, if ever, exceeded.

Already can be heard the voice of discontent raised against this new effort to restrict, curtail, and deny the use of land for the purposes to which it has been adapted. Nor can there be any sufficient justification for a course that denies to the farmers of America the right to utilize their land in the production of this great common food product, when millions of pounds of potatoes are being imported into this country from foreign countries to compete in our markets with our own domestic-grown potatoes.

It would be far more helpful to farmer and consumer if the Secretary of Agriculture and the Department under him would give attention to devising ways and means of reducing the wide spread in price between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays. If this should be accomplished, proposals similar to that contained in the present bill would be unnecessary.

During the past year the consumer in the city of Washington has paid 2½ to 3 cents per pound for potatoes, amounting to $1.50 or $1.80 per bushel At the same time farmers in many instances have not received a price that would cover the cost of production. The middleman benefits by the low price paid to the farmer and the high price charged to the consumer. It is this condition that should receive the earnest and thoughtful attention of the Secretary of Agriculture.

A method should be sought that will bring producer and consumer closer together to the mutual advantage of each. It may be done by cooperative marketing agreements, limitation of middleman profits, or otherwise; but by all means a remedy should be sought to take the place of the un-American method of production control provided for in this bill.

A system or policy that regiments American farmers into a production-control program and makes them liable to severe penalties upon failure to comply with each and every rule and regulation set up in a bureau at Washington, and fills the land with thousands of snoopers, additional agents, and employees at an estimated cost of $12,000,000 the first year, not including cost of enforcement and prosecutions, is unreasonable and unjust.

The solution of the problem can and must be found in the application of established American principles.

H. R. 6472—BLOCK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, as the present session of Congress is coming to a close without action on H. R. 6472, a bill to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling" in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce, I am making this statement for the information of the proponents of the bill and the industry with reference to its legislative position and its general purposes and objectives.

This bill is pending before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, of which I am a member. A similar bill has been introduced by Senator NEELY, of West Virginia. Somewhat similar bills have been introduced by Congressman CULKIN, of New York; Congressman KELLER, of Illinois; and Congressman OWEN, of Georgia.

In the tremendous pressure of work before the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee during the session now closing it was impossible to secure hearings on these bills. Over the recess of Congress they retain their legislative status, and at the January session every effort will be made to secure hearings before the committee, with a view toward having the same reported favorably for action by the Congress.

These pending bills differ somewhat one from the other. As the sponsor of H. R. 6472, I wish to make it plain that I am not committed to its exact phraseology, and if, as a result of suggestions made at the hearings, the bill can be improved I shall welcome amendments. I would not be frank, however, if I did not say that I doubt whether Congress is prepared at this time to enact a strictly censorship bill. It is my belief that for the present at least we ought not to undertake to go much beyond the objectives set forth in H. R. 6472. This is not a censorship bill. It is limited to preventing the movement in interstate commerce of films leased to the trade under the practices of block booking and blind selling, and to prevent monopolistic practices in the industry. It is anticipated, of course, that if the bill becomes law it will result indirectly and effectively in contributing toward the showing of better and cleaner films. This is for the reason that the local exhibitor, reflecting the views of his constituents, will be able to secure films desired by his patrons, and will not be under compulsion to show films not desired by them. I have a profound belief that with the right of free selection the American public will demand better films than they have been seeing during the past 10 years. This bill will, therefore, enable their wishes to be made effective.

H. R. 6472, introduced by me, was prepared by representatives of the Motion Picture Research Council, aided by suggestions from many other sources.

Fundamentally, we all recognize the truth of Abraham Lincoln's saying that "in a democracy public opinion is everything. Without it nothing can succeed and with it nothing can fail. He, therefore, who influences public opinion tends to write or repeal the statutes of the Nation." The same thought was also expressed by Brand Whitlock, former ambassador to Belgium, in the profound saying that "law is whatever the public backs up." We lean upon a frail reed when we rely on statutes only.

I pay my tribute, therefore, to the unofficial organizations such as the Catholic Legion of Decency and many other groups reflecting the best ideals of Protestants and Jews in developing a better public opinion with reference to motion pictures. What they do is what is important. What we as legislators do is simply to implement and make effective the work of organizations such as these. Nor do I overlook the official and unofficial action of State and municipal governments. The States, however, under the Federal Constitution have no control over interstate commerce and Federal legislation affecting interstate commerce of motion-picture films seems necessary to supplement the work of these other organizations.

H. R. 6472 either specifically or with respect to its objectives has been endorsed by the following among many others: American Association of University Women, Knights of Columbus, Catholic Central Verein (national association of German-American Catholics), Catholic Order of Foresters, National Committee on Education by Radio, National Council of Catholic Women, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Motion Picture Research Council, American Federation of Teachers, National Council of Women for Home Missions, Editorial Council of the Religious Press, National Education Association, National W. C. T. U., Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Among prominent individuals who have given it their endorsement are Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, former president of Harvard University; Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt; Daniel L. Marsh, president Boston University; Carl Taylor Compton, president Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Ada Comstock, president of Radcliffe College; Rear Admiral William S. Sims, United States Navy; Carleton Washburne, vice president of the Progressive Education Association, and hundreds of others equally prominent.

Dr. Lowell in his endorsement says:

> Being unable to see that the practices of block booking and blind selling have any object except that of supporting a monopoly and obliging exhibitors to use films which, for moral or other reasons they do not desire to exhibit, I am wholly in favor of restraining these practices, so far as they come into interstate commerce by act of Congress; and the bill H. R. 6472, now pending, seems to me well adapted for the purpose.

A particularly effective statement of the purposes sought to be accomplished by this legislation was made by Walter Lippman on January 12, 1935, as follows:

> Effective reform depends, it seems to me, on a clear understanding of what, given the American traditions of freedom and the variety of American tastes and American moral standards, reform ought to aim at. I would rest reform of the movies on this basic principle: That audiences shall have greater freedom to choose their pictures and that artists and producers shall have greater freedom to make pictures. Within the obvious limits of the ordinary law about obscenity and provocation to crime, the best regulation would be that exercise by the customers at the box office of a theater. The best way to improve the movies would be to open the door to intense competition by independent and experimenting producers.
>
> If the customers had freedom of choice, each community would be able to enforce the moral standards it believes in. Each exhibitor would have to take the business risk of estimating correctly the tastes of his customers, and educators, dramatic critics, moral leaders in each community would be able to exert effectively whatever influence they can command. This is the system under which theaters, books, magazines, and newspapers operate, and it is not an unsatisfactory system. Anyone who can find a little capital can produce what he chooses. But then he has to submit his production to the test of circulation. The highbrow and the lowbrow, the libertine and the Puritan, tend to find their own audiences.
>
> Now this is not the system under which the movies operate. Among them the control of the means of production is concentrated in a few giant corporations; the means of distribution are monopolized in part by direct ownership of strategic theaters and for the rest by monopolistic contracts known in the trade as "block booking" and "blind selling." In substance, they mean that a local theater owner must rent his pictures in large blocks sight unseen. As a result he has no real choice as to what he will exhibit. The result of that is that his customers can exercise no real choice.
>
> The effect of this monopolistic system is to pile up great profits based on an immense volume of sales. To keep up the volume the producers must therefore manufacture films designed to suit the largest common denominator in the public taste, and that is likely, on the average, to be a low denominator. At the same time, the existence of these large profits is a direct incentive to extravagance; this has brought about an inflation of salaries, production costs, and overhead which make it almost as difficult for an independent to make pictures as for you or me to build another transcontinental railroad.
>
> Thus there is in motion pictures an artificial but effective impediment to the production of films for relatively small but cultivated audiences. Yet it is from these audiences in the theater, in book, magazine, and newspaper publishing, that the forces are generated which conserve, refine, and elevate the public taste. The movies have neither the benefit of this kind of competition nor are they subject to the kind of pressure which it exerts in other popular arts. The lack of competition from independent, experimental, and occasionally first rate enterprises, the sterilizing effect of monopoly, can be seen among the writers in Hollywood. How many writers of any distinction have the movies found and developed? Are there any? Is it not the fact that Hollywood lives by drawing to itself authors who have made their mark first in the legitimate theater or in writing book and magazine fiction? Except perhaps for the cameramen and some of the technical directors, Hollywood is an artistic parasite living upon the talents evoked in the healthier open competition of the older arts.

If this is the truth, then the remedy for the undeniably low condition of the movies is not to impose standards on the existing monopolistic corporations, but by invoking the antitrust laws and perhaps new legislation to break their power. It is not so much regulation as it is emancipation that the movies need. For the evils of the movies come not from too much liberty for the giants but from the destruction of real liberty by the giants.

There are two underlying reasons why it should be enacted.

First. Thousands of our local communities have no control over what is shown on the moving-picture screens in their neighborhoods.

Second. The monopolistic practices attacked in the bill not only oppress legitimate small business enterprise but also stifle the free development of one of the great arts of modern times.

This bill is one of the very important measures that will come before Congress next session. It is the result of years of investigation and agitation. The members of the House will probably be subjected to the fiercest as well as to the most subtle kind of pressure on the part of the big producers, a group which has unlimited resources and great powers of publicity at its disposal.

The proponents of this bill represent the inarticulate boy and girl who sit entranced before the screen, watching with bated breath the exaggerated caricatures which are often spread before their believing eyes as portrayals of real life.

It is therefore highly important that we carefully examine the basic conditions which cry out for the enactment of this legislation.

It has been carefully estimated that 77,000,000 persons attend the movies every week in the United States, and that more than one-third of these are minors.

The power of the screen, however, lies not in the total of its myriad of audiences but in the powerful effect the moving picture has on the individual who sees it. An authoritative study of the effect of motion pictures on children known as the "Payne fund studies", carried on from 1929 to 1933 by 16 well-known psychologists, sociologists, and educators, under the direction of Dr. W. W. Charters, of Ohio State University, and published in nine volumes by the MacMillan Co., shows that the attitudes, health, emotions, behavior, patterns, conduct, and social philosophy of children are greatly affected by motion pictures.

Attitudes: It was found that motion pictures dealing with racial questions profoundly influenced the attitudes of children. By repeated exhibitions of such pictures as the Birth of a Nation and All Quiet on the Western Front, preconceived ideas about the Negro question and war were changed or modified.

Health: Studies of a controlled group of children showed that movie attendance in the evening may be very disturbing to their sleep, having an effect like the drinking of 2 cups of coffee in the evening.

Emotions: It was found further that the effect of pictures of horror and violence on young children was frequently so great that for a time they were transported out of their normal conduct and completely subjugated by their impulses. Children live over again for weeks, months, and sometimes even longer scenes of horror witnessed in the movies. During the adolescent period emotional reactions leading to serious delinquency have been linked to erotic scenes witnessed in the movies. Much testimony to this effect has been gathered in these volumes from delinquent girls and boys in reformatories.

Behavior patterns: The motion picture is an extremely powerful medium for imparting information. Children and adolescents learn from Hollywood pictures how to make love, how to dress, how to behave, and how to misbehave. With young children reenactment of motion-picture scenes in play is a common matter of observation by every teacher and parent.

Conduct: With older children techniques of behavior learned from the screen include methods of committing crime. In 115 pictures selected at random in the theater of a midwestern city 59 pictures showed homicide or attempted homicide. Techniques of committing other crimes are numerous and concretely portrayed, such as how to open a safe by the feel of the dial, how to force an automobile door with a piece of pipe, putting burglar alarms out of commission, and so forth. Studies made in high-delinquency areas show a direct correlation between movie attendance, truancy, and delinquency. The constant portrayal of crime scenes plants thoughts in the minds of children predisposed to delinquency which later lead to delinquent and criminal careers.

Social philosophy: Children get warped views of life from the movies. They see money easily acquired without hard work; luxury displayed as if it were the common right of all; constant drinking scenes and frequent drinking to excess. The Payne fund studies and Father Daniel A. Lord's analysis of 133 motion pictures show a large percentage of crime pictures give many instances of vice made attractive, the double standard, adultery, and other violations of moral standards. Steeped in this weekly diet of crime, low moral standards, and distorted views of life, the youth of the land are having their characters formed.

The network through which the products of Hollywood and other places are circulated is vast, complex, and well organized. Distribution is almost as necessary a part of the present motion-picture industry as production or exhibition. There are 32 distributing centers in the United States. In many of these each one of the so-called "big eight" producers, Columbia, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, R. K. O., United Artists, Universal, and Warner-First National, maintain agencies. These agencies or exchanges distribute the films to the exhibiting theaters in their area according to a schedule which allows their maximum use. Distribution is made both to the affiliated theaters—those controlled by a producing company—and to the independent theaters—those which have no such affiliation. Although the number of theaters in operation varies from time to time, a recent estimate places it at 12,500 for 1933. The Darrow report, published in 1934, states that there are 18,300 theaters in the country, and that of these, 13,500, or more than three-fourths, are independent of the big producer-distributor chains.

The independents are usually the smaller theaters (35 percent of the theaters of this country are located in towns of less than 2,000 population). The large metropolitan first-run houses are usually producer owned or controlled. In the case of an independent the films to which he is entitled are only those for which he has previously contracted with the home office of the distributing company. Although he arranges details of dates, and so forth, with the exchange center, he is bound to take all the pictures he has personally contracted for.

Here is the root of the evil. It is alleged that it is a common practice that when these contracts are made (some time between May and September of each year) the independent exhibitors are forced to take all or a substantial block of a company's product, or else be offered none. This is known as "compulsory block booking." It is full line forcing of one company's output. The restrictive effect is immediate.

For instance, a certain independent exhibitor perhaps changes his pictures twice a week. Thus he can show 104 pictures a year on his screen. Three blocks of 34 each would fill his theater for the entire year. If he wants a particularly good picture, he must take many inferior ones with it. Furthermore, the information furnished him about the picture which then, of course, is not even in existence, is of such a scanty nature, sometimes consisting only of a number, that he can exercise only the slightest judgment as to the character of the picture. The contract is thus made in ignorance of the picture's character. This practice is known as "blind selling."

These two trade practices virtually rob the local theater man of any discretion—and he has to show pictures which he knows his community does not want to see. I do not mean to suggest that theater managers are philanthropists. As a rule they are only occasionally ready to sacrifice their profit for the benefit of the community and to put on the shelf some picture which they have already paid for. However, it is obvious that they would prefer to be able to please their community if they could, and this is not possible under the present system.

Mr. Speaker, the practice of compulsory block booking and blind selling destroys the normal selective process of good taste in any community. The manager cannot choose to suit his patrons and local control is reduced to a shadow. Today the only things that are possible are either the crude limitations of a local government censor or, under the recent dispensation which has been granted us by the overlords of American entertainment since July 15, a protest of a well-organized local group which must see the picture first or the spasmodic effect of an organized boycott.

Recently we have seen a distinct improvement in the type of picture due to the organized boycott threatened by the Legion of Decency and other groups. A national censor has been installed in Hollywood. But he may be withdrawn at any time that his salary does not pay. If he is, we may soon be back to the days of the 1933–34 season. As you know, the Chicago council of the legion classified many pictures last summer into three grades—A, B, and C. The Legion of Decency classification summary published on November 9, 1934, and covering lists of the previous 4 months, shows that a surprisingly large number were produced by the big companies in the category of "indecent, immoral, and unfit for public entertainment"—class C—as compared with those which were "unobjectionable and suitable for public entertainment"—class A. A table has been furnished me of the 1933–34 pictures contained in that list of November 9. I shall read first the name of the company, then the number of class A, or "unobjectionable" pictures for that company, and then the number of class C, or "indecent" pictures, without mentioning any intermediate group—class B.

	Class A, unobjectionable, and suitable for public entertainment	Class C, indecent, immoral, and unfit for public entertainment
Columbia	14	1
Fox	11	3
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer	7	7
Paramount	9	6
Radio-Keith-Orpheum	6	4
Universal	9	6
Warner-First National	3	11

So much for the lack of local control and the results we have experienced under it.

I need say only a word about the dangers of a trade monopoly. Essentially they can be boiled down to (1) suppression of legitimate enterprise, and (2) an inferior product to the consumer.

Compulsory block booking accomplishes both. The independent theater owner is shoved aside by the affiliated chains. The movie audience has to take what is served up to it—good, bad, and indifferent. It cannot choose. The waste of an industry in the form of worthless pictures is forced into the eyes and ears of a victimized public instead of being discarded by the producers and written off as the loss it actually is.

To this wrong there is added another. The development of the art itself is restricted. Unless a producer has a large block of pictures to sell, he is at a great disadvantage in competition with the producer who has such a block. Thus on the production end, pioneering in creative work is limited to the large studios, and on the exhibition end the cream of the year's work, whether by little or big producer, must be mixed with skimmed milk, if, indeed, it is shown at all. The net result is that the creative work of one of the greatest forms of modern entertainment is forced to grow like a plant without enough light and air.

For these reasons I have introduced this bill, which invokes the Federal power over interstate commerce.

Section 1 briefly states its purpose.

Section 2 defines its terms.

Section 3 defines and outlaws compulsory block booking.

Section 4 prohibits blind selling and requires a synopsis.

Section 5 provides for enforcement in the Federal district courts by penalty and for injunctive relief.

Sections 6 and 7, respectively, provide for constitutionality of separate provisions and postpone the taking effect of the act for 12 months.

I wish particularly to call your attention to the portion of section 4 which provides not only for an outline of the story but for a statement of the manner of treatment. It is, I think, the considered opinion of many who have been close to this problem that the important thing about a picture is not so much the subject matter but the way in which it is handled. Thus Hamlet and Macbeth are classics, though they deal with revenge and murder. The social value of a play is determined by the way in which its subjects are treated—whether, for instance, it makes vice attractive, crime honorable, or license justified. Accordingly I have included a provision that the description of the film must state the manner in which certain subjects are treated.

If enacted, this bill will release the normal selective processes of good taste all over the country. Above all, it will do so in harmony with American traditions which call for (1) local control over neighborhood conditions affecting customs, morals, and conduct, and (2) a fair chance for small independent enterprise; and which abhor Federal censorship of news or entertainment.

In closing, I particularly wish to express my appreciation to my colleague, Hon. F. D. CULKIN, of New York, and call attention to his remarks on this subject in a recent issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

I attach copy of the bill, as follows:

A bill to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as "compulsory blockbooking" and "blind selling" in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce

Be it enacted, etc., That the methods of distribution of motion-picture films in commerce whereby (a) exhibitors are required to lease all or a specified number of an offered group of films in order to obtain any individual desired film or films in the group, a trade practice sometimes known as "compulsory blockbooking", and (b) films are leased before they are produced and without opportunity for the exhibitor to ascertain the content of such films, a trade practice sometimes known as "blind selling", are hereby declared to be contrary to public policy in that such practices interfere with the free and informed selection of films on the part of exhibitors and to prevent the people of the several States and the local communities thereof from influencing such selection in the best interests of the public, and tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films. The Congress finds and declares that such methods and practices adversely affect and constitute a burden upon commerce, and it is the purpose of this act to prohibit and to prevent such methods and practices in commerce.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of this act, unless the context otherwise requires—

(1) The term "motion-picture film" or "film" means all motion-picture films (whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted), including positive and negative prints, and copies or reproductions of such prints, which films contain photoplays or other subjects and are produced for public exhibition: Provided, That the term shall not include films commonly known as "news reels" or other films containing picturizations of news events.

(2) The term "to lease" includes the making of a license agreement, contract, or any type of agreement whereby a film, the distribution of which is controlled by one of the parties, is to be supplied to and exhibited in a theater owned, controlled, or operated by the other party.

(3) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint-stock company, trust, or corporation.

(4) The term "distributor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the distribution of motion-picture films.

(5) The term "exhibitor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the exhibition of motion-picture films.

(6) The term "commerce" means commerce between any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State, Territory, or the District of Columbia but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or the District of Columbia.

For the purposes of this act (but in nowise limiting the definition of commerce) a transaction in respect of any film shall be considered to be in commerce if the film is part of that current of commerce usual in the motion-picture industry whereby films are produced in one State, leased for exhibition in other States, and distributed to them through local exchanges in the several States, the films circulating from the exchanges and between the various exhibitors. Films normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this act. For the purpose of this paragraph the word "State" includes Territory, the District of Columbia, and foreign country.

SEC. 3. (1) It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group only and to require the exhibitor to lease all such films or permit him to lease none; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which total or lump-sum price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation (a) as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition, or (b) as tends to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any number or numbers thereof, or (c) that the effect of the lease or offer to lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in any other manner or by any other means the effect of which would be to defeat the purpose of this act.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported in commerce any motion-picture film which is leased, or intended to be leased, in violation of subdivision (1) of this section.

SEC. 4. It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition any motion-picture film over 2,000 feet in length unless such distributor shall furnish the exhibitor, at or before the time of making such lease or offer to lease, a complete and true synopsis of the contents of such film. Such synopsis shall be made a part of the lease and shall include (a) an outline of the story, incidents, and scenes depicted or to be depicted, and (b) a statement describing the manner of treatment of dialogs concerning and scenes depicting vice, crime, or suggestive of sexual passion. It is the purpose of this section to make available to the exhibitor sufficient information concerning the contents of the film and the manner of treatment to enable him to determine whether he desires to select the film for exhibition and later to determine whether the film is fairly described by the synopsis.

If a motion-picture film which has been leased in commerce is substantially different from the synopsis hereinabove required, whether in respect of the outline or the manner of treatment, the exhibitor may cancel the lease as to such film without liability for breach of contract and may recover all damages suffered by him because of such difference, or he may retain the lease and recover damages as for a breach of warranty.

SEC. 5. (1) Every person who violates section 3, or who fails to furnish the synopsis required by section 4, or knowingly makes any false statement in such synopsis, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

(2) The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition, setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition, the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition, and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any such proceeding may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not, and subpenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

SEC. 6. If any provision of this act is declared unconstitutional, or the applicability thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and the applicability of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 7. This act shall become effective 12 months after its enactment.

PAYMENT OF ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES TO VETERANS

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, as briefly as possible, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I desire to discuss H. R. 2860, my bill to provide for the issuance of notes in payment of the face value of the adjusted-service certificates to veterans. I do this because of my sincere desire to have this matter settled once for all, in order that it may no longer be used as a political football. I prepared this bill during the Seventy-third Congress, but did not introduce it because I did not want to be accused of muddying the water, and I thought it barely possible some bill settling the bonus question would be passed. In January of the Seventy-fourth Congress I introduced the bill. At that time the Patman bill and the Vinson bill were being considered by the House. After introducing the bill I appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee and made a statement before them, which said statement can be found on page 169 of their hearing of March 4 and 5, 1935. As all bonus bills, except for the method of payment, are practically the same, I shall only discuss those paragraphs of my bill where a change is made, and which should be called to the attention of the country and the veterans. As all of us know who are familiar with this subject, and who have followed it from the beginning, when the law providing for adjusted-service certificates was passed in 1925, the law provided for $1 per day for home service, not to exceed $500, and $1.25 for overseas service, not to exceed $625. Due to the fact that the war ended on November 11, 1918, or about 6 years before the adjusted-service-certificate law was passed, 25 percent of the amount due the ex-service man was added to the amount due him.

There is now, in round figures, about $2,000,000,000 due the ex-service men on adjusted-service certificates issued. That sum matures in 1945. The thought therefore occurred to me, as interest was paid from the end of the war up to the time the certificate was issued, and interest has been calculated on same up to 1945, the only way to settle this question equitably, both to the ex-service men and the taxpayers of the country, would be upon a discount basis. Of course, you understand the exact amount of the discount to be deducted cannot be determined, but I have carefully worked on this, beginning with a 2-percent discount up to a 12-percent discount, and I had reached the conclusion that a 10-percent discount would be fair to everyone, and that these certificates should be paid now and on that basis. I reached this conclusion because the ex-service men will get their money now instead of 1945, less 10 percent, and the use of this money until 1945 will offset this discount. This proposal is contained in my bill, section 509 (a), as follows:

The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized and directed to pay, in veterans' Treasury notes as hereinafter provided, to any veteran to whom an adjusted-service certificate has been issued, upon application by him and surrender of his certificate and all rights thereunder (with or without the consent of the beneficiary thereof), the amount of the face value of the certificate as computed in accordance with section 501, less a deduction of 10 percent of such amount for the payment of all necessary clerical, administrative, or other expenses of the Treasury Department, the Veterans' Administration, or any other agency of the United States Government incurred in engraving, issuing, or distributing, or connected with the redemption of, such notes.

Section 512 provides for the manner of payment, as follows:

Payment of the face value of the adjusted-service certificates under section 509 or 510 shall be made in veterans' Treasury notes. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue such notes to the extent required to make such payments. Such notes shall be printed in the same size as Federal Reserve notes, in denominations of $1, $5, $10, and $20, and in such form as the Secretary may prescribe. Such notes shall be obligations of the United States, and shall be redeemable in lawful money on January 1, 1945, or at any time prior to such date, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury. When countersigned by the veteran to whom issued under this act, in the presence of two witnesses, such notes shall be a lawful circulating medium, and shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and when so received shall be reissued. Such notes, when held by any national banking association or member bank of the Federal Reserve System, may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve up to 100 percent of their face value. The term "obligation or other security of the United States" as used in section 147 of the Criminal Code, as amended (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 261), shall be deemed to include veterans' Treasury notes issued under this act. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to provide for the withdrawal of such notes from the Treasury and their issuance in making payments pursuant to the provisions of this act.

To this section I intend to propose an amendment as follows:

There shall be printed on the veterans' Treasury notes the following: "These notes are in exchange for the outstanding adjusted-service certificates, and shall be redeemed by the Government on or before 1945."

I am adding this amendment in order that it will clearly be shown there will be no inflation of the currency, but the effect will be rather the opposite, for by 1945 these obligations will be redeemed and the indebtedness of the country will be reduced by $2,000,000,000. However, even if some should consider this inflation, which I do not so consider it, the plan which I have proposed should be adopted, for, as I have just stated, it will reduce the indebtedness and at the same time add no additional expense to the taxpayers. If my colleagues will look into the matter, they will find we have 5,467 national banks—that is, of December 31, 1934—and in those banks of that date there was $21,676,303,000. We also have 10,472 banks on that date with a deposit of $26,739,459,000—or a total of over $47,000,000,000. My information is that these deposits have been increased several billions of dollars during the past 16 months. I, therefore, am satisfied I can state, without fear of successful controversy, that the $2,000,000,000 payment in full of the adjusted-service certificates by Federal Treasury notes can and will be absorbed by the banks of our country, and will not in the least affect our monetary system.

Also, as section 512 provides that any national bank or member of the Federal Reserve System having these notes on deposit or in their possession shall be permitted to count same as a part of its lawful reserves up to 100 percent of their face value, no bank will hesitate to accept the veterans' notes. As these notes are held by ex-service men throughout the country, and as the notes will be legal tender in payment of taxes and all purposes, in addition to the ability of the banks to absorb the notes, local merchants can use them as a medium of exchange, and thereby aid in the absorption of the notes.

I desire also to call your attention to section 514 of the bill, which specifically states that beginning 1 year after the date of enactment of this bill these notes shall be redeemed in amounts of not less than $200,000,000 in each year, with the exception that if during any year a lesser amount is outstanding or presented for redemption or the President finds and by proclamation declares that such an emergency exists that it is in the public interest to redeem a lesser amount which he shall fix.

You can, therefore, see by 1945 the $2,000,000,000 will have been retired and, as stated to you above, our indebtedness will be reduced $2,000,000,000. Personally, I think this is the best feature of the bill, for I have always contended during my public career of 20 years that the only way for the Government to get out of debt was to pay outstanding obligations.

If the bill is not accepted, or some bill along the same line is not accepted, in 1945 we will still owe $2,000,000,000; bonds will have to be issued, and the interest on these bonds at maturity will equal or perhaps exceed the $2,000,000,000 of indebtedness—without any benefit to the ex-service men. As practically everybody pays taxes, either directly or indirectly—for whenever we purchase anything the tax is added—either the ex-service man, his relatives, or his friends will eventually pay the $2,000,000,000 interest for which they receive nothing.

I have always been the friend of the ex-service man, and I sincerely trust my attitude in introducing this bill will not be misunderstood, nor I hope will I be misunderstood when I state I shall hesitate a long time before I can bring myself to put an additional indebtedness of $2,000,000,000 for interest on our citizenship, for already the tax burden is more than they can bear.

I feel satisfied that the sensible, sincere ex-service man will agree with me on this attitude. Unless my plan is followed or some plan somewhat similar is followed, within the next 10 years they will realize to the fullest extent their error and realize I was right in the conclusion I have reached. I doubt if there is a business man who has not at some time discounted a debt due him over 25 percent or more, if he felt at the time of discount the cash would be of more benefit to him than to wait the maturity of the debt for his money. I sincerely believe the ex-service man has reached the conclusion that the 10 percent suggested in my bill is fair and just, and that all, or at least a majority of them, will not complain if the bill becomes a law. During times like these, when there is suffering throughout the land, I am firmly convinced the payment of the adjusted-service certificates at the present time on a discount basis of 10 percent will relieve suffering and will keep many of those brave boys, who fought for their country during the World War, off the relief rolls.

In conclusion may I state I have not gone into this as fully as I would like to, for I realize only an explanation of the bill can be made, and each ex-service man must reach his own conclusion. It is for him to work out the details and decide whether or not he approves the bill.

I have talked with many ex-service men, bankers, and business men, and I have yet to find the first to object to H. R. 2860. In fact, several of my banker friends say it is the best proposal they have had submitted, for it does justice to the ex-service man and, by retiring $2,000,000,000 of adjusted-service certificates without additional taxes, it does justice to the citizenship of our country also.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I prepared this bill with the honest and sincere hope that the adjusted-service certificate question could be put behind us. I have never asked an ex-service man to vote for me because of anything that I might have done for him, because I can never repay him for what he did for me, mine, and our country.

The adjusted-service question has been a football of politics ever since the war ended. The House has passed a bonus bill and the Senate refused to act. The Senate fearlessly passed the bonus bill and the House, because of lack of time, did not act. The Senate and the House have passed a bill which the President vetoed, and it could not be passed over his veto. Personally I am tired of making this a political football, either to my advantage or to my disadvantage. I want it settled and settled right. I want the boys, during these times, to have money with which they can make payments on their homes and get off of relief rolls.

I believe the Government can do as I have suggested. I have simply brought these suggestions to my colleagues so that you as business men—and I know you as such—will pass the bill or take such of merit as there may be in the bill and incorporate in some other bill. I have no pride of authorship, but I will say to you that there are several reasons why I believe that the bill should be passed.

First. The use of the money, if received now, will offset the discount. In other words, the ex-service men getting the money now and having the use of it for 9 or 10 years, that will offset the 10 percent discount.

Second. The discount works to the advantage of the Government. It is to their advantage to pay the certificates now, saving of interest, printing of bonds, and so forth.

Third. The bill does not add one cent of cost to the Government, but is a saving to the Government.

Fourth. The bill will not cost either the ex-service man or any citizen of our country one cent in the form of a direct or indirect tax.

Fifth. While I must admit that it is one form of inflation, it is so drawn as to make the inflation harmless, as the same can and will be absorbed by the banks and local communities.

Sixth. The bill provided for the retirement of the bonus certificates in an orderly, businesslike manner, so that in 1945 the Government will have retired the full amount of the adjusted-service certificates and no bond issue will be necessary.

Seventh. While no one can speak for the President or the administration, I sincerely believe if H. R. 2860 is enacted into law, it will not be vetoed by the President, because it meets every objection the administration has raised to bonus bills.

Unfortunately, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion are divided over the best plan to settle the bonus question. It should be immaterial to anyone as to who killed cock robin. What we all desire is a settlement of this question once and for all, and the pride of authorship of any bill settling this should be the last thing to be considered by any person or any organization. Only the most equitable plan both for the ex-service men and the taxpayers should be considered. I therefore sincerely trust and believe the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion may smooth out all differences. Let us all work together for the good of all.

A HUMANITARIAN PROGRAM FOR THE AGED, UNEMPLOYED, AND HELPLESS

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, there is a wide-spread interest in my district and State in the social-security legislation passed during the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress which has become a law through the signature of President Roosevelt.

During the consideration of this humanitarian measure in the House of Representatives it was my pleasure and responsibility to speak in behalf of the program which will be of real benefit to the aged, unemployed, and helpless.

Desiring to be of every assistance to my people, I have had compiled in a most understandable manner the provisions of this act, which I hereby include, believing that correct information on this subject should be available now.

OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS TO AGED INDIVIDUALS

What it does: Gives a monthly payment to those who qualify and who are 65 to 70 years of age or older when the plan begins to operate.

The State is to create a plan setting some age between 65 and 70 at which the assistance is to start.

Payments: The amount is to be fixed by the State plan, and can be any amount, but will probably be approximately $30 a month.

Those who qualify: You must have reached the age set by the State plan; and

Also you must have lived in the State a total of at least 5 years in the 9 years before making application; and

Further, you must have lived in the State continuously for at least 1 year immediately before making application; and

You must also meet other requirements which may be set by the State plan.

Inmates of public institutions cannot qualify.

When and where to make application: When the State adopts a plan providing for old-age assistance, and when the plan is approved by the Federal Government.

You may make application at certain places to be fixed later.

UNEMPLOYMENT-COMPENSATION PAYMENTS IN CASE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

What it does: If you lose your job, you will receive money for a certain number of weeks while you are out of work, subject to certain conditions to be fixed by a plan to be created by the State.

Payments: The State plan will fix the amount of the payments and the number of weeks they will continue after you lose your job. Some States have enacted or are considering plans which pay about one-half of the previous weekly pay for from 10 to 12 weeks, or until you get a new job within that time.

Those who qualify: Employees of employers who have 8 or more employees working on 20 different days in the year, each day being in a different week, except:

Agricultural employees.

Domestic employees in private homes.

Employees on a vessel sailing on the waters of the United States.

Those in the employ of their son, daughter, husband, or wife, and a son or daughter under age 21 in the employ of his father or mother.

Federal, State, city, or township employees.

Employees of charitable organizations.

When the plan starts: No unemployment compensation will be made until 2 years after the date an approved State plan starts to require contributions from employers, except in those States which now have plans working.

For example: If a State plan is approved by the Federal Government before January 1, 1936, which requires contributions to start on that day, only unemployment occurring on or after January 1, 1938, would be considered. If the State plan should start later, compensation would not be considered until 2 years later.

Tax on employers: All employers of individuals coming under "Those Who Qualify", must on January 1, 1936, start paying the following tax on the total wages paid to his employees, whether or not a State plan has been approved.

One percent for the year of 1936.

Two percent for the year of 1937.

Three percent thereafter.

Certain credits against the Federal tax may be allowed for unemployment taxes paid under State plans and for certain good employment records.

Safeguards to employees: Employers cannot make any deductions from wages paid to his employees on account of this tax.

Unemployment payments shall not be refused an individual for not accepting new work:

If the position offered is vacant due to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute.

If the wages, hours, or other conditions of the new work are substantially less favorable than those prevailing for similar work in the locality.

If, as a condition of employment on new work, you would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.

DEPENDENT CHILDREN—PAYMENTS TO ASSIST NEEDY DEPENDENT CHILDREN

What it does: Gives monthly payments for the support of needy children (under age 16) who have been deprived of the support of one or both parents, and who are living with either parent, stepparent, grandfather, grandmother, brother or stepbrother, sister or stepsister, uncle or aunt.

The State is to create a plan under which the payments will be made.

Payments: The amount is to be fixed by the State plan and can be any amount, but will probably be approximately $18 a month for one child and $12 for each additional child in the same household.

Those who qualify: Children who have lived at least 1 year in the State immediately before making application; and

Who were born within the State 1 year immediately preceding the application, if the mother had resided in the State at least 1 year immediately preceding the birth.

When to make application: When the State adopts a plan providing for assistance to dependent children; and

When the plan is approved by the Federal Government.

You may make application at certain places to be fixed later.

MATERNAL AND CHILD WELFARE, MEDICAL AND HEALTH AND VOCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

What it does:

Section 1. Promotes better health for mothers and children.

Section 2. Health assistance for crippled children.

Section 3. Protection and care of homeless, dependent, and neglected children and the protection of children who are in danger of becoming delinquents.

Section 4. Vocational training of the physically disabled and assistance in obtaining industrial employment for them.

The service: A State health agency will be established to render the services listed above and will be in accordance with a State plan to be created by the State.

When it starts: As soon as the State creates a plan and it is approved by the Federal Government the plan for each section will begin to operate.

Certain places in the State will be established where the service will be rendered.

PUBLIC-HEALTH SERVICE—ASSISTS STATES IN PUBLIC-HEALTH SERVICE

What it does: Makes grants and assistance to States, counties, health districts, or other political subdivisions of the States to help in establishing and maintaining adequate public-health services, including the training of personnel for health-service work.

When it starts: When plans are submitted by the health authorities of the States and the plan approved by the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service.

AID TO THE BLIND—PAYMENTS TO NEEDY BLIND INDIVIDUALS

What it does: Gives a monthly payment to those needy blind individuals who qualify after a State plan has been created and approved.

Payments: The amount is to be fixed by the State plan and can be any amount, but will probably be approximately $30 a month.

Those who qualify: You must have lived in the State a total of at least 5 years in the 9 years before making application; and

Further, you must have lived in the State continuously for at least 1 year before making application; and

You must also meet other requirements which may be set by the State plan.

Inmates of public institutions and those receiving old-age assistance under the Social Security Act cannot qualify.

When and where to make application: When the State adopts a plan providing for aid to the blind and when the plan is approved by the Federal Government.

You may make application at certain places to be fixed later.

OLD-AGE BENEFITS—PENSIONS TO THOSE WHO BECOME AGED IN THE FUTURE

What it does: Makes monthly payments for life to those who qualify and who are 65 years old or older on January 1, 1942, or become 65 years old after January 1, 1942.

Amount of payments: If you are a qualified individual, you will receive up to $85 a month, depending on the total of your admissible wages for the time between December 31, 1936, and January 1, 1942, or when you become 65 years old after that date.

Qualified individuals: If you are older than 65 on January 1, 1942; or

If you become 65 years old on or after January 1, 1942; and, in addition,

If the total of your admissible wages during this time is at least $2,000; and also

If you have worked at least 1 day in each year of any 5 years of the above periods.

Admissible wages: Includes cash, plus the cash value of things given you instead of cash (such as lodging, food, fuel, stocks, and bonds, etc.) paid to you after December 31, 1936. Admissible wages include the first $3,000 of yearly wages.

No credit is to be given for wages earned in employment outside of the United States; or as Agricultural labor.

Domestic service in a private home.

Casual labor not in the course of the employer's trade or business.

Officer or member of the crew of a vessel sailing under the laws of the United States or a foreign country.

Employee of the Federal Government, a State, or political subdivision of a State.

Employee of a charitable organization.

Payments to those who do not qualify for payments: If, on or after January 1, 1942, you are 65 years old or older and you are not a "qualified individual", you will receive 3½ percent of the total of your "admissible wages" received after December 31, 1936.

Death before beginning to receive payments: If, after December 31, 1936, you should die your family will receive 3½ percent of your total "admissible wages" up to the time of your death.

Death while receiving payments: If, after January 1, 1942, while you are receiving payments you should die, your family will receive 3½ percent of the total "admissible wages" paid to you from December 31, 1936, to age 65 less the total amount of payments received by you up to the time of your death.

Restrictions: For each month or part thereof you receive "admissible wages" after age 65 there will be deducted from the old-age benefits payable to such "qualified individual" an amount equal to 1 month's payment.

You cannot sell, assign, or transfer old-age benefits, nor can they be taken from you by any process of law.

Tax on employee (to be deducted from wage payments by employers and paid over to the Government): Starting with January 1, 1937, an employee shall pay a tax on his "admissible wages" as follows:

One percent for years of 1937, 1938, and 1939.

One and one-half percent for the years of 1940, 1941, and 1942.

Two percent for the years of 1943, 1944, and 1945.

Two and one-half percent for the years of 1946, 1947, and 1948.

Three percent for years after 1948.

Tax on employers: Starting with January 1, 1937, each employer shall pay a tax on "admissible wages" paid to his employees.

The tax is the same as the tax to be paid by employees and has the effect of matching the employees' tax or contribution.

OLD-AGE BENEFITS—SCHEDULE OF PAYMENTS AND TAXES

Schedule of payments: The amount of the monthly payments is based on the following scale for "qualified individuals":

One-half of 1 percent for the first $3,000 of total "admissible wages", plus

One-twelfth of 1 percent for the next $4,200 of total "admissible wages."

One twenty-fourth of 1 percent for all above $4,500 of total "admissible wages."

Example

If you are now 40 years old and if your wages should average $1,200 yearly until you become 65 years old, you would receive the following monthly payments for life, beginning at age 65:

Total "admissible wages", $1,200 for 25 years	$30,000.00
One-half of 1 percent of $3,000 per month	15.00
One-twelfth of 1 percent of $27,000 do	22.50
Total payments for life	37.50

Your contribution taxes to be paid to the Government, which means to your savings for old age, would be as follows:

For the years of—	Total
1937, 1938, and 1939, $12 yearly	$36
1940, 1941, and 1942, $18 yearly	54
1943, 1944, and 1945, $24 yearly	72
1946, 1947, and 1948, $30 yearly	90
	252
For the years thereafter (up to the time you become age 65 in 1961), $36 yearly	468
Total contribution	720

Your employer pays contributions to the Government equal to yours.

THE REPUBLICAN POSITION ON BANKING AND CURRENCY LEGISLATION

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Speaker, I shall take this opportunity of summarizing the position of the Republican minority on legislation emanating during the past session of Congress from the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives. This committee held hearings almost steadily throughout the whole session, and as a result four major bills were reported out, in the following chronological order:

First. The extension of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Second. The enlargement of the activities of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Third. The Banking Act of 1935.

Fourth. The "gold clause" bill.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION EXTENSION

(Approved Jan. 31, 1935)

This measure was necessitated chiefly by the fact that the activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had been limited by law to January 31, 1935, so if no further action by Congress were taken, the Corporation could make no further loans or extensions of existing loans beyond that date.

The most important element in the bill was an extension to February 1, 1937, of the right of the Corporation to exercise its manifold functions. In addition it was provided that 10-year instead of 5-year loans might be made; greater latitude was given to assist in railroad reorganizations; authority was given to subscribe to stock in national mortgage associations; the provisions for loans to industry were broadened; and the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation and of the Export-Import Bank were lengthened.

The chief purposes of this bill were noncontroversial, and the Republican minority was glad to join in its passage.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION AMENDMENTS

(Approved May 28, 1935)

This measure contained various amendments to the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, the Home Owners' Loan Act, and the National Housing Act, chief among which were the liberalization of the provisions governing the discounting of mortgages at the home-loan banks; the right to lend to nonmembers on mortgages insured under the Housing Act; the extension for 30 days beyond the date of the new act of the time in which application for relief under the Home Owners' Loan Act could be made; an increase of one and three-quarters billions in funds available for the purchase of mortgages under the same act; the extension of the right of insurance under section 2 of the Housing Act to loans up to $50,000 in a broad class of cases; and provisions making easier the organization of national mortgage associations.

There was little controversy over the salient features of this measure, except with respect to the date to which the right to make new applications for Home Owners' Loan Corporation assistance should be extended, and the amount of additional money to be made available for such assistance. In this the Republican minority was glad to follow the recommendations of the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and joined in the perfecting of legislation which had proved so helpful to hundreds of thousands of distressed home owners. We opposed, however, the inclusion in the bill of various provisions tending to decrease the efficiency of the Corporation by placing the selection of its employees on a basis of local political control.

THE BANKING ACT OF 1935

(Approved Aug. 23, 1935)

The most important legislation to come before the committee, and perhaps the most important considered by the Congress at this session was the so-called "Banking Act of 1935." This consisted of three parts: Title I, putting into effect the permanent insurance of the deposits of banks in place of the temporary plan established by the 1933 Banking Act; title III, containing many changes in the Federal banking laws; and, sandwiched in between these two titles, title II, containing highly controversial changes in the Federal Reserve System.

When this bill was first introduced it was announced that it bore the approval of a joint committee representing the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Treasury, the Comptroller, and the Federal Reserve Board, but it soon became manifest that the guiding spirit behind title II was the newly appointed Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, Marriner S. Eccles, a man with no training in central banking, but with revolutionary views on the functions of the Federal Reserve System. While hearings were still being held by the committee, Mr. Eccles presented an almost completely rewritten title II, and it was forced through the committee by administration pressure over strenuous minority objections.

This amended title II was opposed by almost all who were familiar with the proper functioning of the Federal Reserve System, and by those who understood the danger of subjecting the banking system of the country to political control. It made the Federal Reserve Board more subservient to the administration than under existing law; it gave the Board greater control over the management of the Federal Reserve banks; and it granted the Board vastly increased powers over the credit supply of the country. Worst of all, it placed in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board the right to compel the Federal Reserve banks to participate in open-market operations, thus giving the administration, working through the Board, the dangerous power of assisting the financing of its program through the use of the reserves of the thousands of Federal Reserve member banks of the country.

These provisions were bitterly fought on the floor of the House by the minority, which stood almost to a man against them, both on a motion to recommit to eliminate the objectionable provisions, and on final passage when the motion to recommit failed. It was impossible, however, to withstand the steam-roller tactics of the majority, and the bill passed the House in almost exactly the form which Governor Eccles, purporting to speak for the President, had demanded.

Later the Senate changed the bill materially, to elminate or modify greatly all of the matters to which the minority had objected, and the conference approved most of these changes. It was essential that other provisions of the bill should become effective as soon as possible, particularly those with reference to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, so although title II, as it came from conference, was far from perfect, the most dangerous provisions had been obviated, and the Republican minority joined in the vote on final passage of the conference report, feeling they had won their battle to protect the Federal Reserve System from another usurpation of power of the kind which has so signally marked the present administration.

THE "GOLD CLAUSE" BILL

(Approved Aug. 27, 1935)

One of the most outrageous examples of proposed new-deal legislation was the so-called "gold clause" bill, which should rightly have been called the "repudiation bill." This was introduced at the request of the administration as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court in the gold-clause cases to the effect that Congress had exceeded its constitutional powers in declaring void the gold clause in Government obligations. The Court had said, however, in the Perry case, that there could be no recovery because no damage was shown, intimating that, if damage had been proved, there would be recovery. The President followed this decision with a message to the Congress suggesting that the right to sue the Government to recover more than the face value of the obligation be withdrawn. The President asked, in other words, that since Congress had been unable to take away the right because the Constitution protected it, it should take away the remedy.

The administration bill, however, as introduced, not only would have accomplished what the President suggested but would have removed all right to sue on any obligation of the Government for the repayment of money, thus outlawing even interpretative suits, and leaving the holder of a Government obligation at the arbitrary mercy of the bureau in charge of disbursement. Such legislation would have abolished at one sweep a right at present granted by every civilized country to its subjects and granted to the citizens of this country for almost a century. It is hard to conceive of a more arbitrary, unnecessary, or revolutionary piece of legislation, and its passage might have had a serious effect on the credit of the United States.

The Republican minority opposed this bill in vain both in committee and on the floor of the House, but it was much modified in the Senate. It was rewritten in conference so that it would not take effect until January 1, 1936, and after that date the withdrawal of the right to sue was limited to cases where claim was made for more than the face value of the obligation. In this form the bill finally passed, without a roll call, on the next to last day of the session.

SUMMARY

The Republican record on these measures shows a desire to cooperate in the adoption of sound and constructive legislation tending to assist recovery and ease the effects of the depression. It shows equally strenuous opposition to legislation tending to wreck the Federal Reserve System and injure Government credit.

MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL

Mr. WERNER. Mr. Speaker, from the standpoint of continental location, historic association, scenic interest, and accessibility, I regard the site of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, as the most symbolic and distinctively American that could be selected in the entire United States.

It is in the center of continental North America. It is also in the center of the great Louisiana Purchase. The figures of the distinguished presidents of the United States who have loomed large in the building of this great Nation are being carved on an elevation that is one of the highest points between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic seaboard, situated in one of the world's most beautiful scenic environments, and accessible from every point on the continent.

The territory in which it is situated has been dominated by three great nations, and over it have fluttered the flags of these nations before its purchase by the United States. The first of these was the Kingdom of France, under the Bourbon dynasty, with Louis XV claiming it by right of discovery; its subsequent cession by Spain to France as the Louisiana Territory, purchased from the Emperor Napoleon I during the presidency of the Republic by Thomas Jefferson.

It has been the history of civilization that as nations advanced in wealth, culture, and political domain they have been inspired to leave to posterity some great memorials of their achievements in progress.

The Pyramids and the Sphinx of Egypt, the temples of Greece and ancient Rome, the cathedrals of mediaeval European cities and the mysterious temples and pyramids of Mayan civilization in many of the Latin republics south of us testify to this urge of peoples and civilizations, that have long since passed away, to speak in the language of art, to posterity.

Here in South Dakota, one of the newest States of the Union, peopled by folk who were of the old pioneer strain and whose native forebears had advanced the course of empire from the shores of New England and the mountains of Virginia west to the Pacific coast, sought this as the last frontier for the work of their conquering spirit and inspired by the American tradition, gave conception to this wonderful memorial.

It was characteristic of them that they visioned to wrest from the cold granite of one of their most rugged mountains, by use of the sculptor's art and labor, colossal statues of men who were colossal in their work for the Nation.

Not mere desire for physical greatness alone created their inspiration, for they had the knowledge of perspective that is inherent in people of the mountains and prairies, hills and valleys, and they wanted to set these heroic figures so high that a passing world, through the ages to come, could not help but see—not the symbolism of size but the symbolism of the four great epochs, characterized by the four great men who had the initiative to adventure, administer, and consolidate what is now our United States.

And so without a great population or great wealth they set the incidents in motion that have led to the present development of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, and, with a sense that it is national, they feel, without apology, that all the people of the United States should share in the fulfillment of their great dream through the cooperation of the Nation itself in that financing which shall accomplish its completion.

With traditional American spirit, when the idea was born, the people of South Dakota sought a great sculptor, an artist engineer, if you please, that had the genius to give warmth to cold stone, and to chisel out of its enduring fabric the noble lineaments of Washington, the visioning spirit of Jefferson, the kindliness of Lincoln, and the aggressiveness of Roosevelt, endowing each with the expression of soul that made them great.

They found the man—Gutzon Borglum—a man whose sympathies and whose artistry would be an enduring inspiration to him while on the job.

Then came the task of finding the rock on which the figures were to be carved. After much labor, in which many places were rejected, Mount Rushmore was selected; first, because of its rugged prominence, commanding a perspective miles in area; next, because of the almost perfect quality of endurance of its fabric, a stone which seemed designed to lend itself to the artist and his assistants and destined to last with the ages. Lastly, because it had a long exposure on all sides each day to sunlight.

The next step taken was to legalize the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, which was done by the passage of an act of Congress, approved by President Coolidge March 4, 1925, which provided—

That the Mount Harney Memorial Association, hereafter to be created by the Legislature of South Dakota, is hereby authorized to carve a memorial in heroic figures, commemorative of our national history and progress, upon a suitable exposure of the Harney Mountain Range located within the boundaries of Harney National Forest in the State of South Dakota. Such association is further authorized to select the name, location, and design of such memorial, and that the United States be put to no expense in respect to such memorial, and that the Secretary of Agriculture finds that the location of the site will not interfere with the administration of the Harney National Forest.

This act was ratified by the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, which passed a bill with like provisions.

In January 1927 the Mount Harney Association was reorganized under the act of 1925. Finally, the Seventieth Congress passed an act creating the Mount Rushmore National Commission and defining its purposes and powers, which was approved February 25, 1929.

Under its provisions a commission was created consisting of 12 members, who shall be appointed by the President. The members shall serve at the pleasure of the President, who shall fill all vacancies that from time to time occur. The members shall serve without compensation.

The purpose of the commission is to complete the carving of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, to consist of heroic figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Roosevelt, and to landscape the contiguous grounds and construct the entrances thereto.

The commission was authorized to receive and take over all property, contracts, rights, and moneys possessed by the Mount Harney Memorial Association; to receive funds and pledges to cover the expenses of finishing such memorial; to pay out funds and to exercise such powers and functions as are necessary and proper to carry out the purposes of the act; that not more than one-half the cost of such memorial and landscaping shall be borne by the United States, and not to exceed $250,000 was authorized by the act to be appropriated for the purpose. It was also provided by the act that such commission, on or before the 1st day of December of each year, shall transmit to Congress a report of its activities and proceedings for the preceding year, including a full and complete statement of its receipts and expenditures.

Immediately thereafter the people of South Dakota and their friends raised by popular subscription cash and material donations approximating $70,500, and the work on the memorial went ahead.

The sculptor selected as the historical background to be symbolized in the heroic figures to be carved the men and events that embodied the beginning, expansion, preservation, and stupendous growth of the United States of America; Columbus, discoverer of America, while seeking trade routes to the Orient; Louis XV, king during the French explorations which added to France the Louisiana Territory; Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, who purchased while President the Louisiana Territory from Napoleon I, following negotiations by Robert R. Livingston, American Minister to France; Washington, founder-father of the Republic and its first President; Madison, father of the Constitution, through his "Virginia plan" and President when the Mississippi Basin was saved to the Union by the Battle of New Orleans; Lincoln, President, who preserved the Union through the Civil War; Roosevelt, President, under whom was completed the dream of Columbus, and the East and West united by the Panama Canal.

In this, too, is epitomized the admission of Texas, 1848; the acquisition of Oregon, 1849; the admission of California, 1865, when it was determined that the Union should stand as erected; and the cutting of the Panama Canal in 1904.

With such an heroic subject in mind the sculptor realized that there should be a scenic environment in keeping with the majesty of the memorial. I doubt if in the broad expanse of the United States a more ideal setting can be provided than Mount Rushmore, as the two completed figures—that of Washington and Jefferson—today demonstrate.

Rushmore Mountain, an outstanding peak of the Harney Range of the Black Hills of South Dakota, is an eye-compelling granite upthrust, having a sheer precipice of more than 300 feet, below which is approximately 300 more feet almost as precipitate. It commands a beautiful scenic view of deep valleys, rugged peaks, awe-inspiring gorges, and gentler pine-clad hills, with Mount Harney, whose elevation is over 7,000 feet, as a near neighbor. In fact, it is one of the most beautiful natural parks ever created by the hand of God for the edification of mankind.

Usually, when the hand of man supplements the hand of God, in an effort to enhance, artificially, the beauty of that which nature has already endowed, the result is sacrilege. But in this instance, I assure you the colossal figures that already adorn Mount Rushmore add to the majesty of Nature's work, and those who approach it subconsciously do so with the reverence of devotees to a shrine, so naturally do carving and scenic environment harmonize.

To make this memorial accessible the State of South Dakota has expended much money in the construction of roads of easy grade, following the contours of the valleys and the hills, and Mount Rushmore is now in easy access of every point in the country.

That the appeal of this great memorial is not merely parochial, but that it is the essence of America, in spirit, symbolism, and location, is evidenced by the address made by the late President Coolidge, who in the consecration ceremony, August 10, 1927, said:

The union of these four Presidents carved on the face of the everlasting hills of South Dakota will constitute a distinctly national monument. It will be decidedly American in its conception, in its magnitude and meaning, and altogether worthy of our country. No one can look upon it understandingly without realizing it as a picture of hope fulfilled.

Its location will be significant. Here in the heart of the continent, on the side of a mountain which probably no white man had ever beheld in the days of Washington, in territory which was acquired by the action of Jefferson, which remained an almost unbroken wilderness beyond the days of Lincoln, which was especially beloved by Roosevelt, the people of the future will see history and art combined to portray the spirit of patriotism. They will know that the figures of these Presidents have been placed here because by following the truth they build for territory. The fundamental principles which they represented have been wrought into the very being of our country. They are as steadfast as these ancient hills.

The people of South Dakota are taking the lead in the preparation of this memorial out of their meager resources because the American spirit is strong among them. Their effort and courage entitle them to the sympathy and support of private benefaction and the National Government.

I hold, with President Coolidge, that this is an American conception. I hold, too, that it will be a sad day in American affairs when the people no longer study the character of our great American leaders and their ideals. I can visualize in them, their characters and ideals, a symposium of the characters and the ideals of the millions of men and women, who in the 150 years of American history have wrought, suffered, sacrificed, and builded the great Nation that we know today.

As long as we study the lives of these four great leaders we will be inspired to new heights of patriotism to build this Nation into greater and nobler proportions because of the example and precepts they have set us.

As long as this memorial shall endure it will excite admiration for the historic figures which, completed, will be exposed to our view, and it will inculcate in us and our children and their children's children the determination to preserve and perpetuate the institutions which the lives of these leaders revealed and established.

Too, I hold that it is an inspiring thought that the people of South Dakota, of whom President Coolidge well said out of their meager resources started the work of building this great American shrine as a tribute to the truly great lives that have symbolized the life of America to this time, have laid the foundation for an inspiration to patriotism, not only for the present generation but for generations of all time.

Had not the vicissitudes of economic misfortune prevented, they would have gone ahead with the obligation they assumed on the organization of the Mount Harney Association. Our country is exceedingly fortunate to have the benefit of such inspired citizenship, for this would be a sordid land indeed had we no ideals, no visions, no urge to perpetuate the great in our history in some form of memorial.

In fact, the progress of our Republic has been advanced in the face of every obstacle by this American spirit, and it rests in this American spirit to produce through all the coming generations leaders who will be inspired by the lives of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Roosevelt.

What an inspiration it is to the American of today and the future to visit this shrine of patriotism, and on beholding the completed figure carved there practically the history of the Nation. To realize that the four great empires which were added to the Republic almost in a generation, Louisiana, Texas, California, Oregon, consolidated it into continental dimensions so as to permit its people to sweep from the Atlantic to the Pacific, building economically, socially, politically, and spiritually in their march following the course of destiny—the course of empire.

A people of the past carved the wonder of the ancient world, the great Sphinx of Egypt—and they reared their colossal pyramids as memorials to their great. In the popular mind the story is that they wrought their wonders with slave labor, using the brawn and brain of conquered peoples to erect their monuments, and that every one of these is a monument to the shedding of human blood, the sacrifice of human misery, and the immolation of whole races to glorify the gods of rapine and greed.

But this great monument, which dwarfs the memorials of a pagan age because of its colossal proportions, is a labor of love by men actuated by the ideals of our institutions and by laborers who are free—laborers who are worthy of their hire.

Each figure in the memorial group scales to the proportion of men 465 feet high, fading to the ledge on the waistline, the tops of the heads being upon the skyline, and all in the round—perfect in proportion and lifelike in expression. There is no mystery in the nobility of their several lineaments. The heads are over 60 feet high, and an average-sized man can stand upright in the nostril of each figure.

In describing the proportions of this monument, I do not do so with vainglory but with the idea that the proportions of our national heartbeats should be as great as the lives that our four great leaders symbolize. I believe, too, that the completed memorial will not be the heritage of the people of South Dakota alone to posterity but a heritage of inspiration that shall be passed on to the unborn from the patriotic largess of the people as a national heritage.

When we come to consider the expense in human blood and suffering involved in the erection of memorials in the ancient days, the years of toil of enslaved people and the years of rapine of inferior communities upon which toll was levied by conquering races for the completion of their monuments, we can realize the lofty idealism involved in the erection of this memorial in these enlightened times. Thus far the money expenditure for the memorial, considering its colossal size, has been very modest for the great progress made.

In asking from the people of the United States, through Congress and the President, authorization of an additional $200,000 for the completion of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial, we are but following what we consider a patriotic duty. To leave the monument unfinished I consider would be desecration of the memories of the two great men who would be effaced, Lincoln and Roosevelt.

Such authorization at this time would be in accord with the legislation that has been designed to reduce unemployment. The most of the money would be spent in wages for the laborers who are assisting in the work. In turn, their purchasing power would benefit the marginal farmers in the same territory who supply meat, vegetables, and dairy products to the workers.

It is meet and just that this great memorial, as originally designed, should be completed, as it will create, near the backbone of the Nation, the Rockies, and the heart of the continent, far removed from the crowded haunts of men, where man and nature are yet unspoiled, as imperishable as the rock out of which it is created, a monument that shall not be a memorial of the oppression of men, but one that shall extol the ideals of freedom, justice, truth, and through which American tradition and institutions endow all our citizens—a national shrine patriotism.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE MONONGAHELA NATIONAL FOREST IN WEST VIRGINIA

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, the Monongahela National Forest in Tucker, Preston, Grant, Pendleton, Randolph, and Pocahontas Counties in 1931 had an area of approximately 275,000 acres; extended in 1933 to include additional lands in some of these counties and the additional counties of Nicholas, Webster, Greenbrier, it now has a gross area of 1,705,110 acres and a net area of acquired or approved lands of 817,000 acres.

Agricultural, grazing, and other nonpurchaseable lands within the boundaries of the forest will approach one-half million acres, making a possible ultimate forest of about 1,200,000 acres.

During the years of 1933, 1934, and 1935 the presence of the national forest in central West Virginia has made possible the employment of a large number of men on Federal lands who would otherwise have received no employment. The examination and survey of lands during this period has given employment to the maximum of 125 men, practically all local. Men trained in survey work on this forest have been transferred to other States and received employment for approximately 1 year outside of West Virginia due to their training on the Monongahela Forest.

Because we have a national forest in central West Virginia, 15 C. C. C. camps, giving employment and training to 3,000 West Virginians, have been established. Engaged in the supervision of these young men are 145 men employed as camp superintendents, foremen, mechanics, machine operators, and technicians.

These men are employed at Federal expense in construction of improvements which benefit the central West Virginia counties, in many instances relieving the counties of the expense of construction and maintenance of roads necessary for the citizens of the forest area.

Aside from the employment furnished by the C. C. C. under the local program, provision has been made for the employment of 16 local experienced men in each camp, aggregating, for the 15 Monongahela National Forest camps, a total of 240 local men.

The presence of more than 3,000 men in these 15 camps has materially stimulated agriculture, the building trades, and retail business within the forest area.

Under the public-works program, more than 150 men are being employed in the forest in the construction of roads, recreational developments, and stream improvement.

Projects have been submitted which would furnish further employment for approximately 1,000 men.

Some have felt that the withdrawal of large areas of mountain land from the tax rolls of the counties might restrict materially the local revenue formerly derived from these lands when they were profitable timber-producing properties. As a matter of fact, many of these lands have ceased to produce revenue for the counties since the timber has been cut, the owners having allowed them to become delinquent for nonpayment of taxes. In many cases a large portion of the purchase price of these lands is paid to the counties in the redemption of delinquent lands, thus the counties receive the back taxes which would not otherwise have been collected.

The lands are put under protection, giving the hope of future revenue to the counties from the 35-percent funds allocated by the Forest Service in lieu of taxes. It is obvious that the protection and administration of lands, which would otherwise be nonproductive, by the Federal Government will increase the wealth of the counties concerned and provide a basis for future industries based on forest products.

The Forest Service Nursery, which has been expanded to produce annually 5,000,000 trees for planting on national-forest lands, is one of the important small industries of Tucker County. While this small industry furnishes full-time employment to only a few men, it furnishes part-time employment to as many as 80 men and women of Tucker County.

Tucker County is fortunate in having within its borders the only experimental forest area on the Monongahela National Forest. This project occupies approximately 5,000 acres on the waters of Elk Lick and has made material contributions to the employment of men from this county.

By the development of roads and recreational facilities, the Forest Service hopes to make available to tourists as well as home people the scenic values and recreational possibilities of Tucker County, and stands ready to cooperate with the people of the county in obtaining its just share of the benefits to be derived from the tourist business, which should be an important new industry in central West Virginia.

Although the virgin timber crop of the area now comprising the Monongahela National Forest has been harvested, the road systems being developed will make available a considerable amount of forest products which, when the demand develops, will be made available by sale under Forest Service regulations for the building up of new industries in the forest area.

The development of wildlife resources on a million-acre project in West Virginia is one which is commanding the best thought and planning of the State conservation commission. The Forest Service, in connection with the C. C. C. program, is offering every possible cooperation to the State conservation commission in the improvement of fishing streams and the betterment of wildlife conditions within the forest area.

Arthur A. Wood, supervisor of the forest, is doing a splendid work, ably assisted by a group of coworkers.

APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. BOLTON. Mr. Speaker, at the close of the last session of the Seventy-third Congress I inserted in the RECORD a review of appropriations and tabulations showing the enormous sums appropriated by that Congress and made available for expenditure by the executive branch of the Government. I commented on the dangers of the present administration's fiscal policy and the fact that the American people had a right to expect that campaign promises of economy and reduction in expenditures of Government be kept. Since that time there has been no change for the better in the fiscal policy of the administration. The requests for large appropriations have continued, and the amounts appropriated by the session just ending are likewise enormous. If anything, the situation is worse because of the fact that last year we heard some claims that the Budget would be balanced by 1937. At this time the balancing of the Budget appears to have been forgotten and the emphasis is on how to spend the money appropriated.

The present administration, in direct contradiction of the Democratic platform of 1932 and the promises of their candidate for the Presidency at that time, continues to add to the public debt at an alarming rate.

Bureaucracy is expanding and reaching its tentacles out further and further into private activities.

The cost of Government instead of decreasing as promised by the new-deal candidate in 1932 has risen alarmingly.

We find no attempt at meeting the promises of 1932 to effect a saving of 25 percent in Government expenditures.

Budget balancing is a forgotten art. It is only mentioned as a hope for the future. Deficit is piling upon deficit and they are reflected in the mounting of our national debt and the resulting carrying charges.

Apparently little thought is being given to the maintenance of our national credit. The Federal Government is still operating on borrowed money.

I am reminded of the statement of Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh in 1932, when he said:

> Now the credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income. And this is so of the Nation * * * if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing up to the limit of the people's power to pay, and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

That is good, sound philosophy, but on this, as on practically all other promises made to the American people by the Democratic standard-bearer in 1932, President Roosevelt has done an about-face and has ignored and forgotten what Candidate Roosevelt promised the voters.

A total of 563,000 civilian employees in the executive branch of the Government on March 1, 1933, had increased to 644,000 in April of 1934. As of July 31, 1935, the Civil Service Commission states there are 729,769 on the pay roll as reported to them. For instance, there are 21,500 more first-, second-, and third-class postmasters shown on Post Office Department records than on Civil Service Commission records. No doubt the actual total of employees on the Government rolls is considerably larger than the figure reported by the Commission. These figures are exclusive of the 469,000 in the Civilian Conservation Corps and of course do not include the enlisted personnel of the armed forces. In addition, these figures do not include agencies which do not report to the Civil Service Commission. This number has grown during the past 2 years.

It is estimated that more than 70 new boards, commissions, and other agencies have been created, although no one knows just how many because of the confusion and intricate machinery of the new deal. The result is inefficiency and overlapping of Government activities, bringing waste and extravagance. And it is well to remember that attempts to have the financial operations of these agencies subject to the audit of the General Accounting Office under the Comptroller General have failed, and they are operating without the safeguards applied to the regular Government establishments.

A year ago I called attention to the inconceivable total of $18,781,000,000 appropriated by the Seventy-third Congress for the new deal, in addition to $1,879,000,000 appropriated by the last session of the Seventy-second Congress for the fiscal year 1934, which was also at the disposal of the present administration, a grand total of $20,600,000,000 in appropriations. At the same time I listed figures in excess of $8,000,000,000 which I termed "contingent obligations." Some criticism was offered because of these figures. It was claimed that the statements did not represent a true picture of the actual situation and were misleading. May I state that at that time I referred, as I do now, to appropriations made by the legislative branch of the Government, which action is in accordance with the authority imposed upon Congress by the Constitution. This means designating funds of the Government for expenditure by the executive branch for purposes indicated in the appropriations and is the legal method of providing money for Government operations.

Consequently all funds placed at the disposal of the executive branch, whether for immediate expenditure or sometime in the future, very properly should be considered as appropriations and listed as such. The funds may legally be expended and must be ultimately paid for by the people when expended.

Some criticism was raised because in these tabulations there were included appropriations made through the R. F. C. While these appropriations may be repaid in whole or in part, they represent actual expenditures and as such are chargeable against the cost of operation of our Government.

Some disagreed with the use of the sum of $2,000,000,000 appropriated for a stabilization fund. In the statement of the Budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, there is found in the general-fund balance figures indicating receipts in the year 1934 of $2,811,375,000 as the "increment on gold resulting in reduction of the weight of the gold dollar." In the same table, under expenditures for the year, there is shown the sum of $2,000,000,000 for exchange stabilization, indicating quite clearly that this sum was charged as subject to expenditure, and consequently the result of definite appropriation. In this connection it is of interest to note that the difference, namely, $811,375,000, listed as increment on gold, was added to the total general-fund balance of the United States Treasury and as such is reflected as a credit against the deficit.

To those who question the correctness of using the figures termed " contingent obligations " I would point to the United States Treasury statements of the public debt issued periodically, wherein we find these items carried as contingent liabilities. There are already defaults on payments due the United States under these items, and in view of the fact that they are guaranteed by the Government they are, to that extent, actual liabilities and no longer contingent.

Another feature that it would be well to remember is the fact that the huge processing taxes collected under the Agricultural Adjustment Act and paid out as benefits to the farmers do not show in the tabulation of appropriations. The basic Agricultural Adjustment Act authorized the collection of such taxes and disbursement of the funds so collected at the discretion of the Executive without any further authority from Congress. The Budget message for the fiscal year 1936 indicates processing taxes collected in 1934 amounted to $353,000,000, while expenditures for that period were $290,000,000. In 1935 the collections were $589,000,000, with expenditures far in excess, totaling $788,000,000. The estimates for 1936 show anticipated collections from processing taxes of $570,000,000, with expenditures of $472,000,000. Attention is called to the fact that expenditures for the 3 years exceed the total receipts by approximately $40,000,000. This must be provided directly by the taxpayers, who, as consumers, also pay for all processing taxes.

Some realization of the enormous spending program under the present administration for the years 1934, 1935, and 1936 may be had from the following comparisons. From 1789 to and including 1913, during the first 124 years of its existence, the total expenditures of the Federal Government were $24,521,000,000. Appropriations for expenditure during the first 3 years of the present administration total $30,720,000,000. This latter figure also compares with the direct cost of American participation in the World War for fighting and demobilization, from 1917 to 1921, which was $26,250,000,000.

For the third year of the present administration there was appropriated by the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress about to adjourn $10,198,000,000, a 3-year total of $30,720,000,000, available for expenditure by the present administration. In addition, the accompanying table lists $9,400,000,000 of contingent obligations to which must be added numerous indefinite items. The Federal appropriations decried by Candidate Roosevelt in 1932 have been dwarfed into insignificance by the figures representing appropriations asked for by President Roosevelt in the years following.

Candidate Roosevelt talked often and long in 1932, claiming sincerity in his demands for a balanced Budget, maintenance of our national credit, strict economy, and elimination of deficits. President Roosevelt has not only put these statements aside but has entirely ignored the promises of Candidate Roosevelt and of the Democratic Party as contained in its platform. It must be admitted that there has been no bona fide attempt to balance the Budget or to reduce expenditures.

In 1932 Candidate Roosevelt said, with great emphasis, at Albany:

> Let us have courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits.

He was then speaking of a billion-dollar deficit. Now, in 1935, as President, he has, to use his own figures, created deficits during the first 3 years of his administration of approximately $13,000,000,000. At the end of the present fiscal year our national debt will have been increased by that amount, or from $22,000,000,000 at the time he took office to approximately thirty-five billions by June 30, 1936, according to Treasury estimates. Other estimates run as high as $40,000,000,000, which certainly is not out of line with the present rate of expenditures, with another session of this Congress to come, if expenditures are continued at the present rate and the lack of confidence in our governmental affairs continues to retard business activities and revenue possibilities.

While it is recognized that a large part of this huge deficit was for the purpose of recovery and relief, it is equally apparent that the general operations of Government continued at their ordinary rate, in fact increased. Apparently no attempt was made to transfer the cost of a part of these operations to the relief program; but the theory seemed accepted that increased operations of every sort, even to sweeping leaves from one side of the street to the other, could be carried on without damage to our country and our credit. Far too much emphasis has been placed on reform in our financial program, and recovery has been considered only of equal importance but not attempted with any determination for economy.

Let us compare this condition with the message of January 3, 1934, transmitting the Budget. In commenting on the Budget for that fiscal year, the President stated the total debt, if increased by the sum of $2,000,000,000 during the fiscal year 1935, which in his judgment would answer for relief purposes, would amount to approximately $31,834,000,000. In that message he said:

> It is my belief that, so far as we can make estimates with our present knowledge, the Government should seek to hold the total debt within this amount. Furthermore, the Government during the balance of this calendar year should plan to bring its 1936 expenditures, including recovery and relief, within the revenues expected in the fiscal year 1936.

Now let us refer to the Budget message of January 3, 1935, in which the President stated:

> In the Budget message of last year I said, speaking of the fiscal year 1936, that we should plan to have a definitely balanced Budget for the third year of recovery, and from that time on to seek a continued reduction of the national debt.
>
> Despite the substantial measure of recovery achieved since that statement was made, unemployment is still large.
>
> For this reason it is evident that we have not yet reached a point at which a complete balance of the Budget can be obtained. I am, however, submitting to the Congress a Budget for the fiscal year 1936 which balances except for expenditures to give work to the unemployed. If this Budget receives the approval of the Congress, the country will henceforth have the assurance that, with the single exception of this item, every current expenditure of whatever nature will be fully covered by our estimates of current receipts.

Further on in the message the President stated:

> The estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1936, as shown in the general Budget summary, total in round figures $8,520,000,000.

Compare this statement with the appropriations of $10,200,000,000 made by the last session of Congress for the fiscal year 1936, and bear in mind that there is still to follow another session of this Congress which will undoubtedly be requested to make additional appropriations for expenditure during the current fiscal year. Even though there have been repeated boasts of recovery being attained, it is apparent that the plans of the administration do not contemplate a balanced Budget as forecast a year ago.

History tells us that increasing the national debt is a consistent habit of the Democratic Party. A reduction of the national debt has always been left to the Republicans. There has never been a Democratic administration which can point to the reduction of our national debt as an accomplishment. Up to this time the administration has managed to obtain the necessary funds to cover its spendthrift program, as the Government, to a great extent, controls the banks of the country, and the banks in turn have large credits due to the fact that the new-deal policies are not conducive to putting that credit into productive channels. Until confidence has been restored and there is a demand from legitimate business for the use of this credit, it is apparent the Government can continue to utilize this reservoir of credit as a means of financing its obligations.

How long can this continue?

The administration has repudiated outstanding Government obligations by decreasing the gold content of the dollar. This in itself has broken down the faith of the investing public. Continued borrowings with no attempt to curb the rapidly increasing debt and Government expenditures are serving to further undermine the confidence of the people in Government credit. Of one thing I am certain—we cannot go on as we are indefinitely without seriously impairing our national credit to the extent of adversely affecting our entire economic situation. If we do not call a halt, there is only one answer—currency inflation, and suffering far beyond what we have known during this depression period.

The following comparison of appropriations for the first 3 years of the present administration shows conclusively the utter failure to carry out the promises made.

	Appropriations 2d sess., 72d Congress, and 1st sess., 73d Congress for year 1934	Appropriations 2d sess., 73d Congress, for year 1935	Appropriations 1st sess., 74th Congress, for year 1936
General:
Agriculture	[1] $100,209,091	$62,621,673	$125,157,983
Independent offices	631,802,546	588,574,714	777,501,956
District of Columbia	30,375,834	35,411,178	40,547,115
Interior	[1] 43,753,936	31,474,319	61,220,928
Legislative	[1] 16,689,285	25,075,995	20,746,760
Navy	[1] 308,669,562	284,658,799	458,684,379
Treasury	[1] 244,383,219	150,092,430	175,786,109
Post Office	[1] 713,033,378	669,628,940	727,849,569
State	[1] 12,196,519	13,885,618	14,013,895
Justice	[1] 41,154,050	28,700,778	34,556,500
Commerce	[1] 36,588,465	32,267,321	34,631,500
Labor	[1] 12,677,365	14,030,805	15,360,000
War	[1] 349,840,749	316,[2] 8,991	401,998,170
Total regular annual	2,541,373,999	2,252,651,561	2,888,054,864
Independent offices, annual—indefinite		190,000,000
Third deficiency, 1933	[2] 994,598
Fourth deficiency, 1933	[2] 3,082,630
Deficiency resolution—Legislative—Public Resolution No. 12, 73d Cong		213,500
Deficiency resolution—District of Columbia—Public Resolution No. 13, 73d Cong		26,667
Urgent deficiency resolution—Public Resolution No. 23, 73d Cong		335,000
Deficiency and supplemental, Public, No. 412, 73d Cong	4,099,153	11,543,545
First deficiency, 1935			112,633,830
Second deficiency, 1935			272,901,233
Ninth Pan American Conference—Public Resolution No. 42, 73d Cong		3,000
Fort Niagara Celebration—Public Resolution No. 50, 73d Cong		6,000
Miscellaneous and deficiency resolution, Public Resolu- No. 51, 73d Cong		121,000
Chinch-bug control, Public Resolution No. 30, 73d Cong		1,000,000
Interior—Duchesne County, Utah School (Indians) Public, No. 265, 74th Cong			50,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Public, No. 320, 74th Cong., eliminate diseased cattle (sec. 37), $10,000,000; agricultural adjustment and relief, 30 percent of customs duties (sec. 32) $86,913,739			96,913,739
Deficiency resolution, Public Resolution No. 3, 74th Cong			1,771,750
George Washington Bicentennial Commission, Public Resolution No. 6, 74th Cong			35,000
Federal Communications Commission, American Telephone & Telegraph Investigation, Public Resolution No. 8, 74th Cong			750,000
District of Columbia—Shrine Convention, Public Resolution No. 17, 74th Cong			54,000
District of Columbia, Grand Army of the Republic Encampment (Public Res. No. 40, 74th Cong.)			15,000
Total general	2,549,550,380	2,455,900,273	3,373,179,416
Emergency:
Public Works Administration (Public, No. 77, 73d Cong.)	3,300,000,000
Emergency Bank Act, (Public, No. 1, 73d Cong.)	2,000,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration (Public, No. 10, 73d Cong.)	100,000,000
Federal Savings & Loan Associations (Public, No. 77, 73d Cong.)	50,000,000
Federal land banks (Public, No. 77, 73d Cong.)	65,000,000
Farm Credit Administration (Public, No. 77, 73d Cong.)	42,000,000
Emergency—Continued.
Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (Public, No. 77, 73d Cong.)	$150,000,000
Gold Reserve Act (Public, No. 87, 73d Cong.)		$2,000,000,000
Federal Relief and Civil Works Administration (Public, No. 93, 73d Cong.)		950,000,000
Crop production loans (Public Res. No. 16, 73d Cong.)		40,000,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration (cattle) (Public, Res. No. 27, 73d Cong.)		150,000,000
Deficiency and supplemental (Public, No. 412, 73d Cong.)		1,808,270,000
Federal Reserve banks, payments to surplus—loans to industry (Public, No. 417, 73d Cong.)		139,299,557
Work relief (Public Res. No. 11, 74th Cong.)			[4] $4,000,000,000
Total emergency	3,709,000,000	5,087,569,557	4,000,000,000
Reconstruction Finance Corporation (see following table)	1,105,075,000	1,910,000,000	625,000,000
Permanent and indefinite	1,397,977,695	2,304,784,450	2,200,191,127
Total appropriations	8,761,603,075	11,758,254,280	10,198,370,543

[1] Passed last session Seventy-second Congress for fiscal year 1934.
[2] In later tables $972,323 apportioned in 1933; $22,275 in 1934.
[3] In later tables $755,720 apportioned in 1933; $2,326,910 in 1934.
[4] Plus $500,000,000 from Reconstruction Finance Corporation and $380,000,000 reappropriated.

Appropriations through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation

	Seventy-third Congress		Seventy-fourth Congress
	First session	Second session	First session
Farm Relief Act, 1933 (Public, No. 10):
Loans to—
Joint-stock land banks $100,000,000
Farmers 200,000,000
Drainage and irrigation districts 50,000,000
Advances to reclamation projects 5,000,000
	$355,000,000
Unemployment relief (Public, No. 15, 73d Cong.)	500,000,000
Securities Act, 1933, Corporation of Foreign Security Holders (Public, No. 22, 73d Cong.)	75,000
Loans to insurance companies (Public No. 35, 73d Cong.)	50,000,000
Home Owners' Loan Act, 1933, capital stock of corporation (Public, No. 43, 73d Cong.)	200,000,000
Increased authorization (Public, No. 84, 73d Cong.)		$850,000,000
Deficiency and Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1934 and 1935 (Public, No. 412, 73d Cong.):
Public Works Administration $500,000,000
Purchase of securities held by Public Works Administration 250,000,000
		750,000,000
Loans to industry (Public, No. 417, 73d Cong.)		300,000,000
National Housing Act (excluding unlimited and indefinite authority (Public, No. 479, 73d Cong.)		10,000,000
Work relief (Public Resolution No. 11, 74th Cong.)			$500,000,000
Loans to national mortgage associations (Public, No. 1, 74th Cong.)			100,000,000
Increase in loans to insurance companies (Public, No. 1, 74th Cong.)			25,000,000
Total	1,105,075,000	1,910,000,000	625,000,000

Contingent obligations guaranteed by the Government as issued

(Not included as appropriations)

Guaranty of farm-loan bonds (Public, No. 88, 73d Cong.)	$2,000,000,000
Guaranty of interest on farm-loan bonds (Public, No. 88, 73d Cong.)	(?)
Guaranty of home-loan bonds (Public, No. 178, 73d Cong.)	2,000,000,000
Guaranty of interest on home-loan bonds (Public, No. 178, 73d Cong.)	(?)

[See footnotes at end of table]

Contingent obligations guaranteed by the Government as issued— Continued
Repairs on mortgaged property covered by home-loan bonds (Public, No. 178, 73d Cong.)	$200,000,000
Increase in authority of Home Owners' Loan Corporation to issue bonds (Public, No. 479, 73d Cong.), also guaranteed as to principal and interest	1,000,000,000
National Housing Act (Public, No. 479, 73d Cong.):
Insurance on present mortgages	1,000,000,000
Insurance on new mortgages to be issued	1,000,000,000
Guaranty of interest on these mortgages	(?)
Guaranty of National Mortgage Association bonds	(?)
Guaranty of interest on National Mortgage Association bonds	(?)
Additional for repairs on mortgaged property	100,000,000
Insurance of financial institutions	200,000,000
Replacement of P. W. A. funds for which authorization has been given to divert to emergency purposes (Public, No. 412, 73d Cong.)	(?)
Increase in authority of Home Owners' Loan Corporation to issue bonds, also guaranteed as to principal and interest (Public, No. 76, 74th Cong.)	1,750,000,000
Additional for repairs on mortgaged property (Public, No. 76, 74th Cong.)	100,000,000
Tennessee Valley Act (Public, No. 412, 74th Cong.)	50,000,000
	9,400,000,000

To summarize, the new-deal candidate in 1932, by his acceptance of the Democratic platform 100 percent, and by his repeated statements thereafter during the campaign, promised—

(1) To eliminate bureaucracy.

(2) To reduce the cost of Government 25 percent.

(3) To balance the Federal Budget and avoid deficits.

(4) To maintain our national credit and a sound and stable currency.

(1) TO ELIMINATE BUREAUCRACY

This subject has already been touched upon, and it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that the increase in the number of agencies and the unwarranted and unheard-of increase in Government personnel is reflected in the appropriation figures shown above. New agencies are still being created, and the administration is still endeavoring to find ways and means to dominate private industry and dictate the activities of private citizens. During the session just closed we have witnessed the spectacle repeatedly of action by Congress at the dictation of the White House involving laws, the constitutionality of which is seriously questioned, and in some instances where competent authorities are practically unanimous in their opinion that the Supreme Court must declare the statutes to be unconstitutional, if and when the issue is raised.

We have not had orderly procedure but a frenzied effort at reform, dictated by a President and influenced by theories not born of practice, and suggested by those whose thought of reform is limited to the vision of the Utopia they are trying to bring about. There is more interference today with private activity and private business than ever before in the history of our country, and this is reflected in the uncertainty of those who would otherwise carry on, expand, and create employment.

(2) TO REDUCE THE COST OF GOVERNMENT 25 PERCENT

This promise is completely forgotten. At first it was argued that this promise applied only to the general activities of our Government, but a comparison of that subdivision of the accompanying tabulation will indicate that even with consolidation and transfer of the various activities the established departments of our Government continue to have increasing appropriations granted them, instead of a reduction of 25 percent as promised. Not only has the administration failed utterly to make any attempt to carry out a bona fide reduction in expenditures but there has been a desire to spend which is far beyond the comprehension or imagination of the people of this country heretofore.

Instead of a reduction of 25 percent, we find an increase of more than 10 percent in the regular annual appropriations made during the recent session of Congress, as compared with those for the fiscal year 1934. The increase over 1935 is more than 20 percent. Emergency expenditures are being made at approximately the same rate as during the past 2 years. There has been absolutely no bona fide effort to reduce Government expenditures or to protect the taxpayers.

(3) TO BALANCE THE FEDERAL BUDGET AND AVOID DEFICITS

Attention is called to the enormous totals carried by appropriation measures for the fiscal years 1934, 1935, and 1936, which amount to $8,761,000,000, $9,758,000,000, and $10,198,000,000, respectively, which show a steady increase in annual appropriations, and do not take into account the $2,000,000,000 appropriated under the Gold Reserve Act during the fiscal year 1935.

The general appropriations for the various governmental departments and agencies show an increase for the fiscal year 1936 of more than $800,000,000 over the total for 1934, and approximately $900,000,000 over the total for 1935.

As previously stated, a dual system of bookkeeping was set up to make it appear that Government expenditures would not be increased. Under this new scheme public works and other activities were transferred to a so-called "emergency budget", which was to be charged to the depression period and not considered in efforts to balance the Budget. Even this has failed in its purpose, since the so-called "general budget" shows a substantial increase in total appropriations for the regular agencies.

The tables appearing at the end of these remarks explain clearly that although regular appropriation measures for the fiscal year 1935 showed a slight decrease under the total for 1934, this was more than made up by allocations to the various departments from the public-works fund. No argument can substantiate any claim that public-works allotments to the departments did not supplement regular departmental activities. In fact, these allocations in many instances replaced items which were eliminated from the regular appropriation measures. The public will not be fooled by double bookkeeping. The taxpayer knows that whether appropriation figures are carried in one column or another they must be paid for.

The promise to stop the deficits is another link in the chain of broken promises. In 1932 the new-deal candidate was bewailing the fact that we were facing a deficit approximating $2,000,000,000. Since his incumbency in the White House we have not had a year when the deficit failed to reach $3,500,000,000 or more. The deficit for the fiscal year 1934 was $3,989,496,000, while the estimated deficit for the fiscal year 1935 was estimated at $4,869,418,000, and there is an anticipated deficit for the fiscal year 1936 of $4,528,508,000, as given in the Budget message of January 1935.

There has been no effort on the part of the administration to eliminate these deficits by enacting a tax program which will meet the expenditures of the Federal Government and which will place Federal finances on a sound basis. On the contrary, the Federal Government is today existing on borrowed capital, just as has been the case during the past 3 years of the new deal. We have no businesslike fiscal policy as was promised on so many occasions by the candidate of 1932.

(4) TO MAINTAIN OUR NATIONAL CREDIT AND A SOUND AND STABLE CURRENCY

In order to maintain national credit we must not only have a sound currency but must conduct the fiscal affairs of the Government in a manner which lends confidence in the financial policies, and which demonstrates beyond the question of a doubt that a bona fide attempt is being made at a balanced Budget and an effort being put forth to bring Government expenditures within its income.

No lending agency, even among those of the Federal Government has any sympathy or confidence in an applicant who is endeavoring to borrow and whose own affairs are not on a businesslike basis. To be eligible for consideration, a borrower must first show that he can bring this cost within his income and carry the expense involved without a net loss. The same situation applies to Government. Our deficits represent a net loss, and they are immediately reflected in a rapidly increasing national debt, which will, if we do not call a halt, soon reach a point where the interest and sinking-fund charges of the debt alone will approximate the total cost of Government at the time of the advent of the new deal.

The people of this country are becoming gradually more and more aware of the situation. It is not the custom of the American people to spend what they do not have. They do not want their Government to follow such an unsound policy. Unless some immediate attempt is made in good faith to check the spending orgy and to place our national affairs on a sound fiscal basis we will soon have reached a point where the American people will have every reason to be not only discouraged but alarmed. The Federal Government should set the example. Up to this time the only example which has been set by the new deal is one of confusion and uncertainty.

Important as is sound progress, we should not seek to let reform theories dominate national policies to the detriment of recovery. We must keep in mind that the basic principle of recovery from our national crisis is a sound financial policy embodying real economy in Government, the balancing of the Federal Budget by carrying on our governmental activities within our national income.

Summary of regular, deficiency, and special appropriations

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Agriculture	$306,673,811	$142,229,959	$566,040,887	$154,081,843	$644,500,000	$136,607,551	$800,000,000
Independent offices	1,022,876,324	1,238,235,987	3,376,594	1,930,546,714		964,407,029
New agencies		[1] 600,000,000	997,286,900	1,810,000,000	999,675,000	696,913,739	2,850,000,000
District of Columbia	41,257,564	30,718,674	1,759,500	35,447,845		41,401,156
Interior	69,387,945	44,048,302	202,341,012	35,500,801	1,500,000	77,970,429	213,306,831
Legislative	19,227,747	17,374,404	2,800,000	18,756,531		23,909,407
Navy	327,724,856	309,292,430	277,098,924	284,669,799		484,597,720
Treasury	380,598,015	511,451,590	94,740,653	2,289,513,357	162,595,000	301,451,240
Post Office	805,970,571	713,082,691	532,600	669,628,940		734,682,385
State	14,164,731	12,348,617	4,761,000	22,877,484		16,047,458
Justice	46,198,970	41,295,727	785,512	31,021,209		36,641,565
Commerce	45,510,045	36,669,700	15,652,600	32,723,511		34,737,951
Labor	13,576,010	14,204,945	2,268,980	14,030,805		15,703,047
War	458,067,930	350,946,458	362,352,923	316,400,991		433,108,739	136,693,169
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	3,551,234,519	4,061,899,487	2,531,798,090	7,645,199,830	1,808,270,000	3,998,179,416	4,000,000,000
Non-Federal and other allotments not carried in departmental tables			768,201,910
Total, Public Works			[2] 3,300,000,000
Permanent and indefinite	1,285,191,028	1,397,977,695		2,304,784,450		2,200,191,127
Add Public Works, supplemental and work relief		3,300,000,000		1,808,270,000		4,000,000,000
Grand total	4,836,425,547	[3] 8,759,877,182		11,753,254,280		10,198,370,543

[1] Does not include $3,300,000,000 Public Works appropriation covered in next column.
[2] This total could be shown under Public Works Administration in new agencies, but is broken down by departmental allocations instead.
[3] Includes $2,150 (2d Deficiency, 1933) not shown in previous table; does not include items (3d Deficiency, 1933, and 4th Deficiency, 1933) apportioned to 1933. (See footnotes 2 and 3 of previous table.)

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Secretary's office	$13,076,911	$12,754,854	$13,443	$11,225,567		$11,622,554
Weather Bureau	4,164,038	3,731,235	183,840	3,032,292		3,439,204
Animal Industry	12,283,622	11,358,964	1,611,240	8,802,787		11,313,419
Dairy Industry	717,448	655,130	262,420	559,862		636,179
Plant Industry	4,930,874	4,496,155	4,822,007	3,476,342		4,998,497
Forest Service	12,383,304	11,531,039	40,967,745	8,394,323		11,600,973
Chemistry and Soils	1,825,080	1,670,194	163,919	1,311,698		1,279,434
Entomology	2,471,700	2,213,968	2,386,535	3,130,536		[1] 7,801,421
Biological Survey	1,756,177	1,356,280	976,050	1,054,084		1,421,492
Public Roads	100,000,000	35,000,000	[2] 412,696,000	8,000,000	[3] $119,500,000	51,059,256	[4] $300,000,000
Forest Roads	8,905,000	4,457,400				7,082,600
Agricultural Engineering	518,690	411,810	281,538	350,318		423,269
Agricultural Economics	6,649,841	6,095,260		4,916,031		5,724,801
Home Economics	233,365	212,749	1,200	178,701		193,485
Plant Quarantine	2,490,125	2,158,514	(1)	(1)		(1)
Grain Futures Act	218,838	200,000		181,498		196,500
Food and Drug Administration	1,716,167	1,589,505	70,000	1,557,713		1,968,637
Miscellaneous	1,330,485	316,034		4,060,255		396,262
Experiment Stations			4,950
Farm Credit Administration			101,600,000	2,389,665		4,000,000
Drought relief					525,000,000
Total, regular	175,671,665	100,209,091	566,040,887	62,621,673	644,500,000	125,157,983	800,000,000
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	1,000,173
Second deficiency, 1933	1,590
Third deficiency, 1933	29
Fourth deficiency, 1933	354	42,000,000
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		20,868		460,170
First deficiency, 1935						2,370,733
Second deficiency, 1935						9,078,830
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act (Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.):
Highway-aid system	120,000,000
Forest roads	5,000,000
Forest improvements	5,000,000
Crop production loans (Public Res. No. 16, 73d Cong.)				40,000,000
Eradication of cattle diseases (Public Res. No. 27, 73d Cong.)				50,000,000

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE—Continued

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Special acts—Continued.
Control of chinch bugs (Public Res. No. 30, 73d Cong.)				$1,000,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	$306,673,811	$142,229,959	$566,040,887	64,081,843	$344,500,000	$136,607,551	$300,000,000
Permanent and indefinite	11,211,571	10,303,116		840,280,600		578,452,596
Add Public Works, supplemental, and work relief		566,040,887		644,500,000		800,000,000
Grand total	317,885,382	718,573,962		1,633,862,443		1,515,060,147

INDEPENDENT OFFICES

Executive offices	$392,000	$369,483	$6,000	$442,050		$437,232
Battle Monuments Commission	275,000	129,000				199,059
Arlington Bridge Commission	340,000	198,000
Board of Mediation	152,135	120,000		125,564		336,450
Board of Tax Appeals	560,000	490,000		502,116		540,000
Bureau of Efficiency	159,500	[5]
Civil Service Commission	1,312,370	1,050,000		1,522,816		42,595,000
Commission of Fine Arts	7,800	8,800		[6]
Employees' Compensation Commission	4,880,000	4,169,000		4,353,410		4,719,000
Federal Board for Vocational Education	2,864,000	2,487,700
Federal Oil Conservation Board	10,000	7,803
Federal Power Commission	254,000	210,000	700,000	277,303		312,600
Federal Communications Commission [7]	382,000	640,000		666,885		1,525,000
Federal Home Loan Bank Board						264,043
Federal Trade Commission	1,466,500	920,000		1,742,730		1,403,309
General Accounting Office	4,262,620	3,280,000	[8] 506,000	3,461,920		4,970,600
Clark Sesquicentennial Commission	400,000	96,650
George Washington Bicentennial Commission	200,000	[5]
Interstate Commerce Commission	7,148,560	5,190,000		5,430,970		5,850,656
Mount Rushmore Commission	25,000	10,000		[6]
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	920,000	695,000	247,944	726,492		839,500
Personnel Classification Board	145,116	[9]
Public Buildings and Parks	4,025,933	3,322,500		[6]
Public Buildings Commission	100,000	80,000
Securities Exchange Commission						2,264,494
Smithsonian Institution	1,074,829	820,000		874,024		950,189
Supreme Court Commission	1,000,000	3,490,000
Tariff Commission	1,020,000	800,000		840,898		970,000
Geographic Board	9,678	9,000		9,440
Shipping Board	360,000	310,000		[10]
Veterans' Administration	948,699,000	602,838,000	1,916,650	567,598,096		705,420,000
International Institute of Agriculture		48,500		[11]
Black Bass Act		13,110		[11]
Employees abroad, account devaluation						3,904,824
Total, regular	982,446,041	631,802,546	3,376,594	588,574,714		777,501,956
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	38,052
Second deficiency, 1933	247
Third deficiency, 1933	5,111
Fourth deficiency, 1933	36,873	665,000
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		693,441		1,972,000
First deficiency, 1935						95,706,994
Second deficiency, 1935						63,856,329
Special acts:
Veterans' Administration (Public Res. 35, 72d Cong.)	100,000
Home Loan Bank Board (Public, No. 305, 72d Cong.)	250,000
Federal Farm Board (Public Res. 43, 72d Cong.)	40,000,000
Farm Relief Act (Public, No. 10, 73d Cong.), Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans		355,000,000
Foreign Securities Holders Corporation (Public, No. 22, 73d Cong.)		75,000
Loans to insurance companies (Public, No. 35, 73d Cong.) through Reconstruction Finance Corporation		50,000,000
Home Owners' Loan Act (Public, No. 43, 73d Cong.), capital stock by Reconstruction Finance Corporation		200,000,000
Increased authorization for Reconstruction Finance Corporation (Public, No. 84, 73d Cong.)				850,000,000
Loans to industry (Public, No. 417, 73d Cong.) through Reconstruction Finance Corporation				300,000,000
Independent offices, Veterans' Administration indefinite, estimated				190,000,000
Deficiency resolution (Public Res. 3, 74th Cong.)						1,556,750
George Washington Bicentennial Commission (Public Res. 6, 74th Cong.)						35,000
Federal Communications Commission (Public Res. 8, 74th Cong.)						750,000

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

INDEPENDENT OFFICES—continued

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Special acts—Continued.
Loans to insurance companies, increase (Public, No. 1, 74th Cong.), through Reconstruction Finance Corporation						$25,000,000
Total, regular, deficiency and special	$1,022,876,324	$1,238,235,987	$3,376,594	$1,930,546,714		964,407,029
Permanent and indefinite	81,070,850	79,575,443		68,505,695		69,290,409
Add public works, supplemental and work relief		3,376,594
Grand total	1,103,947,174	1,321,188,024		1,999,052,409		1,033,697,438

[1] Bureaus of Entomology and Plant Quarantine have been consolidated.

[2] Includes—

Public roads	$400,000,000
Public-land highways	5,015,000
Drought-relief highways	7,431,000
Administrative fund	250,000
Total	412,696,000

[3] Includes—

Public roads	100,000,000
Highway Act, Nov. 9, 1921, to remain available	10,000,000
Federal reservation roads	2,500,000
National park roads	5,000,000
Indian reservation roads	2,000,000
Total	119,500,000

In addition $100,000,000 is appropriated for 1936, and $100,000,000 for 1937, the latter amount to be matched by the States.

[4] Highways and grade crossings.

[5] Discontinued Bureau of Efficiency and George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

[6] Transferred to Department of the Interior.

[7] Formerly Federal Radio Commission.

[8] This sum was used for auditing expenditures of the new agencies.

[9] Functions of Personnel Classification Board taken over by the Civil Service Commission.

[10] Now the Shipping Bureau under the Department of Commerce.

[11] International Institute for Agriculture, appropriation of $48,500 later transferred to Department of State. Black Bass Act, appropriation of $13,110 later transferred to Department of Commerce.

NEW AGENCIES

	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
	Appropriations	Public-works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Tennessee Valley Authority		$50,000,000
National Recovery Administration		9,665,000
Civilian Conservation Corps		324,362,315				$600,000,000
Federal Emergency Relief Administration		901,880		$899,675,000		300,000,000
Works Progress Administration						900,000,000
National Planning Board		351,000
Civil Works Administration		400,005,000
Public Works Administration		11,412,205
Public Works Emergency Housing Corporation		123,671,500				450,000,000
Public Works Administration, reserves		49,934,000
Central Statistical Board		[1] 113,000
Executive Council		[2] 60,000
Federal Alcohol Control Administration		[2] 500,000
National Emergency Council		[2] 310,000
Electric Farm and Home Authority		[2] 1,000,000
Federal Surplus Relief Corporation		25,000,000
Emergency Leasing Corporation		[2] 1,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration				100,000,000
National Housing Act, National Mortgage Association from Reconstruction Finance Corporation			$10,000,000
Rural Resettlement Administration						[3] 500,000,000
Rural Electrification Administration						100,000,000
Total		997,286,900	10,000,000	999,675,000		2,850,000,000
Deficiency appropriations:
Fourth Deficiency, 1933 and 1934, Public Works	[4] $3,300,000,000
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935, Public Works Administration, through Reconstruction Finance Corporation			750,000,000
Special acts:
Agricultural Adjustment Administration (Public, No. 10, 73d Cong.)	100,000,000
Unemployment Relief (Public, No. 15, 73d Cong.)	500,000,000
Federal Emergency Relief and Civil Works Administration (Public, No. 93, 73d Cong.)			950,000,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration (cattle) (Public Res. 27, 73d Cong.)			100,000,000
Agricultural Adjustment Administration (including $86,913,739 from customs receipts) (Public, No. 320, 74th Cong.)					$96,913,739
National Mortgage Association (Public, No. 1, 74th Cong.), through Reconstruction Finance Corporation					100,000,000
Work Relief (Public Res. 11, 74th Cong.) through Reconstruction Finance Corporation					500,000,000
Total, regular, deficiency and special	600,000,000	997,286,900	1,810,000,000	999,675,000	696,913,739	2,850,000,000
Add Public Works, supplemental, and work relief	997,286,900		999,675,000		2,850,000,000
Grand total	1,597,286,900		2,809,675,000		3,546,913,739

[1] The sum of $93,000 was added by Executive Order No. 6718 of May 25, 1934, to the $20,000 item shown in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934.

[2] Carried as "special allotments" in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934.

[3] Includes irrigation and reclamation.

[4] Shown here but not added in total as this fund is distributed in next column.

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Total appropriation	$41,245,622	$30,375,834	[1] $1,759,500	$35,411,178		$40,547,115
District of Columbia-Virginia Commission				[2] 10,000
Total, regular	41,245,622	30,375,834	1,759,500	35,421,178		40,547,115
Deficiency appropriations:
Fourth deficiency, 1933	11,942
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		342,840
First deficiency, 1935						35,000
Second deficiency, 1935						750,041
Special acts:
Public Resolution 13 (73d Cong.)				26,667
Shrine Convention (Public Res. 17, 74th Cong.)						54,000
Grand Army of the Republic Encampment (Public Res. 40, 74th Cong.)						15,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	41,257,564	30,718,674	1,759,500	35,447,845		41,401,156
Permanent and indefinite	3,252,000	2,697,500		2,430,000		1,460,000
Add Public Works		1,759,500
Grand total	44,509,564	35,175,674		37,877,845		42,861,156

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

Secretary's Office	$694,380	$704,270	[3] $18,071	$1,175,285		$1,740,190
General Land Office	1,883,300	1,742,050	1,000,000	822,000		1,810,700
Indian Affairs	20,845,439	18,966,546	19,034,550	16,275,185		27,538,132
Bureau of Reclamation	8,414,500	11,051,000	103,535,000	860,750		1,072,100
Geological Survey	2,181,000	1,992,500	4,497,164	1,313,500		2,285,560
Bureau of Mines				[4]		1,970,311
National Park Service	7,640,620	5,072,790	[5] 32,091,350	6,319,640		16,199,290
Bureau of Education	320,000	270,000		1,538,000		4,781,220
Territories	1,212,300	1,347,250	[6] 3,284,358	1,113,168		1,532,335
Hospitals and universities	2,342,133	2,607,530	3,319,311	2,047,711		2,291,090
Petroleum Industry Administration			559,000		$1,500,000
Service division and special account			[7] 2,208
Soil-erosion service			10,000,000				[8] $213,306,831
Subsistence homesteads			25,000,000
Commission of Fine Arts				[9] 9,080
Total, regular	45,533,672	43,753,936	202,341,012	31,474,319	1,500,000	61,220,928	213,306,831
Deficiency appropriations:
Second deficiency, 1932	7,155,702
First deficiency, 1933	1,246
Second deficiency, 1933	463,499
Third deficiency, 1933	121
Fourth deficiency, 1933	233,705
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		294,366		4,026,482
First deficiency, 1935						10,414
Second deficiency, 1935						16,689,087
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act (Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.)	16,000,000
Indian Affairs (Public, No. 265, 74th Cong.)						50,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	69,387,945	44,048,302	202,341,012	35,500,801	1,500,000	77,970,429	213,306,831
Permanent and indefinite	13,921,800	12,122,600		15,503,050		16,786,040
Add Public Works, supplemental, and work relief		202,341,012		1,500,000		213,306,831
Grand total	83,309,745	258,511,914		52,503,851		308,063,300

LEGISLATIVE

Senate	$3,095,490	$2,848,716		$2,945,711		$3,320,302
House	8,178,924	7,415,399		7,421,008		8,289,932
Capitol Police	95,430	87,940		100,106		110,650
Joint Committee on Printing	11,620	10,785		10,618		11,620
Legislative Counsel	75,000	70,000		70,000		75,000
Statement of appropriations	4,000	3,330		4,000		4,000
Architect's Office	1,900,580	1,586,355	$2,800,000	1,692,010		1,900,622
Botanic Gardens	140,000	113,725		111,595		114,987
Library of Congress	2,162,147	2,090,235		2,091,335		2,419,647
Government Printing Office	3,010,800	2,462,800		3,181,612		4,500,000
Total, regular	18,673,991	16,689,285	2,800,000	[10] 17,627,995		20,746,760
Deficiency appropriations:
Second deficiency, 1932	32,150
First deficiency, 1933	168,040
Second deficiency, 1933	250,860	2,150
Third deficiency, 1933	81,560	22,275
Fourth deficiency, 1933	2,318	126,210
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		534,484		620,036
First deficiency, 1935						51,502
Second deficiency, 1935						2,896,145
Special acts:
Senate and House pages (Public Res. 34, 72d Cong.)	3,720
Senate and House pages (Public Res. 41, 72d Cong.)	2,480
Senate and House pages (Public Res. 4, 73d Cong.)	12,628
Senate and House (Public Res. 12, 73d Cong.)				213,500
Senate and House (Public Res. 23, 73d Cong.)				185,000

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

LEGISLATIVE—continued

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Special acts—Continued.
House, select committees (Public Res. 51, 73d Cong.)				$110,000
Senate (Public Res. 3, 74th Cong.)						$215,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	$19,227,747	$17,374,404	$2,800,000	18,756,531		23,909,407
Permanent and indefinite	109,800	70,800		62,800		70,800
Add Public Works, supplemental, and work relief		2,800,000
Grand total	19,337,547	20,245,204		18,819,331		23,980,207
NAVY DEPARTMENT
Secretary's office	$2,887,980	$2,278,504	[11] $2,850,000	$2,111,400		$2,190,850
Naval records and library	39,240	35,970		30,672		54,080
Judge Advocate General	130,240	117,087		104,940		116,780
Naval operations	73,760	69,423		61,830		70,000
Board of Inspection and Survey	20,780	17,454		15,516		17,240
Naval Communications	134,980	123,272		108,720		125,600
Naval Intelligence	41,440	36,978		32,760		56,080
Bureau Navigation	6,530,144	6,304,327		5,372,584		11,161,787
Bureau Engineering	18,363,040	18,248,407	712,500	15,810,470		19,959,500
Bureau Construction and Repair	16,214,900	15,792,674	238,000,000	13,974,870		18,635,479
Bureau Ordnance	11,436,000	11,000,995	330,225	10,680,303		21,349,000
Bureau Supplies and Accounts	166,978,331	159,188,348	205,662	152,326,320		185,210,923
Bureau Medicine and Surgery	1,995,560	1,934,842		2,031,714		2,332,640
Bureau Yards and Docks	11,342,320	10,297,129	27,500,537	6,828,335		9,844,600
Bureau Aeronautics	25,535,820	22,220,879	7,500,000	18,880,398		41,069,310
Naval Academy	1,881,217	1,741,237		1,549,786		1,928,000
Marine Corps	21,914,833	20,349,251		20,648,447		23,768,110
Increase in Navy	18,063,000	33,412,785		33,619,334		120,795,000
Modernizing ships	14,000,000	5,500,000		470,400
Total regular	317,583,591	308,669,562	277,098,924	284,658,799		458,684,379
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	3,803
Second deficiency, 1933	1,634
Third deficiency, 1933	33,188
Fourth deficiency, 1933	102,640
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		622,868
First deficiency, 1935						553,157
Second deficiency, 1935						25,360,184
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act (Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.)	10,000,000
Marine Band expenses (Public Res. 51, 73d Cong.)				11,000
Total regular, deficiency, and special	327,724,856	309,292,430	277,098,924	284,669,799		484,597,720
Permanent and indefinite	1,322,550	997,598		1,698,333		1,737,500
Add Public Works		277,098,924
Grand total	329,047,406	587,388,952		286,368,132		486,335,220
TREASURY DEPARTMENT
Secretary's office	$5,886,220	$5,255,130		$4,641,964	$4,600,000	$6,811,960
Customs Service	22,000,000	19,900,000		18,500,000		34,255,410
Bureau of the Budget	190,000	177,700		171,851		192,000
Farm Loan Bureau	950,000	900,000		[12]
Office of the Treasurer	1,601,746	1,478,586	[13] $100,000	1,374,300		1,469,700
Comptroller of the Currency	315,340	291,740		257,202		283,800
Internal Revenue	33,650,000	[14] 85,800,000		67,450,520	10,000,000	[15] 83,004,700
Bureau of Industrial Alcohol	4,525,000	4,000,000		4,086,974		[16]
Bureau of Narcotics	1,525,000	1,400,000		1,244,899		1,249,470
Coast Guard	28,172,220	25,772,950	25,031,872	18,346,400		22,761,315
Bureau of Engraving and Printing	6,430,000	5,060,680		4,568,060		5,988,247
Secret Service	703,419	679,238		695,390	45,000	833,640
Public Health Service	11,021,413	10,386,328	2,207,128	9,155,869		10,777,567
Mints and Assay Office	1,387,870	1,296,842		1,108,559		1,256,600
Procurement Division	[17] 131,884,930	[18] 81,919,025	67,401,653	[19] 18,425,442	65,000,000	[20] 6,836,700	[21]
Printing House for the Blind	65,000	65,000		65,000		65,000
Federal land banks, interest and surplus					82,950,000
Total, regular	250,308,158	244,383,219	94,740,653	150,092,430	162,595,000	175,786,109	[21]
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	1,457
Second deficiency, 1933	28,266,061
Third deficiency, 1933	21,266
Fourth deficiency, 1933	1,073	265,000,000
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		68,371		121,370
First deficiency, 1935						1,715,808
Second deficiency, 1935						123,949,323
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act, public buildings (Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.)	$100,000,000
Bank Conservation Act (Public, No. 1, 73d Cong.)		$2,000,000
Gold stabilization fund (Public Res. 87, 73d Cong.)				$2,000,000,000
Federal Reserve banks, loans to industry (Public No. 417, 73d Cong.)				139,299,557
Total, regular, deficiency and special	378,598,015	511,451,590	$94,740,653	2,289,513,357	$162,595,000	$301,451,240	[21]
Permanent and indefinite	1,161,522,917	1,278,731,138		1,363,494,072		1,529,604,580
Add Public Works, supplemental, and work relief		94,740,653		162,595,000		[21]
Grand total	1,540,120,932	1,884,923,381		3,815,602,429		1,831,055,820

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Departmental (District of Columbia)	$4,383,275	$3,746,557		$3,287,022		$3,706,664
Field service:
Postmaster General	3,397,450	3,088,450	$532,600	2,633,145		3,212,500
First Assistant	497,817,900	443,616,995		398,046,031		352,395,995
Second Assistant	254,626,800	221,952,867		213,640,600		313,095,000
Third Assistant	6,424,750	5,622,775		4,145,940		5,082,150
Fourth Assistant	39,289,500	35,005,734		47,876,202		50,357,260
Total, regular	805,939,675	713,033,378	532,600	669,628,940		727,849,569
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	13,532
Second deficiency, 1933	5,196
Third deficiency, 1933	5,238
Fourth deficiency, 1933	6,930
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		49,316
First deficiency, 1935						3,111,750
Second deficiency, 1935						3,721,066
Total, regular and deficiency	805,970,571	713,082,694	532,600	669,628,940		734,682,385
Permanent and indefinite	165,000	165,000		165,000
Add Public Works		532,600
Grand total	806,135,571	713,780,294		669,793,940		734,682,385

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Domestic	$2,265,540	$2,017,312		$1,754,045		$2,124,030
Foreign	11,398,253	10,179,207	$4,761,000	12,131,573		[22] 11,889,865
Foreign pay adjustment				[23] 7,438,000
Total, regular	13,663,793	12,196,519	4,761,000	21,323,618		[22] 14,013,895
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	190,000
Second deficiency, 1933	185,455
Third deficiency, 1933	435
Fourth deficiency, 1933	125,048	35,700
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		116,398		1,550,866
First deficiency, 1935						100,010
Second deficiency, 1935						1,933,553
Special act: Ninth Pan American Sanitary Conference (Public Res. 42, 73d Cong.)				3,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	14,164,731	12,348,617	4,761,000	22,877,484		[22] 16,047,458
Permanent and indefinite	31,000	31,000		31,000		20,000
Add Public Works		4,761,000
Grand total	14,195,731	17,140,617		22,908,484		[22] 16,067,458

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Department proper	$15,413,500	$13,403,133		$6,285,430		$8,951,500
Judicial	18,457,000	17,474,374		14,940,435		16,309,435
Penal institutions	12,125,500	10,276,543	$785,512	7,474,913		9,295,565
Total, regular	45,996,000	41,154,050	785,512	28,700,778		34,556,500
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	178,282
Second deficiency, 1933	1,449
Third deficiency, 1933	2,016
Fourth deficiency, 1933	21,223
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		141,677		2,320,431
First deficiency, 1935						942,526
Second deficiency, 1935						1,142,539
Total, regular and deficiency	46,198,970	41,295,727	785,512	31,021,209		36,641,565
Permanent and indefinite		800,000		785,000		850,000
Add Public Works		785,512
Grand total	46,198,970	42,881,239		31,806,209		37,491,565

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Secretary's office	$10,271,700	$8,685,370		$837,410		$900,000
Bureau of Air Commerce [24]			$2,558,803	5,205,250		5,909,800
Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce	3,988,000	3,514,370		2,164,157		2,705,100
Bureau of the Census	862,125	1,903,000		3,863,500		3,434,000
Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection	1,476,165	1,405,000	33,043	1,337,752		1,598,000
Bureau of Standards	2,137,280	2,056,045	100,000	1,436,908		1,802,500
Bureau of Lighthouses	9,849,280	9,114,600	5,620,334	8,517,373		9,431,000
Coast and Geodetic Survey	2,399,813	2,205,090	6,503,120	2,126,961		2,360,900
Bureau of Fisheries	1,976,020	1,765,740	564,500	1,291,537		1,564,200
Patent Office	4,890,700	4,424,950		4,079,231		4,715,000
Bureau of Mines	1,860,325	1,514,300	272,800	1,197,926		[25]
Shipping Bureau				219,216		[26] 211,000
Total, regular	39,711,408	[27] 36,588,465	15,652,600	32,267,321		34,631,500
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	1,086
Second deficiency, 1933	200,284
Third deficiency, 1933	33,346
Fourth deficiency, 1933	3,921

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE—continued

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Deficiency appropriations—Continued.
Deficiency 1934 and 1935		$81,235		$456,190
First deficiency, 1935						$14,407
Second deficiency, 1935						92,044
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act (Public, 302, 72d Cong.)	$5,560,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	45,510,045	36,669,700	$15,652,600	32,723,511		34,737,951
Permanent and indefinite	3,000	17,000		21,000		110,500
Add Public Works		15,652,600
Grand total	45,513,045	52,339,300		32,744,511		34,848,451

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Secretary's office	$700,500	$645,000	$26,000	$691,815		$914,300
Bureau of Labor Statistics	450,000	414,000	10,000	668,720		1,084,600
Bureau of Immigration	9,480,000	9,494,000	1,422,980	8,485,000		9,595,000
Bureau of Naturalization	975,770	890,000		[28]		[28]
Children's Bureau	375,500	344,000		337,030		403,300
Women's Bureau	160,000	147,000		139,160		153,500
Employment Service	765,000	734,865	800,000	3,700,000		3,200,000
Housing Corporation	14,000	8,500		9,080		9,300
Conciliation Service			10,000
Total, regular	12,920,770	12,677,365	2,268,980	14,030,805		15,360,000
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	200,000
Second deficiency, 1933	450,208
Third deficiency, 1933	3,500
Fourth deficiency, 1933	1,532	1,500,000
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		27,580
First deficiency, 1935						4,616
Second deficiency, 1935						338,431
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	13,576,010	14,204,945	2,268,980	14,030,805		15,703,047
Permanent and indefinite	4,000	4,000		4,000
Add Public Works		2,268,980
Grand total	13,580,010	16,477,925		14,034,805		15,703,047

WAR DEPARTMENT

Military:
Secretary's office	$949,310	$868,184		$849,892		$982,028
General Staff	349,034	312,621		282,012		368,061
Adjutant General	1,821,767	1,607,753		4,051,570		1,956,483
Inspector General	28,345	24,467		24,005		27,220
Judge Advocate General	113,294	103,542		95,095		107,260
Finance	138,346,589	130,155,611		122,867,084		165,303,075
Quartermaster General	55,263,174	51,227,609	$71,009,926	44,224,268		50,543,956
Seacoast defense	2,338,136	2,035,431	[29] 7,000,000	1,161,805		1,284,970
Signal Corps	2,650,895	2,499,129		2,040,520		4,937,410
Air Corps	25,673,236	23,537,769	7,500,000	27,591,793		45,600,444
Medical Corps	1,640,489	1,504,189		1,406,333		1,483,176
Insular Affairs	85,413	77,636	1,500,000	72,035		66,300
Engineer Corps	596,036	540,831		441,284		528,834
Ordnance	11,209,014	10,641,340	6,000,000	10,153,204		16,744,578
Chemical Warfare	1,274,279	1,303,485		1,302,681		1,438,667
Infantry	$67,610	$60,583		$59,805		$63,830
Cavalry	21,000	19,690		19,432		21,000
Field Artillery	25,000	24,220		23,718		24,654
Coast Artillery	53,720	50,965		49,679		53,680
Military Academy	2,394,808	2,344,584		2,193,260		2,357,256
Militia Bureau	31,413,369	35,621,498	$2,238,624	28,075,034		34,130,868
Organized Reserves	6,354,348	6,354,348		4,278,859		6,372,178
C. M. T. C	6,692,008	5,975,431		4,117,601		6,461,204
National Board for Rifle Practice	139,150	159,465		145,178		491,054
Motorization			[29] 10,000,000
Total, military	289,500,024	277,050,381	105,248,550	255,526,147		341,348,204
Nonmilitary:
Quartermaster Corps	1,131,049	1,109,675		715,927		760,341
Signal Corps	161,285	160,772	176,170	146,055		156,753
Engineer Corps	94,139,494	60,413,517	[30] 255,928,208	53,307,936		50,135,926	[31] $136,693,169
Panama Canal	11,146,661	11,106,404	1,000,000	6,532,926		8,797,597
United States Soldiers Home						799,349
Total, nonmilitary	106,578,489	72,790,368	257,104,378	60,702,844		60,649,966	136,693,169
Total, regular	396,078,513	349,840,749	362,352,928	316,228,991		401,998,170	136,693,169
Deficiency appropriations:
First deficiency, 1933	4,198
Second deficiency, 1933	326,546
Third deficiency, 1933	786,512
Fourth deficiency, 1933	208,161
Deficiency, 1934 and 1935		1,105,709		16,000
First deficiency, 1935						8,016,908
Second deficiency, 1935						23,093,661
Special acts:
Emergency Relief and Construction Act (Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.):
Military, Quartermaster General	15,164,000
Nonmilitary, Engineer Corps	45,500,000

[See footnotes at end of table]

Regular, deficiency, and special appropriations—Continued

WAR DEPARTMENT—continued

	Fiscal year 1933 appropriations	Fiscal year 1934		Fiscal year 1935		Fiscal year 1936
		Appropriations	Public Works allotments	Appropriations	Supplemental appropriations	Appropriations	Work relief appropriations
Military—Continued.
Urgent deficiency resolution (Public Res. 23, 73d Cong.)				$150,000
Fort Niagara Celebration (Public Res. 50, 73d Cong.)				6,000
Total, regular, deficiency, and special	$458,067,930	$350,946,458	$362,352,928	316,400,991		$433,108,739	$136,693,169
Permanent and indefinite	12,576,540	12,462,500		11,803,900		1,808,702
Add Public Works and work relief		362,352,928				136,693,169
Grand total	470,644,470	725,761,886		328,204,891		571,610,610

[1] An allotment was made to the District of Columbia from Public Works Administration funds of $1,759,500 for sewer construction.
[2] Additional appropriation to legislative establishment for this purpose transferred to District of Columbia.
[3] Of this amount, $14,731 was carried as a special allotment in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934. The balance of $3,340 is listed in a table as of May 21, 1934, shown in the hearing before the Subcommittee of House Committee on Appropriations in charge of deficiency appropriations.
[4] See Department of Commerce ($1,197,926).
[5] Includes $7,202,306 for physical improvements and $24,884,144 for roads and trails.
[6] Includes $1,981,508 for Alaska, and $1,320,850 for Virgin Islands.
[7] Carried as a special allotment in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934.
[8] Balance under War Department; also covers sanitation and reforestation.
[9] Transferred from independent offices; 1936 appropriation included in Secretary's office.
[10] Regular legislative appropriation $17,627,995
Riders on Legislative Appropriation Act:
District of Columbia (Virginia Commission included under District of Columbia) 10,000
Foreign pay adjustments, included under State Department 7,438,000
Total 25,075,995
[11] Machine tools, $2,850,000.
[12] Transferred to Farm Credit Administration.
[13] Carried as a special allotment for relief (or adjustments) to contractors in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934.
[14] Includes $55,000,000 for refund of taxes.
[15] Includes $35,000,000 for tax refunds.
[16] Discontinued and consolidated.
[17] Includes $108,000,000 for construction.
[18] Includes $53,200,000 for construction.
[19] Public Buildings has been made the procurement division, Public Works branch. This figure includes:
Supply branch $225,792
Public Works branch 14,064,615
Repairs and equipment 2,065,035
Operating expenses 1,800,000
Departmental salaries 270,000
Total 18,425,442
[20] Includes only $2,000,000 for construction.
[21] Allocations from Work Relief appropriations unknown.
[22] Independent Offices bill carried $3,904,824 for pay of employees abroad account devaluation of dollar.
[23] Additional appropriation for this purpose to legislative establishment transferred to State Department.
[24] Formerly Bureau of Aeronautics.
[25] Transferred to Department of the Interior.
[26] Plus indefinite appropriations.
[27] Does not include $13,110 later transferred from (Black Bass Act) Independent Offices Appropriation Act.
[28] Bureaus of Immigration and Naturalization consolidated into Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization.
[29] Carried in Public Works Administration report of May 7, 1934, under War Department.
[30] Engineer Corps:
Flood control $69,187,000
Rivers and harbors 179,741,208
Seacoast defense 7,000,000
Total 255,928,208
[31] Actually allocated as of Aug. 28, 1935.

THEY SHOULD TAKE WHO HAVE THE POWER, AND THEY SHOULD KEEP WHO CAN

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress since it convened January 3, last, has made a record without precedent or parallel in American history. It is a record of which the American people have no reason to be proud.

First. It has enacted a mass of legislation admittedly unconstitutional and practically certain of being thrown out when brought to the test in the Federal courts. This creates uncertainty and confusion in all fields of private enterprise, a condition that will continue until the laws have been tested and interpreted by the courts so that individuals and corporations may know what they may or may not lawfully do. Thus, the road to economic recovery is obstructed, and the day of better times for both employee and employer is indefinitely postponed.

Second. This condition has been aggravated because much of the legislation is not only unconstitutional, but un-American—some of it socialistic, some revolutionary, such as the gold-clause law, which, for the first time in our history, denies the citizen his day in court. All of it has been dictatorially demanded by the President, with his frank avowal that it is necessary as a part of his program to wreck the economic and social structure which the United States has known since the establishment of our Government, under which, and because of which, our Nation has developed and our people have prospered to a degree not known or enjoyed by any other Nation or people, in order that he and his socialistic advisers may reconstruct our economic and social fabric after a pattern of their own design. The legislation thus demanded and obtained by the President penalizes individual thrift, forbids individual initiative, confiscates property honestly acquired and already possessed, denies the right of citizens to accumulate for future generations or the right of future generations to inherit what their parents have accumulated through the years by industry, foresight, and saving.

NEW-DEAL LEGISLATION PATTERNED AFTER SOVIET THEORY OF GOVERNMENT

It goes even further than this. Not only is property to be confiscated for use by the state but the individual is to be regimented, his rights and liberties to be circumscribed or wholly denied just as the new-deal Federal bureaucracy may demand and direct. All of this is merely the introduction into America of the Soviet theory and system of government, where the life and property of those under its authority belong to the state, where individuals are not citizens but subjects.

Third. The manner in which this un-American and unconstitutional legislation has been enacted, insofar as the House of Representatives is concerned, has been as unconstitutional as the legislation itself, and as much in violation of the traditions of this body as the products of its misguided energies are of the spirit and traditions of the American people.

The record of this House has not been that of a coordinate branch of the Federal Government, exercising the sovereign legislative powers vested in it by the Federal Constitution. It has not been the record of even a body of free and upstanding American citizens.

It has been a record by a majority party which abjectly surrendered not only the constitutional prerogatives of Congress but also its own freedom of action, its mental integrity and independence, and finally, its self-respect.

Upon one or two occasions leaders of Congress have been summoned to the White House as representing a coordinate branch of the Government, and standing as equals before the Executive, but upon their arrival they were not treated as equals. They were given orders as though they were bound boys. They were handed a list of measures already drafted and told by the President the entire list "must" be passed before they would be permitted to adjourn. Although that incident has been denied through the usual secretarial agencies of the White House, there can be no doubt that it transpired, for too many reputable Members of both branches of Congress, who were present, agree that the dictatorial word "must" was used and the dictatorial Presidential fist pounded the White House table in order to emphasize his orders.

That Members of the legislative branch of the Government, holding their commissions from the sovereign people, and answerable only to the sovereign people, should permit themselves to be thus ordered around, furnished a humiliating spectacle for which the annals of American history afford no parallel.

Having thus been convinced that the so-called leadership of this Congress was subservient to the point of servility, the President no longer engaged in the pretense of treating them as equals. He then began treating them as political dependents, sending his orders through the medium of a lot of bureaucratic whippersnappers and official under-strappers. Minor officials of executive agencies, who held no commission from the people, who had no political experience and no legislative knowledge, swarmed the corridors of Congress, established themselves in office buildings reserved for Members of the House, and assumed charge of the legislative machinery. Democratic Congressmen were sent for, and, hat in hand, they went and received their orders as to how they should talk and how they should vote. The debasement of Congress was complete. As a coordinate branch of the Government, it became a farce. As a body representative of the people, it was a travesty.

AT PRESIDENT'S DEMAND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES SURRENDERED ITS FREEDOM OF DEBATE

Fourth. This House not only surrendered its right to legislate in its own judgment and of its own free will, and became a rubber stamp in the hands of the President but also, at his instance, it surrendered its right of freedom of debate.

Practically all the administration measures have been put through this body under gag rule, a procedure which strips this body of all claim of being more representative of the people than any other branch of the Federal Government.

Representatives of the people cannot function if forbidden the right to debate public measures, the right to criticize, and the right even to denounce the policies of the Executive and to deny his requests. Real Representatives of the people do not ask permission of the President to voice their opinions. Neither do they tolerate the denial of that right. Certainly they do not wait to be told by messengers and liaison men of the White House as to what they may say when they are given a few brief moments to speak upon administration measures on the floor of this body.

Freedom of discussion in legislative bodies is the very essence of popular government. Abridge that freedom and you deny public opinion its day in court, its right to be heard, even though it may be outvoted. The essential difference between a free government and a dictatorship is that in a free government the people, or their duly elected representatives, have ample opportunity for free discussion of any question affecting the public welfare, ample opportunity to analyze publicly all proposals, hear all arguments, and reach a decision only after the fullest and freest debate.

The explanation offered by representatives of the White House for application of the gag rule is the necessity for haste in order to handle emergencies. There may have been some legitimacy to this explanation during the first session of the Seventy-third Congress, called in extraordinary session by President Roosevelt immediately after his inauguration.

Some emergencies existed at that time, although never a fraction of the number, in reality, that existed in the propaganda put out by the administration, or in the titles of bills introduced. Practically all of the legislation enacted during that first new-deal Congress was labeled emergency, and nearly all of the set-ups were labeled emergency, such as the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, and so forth. It was not hard to get a supine, partisan Congress to enact a law, the title of which declared an emergency existed, but it did not necessarily follow that emergencies existed merely because an obsequious legislative body declared they existed.

EMERGENCIES DECLARED TO EXIST ONLY IN ORDER TO EVADE CONSTITUTION

It is now a matter of common knowledge that those emergency laws were written in the executive end of the Government by "brain trust" lawyers. All of them declared emergencies existed calling for the legislation contained in the acts. That was necessary in order to set up a legal justification of the transference to the President by Congress of powers vested in Congress by the Constitution.

In answer to the protests which instantly arose against these unconstitutional acts, the single and consistent defense of the entire new deal, from the President down, was that the powers against which the protests were registered were both necessary and Constitutional because of the great emergencies which existed.

It was that argument which the Supreme Court kicked into smithereens in the oil case and in the N. R. A. decision. In the oil case the Supreme Court stated:

> The question whether such delegation of legislative power is permitted by the Constitution is not answered by the argument that it should be assumed that the President has acted, and will act, for what he believes to be the public good. The point is not one of motives but of constitutional authority, for which the best of motives is not a substitute.

In the N. R. A. decision the Court again held that even if emergencies did exist, such a fact did not give the Congress the right to confer upon the President "A roving commission to inquire into evils and, upon discovery, correct them."

Justice Cardozo, in his supplemental decision on the N. R. A., said:

> This is delegation running riot and no such plenitude of power is susceptible of transfer.

Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, discussing the methods of the new deal in an address before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, in Seattle, Wash., July 16 last, said:

> Taking advantage of the overwhelming sentiment of the American people for better social conditions and an improvement in the economic welfare of the millions of business, professional, and manual workers, those whose object is a new social order based on governmental control tell us that we must make haste or all will be lost.
>
> That is not true. All will be lost if we do make haste. Haste precipitated the World War. Haste made communism, facism, and nazi-ism possible in Russia, Italy, and Germany. Haste prolongs a national crisis. It makes every emergency acute because it chokes opinion, reason, justice, and faith.

No one speaks out of a fuller knowledge of what has transpired in the Old World since the World War than Dean Ackerman, who, for many years, represented the larger American newspapers in the capitals of Europe, and saw at first hand the makings of the present European chaotic political conditions. History since the World War shows that the curse of Europe has been the individuals who had political ambitions and were in a hurry.

As Dean Ackerman states, haste chokes opinion; it prolongs national crises; it creates emergencies where there are none; it prevents sober judgment; it prevents seasoned discussion; it prevents sound legislation. The short-cut to utopia, which the demagogic leader always promises, and demands haste in reaching that destination, leads nowhere but to the destruction of orderly government and the loss of liberty by the individual.

PRESIDENT INSISTED UPON GAG RULE BECAUSE HE FEARED FREE DEBATE

That has been the studied policy of the new deal under President Roosevelt. It was the studied policy during the first session of the Seventy-third Congress. It has been the studied policy during this session of Congress. There has been no emergency existing since this Congress convened last January calling for snap judgment on proposed legislation. Bills have been railroaded through this body not because there was an emergency existing which could be remedied or eliminated by their hasty passage, but because the President and his advisers did not desire the legislation to be closely scrutinized. They were afraid of letting the light of reason and deliberation in on their socialistic proposals.

The leaders of this body, in surrendering to the will of the White House and attempting to jam through revolutionary legislation, have not only violated the rules of parliamentary procedure of a representative body—rules which are justified by the test of 150 years of practice—but they have betrayed the American people in closing one of the two public forums which they have in their Federal Government.

The administration has insisted upon haste, upon gag rule in the House of Representatives in connection with the discussion of the various measures the President insisted must be enacted into law. His insistence upon haste and restriction of discussion was not due to the existence of any economic emergency awaiting correction or alleviation. It was because he feared the effect of a thorough discussion of those measures. He feared such a discussion would result in their being defeated. Undoubtedly much of the President's "must" legislation was clearly unconstitutional.

Even he himself admitted in at least one instance that the legislation he demanded was of doubtful constitutionality. His letter, addressed to the chairman of the House subcommittee in charge of the Guffey bill, urging the bill be passed regardless of its very doubtful constitutionality, is destined to become historic. His exact words in that letter were:

I hope your committee will not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation.

That a President of the United States, sworn to uphold the Constitution, should advise a Member of Congress, also sworn to uphold the Constitution, and, through him, urge the Congress—all Members of which have sworn to uphold the Constitution—to pass a bill about which there is a reasonable doubt as to its constitutionality, not only exhibits an amazing disregard for his own oath of office and the processes of constitutional government, but what is far worse, he encourages public contempt for the actions of the highest law in the land.

Public commentators, close to administration officials, have publicly expressed the opinion that the President has been insistent upon his program of "must" legislation because he has good reason to believe that practically all of it will be immediately challenged in the Federal courts, and that most, if not all, of it will be eventually declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. They say this will give the President the opportunity to go before the country next year on the issue that he has done the best he could do to bring about rectifications of alleged economic and social injustices, but that organized wealth, through the medium of Federal courts, has been able to thwart his efforts. He will then insist the Constitution must be radicially modified in order that the new deal may carry on. Dumping a load of unconstitutional legislation on the bench of the Supreme Court, fully aware in advance of its inevitable decision, would give him the club with which to belabor both the Supreme Court and the United States Constitution.

PRESIDENT LAYING FOUNDATION FOR CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE CONSTITUTION

On June 18 of this year, Arthur Krock, head of the Washington bureau of the New York Times, whose articles appear on the editorial page of that great Democratic paper, said:

Critics of the new deal, studying reform bills now before Congress and listening to the debate, are becoming convinced that the measures reveal a continued administration effort to get around the Constitution as expounded by the present Supreme Court; and, if further Court reverses come, to look to these to solidify public opinion in favor of the modernization of the national charter.

Mr. Krock named the social-security bill, the Guffey coal bill, the amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and the T. V. A. amendments. Continuing, Mr. Krock said:

Suppose, as is being daily urged in congressional and public debate, the Guffey or the social-security bill, after enactment, are thrown out by the Supreme Court on constitutional grounds—what will be the political effect? * * * Will it support the President's contention that new Federal sanctions are necessary to effect reforms overwhelmingly endorsed in Congress and among the people? Will he not, as a candidate for reelection, receive great credit and millions of votes for trying in every way possible to improve the status of the underprivileged and the victims of predatory business, and be, in time, given legal instruments to achieve them?

In another article under his name, appearing in the New York Times of Sunday, June 23, 1935, Mr. Krock said:

Under the White House spur there moved forward on the legislative dockets, or toward the President for signature, these measures, the constitutionality of all of which is seriously in question: The Wagner-Connery labor-disputes bill, the Guffey coal bill, the amendments broadening the A. A. A., and the great social-security system. To critics, and many anxious friends of the administration, it seemed as if the word was: "Forward, damn the Supreme Court torpedoes. The people will find a way to sustain us, for we are right in spirit and objective, whatever legalism may say."

Even those who consider the tactics immoral and damaging to the respect of the people for their ancient institutions concede the daring. They are willing further to say that at least debatable is this reasoning: That the more social and economic reforms are stopped by Supreme Court decisions, the stronger will be the support of the President's comment about the "horse and buggy" aspect of certain constitutional limitations.

PLAN TO WHIP UP PUBLIC PASSIONS AND PUT SUPREME COURT "ON SPOT"

There can be little doubt that such tactics may be politically shrewd. The whipping up of public passions during a period of unrest, anxiety, and discontent is a comparatively easy task. Let the administration pursue such tactics long enough, let it force through a subservient Congress a series of laws that are undoubtedly unconstitutional in order that the Supreme Court may be put "on the spot" by new-deal propaganda and public clamor, and there can be little doubt as to the result. Our Constitution and our institutions are the fruit of generations of sober thinking and seasoned public opinion. But the history of other nations and other peoples shows that institutions of slow growth, created by intelligent public opinion, can be destroyed overnight by inflamed passions of the mob. Mob law and mob rule are not the creation of those dupes who practice them, but of the artful demagogue who incites them to riot and destruction.

That President Roosevelt and his advisers intend to make an attack upon the Constitution a part of their campaign next year is perfectly obvious. It does not rest upon speculation. Their record clearly indicates it.

Throughout both sessions of the first Congress of his administration, President Roosevelt insisted not only that Congress pass, without debate or discussion, the legislation which he demanded and which was written by members of the "brain trust" and not by members of Congress, but he demanded that important legislation should be so phrased as to vest in him dictatorial powers not only as to administration of laws, but also as to their interpretation. The President insisted that in writing legislation the Congress not restrict his powers—not define, as the Constitution provides, the limits and boundaries beyond which the administrative officers of the Government might not step and remain within the law.

The President insisted not only that he be given unlimited power as to his interpretation and administration of laws, but that he also be given unlimited power in the appointment of administrative officers; in the definition of their duties; in the fixing of their compensation; in the setting up of agencies to carry out what, in his opinion, was necessary to further his experiments; and finally, to redelegate any and all powers, which Congress vested in him, to a veritable army of subordinates.

He not only insisted upon this throughout the first Congress of his administration, but he has insisted upon it in an even more rigorous degree in the current session of the present Congress. A notable example, and a very significant one, was the fight he made to keep absolute control of the handling of the $5,000,000,000 work-relief fund within his own hands. He successfully resisted all efforts upon the part of the Congress to attempt the allocation of any part of this fund, to attempt to define what public activities should be financed out of this fund, and to attempt to set up a fairly definite and workable program and insist that its general outlines be followed by those intrusted with the distribution of the funds.

Undoubtedly the legal division of the "brain trust"—which it is now admitted wrote the legislation rushed through the Congress in the summer of 1933—was fully aware of the danger of its being declared unconstitutional, for in every important bill they resorted to the strategy of attempting to evade the Constitution by declaring an emergency existed which justified the unconstitutional provisions the bill contained.

At first it was impossible to arouse public opinion to the realization of the immediate futility and the ultimate danger of the new-deal program. Specious promises were accepted in place of actual performances. Ballyhoo elbowed statesmanship off the national stage.

The President continued to rivet public attention by pulling rabbits out of a hat, while his appointees and associates worked overtime to undermine and subvert our form of Government and break down the civic morale of great groups of our citizens.

Other factors contributed to prevent an honest expression of public opinion, the chief of which was the use of hundreds of millions of dollars of public funds to influence, and in many instances, corrupt the electorate in the 1934 election.

WAS 1934 ELECTION MANDATE FOR NEW DEAL TO INAUGURATE SOCIALISM?

The result of that election was an increase in the number of blind supporters which the President could count upon in both branches of Congress. It was, and still is, argued that the result of the 1934 congressional election justified the President in the repudiation of his party's 1932 platform and his own preelection pledges and promises. It was argued, and still is argued, that the 1934 elections justify the Congress in letting the President continue to ride rough-shod over it, and to continue his socialistic, un-American, unconstitutional career. No less a personage, counselor, intimate, and mouthpiece of President Roosevelt than Raymond Moley, editor of Today, in an issue of that publication of the date of August 3, 1935, stated:

> In 1934 another election was held in which the predominant issue was the political and economic policy of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The people swept aside in one mighty affirmation those who protested against it. No amount of captious reasoning can destroy the meaning of the 1934 election.

All went well until the Supreme Court decisions in the N. R. A. and farm-mortgage cases. The decisions in both cases were unanimous. They stated what every student of the Constitution knew, that the legislative branch of the Government cannot abjectly surrender its constitutional powers and permit the President or other executive officers to do what the Constitution plainly and expressly says the legislative branch must do. The decisions also plainly stated that under no pretense, not even the plea of an emergency, can the Federal Government invade the rights of the sovereign States—rights that were expressly withheld by the Constitution from being exercised by the Federal Government.

Obviously legislation written in violation of the Constitution could not be enforced. The whole new deal collapsed as a result of these decisions because of the very simple, fundamental fact that practically all the legislation which the new deal had jammed through Congress was on a par with the N. R. A. It had all been unconstitutional. Proof of this was instantly furnished by the administration leaders in Congress. Instantly amendments began to be prepared to existing laws in an attempt to make them constitutional, and pending legislation, some of which had been reported from committees and was under consideration by one or the other branch of the Congress, was recalled in order that it might be rewritten more in conformity with the Constitution. The palpable effort of the President to become dictator, under the plea of emergency, was for the time being thwarted.

PRESIDENT'S REACTION CERTAINLY NOT CONSISTENT WITH HIS OATH OF OFFICE

What was the reaction? Certainly not that of an officer who had taken an oath to "preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution." Certainly not the reaction one would expect from a Chief Executive of the United States, who, quite aside from his oath, had stated repeatedly in the early part of his administration that he was engaged in experiments and if he found his experiments were not worthy, he would be the first to admit it.

To the contrary, after a week of conference with the same crowd who had collaborated in writing the unconstitutional legislation, he held a press conference at which he announced that he was not willing to permit the United States Supreme Court or the United States Constitution to stand beween him and the carrying on of his experimental program. He announced it to be his intention to start a campaign for the purpose of having the Constitution amended so that it would not stand in the way of the socialistic and communistic theories and policies of the new deal.

Such is the path to dictatorship. The pages of history are replete with examples of ambitious individuals who, finding the laws of their country, or the parliamentary body of their citizens, or the well-established customs and practices of their countrymen standing in the way of their desire to acquire and hold power, ruthlessly overrode orderly processes, or parliamentary bodies and national laws and constitutions.

There can be no doubt but that the President's statement to 300 newspaper correspondents was made deliberately—it was no offhand expression in answer to a chance question. It was a statement of an hour and a half in length, in which no suggestions were made to him which might have influenced his words. The stories all agree that he spoke from notes.

The outcry from the American people was instant and angry—without party distinction or geographical location. This astounded the President almost as much as had the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court. As a result, his spokesmen began to explain that the President's statement had been misinterpreted. A great newspaper in New York City, which has been his apologist, characterized his hour-and-a-half statement as only "a casual remark." The President himself made a gesture of obeying the Supreme Court's decision by announcing that he would not attempt to set up a new N. R. A.

But we have contributory evidence other than the stage-setting of the details surrounding his one-and-a-half-hour press conference to prove conclusively that his direct attack upon the Constitution and his inferential attack upon the decision of the Supreme Court were not casual remarks, nor was his attitude misinterpreted by the American people.

It is a matter of common knowledge that one of the closest advisers of the President, from the very outset of his Administration, has been Under Secretary of Agriculture, Prof. Rexford Tugwell. In addition to promoting him to that position, the President has more recently appointed him Director of the Rural Resettlement Administration, which forms one of the most important segments of the President's $5,000,000,000 work-relief program.

CABINET MEMBERS AND OTHER HIGH OFFICIALS JOIN IN ATTACK ON CONSTITUTION

The President's memorable press conference was May 31. June 10, in a commencement address at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N. Mex., Professor Tugwell attacked the Constitution, and called upon his visible and invisible audience to join in a movement to have that document rewritten.

The same day, Gen. Hugh Johnson, in an address at New York City, launched an attack upon the Supreme Court for its decision, and stated that the great national issue revolved around Constitutional changes or interpretations.

June 11, Assistant Secretary of State, R. Walton Moore, in a commencement address at the National University, Washington, D. C., advanced the doctrine there should be a change in the Constitution so that the acts of Congress would not be subject to the final approval or disapproval of the Supreme Court.

On the same day, James Roosevelt, son of the President, addressing a State conference of Young Democrats, at Excelsior Springs, Mo., advocated that a change should be made in the Constitution so that the Supreme Court might be shorn of its power of passing upon the constitutionality of legislative action.

The same day, Postmaster General James A. Farley, delivering a commencement address at Niagara University, Niagara Falls, N. Y., assured the audience that notwithstanding the temporary set-back the new deal had received at the hands of the Supreme Court, you need not fear that our program will be balked.

June 12, Donald Richberg, during the course of a commencement address at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., announced that unless the Constitution were changed so that the purposes of the new deal might be accomplished, it (the Constitution) would prove to be a mockery and a delusion.

June 15, United States Senator JOSEPH O'MAHONEY, of Wyoming, former Assistant Postmaster General, addressing a Flag Day exercise from the steps of the Capitol, in Washington, D. C., demanded a new interpretation of and a rewriting of the Constitution.

June 22, A. A. Berle, Jr., now with the New York City administration, but one of the President's advisers and formerly in his "brain trust" council at Washington, stated before the New England Council, at Manchester, Vt., that before the economic and social advances contemplated by the new deal could be attained, there must be a complete reinterpretation of the United States Constitution.

Twice since the President's famous press conference, Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, upon two occasions—once at Columbia University and once at Harvard University—has pronounced the United States Constitution as being unfit to meet the present situation.

PROFESSOR MOLEY, PRESIDENT'S CLOSEST ADVISER, DEMANDS CONSTITUTION BE REWRITTEN

If any doubt should remain as to the determined purpose of President Roosevelt and his advisers to force a fight against the present Constitution, that doubt should be dissolved by the editorial statement of Raymond Moley, in the August 3 issue of Today. Mr. Moley was, during the campaign of 1932, and has been continuously since then, the closest adviser of President Roosevelt. He is Brain Truster No. 1. He is editor of a publication which is established, owned, and financed by Vincent Astor, another confidant of the President, a very large contributor to his campaign fund, and his host upon those occasions when the President takes a vacation on Mr. Astor's yacht, the Nourmahal.

Mr. Moley, in the August 3 issue of Today, writes as follows:

> In 1935 the Supreme Court declared the N. I. R. A. unconstitutional. Its language, in that decision, indicated grave doubt on the part of the Court as to whether any effective N. R. A., any effective national agricultural legislation, any adequate protection of the investor can be permanently sustained.
>
> One of the keenest of students of constitutional language in America, Howard Lee McVane, Ruggles Professor of Constitutional Law, at Columbia University, made it clear in the New York Times on July 7 that the basic economic changes proposed by the new deal cannot be preserved without constitutional amendment.
>
> In other words, the establishment of the relationship between the Government and business, for which the people voted in 1932 and 1934, cannot be had without amending the Constitution.
>
> I am not blaming the Court for its decision in the Schechter case. I think it properly took the position that as the Constitution now stands the N. R. A. was unconstitutional. We are, therefore, reduced to the necessity of amending the Constitution in order to permit Congress to do what the people want it to do.

There is the issue. The Constitution must give way to the socialistic, un-American policies of the new deal, or they must give way to it. It is an issue which has been drawn by the President. It is of his making. He has forced it upon the country. The Republican Party is prepared to meet that challenge. We will welcome a straight-out fight to the finish on that issue.

Millions of Americans listening over the radio to the inaugural ceremonies, March 4, 1933, heard Franklin D. Roosevelt take the solemn oath to "preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States." It was beyond their wildest imagination or most irrational thought that midway of his term he would commit the unthinkable act of openly flouting that oath, because he found the United States Constitution stood between him and the realization of his political fantasies, as embodied in the new deal.

Yet that is exactly what has come to pass. When the Supreme Court of the United States handed down the N. R. A. decision, he and his coterie of socialistic advisers found themselves at the crossroads. He could, and should have, in the fullest measure, lived up to his oath of office. He could, and should have recognized in the Supreme Court's decision the voice of a coordinate branch of the Government, fulfilling its constitutional duty of passing upon the legality and constitutionality of laws written by the United States Congress.

Instead, he held the Court and its decision up to public ridicule. He declared it to be an obstacle to his so-called "social justice" program. He exclaimed the decision threw the country back to the "horse and buggy" days. When the choice between the United States Constitution and the new deal was placed squarely before him for a decision, he dishonored his oath of office and decided in favor of the new deal.

PRESIDENT HIMSELF HAS MADE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION THE 1936 ISSUE

The test is now before the American people. The President and his administration insist the bulwark of their rights and liberties is to be either materially modified or removed. The barriers which the people of the United States set up in their Constitution to restrict the Federal Government from encroaching upon the rights and liberties of citizens of sovereign States are to be swept away in order that the new deal and a subservient Congress may do as they please with our States and with the lives and property of our citizens. That is the threat. That is the menace. Be not deceived.

So long as the Federal Constitution stands as it is, American citizens will be guaranteed their liberty and the right to order their lives, improve their opportunities, use their property, whether it be a dollar in the savings bank or a far-flung industrial plant, like the Ford Motor Co., to their own benefit and profit, so long as they do not trespass upon the liberties of their neighbors and fellow citizens.

The American Constitution does not give the citizen these rights. They were his rights from the beginning. When the Constitution was written they were reserved to him and for him. These guaranties, in the form of reservations, are valid and binding against the Federal Government or any officer of it, even the President. With the Federal Constitution, as it now is, and as the present Supreme Court has interpreted it, liberty is the right of the citizen. Without the Federal Constitution, as it now is, liberty would become a privilege which the citizen might enjoy, provided a benevolent dictator and a considerate bureaucracy permitted him to do so.

Suppose these guaranties against the Government's encroachment upon State rights and individual liberties are taken away, as the President is attempting to do through his "must" legislation. Suppose the Government, in the name of "more abundant life" or "social justice", can take away the property of one citizen and give it to another, or confiscate it for the use of a vast Federal bureaucracy. Once that is established as a law, and sustained as constitutional, either by an amendment to the Constitution making it lawful, or by changing the complexion of the Supreme Court so that it would become as subservient to the whims and dictates of the Chief Executive, as the Congress now is, no man is going to work and accumulate property.

If that can be done, within the Constitution, then the Government can also take away the individual's right to seek employment, or it can prescribe terms upon which he must work, and we would have a return, in a modified form, to human slavery and indentured labor. If that can be done, within the Constitution, then the Government can prescribe how an individual may invest his money, in what he may invest it, and how much, if any, profit he may make from his investment.

If that can be done, within the Constitution, then the Government can set up any regulation prescribing how any citizen or citizens may earn their livelihood and what shall be their compensation.

NEW DEAL HAS ESTABLISHED SOCIALISM INSOFAR AS IT CAN UNDER OUR CONSTITUTION

And that is pure socialism—where everyone works for the state, and individual initiative, individual enterprise, and individual or private profit are abolished.

Insofar as the administration has been able to bring it about, we have state socialism now; but outside the Constitution and contrary to it. It is because they wish to make socialism—which always leads to dictatorship—the permanent economic and political system of this country, that the President and his advisers have determined to attempt to get rid of the Constitution, insofar as it blocks their plans. The statement that under the Roosevelt administration socialism has become a fixed policy of the Government, insofar as the President is able to make it such, is no figure of speech. It is a plain statement of the record and of existing conditions known to every citizen.

The sum and total of all the important new-deal legislation—other than the appropriation of billions of dollars to be used ostensibly to relieve unemployment and finance public charity, but actually to control Congress now, and, later on, to influence and debauch the electorate, if possible—has been the erection of a socialistic system wherein the Government assumes the functions heretofore carried on by private enterprise and exercised by the individual. This has been done under the name of "planned economy", which is merely a seductive synonym for socialism.

All of the important legislation since Roosevelt was inaugurated, and all of the extraordinary powers that have been exercised by him and his Executive subordinates, both within and without the Constitution, have operated to place a whole people in lock-step, and to deny to the individual the right to exercise his own judgment in the management of his own business, farm, or factory. It has reduced, insofar as it can, every citizen to the status of an automaton, taking orders from a Government bureaucrat, neither elected by nor accountable to the people. There could be no more complete denial of the principles and practices of representative Government.

The public is thoroughly familiar with two outstanding examples of such legislation—the N. I. R. A., which has been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which many Federal district courts have declared unconstitutional, and which even the administration admits is of such doubtful constitutionality that it attempted to doctor it in this session of Congress by a series of amendments, in the hope that these amendments would save it from the fate of the N. I. R. A.

RURAL RESETTLEMENT PROGRAM MERELY TRANSPLANTS SOVIETISM TO THIS COUNTRY

More recent has been the establishment, by Executive order, of the Rural Resettlement Administration, under powers granted the President in the $5,000,000,000 work-relief resolution, and the appointment by the President of Prof. Rexford Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, as Rural Resettlement Administrator. The President has allocated $100,000,000 out of the work-relief fund to carry on the work of the Rural Resettlement Administration. What is that Administration, and what are its purposes? Reduced to plain language, it is inauguration of the Soviet system of taking farmers off of the land where they have been born, or where they have lived and reared their families, and transplanting them to strange communities, on land owned by the Government, thereby reducing them from the status of free, independent citizens to that of wards of the Government.

It is begging the question to advance the argument that under this plan those so transplanted are given 40 years in which to pay the Government for the land on which they have been moved. That argument does not disguise the fact that it is Government ownership of land, which is the last step in socialism or dictatorship. The first step is rigid Government control or ownership of public utilities and transportation systems; then various forms of industrial and commercial enterprises; then the control of the people's money, which they have placed in savings institutions or banks; finally there comes Government control or ownership of land, which is the basic source of all wealth. Even admitting that in 40 years those so transplanted will have paid out, it cannot be denied that from now until the time they are free from complete governmental proprietorship they must till the land, which the Government owns and on which they have been moved, according to the rules, regulations, and administrative orders issued by various executive agencies. In other words, they are not free to cultivate the new land to which they have been transplanted according to their judgment and out of their experience as practical farmers.

NEW-DEAL LEGISLATION IS MAKING LABOR SUBJECT TO FEDERAL DOMINATION

The policy of regimenting industry, business and agriculture, which has been initiated by the new deal, is now being extended to cover labor by the enactment of the Labor Relations Act, familiarly known as the "Wagner bill", and the Coal Control Act. Both of these acts, if they are honestly enforced, will make the workingman as subject to Federal bureaucracy as the Agricultural Adjustment Act has made the farmer, and as the National Industrial Recovery Act made industry and business, before the Supreme Court declared it to be unconstitutional.

Notwithstanding the fact that both these acts were supported by prominent leaders in the field of organized labor, they run contrary to the real, enduring welfare of labor. The philosophy of compulsory arbitration upon the part of the Government, which underlies these acts, has been opposed by organized labor since its earliest days. There was nothing which the late Samuel Gompers, veteran leader of the American Federation of Labor, so consistently and vehemently fought as any effort upon the part of either State or Federal Government to place upon the books any legislation which compelled the workingman to surrender his own right of decision as to whether he would work or not work, and upon what terms he would work if he did work, to a board or commission having the authority, under the law, to deny that right and compel him to work under such conditions and for such terms as the governmental authority might decide.

Yet that is the whole principle of the Labor Relations Act and the Coal Control Act. If organized labor ever reaches the point where it is dominant, not only within the field of labor, but dominant over all other classes in the United States, it need not fear its interests and liberties will be denied by these acts. But in view of the fact that organized labor today comprises only one-eighth of industrial workers, and in view of the further fact that all industrial workers, organized or unorganized, are decidedly in the minority in this country, there is no indication that labor will be able to dictate the terms of arbitration which will be imposed upon it by governmental authorities under these two acts. These two bills as completely socialize and nationalize the laboring classes as the Agricultural Adjustment Act and the Rural Resettlement Administration nationalize land and deprive individual farmers of their property rights.

BANK DEPOSITS SOCIALIZED AND CREDIT MADE A POLITICAL FOOTBALL

There is no need to elaborate upon the theme that the Federal Government has taken over absolute control of all credit, and has socialized the deposits in banks and savings institutions. The implication of this upon all productive enterprises and private activities in this country cannot be escaped. Financial credit has been a matter, under private control, of proper collateral, sound business management, and the integrity of the individual who sought a loan. The late J. P. Morgan, in his testimony before the Pujo committee some years ago, made the statement that the great Morgan banking house was more interested in the personal integrity and character of the individual who sought a loan than it was in the actual collateral he was able to offer as security. The growth of America in every field of human endeavor, until it reached the position of the outstanding industrial and commercial nation of the globe, was due almost wholly to the fact that individuals who desired to explore new fields, develop new industries, and pioneer new ideas, were able to finance themselves through private credit, extended almost wholly upon the ground they were men with the mental equipment and personal integrity to carry their plans to success. Their politics, religion, or nationality did not enter into the equation.

Under this administration all this has been changed. Credit has become nationalized. Men are now able to borrow from Government agencies and from banks controlled through Federal machinery only if and when they subscribe to the political viewpoint of those who sit in the seats of the mighty at Washington. Vision, ideas, sobriety, diligence, foresight, and integrity upon the part of those who seek to borrow money from governmental agencies no longer count. In agriculture, industry, and commerce, in order to obtain credit to carry on any private enterprise, those seeking credit must subscribe to the political theories of the new deal and sign on the dotted line that they will abide by the arbitrary rulings issued by any individual or group of the vast army of theoretical bureaucrats who now control the machinery of our Federal Government, and whose avowed purpose is to wreck our present economic system and to subvert, if not destroy, our present political system.

LOSS OF INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY EXTENDED EVEN TO FIELD OF CHARITY

This loss of individual liberty has even extended to the field of charity. The power of the Executive to spend Federal funds without any regulation was won when the President succeeded in securing the passage of the $5,000,000,000 work-relief resolution, which left it wholly to his discretion as to how, and where, and for what purpose that vast sum was to be expended, as well as the agencies through which it was to be expended, and the individuals who were directly to supervise its expenditure. Thus a subservient Congress yielded the control of the Nation's purse strings for the first time in the history of this Government. The result has been the setting up of work-relief and public-relief organizations completely under the control of Federal bureaucracy.

Under these organizations, worthy men are permitted to starve while the shiftless, the worthless, the wastrel, the agitator, even the alien and the disloyal, are put on the public pay rolls, provided they swear political allegiance to the local Democratic boss and agree to permit their votes to be delivered by him on election day.

Furthermore, this $5,000,000,000 work-relief fund has been so manipulated that Democratic Members of this Congress have been threatened with political death unless they blindly took their orders from the White House or from messengers of the White House.

So the new deal is synonymous with socialistic dictation, which brings, to those who oppose its political theories and refuse to obey its political orders, economic death if they are engaged in industry, business, or agriculture, and penury for themselves and their families if they refuse to barter away their rights of citizenship as the price of being put on public-relief rolls.

Are these the policies for which the American people voted when they elected Franklin D. Roosevelt President in 1932? Every individual citizen must answer that question for himself. It is significant, however, that some of the close advisers of the President say the people did vote for the socialistic policies which have been put into practice by this administration. Not the least conspicuous in this group is Raymond Moley, who, in the August 3, 1935, issue of Today stated in an editorial that—

> Most of the new deal was explicit in Roosevelt's campaign speeches. The N. R. A. was implicit. * * * The voters passed judgment. There can be no mistake about the mandate which they gave Mr. Roosevelt, if there is any such thing as a mandate in this world of ours.

If Mr. Moley and his "brain trust" socialistic associates are right, then those who have been leaders in the Democratic Party for a quarter of a century are wrong, for their exceptions to and denunciations of the Roosevelt new-deal policies have been continuous since the President first attempted to put them into practice. Moreover, these exceptions and denunciations are a matter of record, uttered on the floor of both branches of Congress, on the public platform, over the radio, in newspaper and magazine articles, and in the editorial columns of our public press.

REPUDIATION OF 1932 PLATFORM MATTER FOR DEMOCRATIC PARTY ACTION

Insofar as the Democratic Party itself is concerned, it is not important to the public whether what the President and his administration have done constitutes a violation of the fundamental theories of the Democratic Party and a brazen repudiation of the specific promises that the party platform and Candidate Roosevelt himself made in 1932. That, primarily, is a question which the Democratic Party itself must solve. The important question is whether or not the policies which have been launched by this administration, and the laws which have been enacted, are a violation of the fundamental principle of representative government, such as is our Government under our Federal Constitution.

The only useful purpose the comparison of the promises made by the Democratic Party in its national platform of 1932, and those which its candidate personally made in that year, with the performances of the Roosevelt administration, can serve, is to furnish a yardstick by which the sincerity, integrity, and plain veracity of the Democratic Party and its leaders may be measured. If we cannot believe what they promised in 1932 there is no possible argument which may be advanced to justify our believing what they may promise in 1936. The only question which arises in this connection is whether or not the party and the candidate solemnly made a covenant with the American people in an effort to get power, and then cynically repudiated those promises after they obtained the power.

WHAT THEODORE ROOSEVELT SAID REGARDING BETRAYAL OF PARTY PLEDGES

There was another Roosevelt who was President—Theodore Roosevelt. In 1914 he expressed his opinion of the obligation of a party and an administration to live up to its campaign platform and pledges. That opinion was expressed in connection with an act of the Democratic administration which was placed in control of the Government by the national election of 1912. May 2, 1914, in a cablegram addressed to United States Senator Miles Poindexter, of Washington, in connection with the Panama Canal tolls question, which was then pending in the Senate, Theodore Roosevelt said:

> The plank in the Democratic platform was put in either with the knowledge that what it promised was false or with the determination to disavow it when once it had served its purpose of deceiving the voters.
>
> There is nothing we need more to raise the standard of public life than to insist that promises made on the stump shall be kept off the stump and there are few more revolting types of public immorality, more damaging to public conscience and more deeply discreditable to those responsible for them, than those which exhibit a readiness to make promises before election coupled with an equal readiness to repudiate them afterwards.
>
> Nor is this all. It will be bad enough if the administration shamelessly admitted it had won the election on false pretenses; but that it should now feel it would be immoral to carry out the promises solemnly made to the American people is much worse.

Had he been endowed with the power of divination, Theodore Roosevelt could not have more accurately described the duplicity of the present administration in relation to the pledges it made in its platform in 1932—which pledges were repeatedly underwritten by its candidate, who now sits in the White House.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT GAVE AMPLE WARNING OF HIS SOCIALISTIC PURPOSES

There is this to be said, however, on the side of Professor Moley and those who insist that the present policies of the new deal are consistent with what the President himself promised before he was inaugurated. In rereading some of the campaign speeches of Governor Roosevelt, and, more particularly, his Inaugural Address, one is struck by the fact that insofar as he personally is concerned, the new deal and its philosophy are not the creatures of impulse.

At Lamy Junction, N. Mex., in September 1932, Governor Roosevelt said:

> We are going to reconstruct the Government in Washington after next March 4.

In a lengthy address a few days later, at San Francisco, before the Commonwealth Club, he served notice that he regarded the task of the Government to be the development of a new economic constitutional system.

But it is in his inaugural address that we find words to which no serious significance was attached at the time of their utterance, but which, in the light of the events which followed, we now know were pregnant with new-deal prophecy. In his inaugural address he emphasized the necessity of the people sacrificing property and lives to a "common discipline" under "a leadership which aims at a larger good", the essence of the philosophy of socialism. Coming dictatorships cast their shadows before them, when rulers of a land urge sacrifices of lives and property to a common discipline under a leadership which looks to the larger good.

But the warning was even more pointed. The President, with his oath of office still on his lips, gave blunt notice that in event the Congress did not bring to speedy adoption the measures which he recommended, he would ask for broad Executive powers:

> As great as the power that would be given me were we in fact invaded by a foreign foe.

In short, he served notice upon his countrymen and the incoming Congress that he would do exactly as he eventually did, in asking that Congress surrender its constitutional prerogatives to the Executive without let or hindrance, and that the constitutional guaranties which had been reserved to the people and the sovereign States be suspended. At least the President can truthfully say he gave the American people fair warning of his intentions to carry out the adage that "they should take who have the power, and they should keep who can."

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, the American people are willing to hazard a large sum as the price of recovery. When the present administration came into power, millions of people were idle and the credit of thousands of communities had broken down, either through the inability to sell more bonds, levy more taxes, or on account of constitutional limitations on further bond issues or tax levies. It seemed necessary, therefore, for the Federal Government to embark upon a vast program of relief and reemployment both to relieve suffering and also to "prime the pump." The money so spent was in the nature of a premium for social insurance. Unless these expenditures had been made, the social fabric might have been subjected to stresses which it could not have withstood.

One can, therefore, be entirely sympathetic with, and not critical of, what has been done, but at the same time clearly recognize that if the enormous increase in the public debt is to be liquidated that it can be done only through taxes levied by the Government upon private enterprise. Liquidation through taxation is the only alternative to repudiation. That being so, it seems that the time has come when every encouragement should now be given by Government to private enterprise and that the Government should withdraw as rapidly as it can from doing those things which in normal times are done by private business.

As a member of the party in power, I think from now on we should place major emphasis upon the plank in the Democratic platform of 1932, which called for the withdrawal by Government from the field of private enterprise, with the single exception, as stated in the platform, of the development of natural resources and businesses which are essentially monopolies.

I look with real apprehension upon the gradual extension of government in the field of private enterprise. I know that it is the fashion of many today to say that the American system has broken down and cannot be restored. Let us admit that it broke down in 1929, still it does not follow that it cannot be restored, and we must remember that if it is not restored the only alternative is the eventual nationalization of all industry and commerce. The breakdown was essentially in the field of finance and banking. Institutions had loaned their resources to a Nation-wide orgy of speculation. It was not essentially a breakdown in the management of business as such. With a remodeling of our banking and financing structure and the erection of safeguards against the unwise extension of credit and the sale of worthless securities, I see no reason why we cannot hope that the old American system of privately owned and operated enterprises will pull us out of the present depression as it has pulled us out of the depressions in the past.

As a matter of fact, it is private enterprise which is leading the Nation out of the depression today. Take for example the automobile industry: New ideas, new inventions, new models, hooked up to the profit motive, are today making the greatest single contribution toward real recovery. When people say that American business and private enterprise have broken down, it is worth while to point out that every man, woman, and child in the United States could get into the 26,000,000 automobiles now in use and manufactured during the depression period, and ride on rubber at the same instant of time—a Nation on wheels. American-owned automobiles placed end to end would go twice around the globe. This miracle of achievement was not the product of Government bureaucrats, it was the result of the old American system of private enterprise.

I venture to suggest that if the automobile industry was conducted by the Government under bureaucratic control, we would be riding in vehicles whose mechanical design and price would be similar to those of the pre-war days.

But the achievements of private enterprise in the automotive industry, striking as they are, constitute but one of many examples familiar to every schoolboy. The development of sound and speech in motion pictures was wholly an American invention, worked out in American research laboratories, and developed and adapted through the risk of many millions of American dollars. Sound pictures are today being shown in nearly 25,000 theaters to a weekly audience exceeding 100,000,000 persons.

In 1930, at the begininng of the depression, 12,000,000 American homes were equipped with radio sets, whereas only 4 years later we find that 25,000,000 receiving sets are bringing entertainment to 20,000,000 families and in addition there are 2,000,000 families with radio-equipped automobiles who listen as they ride.

No such progress has been made in Europe where there is government ownership and operation of broadcasting systems. In Europe we find only 40 receiving sets to each thousand inhabitants, whereas in the United States under private enterprise we find 150 sets per thousand.

Similar contrasts between public and private ownership are found in the field of aviation. In Europe with five times the population we find 23,000 passengers carried against 50,000 passengers in the United States. Airplanes in Europe flew 380,000 miles compared with 550,000 in this country. This industry, which was only in its infancy when the depression began, now employs and provides a livelihood for 50,000 American workmen.

Perhaps the development and use of the telephone is our best illustration of the achievements of private industry as compared with those of government. In Europe telephone systems are for the most part governmentally owned and operated, and with the result that with five times the population, Europe has only one-half the number of telephones. Under private ownership the per capita use of the telephone is not only 10 times greater and, according to foreign travelers, the service more than 10 times better, but the American industry under private ownership pays annually a hundred million dollars for the support of government.

And so it is with electric and gas refrigerators, streamlined and air-conditioned trains, the great inventions in the chemical field by which silk is made from wood pulp, and the universally used cellophane and similar products are synthetically produced.

And let us not forget, my fellow Members, that many of these great accomplishments have taken place during the time of the great depression when business and profits were at their lowest ebb, when private enterprise, the so-called "capitalistic system", according to our socialistic friends, had broken down. When Mussolini or Stalin or Hitler do half as much for European industry, it will be twice as much as they have done.

But these comparisons would be incomplete if we failed to consider the contributions which industry, even in these times of stress, has contributed to the support of our National Government. While the socialized industries of Europe have doubtless imposed heavy tax burdens upon her citizens, many of these American industries which I have mentioned have been the mainstay of Federal support. American industry, privately owned and privately operated, is paying billions for the support of Government—for example, the cigarette industry makes an annual contribution of $400,000,000. The annual Federal tax bill of the automotive industry, railroads, and power utilities is a quarter of a billion each. If only our public utilities (transportation, communications, power and gas) were publicly owned, the additional burden thus imposed upon the people would approach a billion dollars annually or a yearly average increase of $25 in the tax bill of every American family.

Queer it is, that Government bureaucrats are unable to understand the ancient fable of the "killing of the goose that laid the golden egg." Queer that they are unable to understand how impossible it is for the Government to compete with industry on the one hand and tax industry on the other.

Doubtless the reason that American industries under private ownership have so far outstripped their European contemporaries is due to the fact that private enterprise can undertake experiments and hazard private funds but the Government as a trustee of the people is not justified in speculating with public tax moneys in the development of new industrial products. It must be plain to all who think that, even if the Government had a bureaucracy sufficiently skilled and intelligent to supplant private industry, the inhibitions imposed by governmental procedure and the necessary safeguards thrown around public spending would put America in the class with Europeans.

I am sure it is needless for me to point out to my colleagues that in opposing public ownership of industry and the socialization of American business—the socialism which Government bureaucrats seek to admit through the back door—I, in nowise, refer to public regulation. I yield to no one in this Chamber in my desire and in my efforts for full, fair, and adequate regulation of industry, of commerce, and of finance. Such regulation is essential for the protection of our citizens, for the protection of investors, and for the protection of the very industries themselves.

I mention these facts as an offset against the arguments that are being made today that we must look to Government and to Government alone to carry on business.

Assuming that the national debt is not to be repudiated but is to be paid through taxation, we have to recognize that every time Government takes over a private business it narrows the tax base. When a business is taken over by the Federal Government, it is taken out of the taxable property of the Nation—both Federal income tax and local and State property tax. The burden of supporting the Government, therefore, tends to be concentrated more and more upon such business as remains in private hands. It is like the steel columns of a building resting upon the brick wall of the basement and in turn supporting the wall above. Every time Government takes over another private business, it is like taking a brick out of the wall in the basement which supports the steel columns, and placing it on the wall above, which the columns must support.

It is time for the American public to wake up to the far-reaching consequences involved, which must inevitably result from this invasion by Government in private enterprise. It is necessary for every person, however humble, to realize that the burden of taxation must bear more heavily upon his shoulders unless a halt is called. The difficulty has been in getting the average man, the wage earner, salary man, and farmer, to realize this. He thinks that the problem of supporting the Government and especially the Federal Government does not concern him for the reason that he does not pay an income tax, and he is inclined to say: "Let George do it. Let the rich worry with that problem." The cold fact is, however, that at the present time some 60 percent of the total revenues of the Federal Government come from indirect taxation, and only about 40 percent from Federal income and Federal estate taxes. Every person who buys a package of cigarettes ought to realize that because of the little blue stamp on the package he is paying 6 cents to support the United States Government. The same is true with reference to gasoline, lubricating oil, sporting goods, amusement taxes, firearms, and scores, if not hundreds, of other articles that enter every American home. To the extent that the selling price of articles is increased by the amount of the indirect Federal tax, to that same extent the purchaser has that much less money to spend for the comforts and necessities of life. It is probably true that there is not a single person of our 125,000,000 people who either does not pay, or have paid for him, taxes to support the Federal Government. I know of nothing that would create a healthier public opinion, leading to the curtailment of bureaucracy and the retrenchment of Government spending, than to drive home to the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker the fact that the cost of Government concerns him, and is constantly reaching an invisible hand into his pay envelop and pocketbook. Unfortunately even the men who pay substantial income taxes and corporation executives fail to understand that the amount of their tax is dependent upon the amount of Federal expenditure and the number of individuals and corporations among whom such expenditure must be divided.

There are those who openly and sincerely advocate the socialization of industry, railroads, public utilities, banking, insurance, warehousing, and so forth. If the American people want to adopt that program realizing that they are doing it, no one could reasonably object however much he disapproved of it, because in a democracy the will of the majority must prevail. What I object to is the adoption of that program by default, by ignorance of what is going on. If we are to have socialization of industry in this country, let us do it as a result of open debate upon the public forums of America where the issue is clearly presented and not through indirection and stealth. If we are to have socialism, let it come through the front door and not through the back door. The fact of the matter is that bureaucrats are advancing socialism by indirection and ignorance on the part of the people far more than Norman Thomas or others who openly champion that as the program of their political party.

In 1932 I was a member of a special committee of the House to investigate Government competition in private enterprise. It was known as the "Shannon Committee", headed by Hon. JOSEPH B. SHANNON, of Missouri. Our committee spent some 6 months in hearing the complaints of the infiltration of Government in business. Our report was filed on February 7, 1933. It was unfortunate that it was filed at that time because the attention of the Nation was then occupied with the crash of banks and the expiration of one administration and the going into office of another. The report, therefore, was largely lost sight of. The conclusions of our committee, however, must be dug out of the debris of the financial avalanche that overtook us at that time and be brought again to the attention of the American people. The astounding facts which we unearthed must be made known to every taxpayer and every voter in the country. Our committee found then that without anyone realizing it was going on, the United States Government had already reached into nearly 200 different businesses formerly privately owned and managed. With respect to some of them, it may be admitted that a good argument can be made that they should be carried on by the Government. I refer, for example, to the building of battleships. Perhaps that should be a business in which no one has the motive of private profit. Other examples might be given. But, except for these, the Government has no business in business; as for example, the proposed furniture factory at Reedsville, W. Va., and any one of scores of others which might be mentioned.

Do not gain the impression, my friends, that Government competition is an academic matter and that it only affects a few isolated industries, business, firms, and workingmen. Among the two-hundred-odd businesses, with which we found the Federal Government competing, we discovered those which directly or indirectly are of vital concern to thousands of business firms and millions of American workingmen. It may be of interest to you, my colleagues, who, like myself, are deeply concerned with the mounting costs of Government and an unbalanced budget, that our National Government through authorization, direct or implied, of the Congress of which we are Members, is making mattresses, ink, paste, mucilage, blank books, uniforms, shirts, underwear, and clothing of all kinds, binoculars, drums, paint, and varnish, furniture, hammocks, propellers, Diesel and gasoline engines, lockers, anchor chains, fire extinguishers, harness, saddles, mess tables, engine valves, shoes, brushes, cotton cloth, tents, automobile tags, computing and tabulating machines, and countless other items, all of which our committee found are available through private producers at lower than Government costs. That it is printing envelops in competition with the printers of our country to an amount exceeding $5,000,000 per year.

It may be of interest to you to know that under our authorization, direct or implied, Government bureaus are conducting laundries, dry-cleaning plants, restaurants, and cafeterias, and that they are engaged in the contracting business and purchase equipment and execute work on a day-labor basis.

Perhaps the far-reaching inroads which our Federal Government has made in the domain of private enterprise may be conveyed if I read you the following general classification of industries with which our many departments and bureaus are competing:

Agriculture.
Amusements.
Architecture.
Baking.
Banking.
Livestock.
Ship chandlery.
Printing and binding.
Brickmaking.
Canning.
Brush and broom manufacture.
Canvas products.
Cement dealers.
Chemicals.
Clothing.
Coal business.
Coffee importation.
Contracting.
The cotton industry.
Creameries.
Animal and fowl feeds.
Fruit and vegetable shippers.
Furs.
The grain trade.
Ice manufacture.
Laundries.
Mechanical shop and marine work.
Shoe factories.
The wool industry.
Dairy farming.
Engraving.
Envelops and stationery.
Explosives.
The express industry.
Fertilizer products.
Furniture dealers and manufacturers.
Gasoline and oils.
Hotels and restaurants.
Insurance.
Lumber.
Saddlery and harness manufacture.

This brings me to the question of Government cost-accounting. During the hearings of the Shannon committee, American business men complained bitterly of the fact that they were obliged to bid for Government contracts, as for example the making of Army blankets, in ignorance of what it costs the Government to manufacture the same article in a Government factory. Government in business has a distinct tendency to hide its costs. Every bureaucrat wants to make the best showing he can and it thus is sometimes made to appear that the Government does things much cheaper than private business. A Government factory, for example, pays no taxes, it does not carry workmen's compensation, it carries no fire or windstorm insurance, it is not apt to charge enough for depreciation and absolescence and amortization of capital cost. Although all of these expenses actually exist and must be paid for, they are hidden in the deficiency appropriation bill and are not clearly and directly charged to the operation itself. At the hearings of our committee, therefore, American business men said that nothing more constructive could be done than to require all hidden costs of Government operation to be brought to light and spread on the cost sheets where those who run may read. American business men said that they could maintain the same wage scales, maintain the same working conditions for their employees, and still do at a profit what Government does at a loss due to the greater efficiency of private management.

The members of the Shannon committee have therefore been sponsoring a bill to require Government cost accounting. It is now known as the "Clark-Shannon bill", introduced in the Senate by Senator CLARK, of Missouri, and in the House by Congressman SHANNON, of Missouri.

It seems to me that if American business men want to save their business against socialism through the back door, that they must get behind this bill and let Members of Congress know of their interest in it. Not only must they themselves express their opposition but they must see to it that the public generally is enlightened and aroused. The average Congressman is so overwhelmed with work that it is only natural that he gives his time and attention only to those matters in which his constituents are known to be interested. I believe that the enactment of the Clark-Shannon bill into law would be one of the most constructive things which the next session of Congress could do. I believe it would disclose clearly what government actually costs. I believe that with the facts clearly shown it would result in putting on the brakes on further governmental invasion of private enterprise and would thus result in a saving of many millions of dollars annually.

I know that the average business man is so engrossed with his own problems that he is apt to take only an academic interest, if any, in this question until the Government enters into competition with him. He waits until his own ox is gored; but if business men continue with that attitude they may wake up some day and find that the Government has all their oxen.

With all its faults, follies, and crimes, the American system of private enterprise has produced and distributed more of the comforts of living to more people over a greater territory and for a longer period of time than any other system since civilization began. Neither the princes of Babylon, the pharoahs of Egypt, the emperors of Rome, the lords of feudalism, nor the dictators of today have ever served the common man one-half so well. Let us not, in a moment of break-down, lose faith in the Constitution of our country or the courage and initiative of her people.

IS AMENDMENT NECESSARY?—SHALL THERE BE A CHANGE IN THE FUNDAMENTAL LAW OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, this is no longer an academic question to be debated by "parlor pinks" who find themselves tragic misfits in a stupid world; by college professors, protected in the functioning of pure reason by the cloistered halls of learning; by masters of economic theory who in verse moderne cry out their desires to remake America.

At long last this proposal is sought to be brought forth from the laboratory into the great field of American politics.

There can no longer be any doubt that there is under way a definite movement to change the form of the Constitution of the United States. This change is being advocated by a certain group in our Federal Government and finds its principal support, not in the legislative branch but in the executive and administrative departments of the Government. It receives rather vague but loud endorsement from self-appointed saviors of the people whose demagogic pronouncements and promises have burned the radio waves and befuddled the minds of millions of listeners-in.

The purpose of those who are fostering this movement is to bring about a fundamental change in the relationship of the Federal Government to the national economy by amendment to the Constitution. The object sought is increased Federal power in the control of the economic system. From now on the state and not the individual shall be responsible for the successful functioning of the economic system, and in order that the state shall be capable of assuming that responsibility it shall be endowed with new powers of control. There is no longer any doubt that the objective sought by these proponents of change is some form of Federal control of the national economy.

The suggested change in the form of our Government is basic. It is not a minor but a major change. It goes not to the form but to the substance. In fact, the change which is being advocated is more than a change in the written law; it involves the adoption of a new political philosophy. It is sought to change fundamentals. The foundation of Uncle Sam's House is to be changed, not merely the structure by an addition or by the demolition of some outworn wing.

It is hardly necessary to state that this suggested change is of the utmost importance to every man, woman, and child in the United States. The proposal, if carried out, would vitally affect the daily lives of all. Napoleon may conquer Europe and the heads of government may change, but the ordinary man goes about his daily life as usual. Political issues of paramount importance may be decided one way or the other, but the farmer and the industrial worker continue with their ordinary tasks. But when government, as in the Soviet Union or in the Fascist state, takes charge of the national economy, then no single individual in the entire nation remains unaffected or untouched by each governmental decision.

We of this generation are seeing something new in the Old World. Political dictatorship is an old story. Economic dictatorship is something new. In Russia we have seen a minority of less than 2,000,000 persons seize control of the national economy, acquire ownership of all the means of production and transportation, and then place the entire population of 140,000,000 on rations. No food in the cellar, no savings in the old sock. What other possible result, but complete subservience of the 140,000,000, and absolute rule by the small minority? We also witness fascism exercising complete government regulation and control of the national economy with the result that both capital and labor are no longer free and both function only through the permissive direction of government autocracy. Truly, economic control has possibilities.

There is, however, no reason why this proposal to amend the Constitution should not be approached with an open mind. Certainly there should be no undue timidity. Veneration for the Constitution is highly praiseworthy. Respect for justly established authority is particularly necessary and essential in a republic. But veneration does not mean hidebound objection to change. The Constitution was not intended to "freeze" our institutions, political or economic. Although a written set of rules, it was fully intended that these rules should be changed by amendment whenever social or economic conditions required such action. The American people should not hesitate to amend the Constitution and even write into it a new fundamental principle, if they are entirely satisfied that they know what they want.

There is, moreover, every reason why any suggestion of change touching our economic institutions should, at this time, be given full and earnest consideration. The great outstanding fact in our present distressful situation is the fact that the economic system of America is not supporting all of our people. A national economy which does not support the national population deserves critical examination. The fundamental purpose of any economic system is the support of the people who live under it. That the American economic system needs either a revival or a revision is painfully evident. The question whether or not the Government should become active within the economic system and take over part or all of the responsibility for the proper support of the population is, therefore, highly pertinent under the circumstances.

Nothwithstanding the urgency of the situation, the suggested change is so vital, so much at variance with our time-worn economic tradition, that it must be considered with the greatest care and deliberation. There should be a thorough review of the various stages in the evolution of our present system. Past experience should prove a guide for future action. There is no a priori economic knowledge. Emotion has no place in the direction of economic activity. Economic facts are cold. Whatever the decision, it should be made in the light of past experiences in our economic history which point to the necessity for change.

Changes in our fundamental law are not to be entered into lightly or frivolously. There should be no change to satisfy anyone's curiosity—a remodeling of the machine just to see if it will work. The American people have no desire to amend the Constitution in order to give "brain trusters" the legal right to experiment, or in order to make legal what are, so far, only experiments. Certainly there is no one in the Government who would assert that the emergency measures adopted during the first critical years of the present administration have so far advanced beyond the experimental stage that they should now be established as permanent economic institutions, by legal authorization. Surely no prudent man can say, for instance, that N. R. A. and A. A. A. have been sufficiently tested so as to demonstrate that they are entitled to a permanent place in our economic system.

Is greater governmental control necessary for the welfare of our people?

The Constitution of the United States set up a government based on the idealistic philosophy of individual liberty. It was conceived to serve a nation of men, not a herd of animals. Whether the founders of our governmental structure were dreamers who failed to take full cognizance of the real nature of human beings perhaps only time will tell. Nevertheless they visualized a government founded on the principle of freedom for the individual.

Within this conception of individual freedom there seems also to have been included some idea of economic freedom. It is quite certain that the fathers of our fundamental law contemplated a country functioning economically under a free economy. The individual was to be permitted to proceed in the economic field with as little interference as possible. The citizen should be free to decide the manner of his life; free to make his living as he saw fit; free to seek any reward, great or small, for his labor and service.

Because of this deep-rooted conception of individual freedom, or perhaps because of the rich and undeveloped country in which our forefathers found themselves—whatever the reason—the American economy proceeded to operate under a system based on a free economy. The competitive-profit system has, from the first, been the economic system of America. Legislation dealing with economics has, until recently, had for its primary purpose the preservation of free markets in order that the competitive-profit system could function with the least possible interference.

Has the competitive-profit system outworn its usefulness? Have science and the modern technique so altered economic conditions that it is no longer possible for the competitive-profit system to operate effectively? Is economic competition possible when the scope of markets becomes national instead of local? Can profit, which is the motivating force of the competitive-profit system, still be counted upon to provide the greatest production for use and the widest distribution? Can our economic system be relied upon to steadily support all of the population? Should we demand more from our economic system than we have heretofore required? These are questions which can well be asked when considering the value of our present economic system.

But we cannot stop with an examination of the system; we must also consider the individual. Is the individual no longer fitted to conduct a free economic system? Have people in America changed so that they have now become incapable of acting as rugged individualists? Have we unwittingly evolved the collectivized man in America? Did Marx and Lenin, after all, prophesy correctly? Have the American people lost faith in their ability to successfully manage an individualistic economy? Does the recent startling behavior of our people, in taking all of their economic troubles to Washington, indicate that the majority of our citizens demand that the Government take charge of the national economy?

If the competitive-profit system cannot function under modern economic conditions, or the nature of the American citizen has so changed that he is no longer capable of conducting an individualistic economy, then, most certainly, a change must be made in the fundamental law of the land. The Federal Government, as at present constituted, has not the legal power to take over the task of conducting the national economy. We have already stretched the governmental structure to the limit. If the Federal Government is to assume control of the economic system an amendment to the Constitution is necessary.

If, on the other hand, our economic difficulties are caused by an abuse of the competitive-profit system, and we are suffering not because the system has outworn its usefulness, then there is no reason in the world for changing the Constitution. If the failure of our national economy to support the population is not the fault of the system but is due to the sins of the people, then the remedy lies beyond the field of government. Government cannot make people honest or moral. Free governments are of the people. The form of government is a reflection of the morality and social consciousness of its people. Democratic forms of government are usually as good or as bad as the people who create them.

If private leadership has debauched the economic system, by substituting plunder for profit, cutthroat competition for economic competition; if it has bled the economy white instead of taking a reasonable reward for service and forgotten utterly that with economic power goes social responsibility, then surely the remedy does not lie in the destruction of the system itself. No economic system can function successfully if its management is motivated by greed, dishonesty, and a low standard of ethics. If the system is suffering from abuses the remedy is correction, not destruction. Governments, State, municipal, and Federal, have sufficient power to punish offenders and cleanse the system of its iniquities. A few long jail sentences for prominent economic racketeers would go a long way toward renewing the health of our economic system. Dishonest corporate organization, perhaps the very greatest single cause of our present economic distress, can readily be dealt with, and prevented, by law, and through the exercise of existing legislative powers. There has been a lamentable lack of vigilence on the part of the people's officials, especially in State governments.

If, however, after careful consideration, we reach the inevitable conclusion that our present economic system, as constituted, cannot satisfactorily serve the needs of our people and give to them that degree of economic security to which they are entitled, then a choice of alternatives becomes necessary. In what manner shall the relationship of our Government to the national economy be changed? What shall be the nature of the powers with which we propose to endow the Federal Government by constitutional amendment? If we in America are to choose new economic pathways in what direction shall we travel?

Three forms of national economy today hold the center of the stage in this modern world. They are socialism, fascism, and the competitive-profit system, popularly termed "capitalism."

The competitive-profit system, which has been the system in the United States, is well known to all. It is purely individualistic. It involves private property, profits, free markets, and competition. Under the system the individual owns, operates, controls, and plans. The only function of the Government, under this system, is to protect the system so it can function freely and with the least possible interference.

The Socialist economic system is based on the principle of public ownership of the means of production. Where the system has been tried, as in the Soviet Union, public ownership has become state ownership. Under this system the state owns, operates, controls, and plans.

The Fascist economic system retains individual ownership but, under it, the state creates the forms and fixes the limitations within which economic activity may function. Under this system the individual owns and operates, but the state controls and plans.

In giving the Federal Government more power over the national economy, it would seem impossible to escape the acceptance, to some degree at least, of the economic principles of fascism or socialism. It would also appear that in order to adopt a logical and efficient method, there could not be a combination of two or more of the economic systems. The principles on which these three economic systems are founded are not harmonious. The adherents of the several systems are bitter opponents, in fact, frequently, mortal enemies.

If a change is necessary a choice should be made. The choice should be made without prejudice. If public ownership is desirable the fact that such ownership is called socialism should frighten no one. If Government control seems better, it should receive full consideration, although a Fascist doctrine. Names are not important. On the other hand, no fundamental change should be made until our people are convinced that the present economic system has failed and that another one offers a better chance of success—a better social and economic life.

The decision lies with the American people. Needless to say they will never knowingly approve any change in the fundamental law which might destroy their liberties. No one will be endowed with arbitrary powers.

Certainly no thinking American would for a moment tolerate any change in the fundamental law which would give arbitrary power to an individual; such emergency powers, for instance, as were given to the Secretary of Agriculture under the A. A. A. and subsequent agricultural control legislation. The granting of any additional governmental powers should be confined to the legislative department. Exercise of the power of economic control should be subject to the will of the Congress. The scope of the legislative field may be enlarged but not the power of individuals.

In this connection it might be well to consider whether any economic system except a free market, competitive system can exist without arbitrary power in the Government. Certainly in Russia under socialism, and in Italy under fascism, in order to keep the economic system working and supporting the people, even at a very low standard of living, it has been necessary to give the Government extremely arbitrary and dictatorial powers. In fact, so far, Russia and Italy have proved only one thing—that a Socialist economy, or a Fascist economy, can only exist through force and an absolute dictatorship.

If it is proposed to give our economic system a Fascist or Socialist flavor, there must be found a way to conduct that system through democratic control under a free government. There should be no curtailment of our free institutions. We shall continue to have a government of law and not of men. Whatever the change, American liberties and free institutions must and shall be preserved.

NULLIFICATION OF ACTS OF CONGRESS

THE SISSON RESOLUTION (H. RES. 224)

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, my reason for taking the time of the House today is that we are face to face with the gravest question presented in my experience in Congress. An unparalleled economic situation has dictated that Congress should do something. A coordinate department of the Government has just told us we may not.

When 2 years ago we first faced this depression we found that the separate States, because of geographical limitations, were organically incompetent to act. We then took national action, as any other nation might do. The refusal of the courts, a coordinate department of the Government, to apply the law has produced such a crisis that an honorable Member of this body, Representative SISSON, of the State of New York, has offered a resolution asking the House to ask the Judiciary Committee to advise us—

Whether the legislative power of the Congress does or does not extend to the enactment of laws making provision for the general welfare of the United States and to insure the domestic tranquillity.

Whether the authority of the courts of the United States, including the Supreme Court, extends to the annulment of statutes duly enacted by the Congress to provide for the general welfare of the United States and insure the domestic tranquillity.

Ladies and gentlemen, let us not mistake or neglect the import of this resolution. Does the United States possess a national parliament like other nations, of which surely it stands in like need? The questions it raises of the competency of the Nation under the Constitution to deal with national subjects involving the general welfare and tranquillity of the American people command immediate consideration. I am for the Constitution as it is written. If we take out of it two unauthorized amendments interpolated in the courthouses, and put back into it a fundamental part forced out of it by like interpolation, our beloved Constitution is as ample to meet our needs today as the fathers designed it to be. It is only these unauthorized amendments by interpolation which leave this National Parliament alone among parliaments stripped of power to defend the Nation against an economic depression more devastating than ordinary war (A).

FIRST INTERPOLATION

Mr. Speaker, the first amendment interpolated is the power assumed by the courts to invalidate an act of Congress. It reads in effect as follows:

Provided that at any time after the passage of an act by the Congress any person adversely interested may deny any duty thereunder and the validity of such act in any legal proceeding; and if the judge consider that such act is not authorized by the Constitution, then he shall hold such act to be invalid, the judgment of the Congress and the President to the contrary notwithstanding.

Certainly no such power is expressly granted the judge in any of the parts of the instrument defining the jurisdiction of the courts. Such a power, even as proposed by Madison in the form of a veto, namely, that " a convenient number of judges " must join with the President in order to approve bills passed by Congress, was four times rejected by decisive votes of the Constitutional Convention.

Here is a power to void our national statutes unknown when the Constitution was forming to the national governing institutions of the world—ancient, medieval, or modern. Is it conceivably probable that such an innovation was consciously intended without any expression of the purpose in the Constitution itself?

In an address to Congress on June 16, 1789, Mr. Madison said:

The legislative powers are vested in Congress, and are to be exercised by them uncontrolled by any other department, except the Constitution has qualified it otherwise. The Constitution has qualified the legislative power by authorizing the President to object to any act it may pass, requiring, in the case, two-thirds of both Houses to concur in making a law; but still the absolute legislative power is vested in the Congress, with this qualification alone. (Fourth Elliot Debates, p. 456.)

Sir, in order to avoid conflicts between State and national laws, Madison had proposed that State laws should be subject to approval by Congress. Governeur Morris, Sherman, Martin opposed the motion; Pinkney and Madison approved it. Sherman " thought it unnecessary, as the courts of the States would not consider as valid any law contravening the authority of the Union." The Sherman suggestion that the State judges should negative the conflicting State laws was adopted instead. The Journal recites:

Mr. Luther Martin moved the following resolution: " That the legislative acts of the United States made by virtue and in pursuance of the articles of Union, and all treaties made and ratified under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the respective States, as far as those acts or treaties shall relate to the said States, or their citizens and inhabitants, and that the judiciaries of the several States shall be bound thereby in their decisions, anything in the respective laws of the individual States to the contrary notwithstanding ", which was agreed to nem con. (Documents, Formation Constitution, pp. 391–392.)

It was thus, sir, that the power of State judges to adjudge State acts void, and State acts only, as in conflict with Federal law came into the Constitution. Changes of wording for conciseness without change of meaning or intention were made by the Committee on " Stile and Arrangement ", so that it now reads:

This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

To enforce this clause the Judiciary Act was passed in 1789. In this act jurisdiction was given the Federal courts to review decisions of the State courts where rights under Federal laws had been claimed, if the decision of the State court had been against such rights. If the decision was favorable to the Federal right claimed, the State decision was not appealable. (B)

The casual reader of the above clause is sometimes confused by the word " pursuance." It has an unquestioned relevancy to parliamentary procedural steps required expressly by the Constitution in the passage of an act of Congress. For example:

First. The bill must be passed by both Houses.
Second. There must be the favoring vote of a majority of a quorum of each House.
Third. (a) It must be approved by the President; (b) or in his hands and not disapproved for 10 days, etc.; and (c) or if vetoed by him, receive two-thirds of the votes of each House by yeas and nays entered on the Journals.

These are express procedural formalities to be pursued or followed by Congress in the enactment of a law.

Thus Congress in 1789, while expressly requiring the courts to nullify State legislation in conflict with the Federal law, reposed no such power in the courts to nullify Federal statutes. Nor—except for a dictum of Marshall in 1802—was such a power exercised until 1857. That is for 68 years. The cases differed in their nature. Where two legislatures act on the same subject a conflict may result. Some power must determine which law is to be supreme. The Constitution expressly gave supremacy to the Federal law, and the act of 1789 gave the courts power to so declare.

Justice Holmes emphasized the importance of this distinction when he said:

I do not think the United States would come to an end if we lost our power to declare an act of Congress void. I do think the Union would be imperiled if we could not make that declaration as to the laws of the several States (Collected Legal Papers of, pp. 295–296).

Ladies and gentlemen of the House, there never was a contention that the nullifying power was expressly given. And if such an innovation were an intended branch of the Court's jurisdiction would not so great a departure be found stated in terms as concrete as the Court's jurisdiction of suits between States and the veto power of the President?

FIRST UNWRITTEN AMENDMENT

So far as I can learn, the question of nullification was first discussed before that eminent tribunal in the case of Ware v. Hilton in 1796 (3d Dallas at pp. 211 and 223). It was raised by Marshall as an attorney for the defendant. In his brief he declared:

The legislative authority of any country can only be restrained by its own municipal constitution. This is a principle that springs from the very nature of society; and the judicial authority can have no right to question the validity of a law unless such a jurisdiction is expressly given by the Constitution. It is not necessary to inquire how the judicial authority should act, if the legislation were evidently to violate any of the laws of God; but property is the creature of civil society and subject in all respects to the disposition and control of civil institutions.

There being no express grant of this power, the matter stood thus until the pronouncement of a dictum in 1802 by Marshall, then Chief Justice, in the case of Marbury v. James Madison, Secretary of State (1 Cranch, beginning at p. 137).

Mr. Speaker, the case was a proceeding ex parte so far as argument went. Secretary Madison refused to appear. Neither the question of the Court's power to set aside an act of Congress or the question of the act's constitutionality were raised or discussed at the bar. The public had no notice that the occasion was pregnant with a coup d'état, no notice that it was destined to resurrect Hamilton's principle of autocracy rejected by the Convention when he proposed life terms for the President and Members of the Senate in the form of an irreviewable veto to be exercised by life-term judges who, like Hamilton's President-King and Senate Lords, should act as lords judiciary, answerable to neither the States, the Congress, or the people. The suggestion of nullification, the argument and opinion came all together sua sponte from the Judge. Had the subject been considered in open Court, such a decision is not likely to have been given. The whole conception was volunteered. Why did Marshall volunteer it? Answer, politics. The Hamilton-Jefferson feud was then in full fury. Marshall, a Hamiltonian, was Secretary of State to Adams, also a Hamiltonian and Federalist. Upon the defeat of the Federalists, Adams, before retiring, appointed Marshall Chief Justice, so that for a time Marshall was both Secretary of State and Chief Justice.

Discountenancing his former opinion as attorney, Judge Marshall said:

So if a law be in opposition to the Constitution, if both the law and the Constitution apply to a particular case, so that the Court must either decide that case comformably to the law, disregarding the Constitution, or conformably to the Constitution, disregarding the law, the Court must determine which of these conflicting rules governs the case. This is of the very essence of judicial duty.

Thus the particular phraseology of the Constitution of the United States confirms and strengthens the principle, supposed to be essential to all written constitutions, that a law repugnant to the Constitution is void; and that courts, as well as other departments, are bound by that instrument (C).

However, within 2 years Marshall himself, in a letter to Judge Chase, which only became public in recent times, abandoned the claim of a final authority in the courts to nullify acts of Congress. Beveridge, who brought the letter into public light, speaking of its sentiments, declares:

They were in direct contradiction to his reasoning in Marbury v. Madison, and utterly destructive of the Federalist philosophy of judicial control of legislation.

I shall have occasion to refer to this third position of Marshall again (E).

Marbury had been appointed by Adams, just before retiring, as a justice in the District of Columbia. But Secretary Marshall forgot to deliver him his commission. So when Marshall became Chief Justice, Marbury went to the Court to ask for a mandamus ordering Madison, the new Secretary of State, to deliver it. The Court decided that Marbury was entitled to his commission and that mandamus was the proper writ. At this point comes the rub, ladies and gentlemen. What would Madison, what would the red-headed apostle of democracy, Thomas Jefferson, say to the writ? Would it be defied. Marshall believed it would be defied, and he himself suffer the resulting humiliation. An escape must be found. The writ must not be issued. But how deny it? Ignore the Court's former precedents, and declare the mandamus law unconstitutional. And this was what the Court did.

Thomas Jefferson regarded the decision as a usurpation as appears in his correspondence. On September 11, 1804, he wrote to Mrs. Adams on the matter as follows:

* * * But the opinion, which gives to the judges the right to decide what laws are constitutional and what not, not only for themselves in their own sphere of action but for the legislature and Executive also in their spheres, would make a judiciary a despotic branch (Jefferson's Works, vol. IV, p. 26).

Each department "in their own sphere of action", says Jefferson. That is, Congress enacts the law against piracy, but only the courts can punish the pirate. Congress alone can declare war, but only the Executive can conduct it. Congress can enact a bankruptcy law, but only the courts can declare a man a bankrupt. Should Congress order that John Smith be hanged as a pirate, or declare John Smith a bankrupt, it would be invading the judicial function. By the same token, when a court declares what is proper legislation and what is not proper legislation as to piracy and bankruptcy it is invading the legislative function. Nowhere else in the world was this separateness of function denied.

And later he wrote to Jarvis:

I know of no safe depository of the ultimate powers of the society but the people themselves; and if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with a wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them but to inform their discretion by education. This is the true corrective of abuses of constitutional power (William Charles Jarvis, Sept. 26, 1820) (D).

Mr. Speaker, Thomas Jefferson's protest scotched the Marshall dictum for some 55 years. From 1789 to 1857 the acts of Congress stood undisturbed by judicial nullification, not to become a practice until about 1880.

A word about the courts in general. I am for them with all my heart when acting under and not above the Constitution. It is my view that they are indispensable. Their absence means anarchy. I believe that we should contribute to filling the one gap left in human society by joining the World Court, and granting it the same jurisdiction over controversies between nations given our Supreme Court over controversies between the States. The legislature could not discharge their function; should it assume to try a controversy between citizens according to legislative procedure, only confusion and injustice could result. Only the courts' methods are sufficiently adapted to such work. This is proved by all the experience of mankind. But the same experience indicates that the courts are unfitted to determine national policy or to make laws for a people. So long, long before our Constitution court and legislative functions had been rigorously separated. I have no patience with the lawmaker who would invade the judicial field. I have no more for the nullifying acts of courts.

INTERPRETATION OF THE CONSTITUTION—BY WHOM AND WHEN

"Somebody should determine whether an act of Congress is repugnant to the Constitution," it is argued; "then why not the judge?" Answer, "Why not the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the President, who are sworn to support the Constitution and who speak the will of the people?" This was the answer made by the Convention which formed the Constitution. And their reasons are convincing enough to the thoughtful.

The first reason is that—

(a) The Constitution is not a deed or mortgage, a contract or private document, usually supplied with sufficient detail to enable the judge to interpret it fully and where the interpretation of the judge is of consequence only to the litigants concerned.

(b) Conversely, the Constitution is a statesman's document, composed largely of abstract phrases, phrases which of necessity, in such an abbreviated instrument, are of general but indeterminate significance; phrases whose interpretations call for whole statutes which in turn call for the exercise of the lawmaker's discretion. Such general phrases are like the subject index of a book and call for defining statutes as the book index calls for a book.

Hence, while in disputed cases the private or lawyer's document calls for judicial interpretation, the statesman's document needs to be interpreted in the legislative laboratory where and when the statute is being made (F).

The second reason is—

(c) The interpretation needs be finally made by the Congress and President before the law goes into operation because the life of the citizen or security of the country may depend upon the immediate and unconditional operation of the statute.

(d) The citizen is conclusively presumed to know the law. Hence he is entitled to know whether it is a law when it passes, so that he may fashion his conduct accordingly. Any veto should therefore take place before the obligations of the law attach. The Constitution has made ample protective provision for such a veto on constitutional grounds. A bill may be vetoed by a majority in the House or Senate, where it is first proposed; if not vetoed there, then by a majority in the other House; and if not vetoed by either House, then by the President. If vetoed by none of these, the people at the next election can elect a new Congress to repeal the act. Here are three successive occasions when responsible officials, sworn to support the Constitution, elected by and responsible to the people, may, as they often do, exercise a preventive veto. The unwise or the unconstitutional bill is thus stopped before obligations are fixed on the citizen. From 1789 to 1857—68 years—this kind of veto alone obtained. It surely sufficed the Republic through its period of greatest development, a chapter of changes and of progress, I venture to affirm, without parallel in the history of nations.

THE LAWSUIT VETO

The lawsuit veto by the method of nullification fails to provide the protection for the country and citizen given by the veto provided in the Constitution; because—

First. It can only be exercised if and when some interested litigant invokes it in the courts.

Second. Meanwhile contingent obligation attaches to all citizens, conditional upon some litigant successfully attacking the law.

Third. The statute becomes a mere order nisi dependent upon courthouse litigation conducted not by officials responsible to the people but by private litigants, whose approach is only individual, and not pro bono publico, as designed by the Constitution and as justly expected of the Members of Congress.

Fourth. Such a lawsuit veto does not operate ab initio on the citizen. If he has not brought suit in the courts, in many cases his effective rights may be one thing; if he has, they may be wholly different, the present processing-tax situation being an example.

Mr. Speaker, Chief Justice Marshall concluded his decision with the statement:

> That a law repugnant to the Constitution is void, and that courts, as well as other departments, are bound by that instrument.

Please observe what this power signifies if thus incontinently derived by mere inference. Not only the Supreme Court, officers in the departments, and the lower courts but the humblest justice of the peace is empowered to nullify the statute before him if he thinks it is repugnant to the Constitution.

Such a case happened in my own State. A justice of the peace was trying a commercial traveler from some other State for violation of a Maryland law. He concluded that the Maryland law violated the Federal Constitution, and actually held the Maryland law void. The case went to a Maryland circuit court, where the justice of the peace was promptly reversed. The commercial traveler carried his case to the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the justice of the peace was reversed again. The case at length reached the Supreme Court. That Court reversed our court of appeals and circuit court and affirmed the squire.

Now, mark you, not only may the justice of the peace nullify a statute under this unbridled power which carries no limitations as to who shall exercise it, but officers of "other departments are bound by the Constitution" to do so should the sworn official applying the act infer that it was repugnant to the Constitution. All judicial officers may nullify; any executive officer may nullify an act of Congress. Certainly here is the philosophy of anarchy issuing from the fountain of the law. And anarchy it proved to be when this dictum of Marshall was first applied 57 years later in the Dred Scott decision.

The highest intelligence and wisdom will be freely granted the makers of the Constitution. Hence the credibility of an undeclared intention imputed to them may be judged by the consequences it involves. A consequence of inferring such a power is that it carries all the power of the veto but carries no limitations as to the time when or the official by whom it shall be exercised. It is also a veto which may not be reversed. The Missouri Compromise Act was passed in 1820 and permitted to perform its high purpose of insuring the "domestic tranquillity" for 37 years before its veto by a divided Court in 1857. Is it conceivable, I ask you, my colleagues, that such a gathering of lawmakers would propose a veto that might be exercised by any sworn official—judicial or executive—without limit of time or opportunity to the Congress to revise the legislative mandate? If not, how can such an intention be imputed to the makers of the Constitution?

Other able judges of the time, Judge Bland, of Maryland, Chief Justice Gibson, of Pennsylvania, among them, discountenanced the Marshall view. Professor Haines, the foremost student of this subject, remarks:

> Anyone who carefully considers the opinions of Judges Bland and Gibson can readily perceive that reason and logic had comparatively little weight with those who are resolutely about to make judicial review of legislation a part of the American political system.

The comment of the late Chief Justice Clarke, of North Carolina, also seems fitting:

> The power to set aside or nullify an act of Congress or a State legislature is a purely political power, and is so recognized by the constitutions which give the veto to the Executive. It comes under no definition or conception of the judicial power, which is to judge between the parties to a controversy. Neither the Government nor the State is a party to these proceedings, in which its supremest power—that of enacting laws—is nullified. As claimed and exercised by the courts, it is the absolute, autocratic power, because it is irreviewable. Those whose interest it is to have such power over the legislative and executive assert it for their own ends. The wonder is that it has ever been acquiesced in at all under a free form of government.

Let us not forget that the Republic grew and prospered without the nullifying of the acts of its Congress from 1789 to 1857. The world will never forget what followed the assumption of this power in the Dred Scott decision.

MISSOURI COMPROMISE ACT AND DRED SCOTT

Mr. Speaker, attending the birth of the Constitution was the unhappy institution of slavery, regretted by the noble spirits of the South, like Washington and Jefferson and others, as much as by humanitarians anywhere. A Representative from the South myself, I am happy now to look into the faces of other southern Representatives and say the southern conscience on the subject was not a less Christian conscience than the veriest reformer's. Here before me are a hundred grandsons of soldiers of the Confederacy. If anyone were to offer a single one of you the ownership of a slave today, you would repulse him with disgust. It was with such a feeling that your great-grandfathers joined in the passage of the Missouri Compromise Act prohibiting the extension of slavery north of the Mason and Dixon's line. This act passed in 1820, was the product of the statesmanship of both the North and the South, patriotically designed to insure the national tranquillity; and with its passage some of the greatest names in our history—Clay, Calhoun, Webster, and other worthies—are immortally associated.

Let it be noted that it was a private litigant in a private suit, not a State of the South, that gave challenge to Dred Scott's right to freedom under this law. His master, and owner, though knowing the law, had still carried a slave into free territory, with notice that such an act on his part would emancipate him. In 1772 Lord Mansfield, under similar circumstances, had ruled "a slave cannot breathe the free air of England and not be emancipated." This was the declared intent of the Missouri Compromise Act, which gave freedom to Dred Scott when his master voluntarily took him into free territory.

SECOND INTERPOLATION AND THE DUE-PROCESS CLAUSE

This act of Congress conferred freedom on Dred Scott thus taken by his master into free territory. But his master insisted on holding him, despite the law. Dred Scott then invoked the protection of the courts to compel his release. Another act of Congress, the fugitive slave law, provided that slaves escaping into another State should be delivered back to the owners. But Dred Scott was not an escaped slave, and when he sought his day in court he was proceeding under a like act of Congress which entitled him to freedom. What can the court do but grant its protection? Here we meet the second amendment by interpolation.

The due-process-of-law clause in the fifth amendment, the Bill of Rights designed by Jefferson, was subjected to an interpolation, and under this interpolation the Missouri Compromise Act was held void. The relevant parts of the fifth amendment read as follows:

> No person shall be * * * subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, * * *.

The life, liberty, and property clause was clearly meant to be an epitome of Magna Carta. King John had been throwing his subjects into the Tower and denying them a trial, had been confiscating their property and even hanging them without trial, without a day in court; that is, without due process of law. Magna Carta was wrested from him by his rebellious subjects to guarantee a day in court and proper trial before their lives, liberties, or properties should be condemned.

But the Court ruled that the words "due process of law" meant something other and besides a just and regular trial by a competent court, and that the fifth amendment to the Constitution should suffer an interpolation to read, in effect, as follows:

> Provided that if the law under which the person claims his right be an act of Congress, the judge shall consider and decide whether such law conforms to his ideas of right and wrong and invalidate the act if he considers it to be wrong, the judgment of the Congress that it be right to the contrary notwithstanding.

It was recognized, of course, that Congress would have to enact laws as to crimes with penalties involving the life, liberty, or property of the offender. True to their instincts, the fathers placed life first, liberty second, and property third, and never imagined an addition by way of interpolation which should so pervert a constitutional provision designed to protect a just liberty of the human being. Nevertheless, a divided Court declared that Dred Scott had no right to sue under the Missouri compromise law because, forsooth, it deprived the master, Sanford, of property under its wholly unauthorized interpolation. Here is a second unwritten amendment interpolated by a divided Court in what can only be characterized as the most ill-fated decision ever given by a tribunal which was designed, and wished to be considered, as a purely judicial body.

Says Dr. Edward S. Corwin, McCormick professor of jurisprudence in Princeton University:

When the fifth amendment was added to the Constitution in 1792 no one, so far as I am aware, had even suggested that the term "due process of law" had any other than its anciently established and self-evident meaning of correct procedure; nor was such a suggestion to be accepted by any court, in any jurisdiction, for many years to come (p. 95, Twilight of the Supreme Court).

And later discussing the illegitimacy of this interpolation in the Dred Scott case Dr. Corwin says:

Indeed, at one point, and that a vital one, he (Chief Justice Taney) departs from the course of historical fact so flagrantly that one can hardly believe that he did not do so knowingly. This is where he boldly invokes the "due process" clause of amendment V as invalidating section 8 of the Missouri Compromise. As was pointed out in the previous chapter, no one at the time of the framing and adoption of the Constitution had any idea that this clause did more than consecrate a method of procedure against accused persons, and the modern doctrine of due process of law, the most important single basis of judicial review today, could never have been laid down except in defiance of history. (Ibid. p. 118.)

Thomas Jefferson, expositor of human rights and apostle of democracy, could not have supported it had he imagined such a perversion of this bill of human rights. It is easier to think of him as choosing a martyr's grave. Consider his statute repealing the law of primogeniture. Could it have survived such an interpolation into his bill of rights?

Mr. Speaker, let it be clearly understood that these words "life, liberty, and property" embrace all the civil rights and wrongs of the human being. They are titular words, each a title to a large branch of the law. Whole law libraries are necessary in our day to describe such rights; and for a courthouse tribunal to assume final power to veto legislative acts dealing with such all-embracive categories is bluntly to serve notice on us that the judge has assumed a suzerainty over the whole legislative domain. Consider well that he will do his legislating without committee investigation or report, without public discussion by responsible representatives of the people and in a forum of private litigants upon the arguments of their interested advocates.

Life, liberty, property. Under titles so lacking in specificity, without standards to guide judgment, it is the sociologist, not the legalist or judge, whose reaction is secured. And to whose philosophy of human rights shall he react? To Sir William Blackstone or Jeremy Benthams? To John Stuart Mill, the economist of the laissez faire, or to John Stuart Mill, the Socialist? Upon the answer to this question the progress of legal justice, the life of the Nation may depend. The history of the subject emphasizes the importance of the answer. Note the reaction of Justice Field to the income tax of 1894:

The income-tax law under consideration is marked by discriminating features which affect the whole law. It discriminates between those who receive an income of $4,000 and those who do not. It thus vitiates, in my judgment, by this arbitrary discrimination, the whole legislation. * * * Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth or wealth or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society.

To which the judge, naively overlooking his own usurpation, adds an expression of his apprehensions:

Where is the course of usurpation to end? The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others, larger and more sweeping, until our political contests will become a war of the poor against the rich; a war constantly growing in intensity and bitterness.

What else might be expected from the judge? The litigant invites his opinion on the right or wrong of particular legislation regarding life, liberty, and property. A graduated income tax was unknown to the common law, to Blackstone, or Story. He answers according to his pre-Victorian lights. The due-process-of-law interpolation puts him under no standards for guidance. He will choose his own.

Criticizing the tendency of the courts to find implied limits on legislatures in the phrase, "due process of law", a great justice of the Supreme Court, Justice Holmes, has said:

There is nothing that I more deprecate than the use of the fourteenth amendment beyond the absolute compulsion of its words to prevent the making of social experiments that an important part of the community desires, in the insulated chambers afforded by the several States, even though the experiments may seem futile or even noxious to me and to those whose judgment I respect. (A Government of Laws or a Government of Men, p. 36, Professor Haines.)

Ladies and gentlemen, the application of this interpolation to State statutes proved so destructive to their welfare laws that the judges had to call a halt. Stare decisis forbade them to strike out the Dred Scott interpolation; so that they had to invent and add another interpolation, the well-known legal fiction of a police power. Such a power will be sought in vain in any written constitution. How fitting, therefore, is the remark of Governor Hughes, now Chief Justice:

We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the judges say it is.

THIRD INTERPOLATION AND THE GENERAL-WELFARE CLAUSE

Mr. Speaker, Congressman SISSON in his resolution asks the Judiciary Committee to investigate and report—

Whether the legislative power of the Congress does or does not extend to the enactment of laws making provision for the general welfare of the United States and to insure the domestic tranquillity.

Well, how about the Constitution on the subject? The general welfare is found in the trilogy of great objectives mentioned in its preamble. It also received specific attention in the enumeration of our legislative powers.

Mr. Speaker, when the subject matter transcended the powers of the State to reach both cause and effect, because of its geographical limitation, they recognized a general-welfare subject. In such cases the Federal Government was given legislative power to act. The makers of the Constitution did not intend a vacuum in the Constitution as to national legislative subject matter on which the State was geographically incompetent to act. They left no such vacuum in the judicial power to act where plaintiff and defendant reside in different States. The intention of the Convention was often made manifest: That the sum total of the powers of the State legislature plus the power of the National Legislature should equal the sum total of the powers of the Colonial Legislature and the House of Commons before their separation. Why not? There was no vacuum in colonial days. And so the general-welfare clause was adopted as a residuary power.

But, sir, that clause has suffered destructively at the hands of the interpolator. It has been subjected to two interpolations which have shorn it of all meaning. The interpolations are in brackets:

Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, imposts and excises [in order] to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and the general welfare [in manner following, viz].

Mr. Speaker, under these interpolations the general-welfare clause has become a neglected power; indeed, is treated as if only a euphemistic tail to the power of taxation.

Sir, I have now to make a surprising statement. This general-welfare clause has never been examined, has never had a hearing as a power in the Supreme Court. In no case has that Court critically examined its history to ascertain whether it was intended as an enumerated legislative power. I make this statement on the authority of Dr. James F. Lawson, who has made a thorough-going study of the history of the Constitution with particular reference to the legislative powers and published an exhaustive work called "The General-Welfare Clause, a Study of the Power of Congress Under the Constitution of the United States" (G).

I have come to know Dr. Lawson personally, and feel warranted in making the above statement on the basis of his character as well as the scholarship manifest in his book. Certain it is that the N. R. A. statute involved this subject and referred to the general welfare as its objective. Yet I do not remember a single reference to the welfare clause in the Court's opinion with reference to the act. Hence the following discussion of the subject which I think necessary.

Let me trace, in a running fashion, the history of this neglected power.

CONVENTION ACTIONS ON WELFARE CLAUSE

General Washington, Governor Randolph, Madison, and other distinguished associates, reaching Philadelphia sometime before the other delegates to the Convention, prepared a plan for a constitution and a national organization of government. Its preamble read:

Resolved, That the Articles of Confederation ought to be so corrected and enlarged as to accomplish the objects proposed by their institution; namely, common defense, security of liberty and general welfare.

The plan, since known as the "Virginia plan", was a comprehensive one. It embraced full legislative, executive and judicial organizations. I shall restrict myself to a discussion of its legislative phases alone.

Let us follow chronologically the stream of thought and action of the Convention as to the Virginia proposal through the 3½ months of its history.

I begin with the introduction of the Washington Virginia plan on May 29. Its preamble reads:

May 29

Resolved, That the Articles of Confederation ought to be so corrected and enlarged as to accomplish the objects proposed by their institution; namely, common defense, security of liberty and general welfare.

And that Congress shall—

(1) Enjoy the legislative rights vested in Congress by the confederation.

(2) Moreover to legislate in all cases to which the separate States are incompetent.

(3) Or in which the harmony of the United States might be interrupted by the exercise of individual legislation.

July 17

On July 17 Sherman moved to limit the above proposal in the Virginia plan so as—

Not to interfere with the government of the individual States in any of the matters of the internal police which respect the governments of such States only and with which the general welfare of the United States is not concerned. (1 D. H. C. 96.)

This limitation was rejected by the convention.

July 17

Later in the same day the convention passed Bedford's resolution, adopting an amended Virginia proposal—

(1) That the national legislature ought to possess the legislative rights vested in Congress by the confederation;

(2) and moreover to legislate in all cases for the general interest of the United States;

(3) and also in those to which the States are separately incompetent;

(4) or in which the harmony of the United States may be interrupted by the exercise of individual legislation. (1 D. H. C. 96.)

You will note that the phrase "general interest" is a rough synonym for the phrase "general welfare" employed in the Virginia plan.

July 26

In the 2 months of its session the Convention had agreed upon 23 resolutions defining the structure and functions of the proposed government. On July 26 it adopted a motion that these resolutions "for the establishment of a national government be referred to a committee of five (Rutledge, Randolph, Gorman, Ellsworth and Wilson) to prepare and report a constitution conformable thereto." Among these 23 resolutions so referred was the following:

VI. Resolved, That the national legislature ought to possess the legislative rights vested in Congress by the Confederation and moreover to legislate in all cases for the general interest of the United States and also in those to which the States are separately incompetent or in which the harmony of the United States may be interrupted by the exercise of individual legislation. (Elliot's Debates, vol. 1, 221; 3 D. H. C. 413–414.)

August 22

This Committee of Five (Rutledge) made a special report amending the August 6 draft of the Constitution and recommending:

That at the end of the sixteenth clause of the seventh article the following words be added:

"And to provide as may become necessary from time to time for the well managing and security of the common property and general interest and welfare of the United States in such manner as shall not interfere with the governments of individual States in matters which respect only their internal police or for which their individual authorities may be competent" (Elliot, p. 256). [Italics supplied.]

In the August 6 printed draft of the Constitution article VII carried the legislative powers in 17 clauses. The welfare clause was thus assigned at the end of the legislative powers and wholly disconnected from the clause on taxation.

September 4

Subsequently, on September 4, Mr. Brearly, of the Committee of Eleven, reported eight revisions of the printed Constitution draft of August 6, among which was the following:

The Legislature shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises; to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.

And the clause was read twice and adopted by the Convention on September 4 (Elliot, pp. 281–282). By this action the welfare clause was shifted up from the sixteenth paragraph to the first paragraph.

September 12

On September 12 Dr. Johnson, from the Committee on Stile and Arrangement, to which the adopted portions had been referred, reported the second printed draft of the Constitution.

General Washington was President of the Convention. The following portion of the legislative section is from a photostat of his desk copy printed for intra-Convention use:

WASHINGTON COPY, DRAFT OF SEPTEMBER 12

SEC. 8. The Congress shall have power—

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States (but all duties imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States).

To borrow money on the credit of the United States.

To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes.

To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States—

And so forth.

The sentence in parenthesis, "but all taxes shall be uniform throughout the United States", was first proposed and adopted on September 14, 3 days before the signing of the great document.

Mr. Speaker, surveying the history of this subject, I ask with confidence, what can be more certain about the Convention than that the Convention intended to vest in Congress this power to legislate as to the general welfare?

THE WELFARE CLAUSE A POWER

Thus the Washington, or Virginia, plan became the general-welfare clause in the Constitution. And now I have to call attention to an accident in punctuation. The Washington copy was turned over to a copyist, to write out in hand on parchment for engrossment, who substituted a comma for the semicolon. The journal indicates that no such change was authorized and that members of the Convention signing the Constitution were entirely unadvised of the change.

There was no Convention print of the written copy they signed. The engrossed written document was "read" to them (Elliot, p. 317) as like documents are read to us here from the desk. Of the semicolon they were conscious. Printed copies carrying the semicolon were before the Members.

I continue the exposition by quoting from a dialog with Senator NORRIS and the late Senator Walsh in the Judiciary Committee of the Senate:

Senator WALSH of Montana. If I understand the question of the chairman [Mr. NORRIS] right, the idea in his mind is that it is equally as well when you put a comma there, it is equally as well set apart from what goes before as though there was a semicolon there, and if the clause "to provide for the payment of debts and general welfare" is a modification of what precedes, you should not have either a comma or a semicolon.

Mr. LEWIS. Exactly so. The erroneous comma is meaningless as a modifier, unless you interpolate some phrase like "in order." If the comma be read to mean "and", as the history of the subject requires, then a distinct legislative power is carried.

Senator WALSH of Montana. As I understand you, Mr. LEWIS, you contend it should be construed as though Congress had power to lay and collect taxes, imposts and excises; that Congress shall have the power to pay the debts of the United States; that Congress shall have the power to provide for the common defense and the general welfare of the United States?

The other contention is that Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises "in order" to pay the debts and provide for——

The CHAIRMAN. It seems to me to get the last construction you would have to take the comma out. What is the use of the comma?

Exactly. The rules of punctuation sustain the chairman. (H)

INTERPOLATIONS IN WELFARE CLAUSE

It was Story, himself a contractionist, who first resorted to an interpolation. He was in ignorance of the erroneous substitution of the comma for the semicolon. I quote from him:

The reading therefor which will be maintained in these commentaries. * * *

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises [in order] to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States."

That is, for the purpose of paying the public debts and providing for the common defense and general welfare.

Even this interpolation of Story leaves the welfare idea still standing as a legislative objective for which Congress can lay taxes as well as appropriate. The destructionist will have none of this milk-and-water contraction. He argues that the welfare clause carries no kind of legislative power but is only a preamble to the particular powers, and so is to be regarded as mere surplusage. The contractionist would give objective meaning to the words "provide for the general welfare." The destructionist would eliminate all meaning. To do so, like the contractionist, he must get rid of the comma by interpolation of the words "in order." Even so, the idea "general welfare" still remains as an objective under the taxing clause to raise "implied legislative power." Now, how can he destroy this power also? Only by a second interpolation of such words as "in manner following, viz." The clause then would read:

Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises [in order] to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and the general welfare [in manner following, viz].

The contractionist, Story, must use one interpolation "in order"; the destructionist must supplement it with a second interpolation "in manner following, viz."

But even Story protests in his Commentaries (vol. I, sec. 913) against this second interpolation. I quote him:

It is not said to "provide for the common defense and general welfare, in manner following, viz", which would be the natural expression to indicate such an intention. But it stands entirely disconnected from every subsequent clause, both in sense and punctuation, and is no more a part of them than they are of the power to lay taxes.

Mr. Speaker, between them these interpolators and their kind have contrived to prevent the application of this necessary power to social and economic subjects when they do not fall clearly under the commerce clause. Hence a vacuum in the legislative field, although the "State is incompetent to act" (H).

A NECESSARY POWER

I think it is clear that equally with comma or semicolon the clause expresses a power as its history shows it to have been intended. Hence Congress may provide for the general welfare not merely through the levying of a tax but by other logical and legitimate methods; for example, the prescription of justiciable rights and duties generally. It is true that such a power is applicable to but a limited part of the total field of legislative subject matter. But when applicable it possesses properties like the postal clause, enabling the lawmaker to fully control the subject matter. The breakdown of the principle of competition in farming and coal mining which calls for a limitation of the production of such products, the equal right of competent men to work and to a share of the Nation's employment asset, all subjects which the separate State is organically unable to encompass for geographical reasons, are examples of interstate subjects, the evils of which may run into catastrophes if an equal national power to treat them be denied.

Legislative power to effect such control exists in all the leading countries, most of which have taken some action. Such a legislative power unquestionably existed in the sum total of the legislative powers of the colony and Parliament taken together. It was to conserve this necessary legislative power that the welfare provision of the Virginia plan and the general-welfare clause was designed.

WHY WAS THE VIRGINIA PLAN PROPOSED?

To prevent national anarchy Washington declared—

We are descending into the vale of confusion and darkness. The confederation appears to me to be little more than a shadow and Congress a nugatory body. To me it is a solecism in politics * * * that we should confederate as a nation and yet be afraid to give the rulers of the nation who are the creatures of our own making * * * sufficient powers to order and direct the affairs of the same.

And it is in such a state, sir, that the denial of these constitutional powers is placing the country again.

REVENUE ACTS NULLIFIED

Income taxes

Ladies and gentlemen, may I give you a few examples of what has happened to laws passed by this body under these interpolations? They are taken by permission from the comprehensive work of Professor Haines, published by the University of California, entitled the "American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy", an excellent treatise (F).

We have, first, the courts nullifying the income-tax law of 1894. Here is a veto by the Court coming after a similar act had been once sustained by the Court. Dissenting opinions were rendered by Justices Harlan, Brown, Jackson, and White. Justice Harlan claimed that by reversing the earlier law and practice of the Government the majority of the Court rendered it necessary to amend the Constitution to secure principles of right, justice, and equality in Federal taxation; and he insisted that policy and economic considerations, rather than law, actuated the majority in their conclusions.

Stock dividends income

More recently, a decade ago, the courts struck down the income tax on net income paid stockholders through stock dividends. This decision, according to careful estimate, has already cost the Government more than a billion dollars (I).

Professor Haines says:

The Revenue Act of 1916 imposed a tax on stock dividends of corporations issued from the profits accumulated since the adoption of the sixteenth amendment. The imposition of such a tax was held void. A stock dividend was held not to be income within the meaning of that term as comprised in the sixteenth amendment.

Justice Pitney delivered the opinion. Justices Holmes, Day, Brandeis, and Clarke dissented. Justice Holmes believed that the word "income" in the sixteenth amendment should be read in "a sense most obvious to the common understanding at the time of its adoption", and that according to this meaning the amendment clearly justified the tax. Justice Brandeis also contended that stock dividends were income within the authority granted to Congress under the sixteenth amendment, and he claimed that the majority of the Court departed from the rule that "the high prerogative of declaring an act of Congress invalid should never be exercised except in a clear case" (Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U. S. 189).

Why judges do not pay income taxes

Again, the Revenue Act of 1919, which levied a tax on the net income of individuals, provided that the salaries of all Government officials, including the President, Congressmen, and judges, should be included in their income-tax returns. This act was held void as to the judges on the far-fetched and empty argument that the Constitution provided that the compensation of the judges shall not be diminished during their continuance in office. Justices Holmes and Brandeis dissented. Justice Holmes said he found nothing in the Constitution to exonerate a judge from the ordinary duties of a citizen. A tax that applied to all other citizens seemed to be properly levied against the salaries of Federal judges. The income-tax, or sixteenth, amendment provides that Congress may levy taxes on incomes "from whatever source derived" (253 U. S., p. 245).

Similarly, all the employees of the State, county and city governments escape payment of Federal taxes on their salaries. The familiar legal fiction, "The power to tax is the power to destroy", is made to do service for this purpose in the absence of any such an exemption in the Constitution. If the salaries of State officials were included in their taxable incomes, they might resign, forsooth, and imperil the sovereignty of their State. A fine pain easer, sir, is this legal fiction. There is nothing in all the poets so apt to warm the cockles of the taxdodger's heart. The fiction also works to exempt Federal officeholders from the payment of State income taxes to the States which protect them as residents.

Sections 319 to 324 of the Revenue Act of 1924 were interpreted so as to impose a tax on gifts fully consummated before its provisions came before Congress, and were held invalid as contrary to the due-process-of-law clause.

Justices Holmes, Brandeis, Sanford, and Stone thought these provisions should be construed as operating only from the date of the act and applicable only to gifts thereafter made, and thus they would be clearly valid (275 U. S., p. 142).

Social justice

Here is the Child Labor Act voided by a 5-to-4 decision. This law was held invalid on the ground that it was an attempt to invade the State's police power over local trade and manufacture and hence not warranted by the authority delegated to Congress over interstate commerce.

Justice Day delivered the opinion of the Court. Justices Holmes, McKenna, Brandeis, and Clarke dissented. Justice Holmes thought the statute should have been upheld because its prohibitions applied only to the carriage of certain goods in interstate and foreign commerce which brought it clearly within one of the express powers granted to Congress.

He observed:

I should have thought that the most conspicuous decisions of this Court had made it clear that the power to regulate commerce and other constitutional powers could not be cut down or qualified by the fact that it might interfere with the carrying out of the domestic policy of any State.

But he added:

The act does not meddle with anything belonging to the States. They may regulate their internal affairs and their domestic commerce as they like. But when they seek to send their products across the State line, they are no longer within their rights (Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U. S. 251 (1918)).

The right to work

And the right to work—here is an act of Congress safeguarding the right to work by prohibiting the dismissal of an employee in interstate commerce because of membership in a labor union. A majority of the Court voted it down. Justice McKenna emphatically dissented, finding that entire act presented—

A well-coordinated plan for the settlement of disputes between carriers and their employees by bringing the disputes to arbitration and accommodation and thereby prevent strikes and the public disorder and derangement of business that may be consequent upon them.

Justice Holmes, also dissenting, said:

I also think that the statute is constitutional, and but for the decision of my brethren I should have felt pretty clear about it. * * * The section simply prohibits the more powerful party to exact certain undertakings, or to threaten dismissal or unjustly discriminate on certain grounds against those already employed. * * * I confess that I think that the right to make contracts at will that has been derived from the word "liberty" in the amendments has been stretched to its extreme by the decisions; but they agree that sometimes the right may be restrained. When there is, or generally is believed to be, an important ground of public policy for restraint, the Constitution does not forbid it, whether this Court agrees or disagrees with the policy pursued.

Minimum wages for women

This House once passed a statute fixing minimum wages for women in the District of Columbia, as to which Congress has full parliamentary powers under the Constitution. The Court voided it under its interpolation to the fifth amendment. It declared this law an interference with the right to contract thus set above the woman's right to the means of life by this perverting interpolation. The act was condemned as a price-fixing measure in private employment and characterized as "the product of a naked, arbitrary exercise of power."

Justice Sutherland delivered the opinion of the Court. Justice Brandeis took no part in the decision. Chief Justice Taft and Justices Sanford and Holmes dissented. Chief Justice Taft declared that—

It is not the function of this Court to hold congressional acts invalid simply because they are passed to carry out economic views which the Court believes to be unwise or unsound.

The Chief Justice believed that former decisions of the Court gave ample warrant for the action which Congress had taken. Justice Holmes, also dissenting, said:

I confess that I do not understand the principle on which the power to fix a minimum for the wages of women can be denied by those who admit the power to fix a maximum for their hours of work * * *.

The criterion of constitutionality is not whether we believe the law to be for the public good. We certainly cannot be prepared to deny that a reasonable man reasonably might have that belief in view of the legislation of Great Britain, Victoria, and a number of the States of the Union (Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U. S. 525 (1923)).

Judges' pensions, yes; workers' pensions, no

Sir, very recently, by 5-to-4 decision, the Railway Old-Age Pension Act has been nullified. However, a law granting full-salary pensions to the judges does not offend. An act passed by the Congress assuming to reduce such pensions of retired Federal judges was even held void. Some 70 statutes of the United States have been thus voided so far, of which I give a descriptive list in the appendixes (J).

WHAT ABOUT THE STATES?

Mr. Speaker, the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, which carries the same life, liberty, and property clause with respect to legislation by the States, has been subjected by the courts to the same interpolation as to "due process of law", and many thousands of State laws have been similarly nullified.

It is the habit to excuse such nullification by saying that the judge is but protecting the State powers against impairment by Federal invasion; that the powers of the State have been almost destroyed by Federal action. There is, sir, just ground for this complaint. Consider what the State once was, clothed in her majestic colonial powers. Within the colonial boundaries she could exercise legislative powers like those of the British Parliament. Look at her now. Her legislative powers have been stripped to the bone. But who stripped them? Not this House. I challenge them to point to a single act of Congress impairing the State's power to legislate. Who stripped them? I answer boldly, these interpolating courts who have palsied the legislative organs of the States with the same destructive interpolation invented in the Dred Scott case. Let me rehearse a list, by titles, of subjects on which the State could once legislate, all of them purely domestic subjects which are partly or wholly forbidden them now; forbidden them by the edicts of judges issued under this perverting "due process" interpolation:

Federal decisions

1. Bakeries.
2. Banks.
3. Bedding.
4. Chain stores.
5. Creameries.
6. Education.
7. Employment agencies.
8. Flags.
9. Labor disputes.
10. Labor unions.
11. Laundries.
12. Lotteries.
13. Minimum-wage laws.
14. Mining.
15. Mortgages.
16. Negroes.
17. Newspapers.
18. Old-age homes.
19. Picketing.
20. Political parties.
21. Public utilities.
22. Railroads.
23. Railway conductors.
24. Rents.
25. Sleeping cars.
26. Statute of limitations.
27. Taxation.
28. Theater tickets.
29. Trust-made articles.
30. Use of highways.

State decisions

1. Alien employees.
2. Antitrust exemptions.
3. Barbers.
4. Chinese immigration.
5. Chinese labor.
6. Company stores.
7. Compulsory labor.
8. Convict-made goods.
9. Discharging employees.
10. Employment agencies.
11. Garnishment. (K)
12. Municipal ice.
13. Plumbers.
14. Public works.
15. Scrip payments.
16. Store orders.
17. Tips.
18. Union labels.
19. Weekly wage.
20. Women.
21. Employment.

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, consider what the States once were. And look at them now—impotent to protect the helpless or the wronged against cunning and selfishness.

Meanwhile the Congress, as well as the States, is forbidden by like edicts, sanctioned only by interpolations, to act where the State is organically incapable to act, under the pretense that we should be encroaching on State powers. Away with this mockery. Let us hope never to hear its false voice in this Chamber again (K).

RÉSUMÉ

Ladies and gentlemen, may I detain you a little longer to summarize. If our beloved Constitution fails us in our generation it fails only because of these interpolations which, like the serpents encoiling themselves about the giant limbs of Laocoön, are paralyzing its preservative powers.

First interpolation

Provided that at any time after the passage of an act by the Congress any person adversely interested may deny any duty thereunder and the validity of such act in any legal proceeding; and if the judge shall consider that such act is not authorized by the Constitution, then he shall hold such act to be invalid, the judgment of the Congress and the President that it is valid to the contrary notwithstanding.

Second interpolation

Provided that if the law under which the litigant party claims his right be an act of Congress, the judge shall consider whether such law conforms to his ideas of right and wrong and invalidate the act if he considers it to be wrong, the judgment of the Congress that it be right to the contrary notwithstanding.

Third interpolation

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises [in order] to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.

The first interpolation, which adds to the expressed judicial powers a jurisdiction to invalidate our acts, is a power to prorogue this Congress so far as our present problems are concerned. The second actually perverts the life, liberty and property clause to provide that all new laws relating to life, liberty, or property, must conform to the opinions of the judges as to right and wrong, the opinion of Congress as to right and wrong to the contrary notwithstanding. Its effect is to crystallize the preexisting laws as to personal and property rules, whether right or wrong, and to sterilize all legislative power for the advancement of legal justice, or adaptation of the laws, even to profound changes in industrial and social conditions.

Certainly its great author never foresaw such a perversion of his Bill of Rights converting it into an instrument which, under the rule of stare decisis, would "peg" the preexisting order and block progress in the field of legal justice. Stare decisis, stare Blackstone. Stare ye common law and ancient statutes. Long live ye philosophers of the laissez faire. Now, sir, I am a lawyer by profession and have no prejudice against the principle of stare decisis as applied in the interpretation of statutes. That a judge has decided a disputed legal question is to my advantage. It enables me to advise my client as to what the law actually is. It enables me to pilot him safely through his affairs. In such cases no ultimate denial of human rights or progress is involved. If the judge has erred in his decision, or if the statute has not been properly worded to express the purpose of the lawmaker, the statute can be amended at the next session of the legislature, sure to meet at an early time. But, sir, when this rule of stare decisis is applied to decisions as to the meaning of the Constitution and there is no constitutional convention in waiting to rectify the effect of the judge's decision, then I say such application is revolutionary, is subversive of justice and the Constitution, and ominously destructive of necessary functions of government.

The third interpolation would destroy a grant of national power to legislate for the general welfare, even where the separate State is organically incapable. It would leave a vacuum in the power of the Nation to protect itself, without example among the nations of the earth.

REMEDIAL SUGGESTIONS

Let me here repeat my opening statement that if we take out of it these false interpolations and restore to it its express power to legislate for the general welfare, our beloved Constitution is as ample to meet our needs today as it was designed to be by the fathers.

How can this work of restoration be performed? May I say our task is mostly a work of elimination of these unwritten interpolations. That it can be performed I am without doubt. The people, acting through their Congress, are still paramount.

It is the purpose of the Sisson resolution to have the Judiciary Committee examine the subject and advise the House as to methods. Bills have already been introduced proposing various methods. May I refer to the Ramsay bills, one providing for a constitutional amendment and another bill requiring that three-fourths of the judges should have to agree in a judgment competent to invalidate; the bill of Congressman MONAGHAN vacating the office of a judge invalidating an act; the resolutions of Senator NORRIS and Representative KELLER proposing a constitutional amendment to be passed upon by conventions in the respective States and a bill of Congressman CROSSER; also the bills of Representatives HILL and HILDEBRANDT. Of course, a general convention to revise the Constitution in any of its parts may be called by the States.

REGULATIONS—EXCEPTIONS

Now, sir, let me refer to a statutory method of treatment provided in the Constitution itself where it deals with the jurisdiction of the courts. I read:

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction.

Sir, this clause confers the Supreme Court's entire original jurisdiction. All its other jurisdiction is conferred by Congress under the following clause:

In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

In one instance at least this power to make exceptions in its jurisdiction was exercised in a challenging way (McCardle, 7 Wall. 506 (1868)). The power was also recognized as early as 1799 (Turner v. Bank, etc., 4 Dallas, 8). It is understood, of course, that the inferior courts have only such jurisdiction as Congress may confer on them.

Many acts passed by the Congress have been invalidated at the mere instance of private litigants on the charge they impaired the sovereign power of the States. Surely only a State itself should be heard by the courts to utter such a complaint. The private litigant commonly is only seeking to avoid a personal obligation on the ground that the State alone can legislate thereon. A regulation by statute providing that the State alone be allowed to complain seems justified.

My service as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means has brought me to think that the disastrous experience of the country with frustration of its just and necessary revenue laws by court nullification demands a denial of such jurisdiction at the mere instance of private litigants in the courts. Are the Members of Congress under oath, the President under his high oath, who have been selected by the taxpayers themselves, and who must face them frequently for vindication or dismissal, not as responsible in the matter of taxation as elective members of Parliament in the other countries of the world? It is of interest to recall that the House of Lords, like our Federal judges, a life-office-holding body, had at length to be divorced from power over revenue bills by the British people.

Let me also refer to regulations which might be applied as to Bill of Rights and other prohibitions found in the Constitution. Many of the prohibitions concern concrete and specific subjects, as in the first amendment, for example, habeas corpus, freedom of religion, speech, or of the press, right to assemble and to petition, and various others. Jurisdiction might well be left in the courts to pass upon the validity of acts relating to such fully described subjects. In the case of such specific prohibitions the courts themselves can feel a real confidence in their opinions. Here is a list of most of such inalienable rights.

INALIENABLE RIGHTS

Habeas corpus.
Bills of attainder.
Ex post facto laws.
Duties on exports from a State.
Preference to ports of any State.

Proof of treason, two witnesses, etc.
Religious qualifications for office, not to be.
No law establishing religion, or prohibiting its exercise.
No law to abridge—
(a) Freedom of speech.
(b) Freedom of the press.
(c) Freedom of peaceable assembly.
(d) Freedom of right of petition.
No law to infringe right to State to militia.
Soldiers not to be quartered "in any house", etc.
Unreasonable searches and seizures.
Denial of presentment and indictment, certain crimes.
Twice in jeopardy, or witness against oneself.
Excessive bail, fines, or cruel and unusual punishments.
Questioning validity of public debt.
Denial right to vote on account of race, slavery, sex.
Treason not to work corruption of blood, etc.
Right of trial by jury, etc.

GENERAL AND INDETERMINATE PHRASES

But, sir, not all the phrases in the great document are or could be as concrete as the above. In truth the Constitution is a denotive rather than a descriptive statement couched, of necessity, in phrases so general that discretion is necessary in their definition and application. Expressions like "commerce among the States", "the general welfare", and others call, not for a dictionary but for the adjusting, even compromising, discretion of the statesman and lawmaker selected in a democracy by society to express its will. The result of this generality in the phrases is to confer an elasticity very necessary in lawmaking. Hence, the facility supplied by nullification to private litigants to raise questions of constitutionality. Professor Haines, author of the most comprehensive work on the subject, concludes:

> There are relatively few instances in which there is a direct and unequivocal conflict between the express terms of a written constitution and a definite provision of a legislative enactment.
>
> Most of the cases now passed upon by the courts do not involve two express provisions definitely in conflict. They are concerned with the application of vague and general words of the Constitution in relation to the significance to be accorded to certain facts and to a political, economic, or social policy selected by the legislature to meet the resulting conditions.
>
> It is not so much, then, the higher law prevailing over the lower law as it is a court's judgment of facts and of the social and economic policy in relation thereto prevailing over a legislative or administrative determination of facts and of public policies. (A Government of Laws or a Government of Men, pp. 15–16.)

Now, sir, with regard to titles like life, liberty, and property which describe no right in particular, specificity of subject is utterly lacking, and it is apparent that the only office a judge discharges in declaring a child-labor law, a minimum-wage, or a maximum-hour law as in violation of the rights of life, liberty, or property is to assume that he has a better understanding of social justice and wise legislation than the Congress selected by the people to act upon these subjects. Bluntly, he must decide that he is wiser than society and Congress. He is not wiser. In my view the courts should be denied jurisdiction to invalidate acts of the State legislature or of the Congress on titles as nonparticularizing as "life, liberty, and property", unless the right intended, a regular trial, be actually denied by a statute. Our high Court has but recently declared an act of Congress ineffective because, although Congress was competent to deal with the subject, we had failed to provide sufficiently specific standards, it thought, to guide the Chief Executive in applying it.

By the same philosophy should the judge's power to invalidate be judged. Where are his standards in such all-comprehensive and often conflicting fields of thought as "life, liberty, and property?" No man not secretly wishing to enjoy arbitrary power would seek this power in the first instance; and no responsible tribunal would accept it, even unsought, did it not feel bounden by the doctrine of stare decisis and the binding power of precedent. I would relieve the fallible judge of power to pronounce such irreparable judgments. Many of them, seeing that they can give no initiative in this legislative field but can act only negatively, and even so without prescribed standards for guidance, would doubtless welcome relief from such responsibility.

Proposed jurisdictional statutes

Mr. Speaker, may I continue to say that an exit from the dilemma in which these decisions have placed the Nation is found in the express provision of the Constitution just quoted, giving to Congress the power to prescribe the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and to determine the jurisdiction of the "inferior courts." I should approach the problem by a statute providing that the "inferior courts" should have no jurisdiction to entertain, hear, or adjudge any suit in which the plaintiff alleged, in any of his pleading, that an act of Congress—relating to the subjects enumerated below—to be unconstitutional, or to entertain any plea, answer demurrer, or other pleading on the part of the defendant alleging any such act of Congress to be unconstitutional. The statute would also provide that the circuit court of appeals and the Supreme Court should have no jurisdiction to entertain, hear, or adjudge any suit on appeal from such "inferior courts" by the plaintiff or defendant below in which the appellant relied upon a contention of unconstitutionality in such an act of Congress.

Thus, sir, a statutory exception is provided, first, in the original jurisdiction of the "inferior courts" and, second, in the granted jurisdiction of the appellate courts, withdrawing the constitutional aspect of such specified subjects wholly from the courts' jurisdiction.

The subjects which I think should be withdrawn from such nullifying power are: Some constitutional phrases, which of necessity in such an instrument are of only general and therefore of indeterminate significance; phrases whose interpretation call for statutes and the exercise of the lawmakers' discretion; phrases, like the title page in a book, call for a defining statute, as the title calls for the book's contents. These subjects are five in number, as follows:

(1) The general welfare.
(2) Commerce among the States.
(3) Taxation.
(4) Due process of law.
(5) Money; legal tender.

The relevant portions of the constitutional clauses involved read as follows:

> The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts, and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States (art. I, sec. 8).
>
> To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes (art. I, sec. 8).
>
> To coin money, regulate the value thereof (art. I, sec. 8).
>
> Nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property (by Congress) without due process of law (art. V).
>
> Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law (art. XIV, sec. 1).
>
> The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States and without regard to any census or enumeration (amendment XVI).

No other subjects in the Constitution would be affected, and the relation of the courts to the inalienable rights would remain as now.

Another remedial suggestion: It comes from a source certainly in "pari materia", as lawyers would say. It is a way out of its dilemma for the country, suggested by Judge Marshall himself in a letter to Judge Chase, only to become known in recent times.

In this letter to Judge Chase in 1804, Chief Justice Marshall took the position that it might be well to concede to Congress a veto of the Court's decisions. Judge Marshall used this language:

> A reversal of those legal opinions deemed unsound by the legislature would certainly better comport with the mildness of our character than the removal of the judge who has rendered them, unknowing of his faults (E).

In effect Judge Marshall advises that the Court's decision against a statute be taken by Congress as advisory only, and that Congress might restore the statute by reaffirming it.

Mr. Speaker, summarized, the jurisdictional statute I suggest would carry the following propositions:

(a) That no court of the United States or within a State exercising original jurisdiction shall possess jurisdiction whether at law or in equity to entertain, hear, or adjudge any suit in which the plaintiff alleges in his pleading or otherwise that an act of Congress be void which relates to (1) the general welfare of the United States, (2) commerce among the States, (3) taxation, (4) the issuance of money or the prescription of the legal-tender rights thereof, or (5) relating solely to the substantive rights of persons under the fifth amendment to the Constitution; or to entertain, hear, or adjudge any plea, answer, demurrer, or other pleading in any proceeding at law or in equity or otherwise alleging an act of Congress to be void which relates to the above subjects.

(b) No court of the United States or within the States when exercising an appellate jurisdiction shall have jurisdiction to entertain, hear, or adjudge any pleading at law or in equity on an appeal in which the plaintiff or defendant alleges an act of Congress relating to such subjects to be void.

Mr. Speaker, I think this treatment falls distinctly within the express provision of the Constitution empowering Congress to determine the jurisdiction of the inferior courts and specifying that "the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make." I think the principal trouble may be reached by this limited statutory treatment. Certainly, sir, the proposal is a moderate proposal. It involves no coup d'état. That role was exhausted by Taney in the Dred Scott case. The proposal simply removes the courts from a field they took by trespass, and from only a part of that field, a part which past history shows they have not cultivated, and cannot cultivate, with profit or with safety to the Republic.

But, sir, we are told it is too late, too late; that the Court's interpolations have become the law of the land by acquiescence. By whose acquiescence? I summon the first protectors of the Constitution and the people:

Thomas Jefferson, did you acquiesce?

No, no, my countrymen. The opinion which gives to the judges the right to decide what laws are constitutional and what are not * * * makes the judiciary a despotic branch. The Constitution has erected no such single tribunal, that to whatever hands confided * * * its members would become despots.

Andrew Jackson, military spokesman of democracy, what say you? Did you acquiesce?

I acquiesce? I repudiate the assumption entirely.

Abraham Lincoln, savior of the Union, what was your answer to the Dred Scott decision?

My answer: Somebody has to reverse that decision and we mean to reverse it. If the policy of the Government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court * * * in ordinary litigation between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their Government into the hands of that eminent tribunal. "Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?"

President Grant, they have struck down the Legal Tender Act giving character to the greenbacks with which you won the war. Do you acquiesce?

Acquiesce? Never! I will reconstitute that Court.

And he did.

Theodore Roosevelt, militant spokesman of the Republican Party, speak:

I do speak. Let the people recall the decision. The highest right of a free people is the right to make their own laws; and this right does not exist if under the pretense of interpretations an outside body can nullify the laws. I hold that the people should say finally whether these decisions are or are not to stand as the laws of the land (L).

And our present Chief Magistrate. He has pleaded, too, for a public understanding of the dilemma of the Government. Under his leadership the Nation is engaged in a war to conquer the worst depression in history. The solutions have been thrown back into our faces by the refusal of a coordinate department to enforce regularly enacted laws.

What shall we do? For myself I have sworn to support and to defend our beloved Constitution—to defend it against domestic as well as foreign foes. Judge Marshall's oath, Judge Taney's oath meant no more to them than my oath means to me. It is the oath taken by Jefferson, by Lincoln. I interpret it as they interpreted it. I cannot do other—I cannot do better—than follow in their path.

LIST OF REFERENCES

A. Foreign Countries and Nullification.
B. Constitutional Provisions and Judiciary Act 1789.
C. Leading Opinions as to Nullification.
D. Marshall's Relations to Marbury Case.
E. Marshall's Letter to Chase—Beveridge Comments.
F. Frued—Differing Legislative and Judicial Standards.
G. Doctor Lawson's Challenge—Welfare Clause.
H. "Welfare" References and Remarks.
I. Revenue Losses by Nullification.
J. Acts of Congress Nullified.
K. Examples Impairment State Legislative Power by Nullification.
L. Positions of Jefferson, Lincoln, Grant, and Theodore Roosevelt.
M. General Bibliography.

REFERENCE A

FOREIGN COUNTRIES AND NULLIFICATION

In the Union of South Africa Parliament is supreme. The courts have no power to declare an act of parliament unconstitutional.[1]

The Supreme Court of Canada has hardly any power of interpreting the constitution, since powers of the Provinces are enumerated and powers of the Dominion are residual.[2]

The federal court in Switzerland cannot declare a law unconstitutional even when it appears to be so. The legislative authority is the sole judge of the validity of its own acts unless recourse is had to the federal council, which is the executive in Switzerland.[3]

The constitution of Australia provides that parliament may make laws conferring original jurisdiction on the high court in any matter arising under the constitution or involving its interpretation, and in any matter arising under any laws made by the parliament (ch. III, sec. 76).

The constitution further provides: "The parliament of Australia has power to make laws with respect to matters necessary and incidental to the execution of any power vested by the constitution in the federal judicature" (ch. I, sec. 51 (XXXIX)).[4]

The courts in Norway assumed the right to declare laws unconstitutional in 1904, and in Rumania in 1912.[5]

Of the Latin-American States Shepherd said: "In no republic do the federal or national courts possess either the degree of independence or the right to interpret and apply the constitution to the extent enjoyed by the Supreme Court of the United States.[6]

The constitution of Colombia provided that the supreme court shall have power to decide upon the constitutionality of legislative acts, which may have been objected to by the Government as unconstitutional.[7]

In Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua bills modifying or repealing any section of the codes or affecting the administration or justice may not be passed until the opinion of the supreme court has been heard.

In Salvador the justices of the supreme court may initiate legislation necessary to correct imperfections or deficiencies in the existing law that have been noticed in the course of its application.[8]

The supreme court of justice in Mexico has exclusive jurisdiction in all controversies arising between the powers of government of any state as to the constitutionality of their acts.[9]

In France the legislative authority is the interpreter of its own powers. Of the power of the President of France to administer law Woodrow Wilson wrote:

"[The power of the President of France] to execute and administer the laws means, according to immemorial practice in France, that he may freely interpret them to meet circumstances and cover cases which the legislature did not foresee and provide for. The laws are for the most part themselves without detailed provisions. They give the officers of state who are to execute them a principle by which to go, rather than a body of minute instructions. He may not disregard the plain principles of the law, indeed, but he is not restrained by detail; and in shaping administrative arrangements, instructing officials, and developing plans to meet the requirements of public business the executive authority exercised by the ministers through the President's decrees is in most cases wholly free from the trammels of statute. The legality of administrative action, moreover, is tested, when challenged, not by the ordinary courts of law, in which private rights are determined and guarded, but by special administrative tribunals, in which the utmost latitude of discretion on the part of officers of state is the principle chiefly respected and enforced."[10]

[1] Woodrow Wilson, The State (1918 ed.), p. 257.
[2] C. F. Strong, Modern Political Constitutions, p. 116.
[3] James Bryce, The American Commonwealth (1926 rev.), vol. I, p. 260; Woodrow Wilson, The State, pp. 408, 415.
[4] The Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act, 63 and 64 Vict., c. 12, as amended. The text is printed in K. O. Warner's Introduction to Some Problems of Australian Federalism, University of Washington Press, 1933, p. 271. For provisions concerning the judiciary see pp. 289–291.
[5] C. F. Strong, Modern Political Constitutions, p. 270.
[6] W. R. Shepherd, Latin America, p. 149.
[7] Art. 151 (IV), text of the constitution in Bernard Moses' Constitution of the Republic of Colombia. Supplement to Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, January 1893, p. 56.
[8] Robert Luce, Legislative Procedure, Boston, 1922, p. 588.
[9] Art. 105, Constitution of 1917. Text printed in M. H. Andrews' Twelve Leading Constitutions. Compton, Calif., 1931, p. 268.
[10] Woodrow Wilson, The State, New York, 1918, pp. 164–165.

The Parliament in Belgium is likewise sole interpreter of its own powers.

Dicey explains the French and Belgian system by saying that "the statesmen of these countries may have thought that parliamentary invasions of the Constitution were a less evil than the participation of the judges in politics." [11] In New Zealand and Finland no act of Parliament can be unconstitutional.[12]

In Japan no court of law may take cognizance of any suit which relates to rights alleged to have been infringed by the illegal measures of executive authority. Administrative courts were established by law in 1890.[13]

The Constitution of Italy expressly prohibits any power other than the legislative from passing upon the validity of its acts. Article 73 of the constitution reads as follows: "The interpretation of the laws, in the form obligatory upon all citizens, belongs exclusively to the legislative power." [14]

A preliminary law to the constitution and by its own terms an integral part of the Constitution of Czechoslovakia provided for the creation of a constitutional court to determine whether laws of the Czechoslovak Republic and the Diet of Carpathian Ruthenia conform with the constitution or with laws which may supplement or amend it.[15]

The Constitution of Czechoslovakia prohibits the ordinary courts to pass on the constitutionality of laws. In a special instance, however, there is an exception. The committee which sits in the interim of sessions of the National Assembly may promulgate emergency measures which must be submitted to the constitutional court for review before they become law. This court determines whether the measure is in harmony with the constitution.[16]

Under article 102 of the constitution judges are authorized to examine into the validity of a government decree. In the case of a law, however, they may only inquire into the question whether it was properly promulgated.[17]

No court in England will pass on the constitutionality of an act of Parliament, not because England, as it is sometimes said, has no constitution, but because an act of Parliament amends the constitution. This attitude of the courts dates from the seventeenth century, when Parliament became the supreme power in England. Before that time the Magna Carta was held by the courts to be superior to Parliament or the Crown, and judges interpreted the law in the light of the great charter. Coke maintained that common law was superior to acts of Parliament. Sir Thomas More contested the right of Parliament to make the King the supreme head of the English Church.[18]

REFERENCE B

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS AND JUDICIARY ACT, 1789

The constitutional provisions important to be borne in mind in connection with the discussion are:

ARTICLE III

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SEC. 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and facts, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

ARTICLE VI

This Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

ARTICLE XI.—AMENDMENT

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.

I extract from the Judiciary Act enacted September 24, 1789, section 25:

SEC. 25. And be it further enacted, That a final judgment or decree in any suit in the highest court of law or equity of a State in which a decision in the suit could be had where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under the United States, and the decision is against their validity; or where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under any State, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of such their validity, or where is drawn in question the construction of any clause of the Constitution, or of a treaty, or statute of, or commission held under the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or exemption specially set up or claimed by either party, under such clause of the said Constitution, treaty, statute, or commission, may be reexamined and reversed or affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States upon a writ of error, the citation being signed by the Chief Justice or judge or chancellor of the court rendering or passing the judgment or decree complained of, or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations, and the writ shall have the same effect as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a circuit court, and the proceeding upon the reversal shall also be the same, except that the Supreme Court, instead of remanding the cause for a final decision as before provided, may at their discretion, if the cause shall have been once remanded before, proceed to a final decision of the same, and award execution. But no other error shall be assigned or regarded as a ground of reversal in any such case as aforesaid, than such as appears on the face of the record, and immediately respects the before-mentioned questions of validity or construction of the said Constitution, treaties, statutes, commissions, or authorities in dispute.

Commenting on the above act in his book, The Judicial Veto, Prof. Horace A Davis says:

A critical study of the Constitution and the statute leads me to the following conclusions: The Constitution leaves to Congress not only the organization of the entire judiciary department but also the practical definition of its jurisdiction except in a negligible number of cases; the statute does not use apt words to give any Federal court the power of annulling statutes as unconstitutional; but on the contrary, it does expressly, by an elementary canon of construction, deprive the Supreme Court of such power.

Practically, then, what did Congress do? It was in a position to make the Supreme Court custodian of the Constitution or to give that authority to the States. What did it do? The answer is contained in the Judiciary Act of September 24, 1789 (1 Stat. 73, chap. 20), unilluminated by any of the usual aids to statutory construction—precedent, report, debate, criticism, or record of amendment.

That act is largely devoted to the mere machinery of organization—division of the country into districts, provision for sessions and officers of court, process, and like matters. Its significant features are as follows: (1) It creates the district courts (sec. 3), with jurisdiction (sec. 9) of certain crimes, admiralty and revenue, certain cases where an alien sues, certain suits brought by the United States, and suits against consuls and vice consuls; (2) it creates the circuit courts (sec. 4), with jurisdiction (sec. 11) in certain suits brought by the United States, or where an alien is a party, or between citizens of different States, over certain crimes and over appeals from the district courts; (3) it organizes a Supreme Court (sec. 1), with original jurisdiction (sec. 13) cases where a State, an ambassador, public minister, consul, or vice consul is a party and appellate jurisdiction from the circuit court (sec. 22), and also (sec. 25) from a State court "where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against their validity", and where a State statute is questioned, and "where is drawn in question the construction of any clause of the Constitution, or of a treaty, or statute of, or commission held under, the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or exemption specially set up or claimed by either party under such clause of the said Constitution, treaty, statute, or commission.

I am unable to find in this statute, either expressly or by implication, any grant of power to annul an act of Congress. It is

---

[11] Quoted by C. F. Strong, Modern Political Constitutions, N. Y. 1930, p. 270.

[12] Ibid.

[13] Article 61, Constitution of Japan. Text in C. E. Martin and W. H. George, Representative Modern Constitutions, Los Angeles, 1923, p. 224.

[14] Article 73, Constitution of Italy. Text printed in Supplement to the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Nov. 1894, p. 39. The validity of the Constitution has not been brought into question by the Fascisti. See C. F. Strong, Modern Political Constitutions, pp. 142–144. Text in H. L. McBain and Lindsay Rogers, The New Constitutions of Europe, 1923, Garden City, p. 559.

[15] M. H. Andrews, Twelve Leading Constitutions. Text of this law p. 5; Kamil Krofta, A Short History of Czechoslovakia, New York, 1934, p. 194.

[16] Malbone W. Graham, New Governments of Central Europe, New York, 1924, pp. 304, 305, 311. Article 54, Constitution of Czechoslovakia. Text printed in M. H. Andrews, Twelve Leading Constitutions, 1931, pp. 19–22.

[17] Article 49 of the constitution provides that a law must be promulgated within 8 week days after its passage by Parliament. McBain and Rogers, New Constitutions of Europe, 1923 edition, p. 320.

[18] C. H. McIlwain, The High Court of Parliament, Yale Press, 1910, pp. 55–64; Ch. Petit-Dutaillis, Studies and Notes Supplementary to Stubbs' Constitutional History, Manchester University Press, 1930, pp. 144, 145; James Bryce, The American Commonwealth, New York, 1926 edition, vol. I, p. 242.

highly significant that the jurisdiction of none of the courts is extended to "cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority." If Congress had intended to give the power of judicial control, the inevitable inference is that at least the words of the Constitution would have been inserted in the statute (as they were by Randolph in his draft); intending not to give it, Congress need only omit these words. It may be argued that the insertion of these words was unnecessary; that if any courts were created, they acquired such jurisdiction by operation of the Constitution itself. This invites a highly technical line of discussion which cannot be pursued in this article, but I may express the opinion that the Constitution does not directly vest jurisdiction in any inferior court but only describes the limits of possible jurisdiction. In any case it cannot be supposed that Congress would have left so important a matter to mere construction; and it is the intent of Congress that we are seeking—its actual human common-sense intent, and not a fictitious intent by legal implication.

If the inferior courts had no such authority, the Supreme Court could not acquire it as a normal appellate function. Nor is such authority expressly given by the statute. On the contrary, it is expressly withheld.

REFERENCE C

LEADING OPINIONS ON NULLIFICATION

Judge Bland's opinion was rendered in 1816 in the case of Evans and Dwinn against Randall and Payson, Baltimore County Court, March 1816. Judge Bland said:

Judicial review presumes a right in one department to construe, control, or vacate the acts of another department, which is itself invested with discretionary power to determine on the limitations and circumstances under which it may or may not act; it presumes specific limitations to be imposed on one set of agents, which such agents may interpret and are enjoined strictly to observe; and yet supposes a power in another set of organs, also to expound such limitations, and to annul any acts that may run counter to them.

The right to enforce the observance of limitations—

He continued—

rests with and belongs exclusively to the people, and cannot, in any manner, be enforced by the judiciary. A constitutional limitation is then the voice of the people addressed to the public agents, respectively, in relation to their separate and distinct duties. * * * It is the business and duty of each department to attend to the Constitution, only so far as regards its own proper checks and limitations, and not as relates to those of others.

Chief Justice Gibson, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, discussing the subject, said:

The official oath, then, relates only to the official conduct of the officer, and does not prove that he ought to stray from the path of his ordinary business to search for violations of duty in the business of others, nor does it, as supposed, define the powers of the officer.

And also:

The Constitution and the right of the legislature to pass the act may be in collision. But is that a legitimate subject for judicial determination? If it be, the judiciary must be a peculiar organ to revise the proceedings of the legislature and to correct its mistakes; and in what part of the Constitution are we to look for this proud preeminence? Viewing the matter in the opposite direction, what would be thought of an act of assembly in which it should be declared that the Supreme Court had, in a particular case, put a wrong construction on the Constitution of the United States, and that the judgment should therefore be reversed? It would doubtless be thought a usurpation of judicial power. But it is by no means clear that to declare a law void which has been enacted according to the forms described in the Constitution is not a usurpation of legislative power. It is an act of sovereignty; and sovereignty and legislative power are said by Sir William Blackstone to be convertible terms. It is the business of the judiciary to interpret the laws, not scan the authority of the lawgiver; and without the latter it cannot take cognizance of a collision between a law and the Constitution. So that to affirm that the judiciary has a right to judge of the existence of such collisions is to take for granted the very thing to be proved. (12 S. and R. Pa. 348.)

Brooks Adams, in his Theory of Social Revolutions (p. 75), says:

* * * I contend that no court can, because of the nature of its being, effectively check a popular majority acting through a coordinate legislative assembly, and I submit that the precedents which I have cited prove this contention. The only result of an attempt and failure is to bring courts of justice into odium or contempt, and, in any event, to make them objects of attack by a dominant social force in order to use them as an instrument, much as Charles II used Jeffreys.

Prof. W. F. Dodd, writing in the Political Science Quarterly, volume 28, no. 1, remarks:

The exercise of policy-determining functions by the courts causes no difficulty so long as judicial action is in accord with sober popular sentiment on social and industrial questions. But the power of the courts in recent years to declare laws invalid as depriving persons of "due process of law" has been exercised in direct opposition to growing popular sentiment and to present social and industrial conditions; and the "due process of law" clause, meaning what the judges in any particular case may decide that it means, is, as now interpreted, simply a means of vesting judges with power to declare unconstitutional any laws of which they disapprove. There are under this clause no fixed or definite standards for determining what laws are constitutional and what are unconstitutional. Judges are thus exercising political functions without corresponding political responsibility; and, inasmuch as such functions are being exercised in a manner opposed to public sentiment, popular criticism of the courts is a necessary consequence.

William L. Ransom in Majority Rule and the Judiciary (p. 4):

The judge has no more right than any other official to be set up over the people as an irremovable and irresponsible despot. He has no more right than any other official to decide for the people what the people ought to think about questions of vital public policy, such as the proper handling of corporations and the proper methods of securing the welfare of farmers, wageworkers, small business men, and small professional men.

Mr. Ransom, on page 168 of his work, quotes The Nation (p. 203), by Elisha Mulford, as follows:

* * * To make the opinions of the judiciary a finality in the political order would fetter the free spirit of the people, confining it not in the assertion and regulation of law as the determination of the organic will but in the conformance to a mere legality. The past, by its precedents, would impose its authority upon the present. The energy of the people perishes when precedents become the substitute for the action of a living will and the strength of a living spirit. * * * The formative political power must belong only to the power which is representative of the political will.

Prof. J. Allen Smith, in the Spirit of American Government, expresses himself to this effect:

With the progress of democracy it must become more and more evident that a system which places this far-reaching power in the hands of a body not amenable to popular control is a constant menace to liberty. It may not only be made to serve the purpose of defeating reform but may even accomplish the overthrow of popular rights which the Constitution expressly guarantees. In proof of this statement we need but refer to the recent history of our Federal judiciary. The sixth amendment to the Constitution guarantees the right of trial by jury in all criminal prosecutions; but it is a matter of common knowledge that this time-honored safeguard against the tyranny and oppression of ruling classes has been overthrown by the Federal courts. With the ascendancy of corporate wealth and influence, government by injunction has become an important feature of our system. The use made of the injunction in recent years in the conflicts between labor and capital has placed a large and important class of crimes beyond the pale of this constitutional provision. Moreover, this particular class of crimes is the one where denial of the right of trial by jury is most likely to result in oppression. Under this mode of procedure the court has virtually assumed the power to enact criminal legislation, and may punish as crimes acts which neither law nor public opinion condemns. It insures conviction in many cases where the constitutional right of trial by jury would mean acquittal. It places a powerful weapon in the hands of organized wealth which it is not slow to use.

Dean William Trickett, in American Law Review (vol. 44, p. 650), writes as follows:

* * * The people will never be masters of their own house so long as a majority of nine gentlemen, pretending to have Marconigrams from the defunct men of 1787 and 1788 concerning their meaning when they adopted this or that phrase of the Constitution, arrogate to themselves the power to veto, and not merely refuse to aid in the enforcement of statutes, but even launch prohibitions against the carrying out of these statutes by those who, unhindered by them, would legally execute them.

Very pointedly Prof. Edward S. Corwin (American Political Science Review, May 1912) said:

The truth of the matter is that the modern concept of due process of law is not a legal concept of all; it comprises nothing more or less than a roving commission to judges to sink whatever legislative craft may appear to them to be, from the standpoint of vested interests, of a piratical tendency.

Judge Wannamaker, of Ohio (Illinois State Bar Association, Year Book 1912, pp. 181–182), says:

No English court for more than 200 years has held an act of Parliament unconstitutional. Such jurisdiction had not been exercised by any English court for 75 years prior to the formation of our Federal Constitution. The fathers never intended to confer such an extraordinary jurisdiction, then unknown * * *. It is an usurpation of judicial power.

The exercise of this unwarranted and usurped governmental power against the public interest, against the public health, safety, and life, has done more than any other single thing to arouse the present popular hostile feeling toward our courts of last resort.

Mr. Gilbert E. Roe, in Our Judicial Autocracy, takes positions similar to those already outlined.

REFERENCE D

MARSHALL AND THE MARBURY CASE

Professor Haines writes:

Marshall was personally interested in the cause and upon this ground should have declined to pass upon the issue. The commission was made out during the time when Marshall was holding two offices, Secretary of State and Chief Justice. Marshall himself was responsible for the failure to deliver the commission. Regarding the matter, he wrote: "I should, however, have sent out the commissions which had been signed and sealed but for the extreme hurry of the time and absence of Mr. Wagner, who had been called on by the President to act as his private secretary." Under these circumstances it was rather inappropriate for the Chief Justice to participate in the decision of the case, and especially to render the opinion of the Court. Moreover, the act of Congress could have been so interpreted as to sustain its validity (The American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy, p. 194).

Professor Corwin, discussing the Marbury case, writes:

This decision bears many of the earmarks of a deliberate partisan coup (The Doctrine of Judicial Review, p. 10).

Horace A. Davis concludes that—

Marshall's opinion in the case of Marbury v. Madison was a shrewd political manifesto, rather than a logical foundation for the decision of that highly technical case (7 American Political Science Review, p. 543).

Andrew C. McLaughlin, writing in the Journal of the American Bar Association, declares:

The learned Chief Justice did pass upon a constitutional question * * * in a case he had no right so much as to entertain if his own decision was correct * * *. The learned Chief Justice really manufactured an opportunity to declare an act void (13 American Bar Association Journal, 156–157).

REFERENCE E

MARSHALL-CHASE LETTER

Discussing the subject, the Honorable R. Walton Moore calls attention to the Marshall-Chase letter:

In passing, I may remind you of a curious circumstance. That case (Marbury v. Madison) was decided in February 1803, and in January 1804 Marshall wrote a letter to Mr. Justice Chase, then involved in an impeachment proceeding based upon the charge that in various ways he had acted as a sort of judicial dictator. In that letter Marshall took the position that it might be well to concede to Congress a veto of the Court decisions, using this language: "A reversal of those legal opinions deemed unsound by the legislature would certainly better comport with the mildness of our character than the removal of the judge who has rendered them, unknowing of his faults." Mr. Beveridge, who in general is Marshall's unreserved eulogist, makes the following comment on the letter: "Marshall thus suggested the most radical method of correcting judicial decisions ever advanced before or since by any man of the first class. * * * Had we not the evidence of Marshall's signature to a letter written in his well-known hand, it could not be credited that he ever entertained such sentiments. They were in direct contradiction to his reasoning in Marbury v. Madison, and utterly destructive of the Federalist philosophy of judicial control of legislation." (Extract from address of Hon. R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, former Member of Congress, of Virginia, on June 11, 1935.) The letter of Marshall apparently never became public until the publication of Beveridge's work.

REFERENCE F

DIFFERING LEGISLATIVE AND JUDICIAL STANDARDS

Professor Freund, of the University of Chicago, in his work, Standards of American Legislation (p. 285), says:

The spirit of adjudication is after all a very different one from the spirit of legislation. Adjudication decides between contentions for the full measure of abstract rights carried to their logical conclusions, unaffected by the possible expediency of indulgence and concession, for courts deal with human relations in an atmosphere of controversy and extreme self-assertion; they touch life mainly at the point of abnormal disturbance. The function of legislation, on the other hand, is to prevent controversy, and is therefore dominated by the spirit of compromise and adjustment; it is for this reason that legislative rights are likely to be more qualified than common-law rights. The result is that the principle of judicial rule or justice is the minimum, the principle of legislative rule or justice the maximum, of reciprocal concession. If so, judge-made law is ill-suited for guiding legislation, and we should not look to the courts for the development of rules of legislative justice.

REFERENCE G

LAWSON CHALLENGE WELFARE CLAUSE

Dr. James F. Lawson, testifying as to the general-welfare clause before the Committee on Labor of the House of Representatives, January 27, 1933, at pages 211–212 of the hearing, stated:

THE COURT HAS NEVER CONSTRUED THIS CLAUSE

I may now observe that in more than 286 volumes of the reported decisions of the Supreme Court, among which are scarcely more than a score of decisions holding that Congress has gone beyond the enumerated powers, there is not one opinion dealing with the immensely significant expression. In United States v. Realty Co. (163 U. S. 427), the Court said:

"Under the provisions of the Constitution (art. I, sec. 8) Congress has power to lay and collect taxes, etc., 'to pay the debts' of the United States. Having power to raise money for that purpose, it, of course, follows that it has power, when the money is raised, to appropriate it to the same object."

Again, in Juillard v. Greenman (110 U. S. 421), the Court said:

"That clause of the Constitution which declares that 'the Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States', either embodies a grant of power to pay the debts of the United States or presupposes and assumes that power as inherent in the United States as a sovereign Government."

These were cases in which the action of Congress was upheld. It is passing strange that, in the cases where acts of Congress are held void as not being within the enumerated powers, not once is any reason given why the same clause cannot be construed as a grant of power to provide for the general welfare or a presumption that the powers following must in their sum total equal such a grant. There are innumerable examples of dicta declaring this a government of limited powers. These did not ripen into an actual annulment of an act of Congress, based upon the lack of an enumerated power, until after the Civil War. But neither in dictum nor in decision is there a reason, giving consideration to this clause, why the enumeration excludes the particular exercise of power. I challenge the courts, the Congress, and the public to apply to this clause the ordinary rules of statutory construction, as they are applied to other clauses of the Constitution, to statutes, and to the common legal instruments of the people.

REFERENCE H

ROBERTSON'S RULES OF PUNCTUATION

"Several verbs in the infinitive modes, depending on one common word (e. g., "The Congress shall have power"—D. J. L.), and immediately succeeding one another, are divided by commas.

"EXAMPLES

"The Spartan youth were accustomed to go barefoot, to lie on the ground, to suffer heat and cold, to live on the most ordinary provisions, to be engaged in continual exercise, and to be enured to blows and wounds.

"To relieve the indigent, to comfort the afflicted, to protect the innocent, to instruct the ignorant, to reward the deserving, is a great and godlike employment" (An Essay On Punctuation, p. 39, by Robertson, published in London in 1776).

"WELFARE" REFERENCES AND REMARKS

The references to "Elliot" are to volume I of Elliot's Debates on the Federal Constitution, which reproduces the Official Journal of the Convention, first printed by order of Congress in 1819. The references "D. H. C." are to Documentary History of the Constitution.

STORY'S ARGUMENT FOR AN INTERPOLATION

Story, who argued that the general-welfare clause was not a power, frankly resorted to an express interpolation of the words "in order" saying:

"The reading therefor which will be maintained in these commentaries * * *.

"'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises in order to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.'

"That is, for the purpose of paying the public debts and providing for the common defense and general welfare."

Under such a reading only a money use would result; justiciable rights and duties could not be prescribed. In defense of this interpretation so supported by the interpolation, he argues that the clause serves as a preamble merely, adding:

"Nothing is more natural or common than first to use a general phrase and then to qualify it by a recital of particulars."

Answer. The general-welfare clause was not intended as a preamble to the particular powers. It was intended as a residuary power. It did not come first in the development of the legislative powers by the Convention. It came last. The particular powers were reported and adopted weeks before. There was no such clause in the first draft of the Constitution presenting the particular powers to the Convention on August 6, four weeks before the welfare clause. The draft of the welfare clause was not brought in until September 4, and then only as the result of several actions of the Convention demanding it or its equivalent. There were the Madison and Pinckney resolutions, of August 18, the report of the Committee of Five (Rutledge) of August 22, the Convention action of August 23. The Journal and proceedings leave no doubt on this point. The clause was, in fact, a postscript to the other powers, and (about) the last to be adopted. In its first appearance, August 22, in the Rutledge report it was assigned not to the first paragraph, containing the power of taxation, but "at the end of the sixteenth clause." The chronology of the clause and its history in the Convention discountenance the introductory or preamble function.

Again, Story asks:

"For what purpose these particular powers, if they are included in the defense and welfare clause?"

The answer is that there were natural, even peremptory, purposes. Of current subjects of legislation they had experience, and this experience indicated particular ways in which they wished such current problems to be handled. They wished to limit the discretion of Congress in dealing with them, or they wished to place limitations on the States. In order to state these limitations, such subjects had to be particularized. Hence, a plenary or general-welfare power would not suffice. To state the limitations it was necessary to specify the military subject, e. g., Congress shall have power "to raise and support armies." However, "but no (such) appropriation * * * shall be for a longer term than 2 years."

Again, Congress shall have power "to provide and maintain a Navy", but no State shall, without the consent of Congress * * * keep troops or ships of war in time of peace."

Observe that the National Congress could provide troops and Navy at any time. But the States were to be disarmed. It is doubtful whether Congress under the power to act for the common defense alone could have constitutionally imposed such peace-time disarmament. Hence, the special treatment of the common-defense power.

Again, a power to provide for the general welfare would include commerce among the States. The Convention concluded Congress should exert the power, but subject to particular limitations. Thus:

"Congress shall have power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce."

But in doing so it—

"Shall give no preference to the ports of one State over those of another, etc.

"Shall pass no law prohibiting immigration or emigration before 1808.

"Shall lay no tax or duty * * * on articles exported from any State.

"No State shall * * * lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports."

Congress might have imposed duties on exports as it does on imports. The Convention did not desire this. So, too, the States must be restrained; if the restraint on the States were lacking, the power of Congress over commerce might be frustrated.

Again, Congress may "coin money (and) regulate the value thereof", but "no State shall coin money, emit bills of credit, or make anything but gold or silver coin a tender in payment of debts."

Under the general-welfare clause, standing alone, Congress could have issued money, whether paper or coin. The sad experience with the continental paper money doubtless induced the restriction. But the States must be restrained, and so the direct prohibition on them. Experience has shown that had the States retained this power a successful national currency would have been impossible.

WHAT ABOUT FUTURE PROBLEMS?

We see how natural and even necessary it was to place limitations on the lawmaker, as to existing social or property subjects of which they had had experience. Their experience would suggest the qualifications.

But what of subjects yet unborn, subjects unforeseeable, inevitable in the life of a nation which they planned to live through the centuries? Of these they could only know that they must arise. What of these? Should statesmen ignore them?

Of the evils which are afflicting us now they could have had no prescience; our industrial system was then unborn. The breakdown, in farming and mining, of the regulating principle of competition, the monopoly control of local services through general holding companies which mock State laws, the need of blue-sky laws to protect honesty property—could they foresee just what limitations they should place on the legislative power which should have to deal with these problems or with industrial break-downs, present unemployment, agriculture, or mining stabilization? And so rather than leave a gap in the legislative power, leave a nation helpless under its constitution, they conferred this residuary power. This is not a new thought. I quote from the Federalist (no. 34):

"Constitutions of government are not to be framed upon a calculation of existing exigencies; but on a combination of these with the probable exigencies of ages, according to the natural and tried course of human affairs. There ought to be a capacity to provide for future contingencies as they may happen, * * *."

Now, then, to summarize, why are these particular powers specified, when they could have been derived from a general-welfare power? The answer is that, as to what the Convention could see then moving on the face of the earth, it could be specific and wisely qualify the power; but anticipating subjects whose nature they could not foresee, as to which they could not be specific, to save us from anarchy, they gave us this residuary, general-welfare power to act where the State is organically incompetent to act.

REFERENCE I

REVENUE LOSSES BY NULLIFICATION

JUNE 12, 1935.

Hon. DAVID J. LEWIS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Supplementing my letter to you of June 11, I desire to submit the following additional information as to the loss in revenue occasioned by the Supreme Court decision in the case of Eisner v. Macomber (252 U. S. 189), holding that stock dividends were not subject to the income tax:

1916, 1917, and 1918	$35,000,000
1919	70,000,000
1920	250,000,000
1921	250,000,000
1922	207,000,000
1923	36,000,000
1924	25,000,000
1925	22,000,000
1926	30,000,000
1927	29,000,000
1928	25,000,000
1929	47,000,000
1930	10,000,000
1931	3,000,000
1932	4,000,000
Total	1,043,000,000

You will note that these figures slightly exceed the estimate of $1,000,000,000 given you yesterday.

Very respectfully,

L. H. PARKER, Chief of Staff.

Hon. DAVID J. LEWIS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: With reference to your inquiry as to the compensation received by Federal judges, I wish to submit the following information:

	Salary
Supreme Court:
Chief Justice	$20,500
Associate Justices	20,000
Circuit courts of appeals, all judges	12,500
District courts, all judges	10,000
Court of Claims, all judges	12,500
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, all judges	12,500

The Supreme Court has held that the salaries of judges of constitutional courts are not subject to the income tax. The first case on this point was that of Evans v. Gore (253 U. S. 245), and related to the salary of a United States district judge for the western district of Kentucky. This judge was appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate in 1899. The Supreme Court held that his salary could not be taxed for income-tax purposes under the Revenue Act of 1918.

The next case involved the taxability of the salary of a judge of the Court of Claims. This was the case of Miles v. Graham (268 U. S. 501), in which the Supreme Court held that Judge Graham was entitled to a refund of the income tax paid on his salary for the years 1919 and 1920. However, since the Miles v. Graham decision the Supreme Court has held that the Court of Claims, as well as the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, is not a constitutional court, but a legislative court. Ex parte Bakelite Corporation (279 U. S. 453), Williams v. United States (289 U. S. 553). It would appear, therefore, that the salaries of judges of the Court of Claims and the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals are no longer exempt from the income tax, in spite of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Miles v. Graham case, which overlooked the fact that the Court of Claims was a legislative and not a constitutional court.

Judges of the district courts, the circuit courts of appeals, and the Supreme Court, being judges of constitutional courts, are exempt from the income tax on their salaries in all cases where they were appointed prior to the Revenue Act of 1932. An attempt has been made to include in income the salaries of judges of constitutional courts appointed after the Revenue Act of 1932, but it is extremely doubtful whether this provision will be sustained by the Supreme Court.

Not only are judges of constitutional courts exempt from the income tax on their salaries but also their salaries are not subject to reduction by Congress even where Congress finds it necessary in the interest of economy to reduce the compensation of all Federal employees (O'Donohue v. United States, 289 U. S. 516). Moreover, the salaries of retired judges of constitutional courts are not subject to the income tax, nor can such salaries be diminished after retirement (Booth v. United States, 291 U. S. 339).

I am listing below most of the tax provisions held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. I have not been able to complete my data as to the loss in revenue from the decisions involving such provisions, but will supplement this letter with additional information as soon as same is available.

Very respectfully,

L. H. PARKER,
Chief of Staff.

(1) Taxing salaries of State officers and employees by the Federal Government: The Supreme Court, in Collector v. Day (11 Wall. 813 (Apr. 3, 1871)), held that the Federal Government had no authority to subject to the income tax the salary of a State officer or employee.

(2) The income tax of 1894 was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in Pollock v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. (151 U. S. 429; 158 U. S. 601).

(3) The stamp tax on foreign bills of lading was held unconstitutional in Fairbanks v. United States (181 U. S. 283).

(4) The stamp tax on charter parties was held unconstitutional in United States v. Riveself (237 U. S. 1).

Turning to the income-tax field, we find the following:

(1) Stock dividends are not subject to the income tax (Eisner v. Macomber (252 U. S. 189)).

(2) The income from oil lands leased by a State to a private corporation is not subject to the income tax (Burnet v. Coronado Oil & Gas Co. (285 U. S 393)).

(3) In National Life Insurance Co. v. United States (277 U. S. 508) the Supreme Court held that treatment of tax-exempt interest in the manner set out in the Revenue Act of 1921 in computing the deduction allowed for interest in the case of life-insurance companies was unconstitutional. This decision resulted in refunds of about $36,000,000.

In the estate-tax field we find the following:

(1) The Supreme Court held, in Heiner v. Donnan (285 U. S. 312), that Congress could not provide by statute that a gift made within 2 years prior to death was conclusively presumed to be in contemplation of death. This cost the Government about $5,000,000.

(2) In Nichols v. Coolidge (274 U. S. 531) the Supreme Court held that Congress could not include in the gross estate for estate-tax purposes a gift made prior to the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1918, even though such gift was made in contemplation of death. This cost the Government about $10,000,000.

In the gift-tax cases of Blodgett v. Holden (275 U. S. 142) and Untermeyer v. Anderson (276 U. S. 440) the Supreme Court held that Congress could not impose a gift tax retroactively. This cost the Government about $3,500,000.

REFERENCE J

ACTS OF CONGRESS NULLIFIED

(From Professor Haines, American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy, by permission of publishers, the University of California)

CLASSIFICATION OF ACTS DECLARED VOID

I. REFUSAL TO ACCEPT JURISDICTION CONFERRED BY CONGRESS, BECAUSE AUTHORITY GRANTED NOT WITHIN POWERS GRANTED BY CONSTITUTION OR NOT JUDICIAL IN NATURE

1. Hayburn's Case, Chandler v. The Secretary of War, and United States v. Todd (1792–94) (see 13 How. 52): Refusal to pass on invalid pension claims.

2. Marbury v. Madison (1 Cr. 137 (1803)): Authority to issue mandamus under original jurisdiction of Supreme Court denied.

3. Gordon v. United States (2 Wall. 561 (1865)): Refusal to accept jurisdiction on appeal from Court of Claims, because authority to control decisions was vested in other departments.

4. The Alicia (7 Wall. 571 (1869)): Prize cases could not be transferred from circuit courts, because not within grant of original jurisdiction.

5. United States v. Klein (13 Wall. 128 (1872)): Jurisdiction denied because of attempt of Congress to restrict pardoning power of President and to prescribe rules for decisions in Federal courts.

6. United States v. Evans (213 U. S. 297 (1909)): Refusal of jurisdiction because there was no real case before court.

7. Muskrat v. United States (219 U. S. 346 (1911)): Congress cannot refer issue to Court for an advisory opinion on validity of a law.

8. Keller v. Potomac Electric Power Co. (261 U. S. 428 (1921)): Authority to revise orders and proceedings of District of Columbia Public Utilities Commission not within jurisdiction of court.

II. ACTS WHICH ENCROACHED ON THE POWERS OF THE STATES

1. United States v. Dewitt (9 Wall. 41 (1870)): Standard for sale of petroleum oil fixed by Congress held interference with internal trade of State.

2. Collector v. Day (11 Wall. 113 (1871)): Federal tax on salary of State judicial officer held void.

3. United States v. Railroad Co. (17 Wall. 322 (1873)): Federal tax on interest from municipal bonds held void as an interference with an agency of the State.

4. United States v. Reese (92 U. S. 214 (1876)): Regulation of elections by Congress deemed beyond authority granted by fifteenth amendment.

5. United States v. Fox (95 U. S. 670 (1878)): Acts not directly related to bankruptcy cannot be regulated by Congress under guise of bankruptcy law.

6. Trade mark cases (100 U. S. 82 (1879)): Regulation of trade marks not confined to foreign and interstate commerce held beyond authority of Congress.

7. United States v. Harris (106 U. S. 629 (1883)): Conspiracy to deprive persons of equal protection of laws not subject to regulation by Congress under Civil War amendments.

8. Civil Rights cases (109 U. S. 3 (1883)): Congress cannot require equal enjoyment of facilities of inns, theaters, etc., to citizens of every race and color under authority granted by thirteenth and fourteenth amendments.

9. Baldwin v. Franks (120 U. S. 678 (1887)): Ruling of United States against Harris applied to aliens.

10. James v. Bowman (190 U. S. 127 (1903)): Attempt of Congress to provide for punishment of individuals for interfering with right of suffrage at all elections held not warranted by fifteenth amendment.

11. Hodges v. United States (203 U. S. 1 (1906)): Congress has no authority to punish a conspiracy in a State to prevent Negroes from making or carrying out contracts of labor.

12. Employers' Liability cases (207 U. S. 463 (1908)): Federal Employers' Liability Act not limited to interstate and foreign commerce held void.

13. Keller v. United States (213 U. S. 138 (1909)): Congress cannot control aliens for police purposes for 3 years after their entry to United States.

14. Coyle v. Smith (221 U. S. 559 (1911)): Provision of enabling act for admission of a State limiting right to locate State capitol held void.

15. Hammer v. Dagenhart (247 U. S. 251 (1918)): Congress cannot prohibit interstate shipments of goods produced by child labor.

16. Newberry v. United States (256 U. S. 232 (1910)): Federal Corrupt Practices Act held not to apply to primary elections for Senators.

III. ENCROACHMENTS UPON INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS

1. Ex parte Garland (4 Wall. 333 (1867)): Test oath held void as an ex post facto law and as an interference with pardoning power of President.

2. Reichart v. Felps (6 Wall. 160 (1868)): Congress could not interfere with patents to land confirmed by Continental Congress in 1788.

3. The Justices v. Murray (9 Wall. 274 (1870)): Removal of certain cases for retrial on facts and law held to violate guaranty of jury trial of seventh amendment.

4. Boyd v. United States (116 U. S. 616 (1886)): Compulsory production of papers in action for forfeiture of goods for fraud held to violate guaranties of fourth and fifth amendments.

5. Callan v. Wilson (127 U. S. 540 (1888)): Trial by jury cannot be dispensed with in the courts of District of Columbia in a trial for the crime of conspiracy.

6. Counselman v. Hitchcock (142 U. S. 547 (1882)): Self-incrimination clause of fifth amendment held to prohibit compulsory testimony even though a person is protected against a personal criminal action.

7. Monongahela Navigation Co. v. United States (148 U. S. 312 (1893)): The value of a franchise to collect tolls must be included in appraisal in eminent domain proceedings in order to meet the requirements of due process of law of the fifth amendment.

8. Wong Wing v. United States (163 U. S. 228 (1896)): Conviction of an alien for being unlawfully within United States on a summary hearing and sentence of imprisonment at hard labor held to violate fifth and sixth amendments.

9. Kirby v. United States (174 U. S. 47 (1899)): A judgment of conviction against an embezzler cannot be made conclusive evidence of the theft in an action for receiving stolen property.

10. Matter of Heff (197 U. S. 488 (1905)): Act of Congress prohibiting sales of liquor to Indians held void as applicable to Indians who were presumed to be citizens of the United States. Overruled by United States v. Nice (241 U. S. 591).

11. Rassmussen v. United States (197 U. S. 516 (1905)): Sixth amendment held to require trial by jury in Alaska because the Territory was incorporated.

12. Adair v. United States (208 U. S. 161 (1908)): Congress cannot make it a criminal offense for an employer engaged in interstate commerce to dismiss an employee because of membership in a labor organization.

13. Butts v. Merchants Trans. Co. (230 U. S. 126 (1913)): Provisions of Civil Rights Act held void in its application outside of the States.

14. Choate v. Trapp (224 U. S. 665 (1912)): Tax exemption in issuance of patents to Indians held a vested right and not subject to repeal under due process clause of fifth amendment.

15. United States v. L. Cohen Grocery Co. (255 U. S. 81 (1921)): Sections of Food Control Act inflicting a penalty for any person making an unreasonable charge for handling necessaries of life held void.

16. United States v. Moreland (258 U. S. 433 (1922)): Imprisonment at hard labor in workhouse held an infamous punishment and hence subject to limitations of fifth amendment.

17. Adkins v. Children's Hospital (261 U. S. 525 (1923)): Congress cannot authorize the fixing of minimum wage standards for adult women in District of Columbia under requirements of due process of law of fifth amendment.

18. A. B. Small v. American Sugar Ref. Co. (267 U. S. 233 (1925)): Reasoning of Cohen Grocery Co. case held applicable to consideration of validity of a contract for the sale of a commodity and applied to civil as well as to criminal proceedings.

IV. LIMITATIONS ON THE POWERS OF CONGRESS TO LEVY TAXES

1. Hepburn v. Griswold (8 Wall. 603 (1870)): Congress denied authority to make United States notes legal tender in the payment of debts, public and private.

2. Pollock v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. (157 U. S. 429, and 158 U. S. 601 (1895)): Income-tax provisions of revenue act held void because not apportioned among the States as a direct tax as required by article 1, section 2, of the Constitution.

3. Fairbanks v. United States (181 U. S. 283 (1901)): Stamp tax on bills of lading for goods destined for export deemed void as tax on exports.

4. United States v. Hvoslef (237 U. S. 1 (1915)): Stamp tax on charter parties held void as tax on exports.

5. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co. v. United States (237 U. S. 19 (1915)): Stamp tax on marine insurance policies held void as tax on exports.

6. Eisner v. Macomber (252 U. S. 189 (1920)): Taxation of net income on stock dividends distributed from profits of corporation held not authorized by sixteenth amendment.

7. Evans v. Gore (253 U. S. 245 (1920)): Income tax on salaries of Federal judges held void because judges' salaries may not be diminished while they are in office.

8. Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co. (259 U. S. 20 (1922)): Tax of 10 percent on net profits of any person employing children under certain ages in a mine or factory held interference with exclusive authority of State.

9. Lipke v. Lederer (259 U. S. 557 (1922)): Assessment of additional tax upon evidence of illegal manufacture or sale of liquor held invalid as penalty and not a tax and not enforceable except under requirements of due process of law of fifth amendment.

10. Hill v. Wallace (259 U. S. 44 (1922)): Tax on contracts for sale of grain for future delivery held void as not within authority of Congress to tax or regulate. This case may also be regarded as an interference with powers belonging to the States.

11. Trusler v. Crooks (269 U. S. 475 (1926)): Principle of Hill v. Wallace applied in declaring tax on future trading a penalty.

12. Nichols v. Coolidge (274 U. S. 531 (1927)): Retroactive provision of estate tax of 1919 held void.

13. Untermeyer v. Anderson (276 U. S. 440 (1928)): Tax on gifts made before approval of statute held invalid.

V. MISCELLANEOUS DECISIONS

1. Scott v. Sandford (19 How. 393 (1857)): Congress cannot prohibit the introduction of slavery in the Louisiana territory north of Missouri.

2. Knickerbocker Ice Co. v. Stewart (253 U. S. 149 (1920)): Congress cannot adopt workmen's compensation laws of States in relation to maritime transactions.

SUPPLEMENT

ACTS OF CONGRESS INVALIDATED BY THE SUPREME COURT

(By Library of Congress)

Decisions of the United States Supreme Court invalidating acts of Congress are listed in Dr. Charles Grove Haines' work on the American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy, pages 567–572 (1932). His list is complete through volume 276 of the United States Reports. Subsequent decisions declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional are noted below (complete through the October term, 1934).

I. Refusal to accept jurisdiction conferred.

(Add none.)

II. Acts which encroached on the powers of the State.

(Add none.)

III. Encroachment upon individual rights.

19. Lynch v. United States (292 U. S. 571 (1934)): War-risk insurance policies are property protected by the fifth amendment. Congress cannot repudiate such obligations (sec. 17, Economy Act of Mar. 20, 1933).

20. Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton R. Co. (79 Law ed., adb. op., p. 803 (1935)): Statute requiring a compulsory pension system takes property in violation of fifth amendment.

21. Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford (— U. S. — (May 27, 1935)). Frazier-Lemke Act (47 Stat. 1470) violates fifth amendment.

IV. Limitations on the power of Congress to levy taxes.

14. National Life Insurance Co. v. United States (277 U. S. 508 (1928)). Revenue Act of 1921 is void insofar as it attempts to place a direct tax on exempt securities.

15. Indian Motorcycle Co. v. United States (283 U. S. 570 (1931)). Section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1924 is invalid when it taxes motorcycles sold to State police.

16. Heiner v. Donnan (285 U. S. 312 (1932)). Section 302 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1926 violates fifth amendment in imposing death transfer tax on gifts made 2 years prior to death of donor.

17. Burnet v. Coronado Oil & Gas Co. (285 U. S. 393 (1932)). Application of Federal income tax to income derived from land leased by the State is unconstitutional, it being a tax on an instrumentality of the State.

V. Miscellaneous decisions.

5. Booth v. United States (291 U. S. 320 (1934)). Act decreasing salaries of retired Federal judges (48 Stat. 283, 307) is unconstitutional.

6. Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan (293 U. S. 388 (1935)). Section 9 (c) of the N. I. R. A. and orders issued thereunder concerning "hot oil" are an unconstitutional delegation of power.

7. Schechter Poultry Corporation v. United States (— U. S. — (May 27, 1935)). N. R. A. as created by Forty-eighth Statutes, 195, is unconstitutional—improper delegation of power by Congress and an unlawful attempt to regulate intrastate commerce.

According to these tables, 70 acts of Congress, or sections thereof, have been invalidated by decisions of the United States Supreme Court (1789–June 3, 1935).

REFERENCE K

EXAMPLES OF IMPAIRMENT OF STATE LEGISLATIVE POWERS BY NULLIFICATION

Since the adoption of the fourteenth amendment with its interpolation State legislation has had to run the gantlet of Federal courts—tax legislation and social legislation in particular.

In the following cases attempts of the States to control certain evils or encourage certain policies have been frustrated in the United States Supreme Court. These cases, arranged under concrete and simple headings, are suggestive and not exhaustive. They indicate the limitations which have been imposed upon the sovereign powers of the States in matters of social, tax, and police legislation. It is not necessary to approve all these acts to disapprove the interpolations into the Constitution under which they were nullified.

BAKERIES

Lochner v. New York (198 U. S. 45): The limitation of employment in bakeries to 60 hours a week and 10 hours a day is an arbitrary interference with freedom of contract.

BANKS

Dodge v. Woolsey (18 How. 331): A charter of a bank fixed a rate of taxation in lieu of all other taxes. Held that any other tax is expressly forbidden.

BEDDING

Weaver v. Palmer Bros. Co. (270 U. S. 402): Prohibition of all use of shoddy, new or old, even when sterilized, in the manufacture of comfortables for beds is unreasonable and arbitrary.

CHAIN STORES

Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Lee (288 U. S. 517): A graduated chain-store tax law which imposes a greater tax per store where stores are located in more than one county than where they are all in the same county violates the equal-protection clause of the fourteenth amendment.

CREAMERIES

Fairmont Creamery Co. v. Minnesota (274 U. S. 1): A State statute forbidding creameries to purchase cream at higher prices in one locality than in another, after allowance for difference in cost of transportation, impairs the right of freedom of contract.

EDUCATION

Pierce v. Society of the Sisters (268 U. S. 510): An Oregon law requiring all children between the ages of 8 and 16 to attend the public schools interferes with liberty of parents to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control.

Bartles v. Iowa (262 U. S. 404): A State act forbidding the teaching of foreign languages in schools under the eighth grade or requiring all school branches to be taught in schools in the English language violates the constitutional guaranty of liberty in the Federal Constitution.

Meyer v. Nebraska (262 U. S. 390): An act forbidding the teaching in the schools of any other than the English language until after the pupil has passed the eighth grade violates the fourteenth amendment.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Adams v. Tanner (244 U. S. 590): A State law forbidding employment agencies from receiving fees from workers for whom they find employment violates the fourteenth amendment.

FLAGS

Stromberg v. California (283 U. S. 359): A statute penalizing the public display of a flag, banner, or device "as a sign, symbol, or emblem of opposition to organized government" infringes the right of free speech.

LABOR DISPUTES

Charles Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations (267 U. S. 552): A statute providing for compulsory arbitration of labor disputes violates the fourteenth amendment.

LABOR UNIONS

Coppage v. Kansas (236 U. S. 1): An act making employer criminally punishable for prescribing as a condition of employment an agreement by the employee not to become or remain a member of any labor organization violates freedom of contract.

LAUNDRIES

Yick Wo v. Hopkins (118 U. S. 358): A city ordinance declaring it unlawful without the consent of the city supervisors to establish or maintain a laundry unless in a building of brick or stone is captious and arbitrary.

LOTTERIES

New Orleans v. Houston (119 U. S. 265): The State of Louisiana had incorporated a lottery company, limiting taxation upon it to $40,000 per annum. In 1880 (Act No. 77) the State legislature attempted to increase said taxes. Held an impairment of the obligation of contract.

MINIMUM-WAGE LAWS

Adkins v. Children's Hospital (261 U. S. 525): An act for the District of Columbia allowing a board to fix a minimum wage for women to protect their health and morals violates due process of law.

MINING

Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (260 U. S. 393): A statute forbidding the mining of coal under private dwellings or streets in places where the right to mine such coal is reserved in the grant is unconstitutional taking of property without due process of law.

MORTGAGES

Louisville Gas Co. v. Coleman (277 U. S. 32): A Kentucky statute taxing the recording of mortgages not maturing within 5 years while exempting others violates equal protection of the law.

NEGROES

Buchanan v. Warley (245 U. S. 60): A city ordinance prohibited colored persons from occupying houses in any block in which the majority of residences were occupied by white people. Held a violation of property rights guaranteed by fourteenth amendment.

NEWSPAPERS

Near v. Minnesota ex rel. Olson (283 U. S. 697): State statute making the publisher of a scandalous or defamatory newspaper guilty of a nuisance violates liberty of press guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment.

OLD-AGE HOMES

Washington ex rel. Seattle Title Trust Co. v. Roberge (278 U. S. 116): A zoning ordinance making the right to maintain a home for aged persons depend upon consent of two-thirds of property owners within a radius of 400 feet violates due process.

PICKETING

Truax v. Corrigan (257 U. S. 312): A State statute protecting picketing is unconstitutional.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Nixon v. Condon (286 U. S. 73): A State law allowing political parties to prescribe qualifications for membership on the basis of color violates fourteenth amendment.

PUBLIC UTILITIES

Michigan Public Utilities Co. v. Duke (266 U. S. 570): A State cannot by legislative fiat convert a private carrier into a public utility.

RAILROADS

Great Northern R. Co. v. Cahill (253 U. S. 71): Railroad companies cannot be compelled by State administrative order to install cattle weighing scales at stations from which cattle are shipped.

Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid (13 Wall. 264): The charter of the railroad company exempted its property from taxation. An attempt to tax the franchises and rolling stock violates such contract.

RAILWAY CONDUCTORS

Smith v. Texas (233 U. S. 630): A Texas statute making it a misdemeanor for a person to act as a railway conductor who has not had 2 years' experience as a freight conductor or brakeman is invalid.

RENTS

Chastleton Corp. v. Sinclair (264 U. S. 543): When the housing emergency has been relieved, a statute fixing rents can no longer be upheld.

SLEEPING CARS

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wisconsin (238 U. S. 491): A State law prohibiting the letting down of an unengaged and unoccupied upper berth when the lower berth in the same section is occupied violates the fourteenth amendment.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

Campbell v. Holt (115 U. S. 620): When legal title to property has been vested in a party by the statute of limitations, an attempt by the repeal of such statute to annul his title takes one's property without due process of law.

TAXATION

American Smelting Co. v. Colorado (2-4 U. S. 103): After admitting a foreign corporation on an equality with domestic, a subsequent statute imposing higher fees is void even though the power to alter charters is reserved by the State constitution.

THEATER TICKETS

Tyson & Bro. v. Banton (275 U. S. 418): A New York law regulating the price of theater tickets in an effort to eliminate "scalpers" is invalid.

TRUST-MADE ARTICLES

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. (184 U. S. 540): An Illinois act of June 20, 1893, attempted to favor agricultural products or livestock in the hands of the producer over trust-made articles. Such an act violates equal protection of the laws.

USE OF HIGHWAYS

Frost v. Railroad Commission of California (271 U. S. 583): A State statute requiring a private carrier to become a public carrier in order to secure a permit to use the public highways for transportation purposes is unconstitutional.

(For more complete lists of U. S. Supreme Court decisions declaring State legislation unconstitutional, see Blaine F. Moore, The Supreme Court and Unconstitutional Legislation, 1913, appendix II, covering vols. 1-219; CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, 64th Cong., 4th sess., pp. 4569-4570, covering vols. 220-257 to p. 311.)

State constitutions which are in force today are, for the most part, post Civil War creations. They contain elaborate bills of rights. And embodied therein, in language obviously plagiarized, are not infrequently the due-process and equal-protection clauses of the fourteenth amendment. Where the latter phrase has been omitted there has generally been substituted a section forbidding special legislation.

Such clauses have given to the State courts almost unlimited prerogatives of judicial review. It is not surprising that experiments in social legislation never hurdle the first barrier, inasmuch as the State and lower Federal courts wield a double-edged sword—they may declare the act of the State legislation in violation of either the Federal or the State constitution.

True, since 1914 a decision of a State court adverse to the constitutionality of an act of the State legislation can be appealed to the Supreme Court, but only if the State court held the act to contravene the Federal Constitution. The Supreme Court has uniformly held that the State courts are the final interpreters of their own constitution. Hence, if the act was adjudged to violate the constitution of the State, then there is no appeal. But, needless to say, if the law is deemed valid by the lower courts, there is almost always an opportunity to test its validity before the Supreme Court of the United States.

In the following cases the State and lower Federal courts have declared invalid attempts of the State legislatures and city councils to pass remedial social and economic measures:

ALIEN EMPLOYEES

Ex Parte Kotta (187 Calif. 27): A statute levying a poll tax on all alien male inhabitants of the State and authorizing employers to withhold such sums from alien employees in event of delinquency was a denial of equal protection.

ANTITRUST EXEMPTIONS

Niagara Fire Ins. Co. v. Cornell (110 Fed. 816): The Nebraska Anti-Trust Act exempting labor associations from its provisions denies equal protection of the law.

BARBERS

State v. Walker (48 Wash. 8): A provision requiring barbers to serve an apprenticeship of 2 years is unreasonable and arbitrary and not within the police power of the State.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION

Ex Parte Ah Cue (101 Calif. 197): The State Chinese Exclusion Act conflicts with the powers of the Federal Government to regulate immigration and is void.

CHINESE LABOR

Chapman v. Toy Long (Fed. Cases, No. 2610): A mining regulation forbidding Chinamen from working a placer mining claim violates a treaty provision and is void.

COMPANY STORES

Luman v. Hitchens Bros. Co. (90 Md. 14): An act prohibiting directors of mining corporations from selling goods or holding an interest in a general store violates equal protection clause of fourteenth amendment.

COMPULSORY LABOR

Ex Parte Hudgins (86 W. Va. 526): A war-time statute requiring able-bodied men to work at least 36 hours per week is an unreasonable restraint upon personal liberty.

CONVICT-MADE GOODS

People v. Hawkins (157 N. Y. 1): A New York statute requiring all prison-made goods to be so labeled if sold in that State violates the right of the Federal Government to regulate commerce.

DISCHARGING EMPLOYEES

Gillespie v. People (188 Ill. 176): A State statute prohibiting employers from discharging employees because of their membership in a labor union violates freedom of contract.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Ex Parte Dickey (144 Calif. 234): A State statute limiting fees to be charged by employment agencies deprives one of freedom of contract and violates the Constitution.

GARNISHMENT

Badenoch v. City of Chicago (22 Ill. 71): A State law subjecting the salaries of certain municipal employees to garnishment and attachment is special legislation and therefore violates the Illinois constitution.

MUNICIPAL ICE

State v. Orear (277 Mo. 303): A city, even though authorized by its charter and a two-thirds vote of the electorate, cannot lawfully issue bonds to construct and operate a municipal ice plant.

PLUMBERS

State v. Smith (42 Wash. 237): A State statute requiring plumbers to secure a license cannot be sustained as a health regulation, being an infringement on one's right to pursue a chosen calling.

PUBLIC WORKS

People ex rel. Treat v. Coler (166 N. Y. 144): State statutes requiring contractors on public works to use stone cut, carved, or dressed in New York is void under the commerce and freedom of contract clauses of the United States Constitution.

SCRIP

State v. Missouri Tie & Timber Co. (181 Mo. 536): A statute making it a misdemeanor to use scrip in payment of wages violates freedom of contract.

STORE ORDERS

Jordan v. State (51 Tex. Crim. App. 531): A statute prohibiting the use of store orders in payment of wages interferes with freedom of contract and is void.

TIPS

Dunahoo v. Huber (185 Iowa 753): A State law prohibiting an employee from accepting a tip but allowing his employer who is engaged in the same services to solicit gratuities is void, being in violation of the State constitution prohibiting the granting of special privileges.

UNION LABELS

Marshall & Bruce Co. v. Nashville (109 Tenn. 495): A city ordinance requiring a union label to be affixed to all public printing is discriminatory in character and void.

WEEKLY WAGES

Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State (160 Ind. 379): A statute requiring the weekly payment of wages is an unreasonable restriction upon the freedom of contract.

WOMEN

In re Maguire (57 Calif. 604): A city ordinance prohibiting the employment of females in dance cellars, wine cellars, etc., is an unconstitutional discrimination on the basis of sex, prohibited by the State constitution.

REFERENCE L

The answers of Jefferson, of Lincoln, and of the two Roosevelts are in their own words. Those of Jackson and Grant are based on their well-known actions.

REFERENCE M

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Haines: American Doctrine of Judicial Supremacy. No serious study of the subject should be undertaken without this work.

Ralston: Judicial Control Over Legislatures as to Constitutional Questions. Published by American Federation of Labor.

Henry, John M.: Pittsburgh Bar (in press), the Supreme Court, a Super-Legislature.

Corwin, Prof. Edward S.: Twilight of the Supreme Court.

Davis, Horace A.: The Judicial Veto.

WHY A POTATO-CONTROL PROGRAM?

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, the agricultural affluence of the West and South now shows the first promise of appearing in New England as the potato program convulses the Nation. The profound commotion created by this measure hardly seems warranted by its character in a country which for some years has been experimenting with control programs in 14 other major and minor agricultural commodities.

As we read the columns of the metropolitan press and magazines, we may well inquire, "What is all the shooting about?"

PLIGHT OF POTATOES

The plight of the potato farmer with prices under 50 percent of parity, while the prices of 14 other controlled crops were around 100 percent of parity, and the prices of everything else which he must use and wear far above 100 percent of parity, has not disturbed at all the peace of mind of the metropolitan editors.

It means nothing in their lives to have potatoes sell for 10 cents a barrel, or approximately 1 cent a peck, except that they may save a few cents on a peck of potatoes in case the spread is not entirely absorbed between the producer and the consumer.

Ten-cent potatoes mean a great deal, however, to citizens of eastern Maine, as everyone in this area well realizes. Potatoes are now for the first time recognized as a basic commodity and are no longer "the forgotten crop." This means that a division is set up in A. A. A. to consider the plight of the potato, and this means that there is a place to which we may go to discuss potatoes with the assurance of sympathetic interest and that all the resources of the Government in information and organization are at the disposal of those responsible for formulating a potato program.

Potatoes selling at 10 cents a barrel reveal the terrific impact of control programs operating in 14 other crops. Surplus acreage from all these other crops could and did turn most easily to potatoes.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE

Iowa alone, boasting munificent benefits under its corn-hog program, showed an increase of 50 percent in its potato production this year, according to the last Government estimate. The bitter opposition of Iowa Representatives to a potato program under these circumstances reveals an unfortunate trait in human nature. One wonders how much of the present commotion about the potato program is traceable to a similar source.

DELIBERATE CONSIDERATION

Now it is insinuated that the potato-control legislation was adopted with practically no deliberation. As a matter of fact, probably no measure before the present Congress received more exhaustive consideration.

The critics of the measure realize full well that the formulation of a bill is not performed by the full House or Senate, but must necessarily be worked out in a committee composed of Members familiar with the particular problem that is involved.

In the case of the potato bill the Committee on Agriculture of the House, composed of 24 Members, representing both parties and all sections of the country, had this bill before them for 6 months from the time it was introduced early in February until it was reported early in August.

Even before its introduction it was the subject of two public conferences of Senators and Representatives from widely scattered States and its formulation was gone over most carefully in all-day sessions with representatives of the Department of Agriculture. Subsequently extended hearings were held over a period of many weeks and the measure was repeatedly and carefully revised. Full opportunity was afforded all critics and opponents to appear and present their views and the proponents of the measure were examined at great length.

Nor was this a case of a packed committee railroading a bill, as a sharp division of opinion developed within the committee, led by the Representatives from Iowa on both the Democratic and Republican sides, and they submitted a lengthy report outlining their objections, and this report was printed at their request and placed by them in the hands of every Member of the House.

The prospects and the character of the proposed potato legislation were discussed by the magazine Time as early as February, and by practically every other publication dealing with current topics. Repeatedly through the winter and spring I called the attention of the House to the absolute necessity of some action to care for the plight of the potato farmer and to the legislation which was contemplated.

The legislation was discussed individually with practically every Member of the Senate before its adoption by the Senate with but five dissenting votes. Certainly an agricultural control program that is adopted by the Senate without objection from Senators BORAH and GLASS and with the active and militant support of Senators HALE and WHITE, of Maine, cannot be dismissed as airily as some of its critics would desire.

PUBLIC DISCUSSION

One critic suggests that the kindest thing one can say about a Representative or Senator who voted for this measure is that he has not read the bill. The kindest thing one can say about this critic is that he has not read the newspapers, else he would know that the potato-control bill was deliberately discussed and explained at an all-day mass meeting of 3,000 Aroostook farmers, with copies of the bill in circulation, and was endorsed by them with practically complete unanimity as the only feasible way of bringing them any measure of relief. Subsequently the measure was carefully considered by the Aroostook County Council and by chambers of commerce throughout Aroostook and by most of the leaders in potato production in Maine.

They all joined in urging Maine Senators and Representatives to support this legislation as a long-deferred act of justice to potato growers, who were being terribly prejudiced by the inundation of land from other crops.

As the Representative of eastern Maine in the Congress, I should welcome the fullest discussion of this subject and explanations to the potato growers in Maine why potatoes—the fourth food crop of the United States—should continue to be the dumping ground for surplus acreage from 14 other controlled crops—even including the peanut crop, which was formerly one-tenth the value of the potato crop.

CONDITION AND NOT THEORY

It is not necessary to take sides in the bitter contest that rages between the advocates and the opponents of control programs in order to recognize that the programs are going to be operative for the next 2 years unless a Supreme Court decision intervenes. The experience of the past 2 years has amply demonstrated that potatoes can no longer be left outside the fold unless the potato growers of the United States are to be reduced to the condition of serfs.

No criticism is involved of the New England representative on the Committee on Agriculture who 2 years ago left potatoes out as a basic commodity in the confident belief—then widely shared by individualistic Yankees—that agriculture control would soon demonstrate its economic unsoundness.

Maine this year was confronted by a condition and not a theory. Potatoes were selling at 10 cents a barrel. The triple A program was more firmly established than ever with amplifying and clarifying amendments in process of adoption that would considerably expand the powers of triple A and were designed to make triple A more nearly immune to constitutional attack in the light of recent Supreme Court decisions.

POTATOES LEFT OUT

It seemed perfectly obvious that potatoes must have a seat in the agricultural control train or be left hopelessly in the rear. When, as, and if the train goes into a constitutional ditch we must all take our chances in the unscrambling that must follow.

This was exactly the position taken by every Maine Senator and Congressman without regard to party, and with the practically unanimous endorsement of every citizen of Maine who gave the matter attention. Even the parliamentary situation expressed this point of view as the entire potato-control program went through as an amendment to the so-called "triple A amendments." This said in substance that Maine insisted that potatoes now be included in whatever agriculture-control program was operative.

No critic of the program in Washington in his loftiest flights ever questioned that the plan was very much for the advantage of Maine. The line of attack was entirely that it was too much for the advantage of Maine and certain other large potato-raising States. It was intimated that the measure would tend to give a monopoly on potato raising to the States which have devoted a large acreage to potatoes in the past. This is precisely what we have understood was happening with cotton, wheat, tobacco, and corn hogs.

It was curious and distressing to hear Iowa Representatives inveighing against such a program for potatoes from the safe shelter of their unprecedented prices for hogs in addition to their benefit payments under triple A.

Their 50-percent increase in estimated potato production for this year made their criticisms completely cynical. The exposure of this Iowa situation on the floor of the House during the consideration of the potato bill did much to discredit their arguments and to gain the narrow margin of seven votes in the House by which the potato-control measure was finally adopted.

COTTON AND TOBACCO REPRESENTATIVES

Great credit should be given to the Representatives from the cotton and tobacco sections of the country for supporting the potato program, and particularly to Representative LINDSAY C. WARREN, of North Carolina, who sponsored and piloted the measure through the House and stood for justice to Maine and all other Northern States in all the difficult and delicate discussions as to the form of the bill, and particularly as to the allocation of quotas.

It must also be borne in mind that the authorities in triple A viewed potatoes very much askance. From top to bottom they preferred to leave potatoes outside the agricultural pale—perhaps on the theory that the areas devoted to specialized potato production were of negligible political importance. Such coolness on their part was naturally one of the most formidable obstacles to the enactment of the bill.

In justice to triple A and to its administrator, Chester C. Davis, however, it must be said that they meticulously performed their obligations in assisting to formulate the bill throughout 6 months of distinctly exhausting labor and also that they have shown every indication of whole-hearted cooperation in carrying out the program now that it has been adopted.

FUTURE ADMINISTRATION

Potatoes have been placed in the division with tobacco, sugar, rice, and peanuts, and it is significant that these commodities have been handled with remarkable felicity, as they have received more benefit with less controversy than perhaps any other commodities. This may be due in no small measure to the admirable administration of John B. Hutson, chief of the division, who has shown the same wisdom in his initial step in the potato program by his selection of A. E. Mercker as chief of the potato section. Mr. Mercker is well known to many Maine citizens through his visits here, and he is undoubtedly more familiar with the potato problem than any other man in Washington and more keenly interested in a constructive solution. Mr. Mercker also brings to the potato section an intimate knowledge of the Maine situation and of the marketing problem along the whole Atlantic seaboard.

It is interesting and illuminating to find a Maine newspaper querying the quota provisions of the potato act as unbelievably favorable to Maine.

No intelligent criticism thus far has suggested how this act can be otherwise than most beneficial to the State of Maine, and the entire endeavor of its opposition in Congress was to characterize it as a Maine-made bill with a southern dressing to make it palatable to the Representatives from the cotton and tobacco States. This characterization, however, was made for the purpose of arousing sectional antagonism and entirely failed to do justice to the Herculean efforts of the gentlemen from North Carolina, Representatives WARREN and BARDEN, and the gentleman from Virginia, Representative BLAND, in the formulation and adoption of this long-deferred act of justice to the potato growers of the United States without regard to section.

Thus far this discussion is open to the very proper criticism that it considers the potato problem entirely from the standpoint of a State or a crop. One is reminded rather constantly in Washington that selfishness is not abolished by any legislation thus far enacted even in this new legislative day.

EFFECT ON COUNTRY AND CONSUMER

But what of the country and the consumer? The whole philosophy of the agricultural program is that we are all parts of an interdependent whole and must rise or fall together. Prosperity and poverty on a wholesale scale cannot long exist together. The country cannot indefinitely continue half pauper and half prince. This surely is not considered treason under either the new deal or the old deal.

The price of potatoes affects more than 15,000,000 Americans for better or worse. Their prosperity is the intimate concern of every other industrial and agricultural activity.

No consumer in this country is permanently or even temporarily benefited by permitting distributors to buy potatoes from the farmer at 1 cent a peck and sell them to the consumer at 15 cents a peck as happened repeatedly this last spring.

NO PROCESSING TAX OR BENEFIT PAYMENTS

It is to be borne in mind that the potato-control program provides no processing tax or benefit payments to create of potato growers a specially privileged class and to impose the burden of their recovery on the consumer. In this respect, the potato plan differs from almost every other adjustment program.

If the hopes of its authors are realized it will impose negligible burdens upon all producers and consumers and provide only an equitable revenue for those who produce one of our most essential food crops.

POTATO PROSPERITY

But the critic asks, Why seek to regiment? The eager advocate of the ancient day must face the uncomfortable fact that the controlled crops of the country were selling this spring at approximately 100 percent of their parity price while potatoes were bringing less than 50 percent of parity and the plight of the potato farmer was constantly growing worse.

Detroit is interested in selling automobiles to Aroostook. Maine and the Nation are alike interested in the capacity of Aroostook and every other section to pay the taxes that are necessary to support the Government if repudiation is to be avoided.

No merely selfish or sectional attitude is required to support a program designed to restore to the potato growers of this country their fair share of the national income whatever it may be.

If the worst fears or hopes of the critics are realized and the entire agricultural program is declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court then the potato growers will be ready to face their problem on an equality with all the other major crops. We ask no more, we can expect no less.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 8 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, August 21, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

481. Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting a further report on the survey made of the inactive and permanent appropriations and funds on the books of the Government, and also certain funds in the custody of officers and employees of the United States in which the Government is financially concerned for which no accounting is rendered to the General Accounting Office, and recommendations for such changes in existing law that would be of public interest (H. Doc. No. 301), was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. DRIVER: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 349. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 8455; without amendment (Rept. No. 1841). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 7678. A bill to authorize the Director of the Mint to supplement the approved design of the 50-cent piece commemorating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Daniel Boone, the coinage of which was authoried by act of the Seventy-third Congress (Public, No. 258, S. 3355); without amendment (Rept. No. 1842). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL of Alabama: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 8074. A bill to amend the act of March 3, 1925, relating to Fort McHenry; without amendment (Rept. No. 1843). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL of Alabama: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 3018. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to acquire by donation land at Valparaiso in Okaloosa County, Fla., for aviation field, military, or other public purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1844). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. KELLER: Committee on the Library. House Joint Resolution 241. Joint resolution to provide for the observance and celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Prattville, Ala.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1856). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. O'CONNOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 355. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 8599; without amendment (Rept. No. 1857). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 356. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 8597; without amendment (Rept. No. 1858). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 357. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 6036; without amendment (Rept. No. 1859). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 358. Resolution providing for recesses and consideration of reports from the Committee on Rules during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress; without amendment (Rept. No. 1860). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 3340. A bill for the relief of Jesse S. Post; with amendment (Rept. No. 1845). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 9195. A bill for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1848). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HARTER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 6548. A bill to provide for a review by the Department of War of the case of the late Capt. Bartlett James; with amendment (Rept. No. 1849). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 166. A bill for the relief of Jack Doyle; with amendment (Rept. No. 1850). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 246. A bill for the relief of Elmer Blair; with amendment (Rept. No. 1851). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HARTER: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 272. A bill for the relief of William Frank Lipps; with amendment (Rept. No. 1852). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 889. A bill for the relief of Albert A. Marquardt; with amendment (Rept. No. 1853). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1010. A bill for the relief of Fred Edward Nordstrom; with amendment (Rept. No. 1854). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1176. A bill for the relief of Thomas A. Coyne; with amendment (Rept. No. 1855). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. McCLELLAN: A bill (H. R. 9183) to provide for the extension of the boundaries of the Hot Springs National Park in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. STEFAN: A bill (H. R. 9184) authorizing the County Board of Supervisors of Burt County, Nebr., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Decatur, Nebr.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BUCK: A bill (H. R. 9185) to insure the collection of the revenue on intoxicating liquor, to provide for the more efficient and economical administration and enforcement of the laws relating to the taxation of intoxicating liquor, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mrs. O'DAY: A bill (H. R. 9186) granting the consent of Congress to the Rockland-Westchester Hudson River Crossing Authority, State of New York, to construct, maintain, and operate a highway bridge and causeway across the Hudson River between a point in the vicinity of the village of Nyack, Rockland County, and the village of Tarrytown, Westchester County, N. Y.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 350) requesting that the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization be requested to continue the stay of deportation in the cases of aliens of good character in which deportation would result in unusual hardship until Congress has had adequate time to consider proposed legislation; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution (H. Res. 351) to authorize an investigation of smuggling of aliens into the United States and a study of the land border patrol of the Immigration Service; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SABATH: Resolution (H. Res. 352) authorizing further expenditures of $20,000 to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House for the continuance of the investigation by the Select Committee to Investigate Real Estate Bondholders Reorganizations; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. O'MALLEY: Resolution (H. Res. 353) authorizing an investigation of the expenditure of Federal funds in the construction of highways in the United States; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SABATH: Resolution (H. Res. 354) granting additional powers to the Select Committee to Investigate Real Estate Bondholders Reorganizations authorized under House Resolution 412, Seventy-third Congress, and supplemented by House Resolutions 39 and 79 of the Seventy-fourth Congress; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. CORNING: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 393) authorizing the issuance of a special postage stamp in honor of Will Rogers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. McREYNOLDS: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 394) to continue Electric Home and Farm Authority as an agency of the United States until February 1937, or for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CROSBY: A bill (H. R. 9187) granting a pension as to Myra Struchen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DIES: A bill (H. R. 9188) granting an increase of pension to Kate Anderson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HART: A bill (H. R. 9189) for the relief of the heirs of Thomas P. Mitchell; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 9190) for the relief of J. P. Moore; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LORD: A bill (H. R. 9191) for the relief of dependents of James B. Kiley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REECE: A bill (H. R. 9192) to extend the benefits of the Employees' Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, to Ida Yount; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHORT: A bill (H. R. 9193) granting a pension to Rachel Nash; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEAVER: A bill (H. R. 9194) for the relief of Mrs. Charles R. Yopp; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ROBINSON: A bill (H. R. 9195) for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

9326. By Mr. BRUNNER: Resolution of the Allied League of Independent Voters, Long Island City, N. Y., at a regular meeting held at the club rooms on August 2, 1935, that the Allied League of Independent Voters petition the Honorable WILLIAM F. BRUNNER to introduce a bill in the House of Representatives creating a body which would be empowered with interpreting the Constitution of the United States of America for those citizens whose constitutional privileges or rights have been abridged and who are not financially capable of obtaining justice in the courts of the land; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

9327. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Southeast District Chamber of Commerce of the City of Huntington Park, Los Angeles County, Calif., relative to the mail deliveries in the business district of the city of Huntington Park; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, July 29, 1935)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, August 20, 1935, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Logan	Robinson
Ashurst	Davis	Lonergan	Russell
Austin	Dieterich	Long	Schall
Bachman	Donahey	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Duffy	McCarran	Sheppard
Bankhead	Fletcher	McGill	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Barkley	George	McNary	Steiwer
Black	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Glass	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Gore	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Guffey	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Hale	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hastings	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hatch	Norris	Wagner
Capper	Hayden	Nye	Walsh
Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Chavez	Johnson	Overton	White
Clark	King	Pittman
Connally	La Follette	Radcliffe
Copeland	Lewis	Reynolds

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], who are necessarily detained. I ask that the announcement be entered in the RECORD for the day.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] are necessarily detained from the Senate, and that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] is absent on official business.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I repeat the announcement heretofore made by me that my colleague the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] is absent because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The VICE PRESIDENT announced his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

S. 491. An act for the relief of Fred Herrick;

S. 1988. An act to extend the times for the commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Rulo, Nebr.;

S. 2626. An act to authorize the sale of Federal buildings;

S. 2743. An act to authorize the erection of a suitable memorial to Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals within the Canal Zone;

S. 3135. An act to authorize the purchase of the Winnie Mae by the Smithsonian Institution;

S. 3060. An act to amend section 6 of title I of the act entitled "An act to maintain the credit of the United States Government", approved March 20, 1933, as amended; to extend the time within which applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended, may be filed, and for other purposes;

S. J. Res. 59. Joint resolution providing for the preparation and completion of plans for a comprehensive observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution of the United States;

S. J. Res. 122. Joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into an agreement amending the agreement between such States consented to by Congress in Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission; and

S. J. Res. 168. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 16 to May 23, 1936, inclusive.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 1763. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust the compensation of certain employees in the Customs Service", approved May 29, 1928, as amended by the act of December 12, 1930;

S. 1787. An act to add certain lands to the Pisgah National Forest in the State of North Carolina;

S. 1817. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., against the United States in respect of loss of property occasioned by the breaking of a Government dike on Squaw Island;

S. 1864. An act for the relief of the State of Nebraska;

S. 2649. An act to provide for a recreation area within the Prescott National Forest, Ariz.;

S. 3194. An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended;

S. 3270. An act to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia; and

S. 3353. An act providing for the exchange of certain park lands at and near Western Avenue and West Beach Drive for other lands more suitable to the development of Rock Creek Park and the street system of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7199) to provide for the donation of certain Army equipment to posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. PALMISANO, Mr. NICHOLS, and Mr. DIRKSEN were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 3462. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, approved March 4, 1913", and for other purposes;

H. R. 5711. An act to provide pensions for needy blind persons of the District of Columbia and authorizing appropriations therefor;

H. R. 6510. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act;

H. R. 6623. An act to amend the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia in relation to providing assistance against old-age want;

H. R. 8421. An act granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8422. An act granting pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8423. An act granting increase of pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8424. An act granting increase of pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8425. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain helpless and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War; and

H. R. 8426. An act granting pensions to certain soldiers of the Civil War.

SANFORD & BROOKS CO.—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 125)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return herewith, without my approval, S. 685, "An act for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co."

This bill authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Sanford & Brooks Co. the sum of $53,208.49 in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for refund of income taxes assessed and collected for the year 1920 on amounts paid in that year by the United States to the Sanford & Brooks Co. to compensate that company for the cost to it of certain work done for the United States during the years 1913 to 1916, both inclusive. This bill would authorize the refund of such taxes regardless of the fact that the Supreme Court has determined that such taxes were properly paid in accordance with the provisions of the revenue acts applicable thereto (Burnet v. Sanford & Brooks Co., 262 U. S. 359).

It is alleged that although the payment of the abovementioned tax was technically required under the statutes, as determined by the Supreme Court, such a levy is unjust and inequitable in the instant case. The inequity is stated to arise out of the fact that the Sanford & Brooks Co. was taxed on the money which was paid to it in 1920 by the United States as compensation for losses sustained in prior years in the consummation of work performed for the benefit of the Government, although that company did not derive a net profit from such transaction, which result was ascertainable only when the transaction was completed.

Congress has determined that it is sound policy to ascertain and compute income annually as to the net result of all transactions within that particular year. That system of taxation is designed to produce revenue ascertainable, and payable to the Government at regular intervals, and to make possible the application of methods of accounting, assessment, and collection capable of practical operation. There are many cases in which a particular taxpayer, engaged in a transaction which extends over several taxable periods, may, in accordance with his method of accounting, report income from that transaction in some of those years and losses from that transaction in other years, even though the given transaction in its entirety does not result in a net profit. But it has never been supposed that such a result "affords any reason for postponing the assessment of the tax until the end of a lifetime, or for some other indefinite period, to ascertain more precisely whether the final outcome of the period, or of a given transaction, will be a gain or a loss." (The Sanford & Brooks case, supra, at p. 365.) It is conceivable that a different system might have been devised by which the tax could be assessed on the basis of the finally ascertained results of particular transactions rather than at the end of each taxable period. However, Congress did not adopt such a system, and it is obvious that such a system would not necessarily obviate the kind of inequalities of which complaint is made in the instant case.

S. 685, however, selects a particular taxpayer for special treatment by excepting that taxpayer from the enacted policy of Congress in this matter and from the uniform operation of the revenue laws. The whole body of Federal taxpayers is thus discriminated against, and the precedent is established, opening up a wide field for legislation, opposed to sound public policy, in cases in which the present system operates to the prejudice of a particular taxpayer.

I have on prior occasions expressed my belief that the field of special legislation should not be opened to relieve special classes of taxpayers from the uniform operation of the revenue laws. I know of no circumstances which would justify the exception made by S. 685 to the long-continued policy of Congress as expressed in the present system of taxation and to my convictions in this matter.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 19, 1935.

Mr. BAILEY subsequently said: Mr. President, in view of the veto message in relation to Senate bill 685, for the relief of Sanford & Brooks Co., I desire to have printed in the RECORD the report on the bill from the House Committee on Claims and the report from the Senate Committee on Claims concerning the proposed legislation. I ask unanimous consent to print the reports for the information of the Senate, in view of the veto.

There being no objection, the reports were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[H. Rept. No. 1005, 74th Cong., 1st sess.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 685) for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co., having considered the same, report thereon with the recommendation that it do pass.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Sanford & Brooks Co. is and for many years has been engaged in dredging operations and similar contracting work.

In 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916 it was engaged in making excavations in the Delaware River under contract with the United States, the contract having been made with the Atlantic Dredging Co. for which the Sanford & Brooks Co. was acting as agent. In those years the expenses incurred by it incident to doing the dredging exceeded the contract price received for the work by $176,271.88, allocated to the 4 years as follows:

1913	$28,241.03
1914	68,117.81
1915	69,705.15
1916	10,207.89
Total	176,271.88

The taxpayer assumed that the losses had been made because it had taken an unprofitable contract. Subsequent to 1916, however, it learned that certain representations made on behalf of the Federal Government in reliance upon which the contract had been entered into were incorrect. It discontinued the work and entered suit in the Court of Claims for the amount of its damages. The Court of Claims, in an opinion by Judge Hay, determined that the loss sustained by the taxpayer was $211,050 and allowed this amount. On appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, the judgment of the Court of Claims was affirmed. The litigation extended over some years and payment was not made to the taxpayer in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court until 1920, when the amount of the judgment was paid together with interest. Its principal, Atlantic Dredging Co., incurred $34,778.21 of the amount paid, making the net amount received by Sanford & Brooks Co., $192,579.59.

The taxpayer accounted for the interest ($16,305.71) in its income-tax returns for 1920, the year in which the payment was made. This left a balance of $176,273.88, which the taxpayer insisted was not income for the year 1920 but was taxable for the years 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916, the years in which the loss was sustained. It accordingly filed amended returns for those 4 years, increasing its income as originally reported each year by the amount of the loss sustained in that year in the amounts hereinabove set out. The Government insisted that the entire amount of the recovery was income for the year 1920. The taxpayer, the Sanford & Brooks Co., contested the position of the Government before the Board of Tax Appeals, which by a divided court sustained the contention of the Government and held that the entire amount received in payment of the judgment was income for the year 1920, the year in which it was paid. From this decision the taxpayer appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States for the Fourth Circuit. That court, one judge dissenting, reversed the decision of the Board of Tax Appeals and held that the amount of the judgment, exclusive of the interest which the taxpayer had accounted for as income for the year 1920, was income for the years 1913 to 1916, when the loss was sustained for the recovery of which the judgment was rendered.

On writ of certiorari the Supreme Court of the United States reversed the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and held that the entire amount received was income for the year 1920 as contended for by the Government. As a result of this decision the tax was assessed and paid, the entire amount paid being $72,032.11.

The amount paid was not income in the sense that it represented no gain to the taxpayer but was a refund to it of amounts which it had expended for the account of the Federal Government in the prosecution of work of which it got the benefit. The Supreme Court of the United States, in affirming the judgment of the Court of Claims holding the Government liable, held that the amount of the judgment was "simply compensatory of the cost of the work, of which the Government got the benefit."

In the opinion of the circuit court of appeals, the majority of the court finding in favor of the taxpayer, makes this statement:

"After all has been said that can be said with regard to the various technical aspects of the case at bar, the fact remains that to sustain the tax on the $176,271.88 recovered as reimbursement for loss is to sustain a tax on income where no income has been in fact received. We do not see how this could be justified either under the income-tax law itself or under any legal principle which could be invoked in its interpretation. There can be no doubt that the right and justice of the case require that the $176,271.88 be treated not as income but as reimbursement of loss; and we know of no legal principle under which what is so manifestly just and right may be defeated and the Government placed in the unseemly position of reimbursing a loss with one hand and, under the guise of taxation, taking away a part of the reimbursement with the other."

The Supreme Court of the United States, in reversing the decision of the circuit court of appeals and holding the taxpayer liable, decided that under the statute and regulations, there was no relief that could be granted to the taxpayer, and in closing its opinion makes this statement:

"The assessment was properly made under the statutes. Relief from their alleged burdensome operation which may not be secured under these provisions can be afforded only by legislation, not by the courts."

The decisions of the two courts, the lower court holding in favor of the taxpayer and the Supreme Court holding in favor of the Government, from both of which opinions we have quoted, justify us, we think, in asking relief of Congress for a payment which, although technically required under the statutes as the Supreme Court held, is unjust and inequitable in that it exacts an income tax on money which was in no sense income but represented only a return of moneys expended, of which the Government got the benefit.

Had the controversy been one between two taxpayers, our request for a refund would have been sound and we think meritorious; it is certainly so in view of the fact that it was the Federal Government which, through its default, caused the loss and it was the Federal Government which has exacted a tax on the amount which it was required to pay to recompense a loss sustained through its default.

If the amount of the tax is not refunded, the facts will be (a) that the Federal Government wrongfully caused the loss; (b) that, acting under a decision of the Supreme Court, the Federal Government refunded the amount of the loss; and (c) that the Federal Government took by way of a tax more than one-third of the amount which it was required to refund.

The decision of the Court of Claims will be found in 53 Court of Claims Reports, page 490; the decision of the Supreme Court requiring the Government to make the refund is reported in 253 U. S., page 1; the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit is reported in 35 Federal Reporter (2d series) at page 312; and the decision of the Supreme Court requiring the taxpayer to account for the entire amount paid as income for 1920 will be found in 282 U. S., page 359.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, March 3, 1933.

Hon. LORING M. BLACK,
Chairman Committee on Claims, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Further reference is made to your letter of December 16, 1932, transmitting to the Treasury Department for report a copy of a bill designated "H. R. 13619" (72d Cong., 2d sess.), for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co., Baltimore, Md.

The bill would authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the Sanford & Brooks Co. the sum of $72,032.11 in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for income and profits taxes alleged to have been erroneously assessed and collected for the year 1920.

This taxpayer during the years 1913 to 1916, inclusive, acted as agent for the Atlantic Dredging Co. in making excavations in the Delaware River under a contract with the United States. During these years the expenses incurred in this work exceeded the contract price by $172,921.88. Subsequent to 1916 this taxpayer learned that certain representations made on behalf of the Federal Government, and on which the contract was based, were incorrect, and as a result work was discontinued and suit instituted in the Court of Claims for damages. The Court of Claims determined that the loss sustained on the contract was $211,050, and on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

The amount paid in settlement in the year 1920 was $227,355.80, including interest. Of this amount $34,758.21 was taken by the Atlantic Dredging Co., the principal in the contract, and the remainder of $192,597.59 was received by the Sanford & Brooks Co. In prosecuting the suit, this taxpayer expended the sum of $44,390.42, leaving a net amount of $148,207.17 which was credited to surplus on the books of the company during the year 1920. In the audit of the return for that year, the Bureau of Internal Revenue added the amount of $148,207.17 to the income reported by the taxpayer, which together with other minor changes resulted in an additional tax of $50,883.90 for the year. The taxpayer conceded the minor adjustments and also admitted that $16,305.71 interest included in the award was correctly added to the 1920 income by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, but contended that the balance of $131,901.46 did not represent income since it was awarded as damages for losses incurred in earlier years.

The case was appealed to the United States Board of Tax Appeals, where the action of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was sustained. On appeal to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Fourth Circuit, the action of the Board of Tax Appeals was reversed and on a writ of certiorari the case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. That body reversed the decision of the lower court and held that the entire amount received on the award was properly included in the income for the year 1920. The additional tax was accordingly assessed and is being paid on the installment basis by the taxpayer. The bill H. R. 13619 would return to the taxpayer the total tax to be paid for the year, $53,673.68, together with interest of $18,358.43. Not all of this tax and interest has as yet been received by the Government.

The Supreme Court in its findings stated that the assessment had been properly made under the statutes and that any relief from the alleged burdensome operations must be secured through legislation and not through the courts. The Bureau of Internal Revenue recognized the injustice to this taxpayer of computing the tax in the usual manner, and accordingly computed the profits tax under the provisions of section 328 of the Revenue Act of 1918, a relief provision of the act. Since the major portion of the award represented damages for losses incurred in earlier years, the Department recognizes the fact that the amount received is not all income in its true sense, and that the taxpayer has been deprived of a portion of its relief by being taxed on the full amount of the award.

Attention is, however, called to the fact that a certain amount of tax and interest is due from this taxpayer on the income earned during the year 1920, as follows:

Net income shown in revenue agent's report dated July 25, 1924	$194,027.57
Less net amount received from award, exclusive of interest	131,901.46
Income from operations and interest	62,126.11
Invested capital shown in revenue agent's report dated July 25, 1924	220,425.26
Excess-profits credit	20,634.02
Excess-profits tax	11,906.63
Income tax	4,821.95
Total tax liability	16,728.58

In view of the unusual circumstances in this case, the Department will interpose no objection to a bill granting special relief to the Sanford & Brooks Co., for all taxes paid for the year 1920 in excess of $16,728.58 plus legal interest thereon.

Very truly yours,

OGDEN L. MILLS,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[S. Rept. 268, 74th Cong., 1st sess.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 685) for the relief of Sanford & Brooks Co., having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass with the following amendment:

At the end of the bill add the following:

"Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

An identical bill passed the Senate in the Seventy-third Congress.

The facts are fully set forth in the Senate Report No. 437, Seventy-third Congress, second session, which is appended hereto and made a part of this report.

[S. Rept. No. 437, 73d Cong., 2d sess.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2879) for the relief of Sanford & Brooks Co., having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass with the following amendment:

At the end of the bill add the following:

"Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The facts are fully set forth in House Report No. 806, Seventy-third Congress, second session, which is appended hereto and made a part of this report.

[H. Rept. No. 806, 73d Cong., 2d sess.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2042) for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co., having considered the same, report thereon with the recommendation that it do pass, with the following amendments:

In line 7, strike out the word "Delaware" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Maryland."

In line 7, also, strike out the figures "$72,032.11" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$53,208.49."

At the end of the bill, on page 2, insert: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The Treasury Department interposes no objection to the passage of this bill, as amended, and the report of that Department is attached to and made a part of this report.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Sanford & Brooks Co. is, and for many years has been, engaged in dredging operations and similar contracting work.

In 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916, it was engaged in making excavations in the Delaware River under contract with the United States, the contract having been made with the Atlantic Dredging Co. for which the Sanford & Brooks Co. was acting as agent. In those years the expenses incurred by it incident to doing the dredging exceeded the contract price received for the work by $172,291.88, allocated to the 4 years as follows:

1913	$28,241.03
1914	68,117.81
1915	69,705.15
1916	10,207.89
Total	176,271.88

The taxpayer assumed that the losses had been made because it had taken an unprofitable contract. Subsequent to 1916, however, it learned that certain representations made on behalf of the Federal Government in reliance upon which the contract had been entered into were incorrect. It discontinued the work and entered suit in the Court of Claims for the amount of its damages. The Court of Claims, in an opinion by Judge Hay, determined that the loss sustained by the taxpayer was $211,050, and allowed this amount. On appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the judgment of the Court of Claims was affirmed. The litigation extended over some years and payment was not made to the taxpayer in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court, until 1920, when the amount of the judgment was paid, together with interest. Its principal, Atlantic Dredging Co., incurred $34,778.21 of the amount paid, making the net amount received by Sanford & Brooks Co. $192,579.59.

The taxpayer accounted for the interest ($16,305.71) in its income-tax returns for 1920, the year in which the payment was made. This left a balance of $176,273.88 which the taxpayer insisted was not income for the year 1920 but was taxable for the years 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916, the years in which the loss was sustained. It accordingly filed amended returns for those 4 years, increasing its income as originally reported each year by the amount of the loss sustained in that year, in the amounts hereinabove set out. The Government insisted that the entire amount of the recovery was income for the year 1920. The taxpayer, the Sanford & Brooks Co., contested the position of the Government before the Board of Tax Appeals, which by a divided court, sustained the contention of the Government and held that the entire amount received in payment of the judgment was income for the year 1920, the year in which it was paid. From this decision the taxpayer appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States for the Fourth Circuit. That court, one judge dissenting, reversed the decision of the Board of Tax Appeals and held that the amount of the judgment, exclusive of the interest which the taxpayer had accounted for as income for the year 1920, was income for the years 1913–1916, when the loss was sustained for the recovery of which the judgment was rendered.

On writ of certiorari, the Supreme Court of the United States reversed the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and held that the entire amount received was income for the year 1920 as contended for by the Government. As a result of this decision, the tax was assessed and paid, the entire amount paid being $72,032.11.

The amount paid was not income in the sense that it represented no gain to the taxpayer but was a refund to it of amounts which it had expended for the account of the Federal Government in the prosecution of work of which it got the benefit. The Supreme Court of the United States in affirming the judgment of the Court of Claims holding the Government liable, held that the amount of the judgment was "simply compensatory of the cost of the work, of which the Government got the benefit."

In the opinion of the circuit court of appeals, the majority of the court finding in favor of the taxpayer, makes this statement:

"After all has been said that can be said with regard to the various technical aspects of the case at bar, the fact remains that to sustain the tax on the $176,271.88 recovered as reimbursement for loss is to sustain a tax on income where no income has been in fact received. We do not see how this could be justified either under the income-tax law itself or under any legal principle which could be invoked in its interpretation. There can be no doubt that the right and justice of the case require that the $176,271.88 be treated, not as income but as reimbursement of loss; and we know of no legal principle under which what is so manifestly just and right may be defeated and the Government placed in the unseemly position of reimbursing a loss with one hand and, under the guise of taxation, taking away a part of the reimbursement with the other."

The Supreme Court of the United States, in reversing the decision of the circuit court of appeals and holding the taxpayer liable, decided that under the statute and regulations there was no relief that could be granted to the taxpayer, and in closing its opinion makes this statement:

"The assessment was properly made under the statutes. Relief from their alleged burdensome operation, which may not be secured under these provisions, can be afforded only by legislation, not by the courts."

The decisions of the two courts, the lower court holding in favor of the taxpayer and the Supreme Court holding in favor of the Government, from both of which opinions we have quoted, justify us, we think, in asking relief of Congress for a payment which although technically required under the statutes as the Supreme Court held, is unjust and inequitable in that it exacts an income tax on money which was in no sense income but represented only a return of money expended, of which the Government got the benefit.

Had the controversy been one between two taxpayers, our request for a refund would have been sound and we think meritorious; it is certainly so in view of the fact that it was the Federal Government which through its default caused the loss, and it was the Federal Government which has exacted a tax on the amount which it was required to pay to recompense a loss sustained through its default.

If the amount of the tax is not refunded, the facts will be (a) that the Federal Government wrongfully caused the loss; (b) that acting under a decision of the Supreme Court, the Federal Government refunded the amount of the loss; and (c) that the Federal Government took by way of a tax more than one-third of the amount which it was required to refund.

The decision of the Court of Claims will be found in 53 Court of Claims Reports, page 490: The decision of the Supreme Court requiring the Government to make the refund is reported in 253 U. S., page 1, and the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit is reported in 35 Federal Reporter (2d series) at page 312, and the decision of the Supreme Court requiring the taxpayer to account for the entire amount paid as income for 1920 will be found in 282 U. S., page 359.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, March 3, 1933.

Hon. LORING M. BLACK,
Chairman Committee on Claims, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Further reference is made to your letter of December 16, 1932, transmitting to the Treasury Department for report a copy of a bill designated H. R. 13619 (72d Cong., 2d sess.), for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co., Baltimore, Md.

The bill would authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the Sanford & Brooks Co. the sum of $72,032.11 in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for income and profits taxes alleged to have been erroneously assessed and collected for the year 1920.

This taxpayer during the years 1913 to 1916, inclusive, acted as agent for the Atlantic Dredging Co. in making excavations in the Delaware River under a contract with the United States. During these years the expenses incurred in this work exceeded the contract price by $172,291.88. Subsequent to 1916 this taxpayer learned that certain representations made on behalf of the Federal Government and on which the contract was based were incorrect, and as a result work was discontinued and suit instituted in the Court of Claims for damages. The Court of Claims determined that the loss sustained on the contract was $211,050 and on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

The amount paid in settlement in the year 1920 was $227,355.80, including interest. Of this amount $34,758.21 was taken by the Atlantic Dredging Co., the principal in the contract, and the remainder of $192,597.59 was received by the Sanford & Brooks Co. In prosecuting the suit, this taxpayer expended the sum of $44,390.42, leaving a net amount of $148,207.17 which was credited to surplus on the books of the company during the year 1920. In the audit of the return for that year, the Bureau of Internal Revenue added the amount of $148,207.17 to the income reported by the taxpayer, which together with other minor changes resulted in an additional tax of $50,883.90 for the year. The taxpayer conceded the minor adjustments and also admitted that $16,305.71 interest included in the award was correctly added to the 1920 income by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, but contended that the balance of $131,901.46 did not represent income since it was awarded as damages for losses incurred in earlier years.

The case was appealed to the United States Board of Tax Appeals, where the action of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was sustained. On appeal to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Fourth Circuit, the action of the Board of Tax Appeals was reversed, and on a writ of certiorari the case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. That body reversed the decision of the lower court and held that the entire amount received on the award was properly included in the income for the year 1920. The additional tax was accordingly assessed and is being paid on the installment basis by the taxpayer. The bill H. R. 13619 would return to the taxpayer the total tax to be paid for the year, $53,673.68, together with interest of $18,358.43. Not all of this tax and interest has as yet been received by the Government.

The Supreme Court in its findings stated that the assessment had been properly made under the statutes and that any relief from the alleged burdensome operations must be secured through legislation and not through the courts. The Bureau of Internal Revenue recognized the injustice to this taxpayer of computing the tax in the usual manner, and accordingly computed the profits tax under the provisions of section 328 of the Revenue Act of 1918, a relief provision of the act. Since the major portion of the award represented damages for losses incurred in earlier years, the Department recognizes the fact that the amount received is not all income in its true sense, and that the taxpayer has been deprived of a portion of its relief by being taxed on the full amount of the award.

Attention is, however, called to the fact that a certain amount of tax and interest is due from this taxpayer on the income earned during the year 1920, as follows:

Net income shown in revenue agent's report dated July 25, 1924	$194,027.57
Less net amount received from award, exclusive of interest	131,901.46
Income from operations and interest	62,126.11
Invested capital shown in revenue agent's report dated July 25, 1924	220,425.26
Excess-profits credit	20,634.02
Excess-profits tax	11,906.63
Income tax	4,821.95
Total tax liability	16,728.58

In view of the unusual circumstances in this case, the Department will interpose no objection to a bill granting special relief to the Sanford & Brooks Co. for all taxes paid for the year 1920 in excess of $16,728.58, plus legal interest thereon.

Very truly yours,

OGDEN L. MILLS,
Secretary of the Treasury.

AMENDMENT OF POSTAL LAWS RELATING TO RELIGIOUS PERIODICALS—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 121)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and, with the accompanying paper, ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return, without my approval, S. 1439, entitled "An act amending the postal laws to include as second-class matter religious periodicals publishing local information."

This bill would amend existing law (subsection "Fourth" of section 14 of the act approved Mar. 3, 1879; 39 U. S. C., 226) concerning publications entitled to entry as second-class mail matter, as follows, the new language being underscored to distinguish it from the language of the existing law:

Fourth. It must be originated and published for the dissemination of information of a public character, or for the dissemination of local information by religious organizations, or devoted to literature, the sciences, arts, or some special industry, and having a legitimate list of subscribers. Nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, or for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates.

Publications of churches and religious organizations are now admitted as second-class mail matter, provided they meet the requirements of the act of March 3, 1879, including the provision cited above. The amendment proposed by this bill would provide for the entry as second-class matter of additional religious publications devoted in their entirety to information of a local character, as distinguished from a public character, relating to the particular churches or religious organizations publishing them. If an exception should be made to existing law in favor of religious organizations, it would constitute a precedent under which other social organizations and associations, such as clubs, chambers of commerce, charitable organizations, and many others, would no doubt request legislation conferring upon them similar benefits.

The cost of handling and transporting second-class matter in the mails is greatly in excess of the revenue derived therefrom. This excess cost amounts to more than $77,000,000 per year. I am advised that under the provisions of this bill the cost of handling second-class mail in excess of revenues will be materially increased. I do not feel that a further increase in the cost of handling second-class mail matter should be placed upon the taxpayers, notwithstanding the meritorious character of the publications by the religious organizations which the bill seeks to favor.

For the reasons stated above and because of the facts and adverse recommendation contained in the attached letter of the Acting Postmaster General I do not feel justified in approving this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 20, 1935.

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., August 14, 1935.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: With reference to the communication of August 10, from your assistant secretary, submitting the accompanying bill (S. 1439) with the request that you be advised whether there are any objections to its approval, I have to say that it is believed the bill should not be approved for the following reasons:

The purpose of the bill, as indicated by its title, is "to include as second-class matter religious periodicals publishing local information."

Under the existing law, act of March 3, 1879, newspapers and other periodical publications to be entitled to entry as second-class matter must, among other things, "be originated and published for the dissemination of information of a public character or devoted to literature, the sciences, arts, or some special industry." For many years it has been held by the Post Office Department that the bulletins issued by churches, when consisting merely or in the main of announcements of their services and meetings, either with or without items pertaining to the auxiliary bodies of such churches and their members, are not "originated and published for the dissemination of information of a public character", but are in fact simply programs or circulars of restricted interest which do not constitute newspapers or other periodical publications within the ordinary meaning of those terms.

Second-class mail matter, according to the cost ascertainment of this Department, is handled at a tremendous loss. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, such loss was estimated at $77,757,821. The loss would be materially increased should bill S. 1439 become law, as it would make it possible for thousands of churches throughout the country to secure the low second-class postage rates for their church bulletins and announcements. Most of these are quite small, running from 25 to 160 or more copies to the pound, on which postage would be only 1 cent a pound for their handling, transportation, and delivery, including delivery by letter carriers in the case of weeklies mailed for local subscribers at post offices having city letter-carrier service. Furthermore, should this concession be made to church periodicals, other organizations such as charitable institutions, clubs, etc., would seek the same privilege for their programs and circulars.

I am not unmindful of the meritorious character of the organizations which the bill seeks to favor, and am in sympathy with every reasonable effort in their behalf. Nevertheless, in view of the burden which would be placed upon the Postal Service and the additional loss that would result from the approval of the bill—which loss would have to be made up by general taxation—it is recommended that the bill be not approved.

I may add, however, that this does not mean that church publications are excluded from the second-class mailing privilege. On the contrary, many such publications are now entered as second-class matter, having met the requirements of the present law by carrying a sufficient proportion of matter other than mere announcements or other items pertaining only to the particular churches; that is, they contain a reasonable amount of matter of general interest, which may, of course, be of a religious nature or otherwise in keeping with the character and purpose of the publishing organization. Under these conditions publications constitute newspapers or other periodical publications within the commonly understood meaning of those terms and are consequently entitled to admission to the second class of mail matter.

Very truly yours,

W. W. HOWES,
Acting Postmaster General.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I present and ask to have printed in the RECORD copy of a letter I have addressed to one of the leading proponents of the measure, Rev. George E. Heath, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Worcester, Mass., regarding the President's veto message on Senate bill 1439. I request that this be printed in the RECORD immediately after the veto message and accompanying letter.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered printed in the RECORD as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
August 21, 1935.

Rev. GEORGE E. HEATH,
Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Worcester, Mass.

MY DEAR DR. HEATH: I regret very much to have to inform you that the bill (S. 1439) entitled "An act amending the postal laws to include as second-class matter religious periodicals publishing local information", in which you and other ministers of the gospel, as well as church organizations, were deeply interested, was vetoed by the President.

The President, in his veto message, failed to take into consideration the fact that the privilege endeavored to be extended by this bill to religious publications and organizations—namely, to permit them to publish religious papers with purely local news only—is already extended to fraternal organizations, such as the Eagles and the Elks, the Moose, Knights of Columbus, Odd Fellows, and others, and also to papers relating to the sciences, arts, or some special industry. All these enjoy second-class mailing privileges without the requirement that one-half the textual matter be of a general public nature. Religious publications, on the other hand, are given second-class mailing privileges, only upon the fulfillment of the condition that at least one-half their textual matter be devoted to other than local news.

As you and others pointed out, the requirement that 50 percent of the news of the paper be of a general public nature simply resulted in increasing the size of the publication, as well as in padding the textual matter with information which was not of special interest locally.

For myself, I have been unable to understand why local religious organizations should not have the same rights which are extended to fraternal or benevolent societies and organizations, which, by an amendment in 1912, were exempted and permitted to enjoy second-class mailing privileges without the requirement that one-half the textual matter be of a general public nature. In other words, I feel that this same exemption as to mailing privileges should be given to religious organizations publishing weekly or monthly bulletins which contain only local matter of interest solely to the parishioners of the particular church.

In view of the fact that I transmitted to the President for his personal consideration the record of the hearings and the reports of both the Senate and the House committees favoring this measure and their reasons therefor, I feel that every step looking toward the final enactment of this salutary law has been taken by me.

Regretting that we have not been successful in our efforts to obtain the same privilege for religious publications that are enjoyed by fraternal or benevolent societies,

Sincerely yours,

DAVID I. WALSH.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the petition of members of Lodge 121 of the Slovene National Benefit Society, Detroit, Mich., praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 2969) to authorize the deportation of criminals, to guard against the separation from their families of aliens of the noncriminal classes, to provide for legalizing the residence in the United States of certain classes of aliens, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram from Christian Dan Frederiksen, of Highland Park, Detroit, Mich., relative to income, corporation, and inheritance taxes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a petition of sundry citizens of Baltimore and vicinity, in the State of Maryland, praying for the enactment of House bill 3263, to amend the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act so as to permit lower rates to distant points than to intermediate points when in the same route and direction, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., being stockholders and employees of Swift & Co., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation embodying higher income taxes on large corporations than on small ones, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Hagerstown and vicinity, in the State of Maryland, praying for the preservation of peace and the outlawry of war as a national policy in the settlement of international disputes, which were ordered to lie on the table.

BANG'S DISEASE OF CATTLE

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred a letter from the secretary of the Minnesota Livestock Board, which requests that I insert it in the RECORD, to be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I also ask leave to print and likewise refer another letter, with enclosures, in answer to the letter from Secretary Cotton, of the Minnesota board. The letters deal with the treatment of Bang's disease in cattle.

There being no objection, the letters were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
LIVESTOCK SANITARY BOARD,
St. Paul, June 6, 1935.

Hon. THOMAS D. SCHALL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: At the last meeting of this board I was directed to write this letter to you and to request that you present it to the United States Senate in order that it can be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

This board makes this request of you for the reason that on March 22, 1935, you made a statement to the United States Senate regarding the attitude of the United States Department of Agriculture relative to a remedy for Bang's disease of cattle. With this statement you included a letter written by the late John Thompson, who was then editor of Wallace's Farmer and Iowa Homestead, published at Des Moines, Iowa, and also another letter, both of which, with your introductory remarks, were published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on pages 4251 and 4252 on March 22, 1935.

We wish to correct statements contained in the letter of the late John Thompson referring to the experiences of S. L. Bennett & Son, of Owatonna, Minn., in the attempt to free their dairy herd from Bang's disease. Mr. Thompson's letter stated, in effect, that after the Bennett herd had been under the care and supervision of this board, without result, for a period of 2 years, the herd was finally cleaned up through the use of the Bowman remedy. This statement is contrary to fact, as the only contact or service rendered by this board to S. L. Bennett & Son's herd was to extend the service of our laboratory to make the agglutination blood test of the cattle in the herd in May 1932. They failed to have the 10 animals that gave suspicious reactions subjected to a retest within 60 days, as we recommended, in order to determine whether they were safe animals to remain with the clean animals in the herd. They also did not endeavor to segregate the reacting animals from the remainder of the herd. The Thompson letter leaves the reader with the impression that after this board had failed to clean up the Bennett herd, the Bowman treatment was resorted to and the herd became disease free.

The services of this board to the Bennett herd, which terminated following the test of the herd in May 1932, were resumed when on April 17, 1935, Mr. Bennett requested this board to retest the herd he now owned. One of our State field representatives collected the blood samples of all the cattle in the herd, and the test was made at our laboratory on April 20, disclosing 4 animals that reacted positively and 10 animals giving suspicious reactions, of the 40 animals tested. In this test there were only 12 cattle that were in the herd when our laboratory made the test in May 1932, thus proving that the herd is still infected with the disease. Of the 41 animals tested in this herd by our laboratory in May 1932, 8 gave positive reactions, 10 suspicious, and 23 gave negative reactions; the 8 animals were identified by our official Bang reactor tags immediately following the test.

All the cattle that gave a positive reaction to our laboratory test in May 1932 with the exception of 1 animal and all the suspicious animals with the exception of 3 were sold or disposed of prior to February 5, 1934. Mr. Bennett's own sales records bear proof that the Bowman remedy did not cure the animals our tests had found to be affected or suspicious. Mr. Thompson's claims relative to the efficiency of the Bowman remedy in cleaning up the Bennett herd are unfounded as all of the positive reactors with the exception of one animal, and all the suspicious animals to our test in May 1932 with the exception of 3 were disposed of, and the disease still remains in the herd as is disclosed by the recent retest of this herd in April 1935. In this last test 1 of the 4 animals that gave a positive reaction was the only 1 of 8 animals that gave a positive reaction to our test in May 1932 that had been retained in the herd.

We have a statement of Harvey Bennett, one of the owners of this herd, which includes a statement that 7 of the 8 animals that gave a positive reaction to the blood test made by our laboratory in May 1932 and which were tagged with our official Bang reactor tags were disposed of contrary to the rules and regulations of this board, and also that all but three of the animals that gave a suspicious reaction in that test were sold and removed from the herd prior to February 5, 1934. His reason given for the disposal of these animals was that they were not successful in getting them to breed, that they developed mastitis and other affections of their udders. During this interim, May 1932 to February 1934, they disposed of 25 of their animals for these reasons. He further states that the service of this board in the control and elimination of Bang's disease in their herd was limited to the one blood test that was made at our laboratory and that they did not carry out our request and recommendation that the 10 animals giving suspicious reactions be retested.

If you or any Member of the Senate or House wish to obtain the complete data of the Bennett herd, including a copy of the above statement of the owner, records of the tests, etc., we will be pleased to furnish the same.

This board desires, as stated in the first paragraph of this communication, that you present this matter to the United States Senate.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. E. COTTON,
Secretary and Executive Officer
Minnesota Livestock Sanitary Board.

THE BOWMAN LABORATORY,
Owatonna, Minn., August 3, 1935.

Hon. Senator THOMAS D. SCHALL,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR SCHALL: I shall now enter into the Bennett herd and Mr. Thompson's letter to Secretary Wallace, and I shall give you the facts: On May 30, 1932, Dr. Dooley, veterinarian, of Mankato, Minn., drew blood samples on S. L. Bennett & Son's herd and sent those samples to the State department for test. I have copy of the test, and it is as Mr. Bennett states in his letter written to me. On September 7, 1932, I drew blood samples from the Bennett herd and tested the herd in the presence of the two Bennetts and their herdsman. I used dilutions 1: 50 down, which is, as I understand, the standard of test mostly used, and is used in connection with the test and slaughter program. In the material I am sending you to prove this I have included a copy of an official test, using the same standard of test. My test on Bennett herd practically checked with the State test with exception, that the cattle that showed to be suspicious reactors 5 months later when I tested them they were positive straight through on about all dilutions. They had gone from the suspicious stage to the positive stage. After the State test Dr. Dooley went to Bennetts to do some work. Bennetts were sustaining severe loss in their herd. Dr. Dooley then told Mr. Bennett that he had better contact me. He also told me about the Bennett case. I drove out to Bennett's and talked to the younger Bennett. The first time his father came to the farm they came in to see me. We went into things very thoroughly and they decided to turn their herd over to me for treatment, although a veterinarian in Chicago had told the other Bennett that he would just be wasting his money. The first dose of Bowman remedy was given to that herd on September 7, 1932. After that the result has been as Mr. Bennett states in his letter to me. Now, bear in mind that it is 3 years since the State tested this herd of Bennett's the first time.

On February 5, 1934, I drew blood samples again and tested those samples in the presence of Mr. Bennett and Dr. Sweeney. The result was just as Mr. Thompson stated in his letter to Secretary Wallace. Two showed to be positive on 2 dilutions out of 5, using the same standard of test as was used the first time from 1:50 down. One showed agglutination on dilution 1:50; two showed agglutination on dilution 1:100. These tests were run very carefully. These reactors were given another Bowman treatment; nothing further was done with them because the herd was producing absolutely healthy and that was satisfactory to them.

Now, 3 years later the State men came down and drew samples on the Bennett herd but here is what they did. They gave that herd the severest test that can be given. Even the veterinarian that came down to the Bennett farm told the younger Bennett that they hardly ever used that severe test. They used dilution 1:25 on down. Now, dilution 1:25 has double the amount of serum that dilution 1:50 has. Dilution 1:100 has half the amount of serum from the blood that dilution 1:50 has and so on down. Now then, you will get agglutination on 1:25 and no agglutination on 1:50 down. This last test run by the State as above mentioned, they claimed several of those animals in the herd showed agglutination on 1:25. The ones they had marked as slightly suspicious or suspicious, they would get that probably on dilution 1:25. In fact, I know that is where they got it.

Now, according to this last test of theirs, they claim that four cows in the herd are positive. I ran a test on the cows, not the younger stock, on April 16, 1935, in the presence of Mr. Bennett, using same standard of test that I always use and which is supposed to be the test according to standard most generally used. I found one that showed a reaction on dilution 1:50. One more showed a slight suspicion on dilution 1:50. But it was so slight that we did not even check her. Now, because of the unreliability of the test and 3 years from the time the herd was first treated, such results can show up. You will again note the enclosed variation on the same blood drawn at the same time and sent to different places for test.

I am treating those cattle that Dr. Cotton said are reactors. I just took their word for it, because I think I have got them where I want them and I am going to meet the severest test they can make on them and I'll bet you when I am ready for them they will not want to run a test on them. Now here is where Mr. Thompson more than likely got mixed up a little bit and it absolutely amounts to nothing, but these State fellows make mountains out of molehills when they know Bowman remedy has been used. You will note in Mr. Bennetts' letter to me dated February 9, 1934, that they sold one herd because of abortion disease. That was when they were still living at Mankato, Minn. At the time the State ran their first test on the present Bennett herd, which was May 30, 1932, Bennetts, not knowing about the Bowman remedy and me, signed a contract with the State, agreeing to place the herd under their supervision. That contract provided that they were to use no remedies, or anything else on those cattle. When they found out about the Bowman remedy, Bennetts ignored that contract. That is what the veterinarians do not like, and they hitched up with me.

So Thompson was right about the contract and cleaning up and the like, as you will again note by Bennett's own letter. But Thompson made an error and got mixed up on the herds where he stated they worked along with the State veterinarian for about 2 years. Now, that is the size of the whole thing, because it had only been 5 months since the Bennetts signed the contract with the State in connection with the present herd until Bowman treatment was commenced on the herd.

Here is another thing the State veterinarians make capital of: Bennetts have only home-made stanchions in their barn. The cows stand very close together, and there is no partition between each cow. Since they started using the remedy on the herd, cow lying down and another one by her side getting up stepped upon teats and ruined the teat and the udder. Such cases Bennetts do not keep. They are sold. But no cows were sold because they were or had been reactors or because of abortion. They had no abortion trouble in the herd. It made no difference whether a cow had been a reactor or whether she was negative by the blood test; they disposed of her. Then, too, sometimes in a herd of cows, when they are getting young stock coming on there are cows that do not produce in milk production as they should, and it doesn't pay to keep them. Bennett may have sold one or two on account of that. But no cows were sold because of abortion. The above is according to Mr. Bennett's own story to me, and I know it is true. But the veterinarians make capital of that because Bennetts ignored their contract and hooked up with me. All the contract provided for was the test program and separation of the negatives and the positives. The State did nothing to correct and overcome the loss Bennetts were sustaining; therefore the contract was absolutely no good to them.

This material I am sending you is but a very small amount of that which I have. I have stacks of all kinds. Read the letter written by Mr. Thomas E. Cashman addressed to Andy Rock. Go into the brief that looks like a catalog and under index read what Mr. Cashman wrote to John Thompson. You will see the kind of stuff these veterinarians pull where they know Bowman remedy has been used. You will find about everything you need in this material I am sending you. Have Mrs. Schall read it to you. I am also enclosing a copy. It is no copy. It is a letter, rather, bearing the name Senator SCHALL at the top, and you will know what is going on. I will swear to the truth of its contents. It is long, but it will show you.

In regard to Mr. Thompson I want to say I and my family have known him very well since 1923. I have never met a man of cleaner mind, more honest, and more sincere for the best interest of the farmers than Mr. Thompson was. People who knew him had such respect for him in gatherings that when he was there they would not even use a smutty word. Truly he was a good man. Mr. Thompson and I were in quite close contact on the Bowman remedy for all these years. He conducted three investigations, and he knew what the Bowman remedy was doing, and had he been owner of the paper, his readers would have learned more of what the Bowman remedy was doing. My advertisement ran steadily in the Iowa Homestead up until the time Wallace bought the Homestead. Then my advertisement was stopped immediately. Wallace's Farmer is one of the publications that I tell about in the exposure addressed Senator SCHALL.

If I were in your place, Senator, I would not mar or allow to be marred Mr. Thompson's reputation, since he is now dead and cannot defend himself. When he wrote those letters he was not a sick man, but the fellows running the paper still in Wallace's name play with a gang and will make things out that aren't true now since Mr. Thompson has passed on. That paper will not run my advertisement as long as it is still run under the Wallace name. I can produce a letter that is not so very old to that effect, indicating that when the paper is changed over to the Pierce Publishing Co., and not run in Wallace's name, it would be different then. I can attach affidavit, if you want it, to this letter.

Very truly yours,

THE BOWMAN LABORATORY,
ERICK BOWMAN.

P. S.—The bulk of the material is coming forward to you under separate cover, first-class mail.

OWATONNA, MINN., February 9, 1934.

Mr. ERICK BOWMAN,
The Bowman Laboratory, Owatonna, Minn.

DEAR MR. BOWMAN: For 6 years we were having severe losses from contagious abortion. During that time we sold our entire herd of high-grade Holsteins in an effort to stamp out the disease. After cleaning up in every possible way and waiting several months, we purchased a carload of Guernseys and shipped in here from Illinois.

The same disease soon broke out in this herd, and we were much discouraged, as we lost most of the calves before maturity, and the afterbirth had to be taken in every case. After deciding to try your abortion remedy, we had the entire herd blood-tested, and over 50 percent showed positive reactors. We then gave the treatments on September 7, 1932. On September 8, during the night, a 2-year-old heifer lost her calf and the afterbirth had to be taken. Since that time every bred female in our herd has gone the entire time and delivered a strong healthy calf with the afterbirth following very soon.

Every nonbreeder has got in calf, and our herd is in a very healthy and thrifty condition.

We gladly recommend your treatment to anyone in the cattle breeding business, and will be very happy to help you in any way possible in your good work, as we know that the Bowman remedy has changed the condition of our herd to one which we are proud to own.

Wishing you continued success, we are,

Yours very truly,

S. L. BENNETT & SON.

R. F. D. No. 6.

MAY 6, 1935.

Dr. C. E. COTTON,
Livestock Sanitary Board, State Office Building,
St. Paul, Minn.

DEAR SIR: Since talking with you Saturday morning I have done a lot of thinking, and must say that I do not like the way you talked to me over the phone. I do not think that I am under any obligation to you whatever, and the first time I talked with you at your office you told me you wanted to be absolutely fair with Bowman and everyone else. Since talking with you Saturday I am convinced that this is not the case, and I have decided not to call at your office.

I am thoroughly convinced that Mr. Thompson, in his anxiety to help in eradication of abortion, got my two herds mixed up, and now that he is dead and buried I can see no reason for making a mountain out of a molehill. If you see fit to quarantine the reactors I do not know as I can prevent that, but I am going to give Bowman a chance to prove his remedy. If he can clean up my herd after what your test shows, I would like to see it done. If he cannot do so, and we have any abortions, I will see that the animals are disposed of and slaughtered according to law.

I want to be fair about this whole situation, but I am not so sure of your attitude.

Yours very truly,

——— ———.

JUNE 7, 1935.

Dr. C. E. COTTON,
Livestock Sanitary Board,
State Office Building, St. Paul, Minn.

DEAR DR. COTTON: I was out to the L. S. Bennett farm last night, and Mr. Bennett, Harvey, showed me your letter addressed to Mr. L. S. Bennett bearing date of May 8, 1935. Also a letter Mr. Bennett had written to you.

I took copies of those letters and I am going to quote a part of your letter in the fifth paragraph.

"It is further noted, that you are going to give Mr. Bowman a chance to prove his remedy, and the cure, in your opinion, will be based upon the discontinuance of abortions in your herd."

I want to inform you that abortion discontinued in Mr. Bennett's herd almost immediately after the treatment was given in September 1932. He has had but one abortion and that was a heifer that was a calf at the time the herd was treated and was only given a half treatment, and we straightened that heifer up.

Now, Mr. Bennett is not going to use his judgment, as you say, that the Bowman remedy is a cure because of discontinuance of actual abortions. He knows the remedy will do that already. Mr. Bennett is giving me a chance to turn the animals in his herd, which, according to your test, showed to be positive and suspicious reactors. Now, then, putting the herd into a healthy producing condition, which has been done, or we might say in a healthy breeding condition, and now I am going to turn the reactors negative according to your own test and the highest test given.

After you see this with your own eyes, will you then admit the facts? There are other things you say in this letter of yours that I can knock all to pieces, but I am not going to bother with it. Farmers have been misled for years into the belief that abortion is self-eliminating. They know different, but the farmers do not say anything. They suffer in silence. Facts remain, however, that if abortion disease is self-eliminating, that a large percentage of cows only abort once and then go on and produce as they should, breed as they should, abortion disease would have been a thing of the past long ago. But facts remain that losses from abortion disease has doubled in the United States during the last 10 years and was doubling right along up until 1929. Therefore, you fellows only feed the public a lot of bunk. I don't care how much you fellows claim to have studied the disease, the actual existing facts do not balance with what you men preach.

Very truly yours,

THE BOWMAN LABORATORY.

[Part of copy of recent release from the United States Department of Agriculture Bureau of Animal Industry]

BANG'S DISEASE

(By W. E. Cotton, superintendent of experiment station, Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Bethesda, Md.)

RELIABILITY OF THE TEST

The agglutination test has certain shortcomings which have led some persons to question its reliability. Perhaps the most serious of these is the tardiness with which some animals begin to react after becoming infected. In most animals the reactions begin to appear in a few weeks after infection, but in some this does not occur until after several months, and occasionally, in pregnant animals, not until after their periods of gestation have been terminated by an abortion or parturition. In a few cases, infected animals have been reported as never reacting, but it is believed that such animals are rare.

The tardiness with which the reactions sometimes appear is a rather serious failing because some infected animals may become spreaders of large amount of infection before they can be detected. Moreover, the test does not tell whether an animal will abort or not and, as before stated, does not always sharply distinguish between present and past infection.

While the blood test has these limitations it gives much valuable information as to whether infectious abortion is present in the herd and the extent of the infection, and points out animals that are or may become dangerous. It has the advantage that it can be repeated as often as desired and by proper interpretation will greatly aid in combating the disease. Already it is rendering good service in aiding cattle owners to free their herds from the disease and in keeping them free. The test is not always successful doing this, but it goes a long way in the desired direction. Further experience should lead to a better understanding of the test and an increase in its efficiency.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on Immigration, to which was referred the bill (S. 3399) for the relief of Rosalie Piar Sprecher (nee Rosa Piar), reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1421) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2005. A bill to provide for the inspection and regulation of vessels engaged in the transportation of inflammable, explosive, and like dangerous cargoes in navigable waters of the United States (Rept. No. 1424);

S. 3218. A bill to amend section 201 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1928 (Rept. No. 1425); and

S. 3327. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of certain portions of Anastasia Island Lighthouse Reservation, Fla., and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1426).

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6057) for the relief of Joe Brumit, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1422) thereon.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7137) for the relief of Cassie M. Lyne, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1423) thereon.

Mr. FRAZIER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with amendments and submitted reports thereon:

S. 3091. A bill to provide funds for cooperation with Trenton School District, Williams County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children (Rept. No. 1427); and

S. 3093. A bill to provide funds for cooperation with Sanish School District No. 1, Mountrail County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children (Rept. No. 1428).

Mr. SHIPSTEAD, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (S. 3425) authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Government of Norway in settlement of all claims for reimbursement on account of losses sustained by the owner and crew of the Norwegian steamer Tampen, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1429) thereon.

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6772) to amend the Grain Futures Act to prevent and remove obstructions and burdens upon interstate commerce in grains and other commodities by regulating transactions therein on commodity futures exchanges, to limit or abolish short selling, to curb manipulation, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1431) thereon.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (S. 3393) to create a Federal Board of Foreign Trade, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1432) thereon.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4428) for the relief of Caroline (Stever) Dykstra, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1433) thereon.

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1724) to repeal section 2 of the act entitled "An act to create an additional judge in the district of South Dakota", approved February 26, 1929, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1435) thereon.

Mr. COSTIGAN, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (S. 3118) to provide for the creation of the Perry's Victory and International Peace Memorial National Monument, on Put in Bay, South Bass Island, in the State of Ohio, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1436) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Mines and Mining, to which was referred the bill (S. 2424) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of a central research and experiment station of the Bureau of Mines at Salt Lake City, Utah, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1437) thereon.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 5049. A bill providing punishment for forging or counterfeiting any postmarking stamp (Rept. No. 1438);

H. R. 5162. A bill providing for punishment for attempts to obtain mail by fraud or deception (Rept. No. 1439);

H. R. 5360. A bill providing for punishment for the crime of robbing or attempting to rob custodians of Government moneys or property (Rept. No. 1440); and

H. R. 5540. A bill extending the period during which no demurrage is charged on collect-on-delivery parcels and excepting the imposition of demurrage charged on collect-on-delivery parcels exchanged between the continental and island possessions (Rept. No. 1441).

PRINTING OF HEARINGS BEFORE FINANCE COMMITTEE

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by direction of the Committee on Printing, I report favorably a resolution (S. Res. 196) and ask for its immediate consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Finance of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 1,000 additional copies of the hearings held before said committee during the current session of the Seventy-fourth Congress on the bill (H. R. 8974) entitled "Revenue Act of 1935."

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma (by request):

A bill (S. 3452) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to arrange with States or Territories for the education, medical attention, relief of distress, and social welfare of Indians, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BARKLEY:

A bill (S. 3453) limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to certain counsel; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BORAH:

A bill (S. 3454) granting a pension to Effie M. Guynon (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 3455) granting an increase of pension to Helene H. Davis; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BYRD:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 174) to establish the James Madison Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of James Madison; to the Committee on the Library.

STABILIZATION OF BITUMINOUS COAL MINING INDUSTRY

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I understand that later in the day an amendment is to be offered to strike out the first sentence of section 4 of the pending bill, the so-called

"Guffey coal bill." I now offer a substitute for the first sentence of section 4; and I desire to state that, if the other amendment to which I have alluded shall be adopted, I will not press my amendment, but I will urge it if the other amendment shall not be adopted. I ask that the amendment intended to be proposed by me may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. O'MAHONEY was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 8, beginning with line 13, strike out down to and including the period in line 19, and in lieu thereof insert the following:

SEC. 4. No action complying with the provisions of this section taken while this act is in effect or within 60 days thereafter by any producer of bituminous coal who has accepted and obligated himself to comply with such provisions, or by any marketing agency or board created under this section, shall be construed to be within the prohibitions of the antitrust laws of the United States.

CIVIL SUITS—AMENDMENT

Mr. BARBOUR submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2524) amending section 112 of the United States Code, Annotated (title 28; subtitle "Civil Suits, where to be brought"), which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

THE MERCHANT MARINE—AMENDMENT

Mr. FLETCHER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8555) to develop a strong American merchant marine, to promote the commerce of the United States, to aid national defense, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

PRODUCTION COSTS OF WOOD PULP OR PULP WOOD

Mr. BORAH. I submit a resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 195) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Tariff Commission is directed, under the authority conferred by section 336 of the Tariff Act of 1930, and for the purposes of that section, to investigate the differences in the costs of production of the following domestic articles and of any like or similar foreign articles: Wood pulp or pulp wood.

COMMERCIAL AIRPORT FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. KING. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, agree to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon. and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. KING, Mr. TYDINGS, and Mr. AUSTIN conferees on the part of the Senate.

THE PRESENT TREND IN GOVERNMENT

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for publication in the RECORD of a speech delivered before the Virginia Bar Association on August 9, 1935, by C. O'Conor Goolrick, a very distinguished lawyer of my State and president of the Virginia Bar Association, at its annual meeting at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

This is the first opportunity I have had to formally express to the members of the Virginia Bar Association my very deep appreciation of the honor conferred in electing me your president. This appreciation is intensified when I read the names of distinguished Virginia lawyers who in the past have received a like honor at your hands.

Contemplating this list, I find myself overcome by a sense of embarrassment in addressing you this morning. Not only have you chosen as your presidents in the past lawyers of high repute, but they, in turn, when called upon to address you, as I do today, have distinguished themselves by scholarly and learned discussion of topics covering a wide range of law, government, history, and economics. One compelled to follow in their footsteps does so with hesitation and diffidence.

I trust, therefore, that you will bear in mind Hamlet's direction to Polonius concerning the players, when he said:

"Use them after your own honor and dignity:
The less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty."

and give me a quantum of your bounty, which, even though it be not deserved, will be gratefully received.

I think it perhaps proper at the outset to disabuse your minds of any idea that you are about to listen to a discussion of one of the many interesting questions of law which from time to time engage the thought of the more studious of our profession. I find myself under the necessity of confessing, though the confession may appear superfluous, that while I am a practitioner of law I am far removed from a student thereof. I admit this to my deep regret, and my only excuse is that the active practice of our profession, without the assistance of a partner, has deprived me of opportunity to delve deeply into its philosophy.

Fortunately, however, most lawyers are, or ought to be, as much interested in government as in law, and certainly at the present time not only members of our profession but all other classes of our people find themselves confronted with public problems which challenge the attention of every citizen possessing the least spark of public spirit. These problems are so varied, so complex, and so numerous that one finds great difficulty in segregating those of major from those of minor importance, and, indeed, few people agree on the distinction which should be made. Thus the business man points to one as paramount, the farmer to another, the laboring man to yet another, and so it goes on down through the different classes of our diversified population.

Perhaps to the lawyer no problem of government is quite so compelling as that which involves the constitutional structure of the country. Certainly there can be found no more fascinating subject of study from a governmental standpoint. Not since the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott case has this subject excited so much interest among lawyers, and for that matter, among all classes of intelligent citizens, as at the present time.

The recent decision of this same Court in United States against Schechter (commonly known as the "sick-chicken case") is, perhaps, as outstanding in this day as was the Dred Scott decision in its day, the two cases ranking in importance with the notable decision of Judge Marshall in Marbury v. Madison, in which that great jurist, for the first time, definitely declared the power of the Court to invalidate those acts of the Congress which were in contravention of the Constitution. While the Schechter case does not in any way involve this particular question, yet, like the Dred Scott case, it is of such far-flung importance and was at first blush so disappointing to numbers of our people in all walks of life that it was immediately followed by a revival of the oft repeated, but always unsuccessful, demand that the Supreme Court be deprived of the power to declare unconstitutional acts of the Congress. Certain Senators and Congressman, a small section of the press, and a few organizations aggrieved by the Court's destruction of the N. R. A. immediately threatened a movement for a constitutional amendment to so limit the power of the Court, and some remarks of the President himself led many to conclude that he might lend a sympathetic ear to such demand, though, personally, I do not believe such inference justified.

In the light of this threat, which may or may not develop in the near future, and in view of the contention still made by those behind it that the decision in Marbury v. Madison was arbitrary and constituted an usurpation of judicial power, not contemplated by the framers of the Constitution, it is pertinent to review the foundation upon which this decision rests.

Investigation and study of the question readily discloses that the view expressed in that case was not original with Chief Justice Marshall, though he must be given full and complete credit for the courage and vigor with which he asserted and maintained, under trying circumstances, the power of the great Court over which he then presided. On the contrary the question had previously been introduced and discussed in the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and later in the famous letters of Hamilton and Madison, addressed to the people of the State of New York, in defense of the Constitution as submitted by that Convention.

Those who would deprive the Court of the power which it has consistently, though infrequently exercised since the decision in Marbury v. Madison, tell us that the assertion of this power constitutes judicial usurpation and in effect creates a superiority of the judicial over the legislative branch of the Government. They further tell us that the doctrine of Marbury v. Madison, which was established as far back as 1803, tends to create a judicial despotism.

It must be admitted that there is important historic precedent for this claim, found in the writings of one of our greatest statesmen and philosophers, no lesser person than Thomas Jefferson. That he entertained this belief cannot be denied, and it is equally true that he continued of the same opinion many years after the decision of the case mentioned. Notwithstanding this view, tenaciously held and forcibly expressed by the most popular statesman of his time, both Congress and the country accepted the construction of Marshall, and despite sporadic criticism, accompanied by demands from powerful political quarters for popular referendum and recall of judicial decisions and for constitutional amendment declaring the power of Congress supreme, this construction remains and will, in my opinion, continue to remain, the law of the land, certainly for many years to come.

Those who on the one hand contend that Congress is supreme, or on the other, that superiority rests in the Court under the Constitution, lose sight of the fact that neither Court nor Congress is supreme, but that ultimate power lies in the people, the creator of both. They have in their wisdom delegated to their representatives in Congress certain limited powers, carefully and definitely set out in the written instrument, which we call the Constitution. Within these limitations Congress is supreme; beyond it is, and should be, impotent to impose its will upon the Nation.

To prevent the abuse of legislative power and to guard against the danger of legislative tyranny, which, if the distinction must be made, is far more dangerous than judicial, the people, through their representatives in the Convention of 1787, created a system of checks and balances, the check on Congress being first the veto power of the Executive, and second, the power of the courts to pass on the constitutionality of its acts. Let us briefly examine the history of that Convention with regard to the latter.

It will be remembered that on May 30, 1787, Edmund Randolph, a member of the Convention, then Governor of Virginia, presented what is known as the "Virginia plan", which he supported by an elaborate argument. There are variant texts of this plan, but so far as the question under consideration is concerned, they are practically similar. The plan consisted of a number of resolutions, but the eighth, is the only one we need refer to. This resolution reads, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Executive and a convenient number of the National Judiciary, ought to compose a council of revision with authority to examine every act of the National Legislature, before it shall operate, and every act of a particular legislature, before a negative thereon shall be final; and that the dissent of the said council shall amount to a rejection, unless the act of the National Legislature be again passed, or that of a particular legislature be again negatived by ——— of the members of each branch."

It will be observed that the object of this resolution was to create a combined check on Congress by uniting the President and a portion of the judiciary in what was called a "council of revision", with power to reject its acts, regardless of any question of constitutionality. Evidently Randolph and his colleagues from Virginia were unwilling to vest in the Congress unlimited powers of national legislation, and at the very outset of the Convention they sought to guard the people from what they evidently conceived to be a very grave danger.

The first clause of proposition 8, relating to a council of revision, appears to have been under consideration by the Convention, sitting in committee of the whole on June 4. By reference to the debates we find that opposition to the proposal was quickly expressed, and it is interesting to note that Elbridge Gerry, a delegate from Massachusetts Bay, who on this particular day led the opposition, is reported by Madison to have expressed himself as follows:

"Mr. Gerry doubts whether the judiciary ought to form a part of it, as they will have a sufficient check against encroachments on their own department by their exposition of the laws, which involved a power of deciding on their constitutionality. In some States the judges had actually set aside laws as being against the Constitution. This was done, too, with general approbation. It was quite foreign from the nature of ye office to make them judges of the policy of public measures."

He was supported in this position by Rufus King, also a delegate from Massachusetts Bay, who "observed that the judges ought to be able to expound the law, as it shall come before them, free from the bias of having participated in its formation."

The question was postponed, but it sufficiently appears that both of these delegates were of the opinion that the Supreme Court to be created should inherently possess the power of passing upon the constitutionality of congressional acts. On the other hand, we find, later on the same day, Mr. Bedford, a delegate from Delaware, expressing opposition to every suggested check on the legislative branch, extending to the proposed Council of Revision.

According to Madison, Bedford "thought it would be sufficient to mark out in the Constitution the boundaries to the legislative authority, which would give all the requisite security to the rights of the other departments. The representatives of the people are the best judges of what was for their interest, and ought to be under no external control whatever. The two branches would produce a sufficient control within the legislature itself."

Later on the same day a motion by Wilson, seconded by Madison, to reconsider the partial negative by the President and to vest this power in him jointly with the judiciary, was rejected; but still later in the Convention, as will hereafter be seen, the same question was taken up and extensively discussed.

On June 6, Wilson again attempted to have the Convention approve the Council of Revision, but was unsuccessful. The debate on that day is not reported.

The second reported debate on the proposed Council of Revision occurred July 21, at which time Mr. Wilson moved that the "supreme national judiciary should be associated with the Executive in the revisionary power." A perusal of the Madison notes shows, however, that he based his motion on the belief that "the judiciary ought to have opportunity of remonstrating against projected encroachments on the people, as well as on themselves."

Answering the argument that the judges, as expositors of the law, would have opportunity of defending their constitutional rights, he admitted the weight of this argument, but asserted that this power did no go far enough. Later he said, "Laws may be unjust, may be unwise, may be dangerous, may be destructive, and yet may not be so unconstitutional as to justify the judges in refusing to give them effect."

In seconding Wilson's motion, Madison entered the debate and, like Wilson, insisted that the participation of the judiciary in the Council of Revision "would give it opportunity of defending itself against legislative encroachments, and, moreover, that it would be useful to the community at large, as an additional check against a pursuit of those unwise and injust measures which constitute so great a portion of our calamities."

In this position he was supported by another distinguished Virginian, George Mason, of Gunston. The latter, while not a lawyer, was admittedly one of the outstanding leaders of the Convention, taking an active part in all of its discussions. His opinion is, therefore, entitled to great weight, and it is interesting to analyze same, as we gather it from the notes on the debates.

It clearly appears that while Mason entertained the same fear of legislative abuse as that expressed by many of his colleagues, and sought to guard against this danger by creating the so-called "Council of Revision", yet it equally appears that he entertained no doubt whatever of the inherent right which the court, to be created, would have to pass on the constitutionality of laws, whether first submitted to the Council of Revision or not.

Replying to Luther Martin, a Delegate from Maryland, and noted lawyer, who suggested that "if the judges were joined in this check on the law, they would have a double negative since in the expository capacity of judges they would have one negative."

He argued that in the latter capacity they could impede the operation of law in one case only; that is "they could declare an unconstitutional law void. With regard to every other law", said Mason, "however unjust, oppressive, or pernicious, they would be under the necessity, as judges, to give it a free course."

Arguing for the Council of Revision, he "wished the further use to be made of the judges of giving aid in preventing every improper law", expressing the opinion that their "aid will be the more valuable, as they are in the habit and practice of considering the law in their true principles and in all their consequences."

Once again, at this point, Elbridge Gerry expresses his preference for an absolute negative in the Executive, rather than the blending together of the judicial and executive departments in an offensive and defensive alliance against the legislature. In this position he was joined by others, including John Rutledge, of South Carolina, who not only thought "the judges, of all men, the most unfit to be considered in the revisionary council", but further that they "ought never to give their opinion on the law until it comes before them."

Mr. Wilson's motion for joining the judiciary in the revision of laws passed in the negative, with only Maryland and Virginia voting "aye" and with Pennsylvania and Georgia divided.

The same question, in effect, was again before the Convention on August 15, when Madison "moved that all acts, before they become laws, should be submitted both to the executive and supreme judiciary departments, that if either of these should object two-thirds of each House, if both should object, three-fourths of each House, should be necessary to overrule the objections and give to the acts the force of law."

We find Wilson, of Pennsylvania, seconding this motion, and Mercer, of Virginia, approving. The latter's views, as reported, indicate that while he favored the Council of Revision, he thought in the long run that "laws ought to be well and cautiously made and then to be uncontrollable."

Mercer, in turn, was supported by John Dickinson, of Delaware. He seems to have been of the opinion that no absolute power should rest in the judges to set aside the law, but is quoted as, "at a loss what was expedient to substitute." Mr. Dickinson observed that "The Justiciary of Arragon became by degrees the lawgiver."

In the course of this most important debate on the proposed powers of the Court and the Government to be created, one of the ablest leaders of the Convention, to wit, Gouverneur Morris, of Pennsylvania, took direct issue with those just quoted. After referring to the instability of legislative assemblies, he expressed his dissent with the view that the judiciary "should be bound to say that a direct violation of the Constitution was law." Admitting that control over the legislature might have its inconveniences, he found many dangers on the other side and asserted that "encroachments of the popular branch of the Government ought to be guarded against." Apparently, at that time, he favored an absolute negative in the Executive.

As a result of the debate Madison's motion was defeated, only Virginia, Maryland, and Delaware voting "aye."

I think it plain, from what has been said above, that while a minority of the Convention very strongly felt that congressional acts, before becoming final, should run the gantlet of both Executive and judicial approval, yet the leaders of the minority, as well as those of the majority, entertained no doubt that the Court, in any event, would inherently possess the power to say what was and what was not within the constitutional authority of Congress. This is clearly indicated by the reply of George Mason to Luther Martin, cited above. We may, therefore, accept it as a fact that the Convention, as a whole, with possibly two or three exceptions, concurred in this view, and in this fact we may find explanation of its failure to definitely declare, in the Constitution, as submitted, that the Supreme Court should possess such power.

Failure, however, of the Convention to affirmatively vest the Court with this authority eventually led to both argument and confusion, which was only partially ended by the decision in Marbury v. Madison. As a matter of fact that decision itself was bitterly criticized in some quarters, and, for that matter, still is.

Students of American history are aware of what followed the submission of the new Constitution to the States and, therefore, familiar with the famous analysis and defense of that document by James Madison and Alexander Hamilton, in their series of letters, addressed to the people of the State of New York. Perhaps no two men in the Convention were better qualified for this important task than the New Yorker on the one hand and the Virginian, on the other. It must not be understood, however, that during the Convention their views were in accord, because Hamilton far outdistanced Madison in his advocacy of strong central power, but they both accepted the Constitution as finally drafted, and collaborated in presenting it in favorable light to the people of the States. It is, therefore, interesting to note their construction of the power of the Court under the Constitution.

While this construction appears in one of the letters definitely attributed to Alexander Hamilton, it may be assumed, under the circumstances, that the view therein expressed was concurred in by Madison. In this letter Hamilton was discussing the judiciary department of the proposed Government. Answering attacks on this branch of the Government then current, he sets out facts which established, at least to his satisfaction, that the judiciary is, beyond comparison, the weakest of the three departments of power; that it can never attack with success either of the other two, and that all possible care is required to enable it to defend itself from their attacks. To him, the complete independence of courts of justice was peculiarly essential in a limited constitution. Referring to some of the limitations contained therein, he declared:

"Limitations of this kind can be preserved in practice no other way than through the medium of courts of justice, whose duties it must be to declare all acts contrary to the manifest tenor of the Constitution void. Without this all of the reservations of particular right or privilege would amount to nothing."

With this premise he proceeds to answer those who sought to curtail the power of the court in the following language:

"Some perplexity respecting the rights of the courts to pronounce legislative acts void, because contrary to the Constitution, has arisen from an imagination that the doctrine would imply a superiority of the judiciary to the legislative power. It is urged that the authority which can declare the acts of another void must necessarily be superior to the one whose acts may be declared void. As this doctrine is of great importance in all the American constitutions, a brief discussion of the ground on which it rests cannot be unacceptable.

"There is no position which depends on clearer principles, than that every act of a delegated authority, contrary to the tenor of the commission under which it is exercised, is void. No legislative act, therefore, contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this, would be to affirm that the deputy is greater than his principle, that the servant is above his master, that the representatives of the people are superior to the people themselves; that men acting by virtue of powers, may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid.

"If it be said that the legislative body are themselves the constitutional judges of their own powers, and that the construction they put on them is conclusive upon the other departments, it may be answered that this cannot be the natural presumption where it is not to be collected from any particular provisions in the Constitution. It is not otherwise to be supposed, that the Constitution would intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose that the courts were designed to be the intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by the judges as a fundamental law. It, therefore, belongs to them to ascertain its meaning, as well as the meaning of any particular act proceeding from the legislative body. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, that which has the superior obligation and validity ought, of course, to be preferred; or, in other words, the Constitution ought to be preferred to the statute, the intention of the people to the intention of their agents.

"Nor does this conclusion by any means suppose a superiority of the judicial to the legislative power. It only supposes that the power of the people is superior to both; that where the will of the legislature declared in its statutes stands in opposition to that of the people declared in the Constitution the judges ought to be governed by the latter rather than the former. They ought to regulate their decisions by the fundamental laws rather than by those which are not fundamental."

In the course of years since Hamilton interpreted the power of the courts under the Constitution no one has more forcibly or explicitly set it forth. His logic is unanswerable and his construction must be adhered to if the Constitution is to survive. Any other would make it the plaything of our legislative bodies and might prove fatal to our liberties.

It might have been supposed from the expressions of leaders of the Convention of 1787, quoted above, that no further question would arise as to the power of the Court, but that was far from true. On the contrary, the Nation was deeply agitated shortly thereafter by a bitter dispute as to this power, partly as a result of politics and partly because of unwise judicial conduct by certain Federal judges.

Undemocratic statutes called forth the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, and following them came the theatrical and bitter debate in the Senate of the United States in the winter of 1802. This debate revolved around the question of the supervisory power of the Court over the Legislature.

At this very time, there was pending before the Supreme Court, the case of Marbury against Madison. Marshall, with this debate and its results fresh in his mind, realized as no other man did, the necessity of bold action. He was fully aware that no actual language of the Constitution authorized the judiciary to annul legislation, but at the same time he was cognizant of the opinion entertained by the leaders of the Convention and he had been deeply impressed by Hamilton's subsequent construction of the powers of the Court. Previously, in the Virginia convention of 1788, he had announced, as a fundamental principle, that "if Congress shall pass an unconstitutional law, the courts would declare it void." Nevertheless, he was confronted with a duty which called for an exhibition of both courage and determination. In order to sustain the power of the Court it was necessary for him to oppose the views entertained by the then Chief Executive, as well as by a majority of the Congress, and yet his duty must be performed, lest the Constitution perish. The history of that case, decided the following year, and the results which followed, are known to every lawyer.

Bitter criticism was directed at the decision, no lesser person than Thomas Jefferson declaring that "the opinion which gives the judges the right to declare what laws are constitutional and what are not, make the judiciary a despotic branch."

Criticism was followed by action, and this action took form in the impeachment of Justice Chase. So strong was the feeling in Congress against the latter, and for that matter against the entire Court, that Marshall himself seems to have become thoroughly alarmed and in a letter to Chase, written in 1804, and quoted by Beveridge, the Chief Justice said:

"A reversal of those legal opinions deemed unsound by the legislature, would certainly better comport with the mildness of our character, than the removal of the judge who has rendered them, unknowing of his faults."

Thus it appears that Marshall contemplated a surrender to the legislative branch of the Government; but, fortunately, Chase was acquitted, this did not become necessary and the doctrine expressed in Marbury v. Madison remained the law of the land. It has resisted attack throughout the intervening years, but it is significant of the delicate situation which existed, that during a period of 52 years thereafter no act of Congress was declared unconstitutional by the Court. Beveridge expresses the opinion that had Marshall not taken his stand in Marbury v. Madison judicial acquiesence in congressional supremacy would have been completely established.

I have attempted to show upon what a solid foundation rests the power of the Court under the Constitution, in order to disabuse the minds of those who, disregarding the history of this power, assume that it was acquired by usurpation of legislative prerogative. In view of the opinion of those who founded the Nation, buttressed by the long-established and accepted doctrine of Marbury against Madison, it is difficult, if not impossible, to understand the basis of the movement to weaken or destroy the power of the courts; and it may be safely predicted that should such movement, now or hereafter, take form and substance and receive the support of any recognized political party, an issue will be precipitated creating political chaos with party lines obliterated in every section of the country.

I do not believe that any responsible political leader in America will sponsor such issue, nor that any party will give it support, but in the improbable event that the people are forced to decide whether the Congress should construe finally the limitations of its own power or whether this should remain with the Supreme Court, then my prophecy is that an aroused nation will overwhelmingly prefer the Court to the Congress.

I have reviewed the long-drawn-out dispute over the authority of the judiciary, solely because of its historic interest, and not because of any fear on my part that the present administration seeks either to weaken or destroy the power of the courts. Neither do I share the belief expressed in some quarters that the Constitution is endangered by existing governmental policies or that there exists any legislative or Executive purpose to discard its long-established principles.

Despite assertations to the contrary, nothing has transpired upon which to base them. They find no solid foundation in the mere fact that recent legislation has been declared unconstitutional, though it has been sought to draw such deduction therefrom. The National Recovery Act, as well as the Frazier-Lemke Act, was unanimously rejected by the Supreme Court as plainly unconstitutional, while lower Federal courts have invalidated, so far as lies in their power, other so-called "recovery" legislation; but the action of the courts establishes nothing beyond the fact that both the legislative and executive branches of the Government were striving desperately to relieve an intolerable and threatening emergency. It is, of course, unfortunate that they should have chosen, in part, unconstitutional measures to this end; but it strains one's credulity to be asked to believe that the N. R. A., or any of the other laws which have shared its fate, were enacted by Congress or approved by the Executive in conscious disregard of constitutional limitations.

Such an inference reflects not only upon the good faith but upon the integrity of both Congress and the President, and will, when drawn, be overwhelmingly rejected by the American people. Rather it is fair to assume that, faced with desperate conditions, Congress felt the necessity of desperate remedies, and this is best proven by the fact that in the vote of both Houses on many of the measures involved party lines were completely ignored.

Following the decision in the Schechter case, some hasty expressions of rather natural disappointment by the President were seized upon as evidence of executive intent to curtail, if possible, the constitutional control of the courts over future legislation, but these expressions cannot be so interpreted, though it may well be that the President had in mind at the time, and may still, a future amendment to the Constitution extending, if it be possible, the scope of the commerce clause of that instrument. If such be the case, and his purpose contemplates a surrender of any of the present rights still reserved to the States under the Constitution, it may be observed that, after all, the States cannot be deprived of these rights save by their own consent and in the orderly manner prescribed by the Constitution itself.

It cannot be successfully alleged that such a purpose, if it exists, in any manner threatens the constitutional structure of the country. This has survived many amendments in the past, some admittedly sound, others notoriously unsound. Despite the latter class of amendments, the vigor and force of the Constitution remains unimpaired. That it may continue so is the hope and prayer of every patriotic citizen.

Seldom in the history of the country has public attention been so focused on National Government as in the past few years. Of course, the reason for this is obvious and is found in the bitter experience of the people during a period of both economic and social distress. Despite the reason, the awakened interest of the citizen in his Government is a healthy sign, particularly among a people as politically apathetic at times as ours appear to be. It is not strange, therefore, that volumes have been written in newspapers and periodicals during the past months on legislative subjects, that there have been heated debates both in and out of Congress, and that there now exists a wide diversity of opinion on almost every subject under discussion, this difference extending far beyond party lines or political affiliation.

In briefly vouching an opinion as to existing conditions, in the light of the legislative history of the past few years, I wish to assure you that I do so not in a spirit of partisanship but in a spirit of optimism. I recognize that few, if any, of our citizens, including public men, have been able to entirely digest the legislative diet which has been handed out from Washington, but we know that at least some of it has contributed toward the restoration of healthy conditions in the body politic. If one were asked to balance wise legislation against unwise, it would possibly be a difficult undertaking, but there are certain outstanding achievements of the present administration which are worthy of note.

The closing of the banks of the country, in the early days of the administration, required a rare degree of courage and coming at a time when banks were failing by hundreds and thousands throughout the country, undoubtedly saved us from financial disaster; even rarer courage was required to bring about the speedy repeal of the eighteenth amendment, an act which in itself is to the eternal credit of the administration; the creation of the citizens' conservation camps has proved wise and beneficial in every respect; even the N. R. A., with all of its defects, arrested a price-cutting trend which threatened numerous lines of business, and was in many respects a boon to labor; the bank-deposit guarantee legislation is commended throughout the country and has insured the stability of the American banking system; the much abused A. A. A. measure, while admittedly unsound in some respects, has restored confidence and credit to the farming class in this country, than whom no class admittedly has been in more acute need of assistance; monetary legislation resulting in the reduction of the gold content of the dollar may be regarded as an economic necessity, without which the average debtor in this country would have found it impossible to liquidate his debts; the act which established the Home Owners' Loan Corporation prevented the sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of American homes, and their sales under mortgages, while the R. F. C. Act has been splendidly administered in the interest of business and industrial recovery.

Foreign-trade pacts, some of which have already been successfully negotiated by Secretary of State Hull, with others in progress of negotiation, hold out the only hope of an early restoration of this country's business abroad, and in spite of criticism in some quarters, the policy of this Department may be regarded as highly constructive.

I might go on to cite other legislation which, in my opinion, has proved of benefit to the country, but time prevents. Brief reference, however, may be made to one or two other subjects, among which are old-age pensions and the appropriation of public moneys.

Taking these up in inverse order, it is interesting to note that despite far-flung criticism of recent appropriations, the last P. W. A. act, carrying over $4,000,000,000, passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 329 ayes to 78 nays, and the Senate by a vote of 68 ayes to 16 nays. An analysis of this vote shows that party lines were totally disregarded in both Houses of Congress.

Much pessimism has been expressed as to this and other appropriation bills passed by the Congress, and each one has been greeted with a demand for a balanced Budget, but those who so earnestly plead for a balanced Budget apparently lose sight of the fact that human needs are more vital than budgetary needs. Of course, it is quite easy to assert that conditions would rectify themselves, if left alone, but such assertions are very difficult to prove. If the expenditure of this money contributes, as I believe it will, to the more speedy return of normal conditions, then we may rest assured that the public debt will be quickly reduced, just as it was in the period which followed the World War. I feel no pessimism on this score, though I realize that many in this audience and throughout the country take an entirely different view of the matter.

Apropos of Federal appropriations, I have secured some figures which should be of interest to the people of Virginia. For instance, from May 23, 1933, through June 30, 1935, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has turned over to the State of Virginia $22,583,351. The Public Works Administration, from its inception up until July 5, 1935, has turned over to the State for non-Federal projects $12,561,920, approximately. Up to July 1, 1935, the latter administration turned over to Virginia for Federal projects $75,327,668.

In reference to the amounts for relief it may be noted that aside from some small contributions by cities the State has, during the period mentioned above, appropriated nothing directly for this purpose, so that relief in Virginia has been substantially supplied by the Federal Government. Under such circumstances, while we may regret the necessity of accepting this money, we should hesitate, since we did accept it, to be overly critical of its appropriation.

Personally, I should rejoice if Virginia had been in a position to have declared her financial ability to supply relief to her citizens without Federal aid, but we all know that this was impossible. I should likewise have rejoiced had Virginia been able, without the appropriation of over $88,000,000 of Federal money for public works in this State, to have supplied labor for her people, but it is obvious that this could not have been during the past 2 years.

As far as old-age pensions are concerned, they present no new problem and I would not refer to them but for the fact that in my opinion the question of their establishment in Virginia will be before the next general assembly for action. Inevitably, this action will and should be favorable. Of this I entertain not the slightest doubt.

It is interesting to note that the first old-age law in this country was that of Alaska in 1915, followed by Montana and Nevada in 1923, Wisconsin, 1925, Kentucky, 1926, and a long procession of States down to and including Iowa in 1934 and Arkansas in 1935, so that 29 or more of our States have already adopted this system, while before this, many foreign countries had so acted.

The cost in Virginia has been variously estimated, but the most reliable figures are furnished by William R. Shands, director of division of statutory research and drafting, who, in a recent address on this subject, estimated the cost of such pensions and administration, based on 65 years of age, at approximately $4,868,923, while his estimate for 70 years of age, is $2,779,317. Of course, in either instance, one-half of this cost would be borne by the Federal Government, under pending security legislation. The figures given by Mr. Shands rest on the actual experience of other States.

In this connection it should be borne in mind that for the year ending July 1, 1935, the Confederate pensions in Virginia to all classes amounted to $745,260, and these pensions would be hereafter included in the appropriations under the old-age system.

The legislature will have to determine from what source taxes will come to meet such pensions, but it may not be out of place to point out that the State Tax Commissioner of Virginia estimates that a 1-percent sales tax in this State would yield, exclusive of the tax on gasoline, already under sales tax, something over three and one-half million dollars, or more than sufficient for the purpose.

I would not have it understood from what has been said that I endorse all of the legislation enacted in the past few years in an effort to relieve a great economic emergency. Much of it has proved unsound and some of it unconstitutional, but on the other hand I admire the courage which both Congress and the Executive have displayed under trying circumstances. A do-nothing policy would have banded together all of the radical elements in this country, giving them unprecedented strength, and possibly power to cause disaster.

One of the ablest editorial writers in Virginia recently dubbed as "claptrap" many of this year's speeches about liberty, regimentation, tyranny, and bureaucracy. The reference is perhaps justified. Certainly this line of argument has been overdone. We are subject to no tyranny and we have lost no liberty. On the other hand, every well-informed person knows that conditions in this country are vastly improved over what they were several years back. We only need to read the financial and industrial columns of the daily press to ascertain this fact. On every hand we find evidences of business improvement. One of the latest is cited by the New York Times of last Sunday, in that in the final week of July electric-power output in the United States exceeded by 5.8 percent the previous mid-summer peak set in 1929. Other instances, such as the increased output of automobiles, the revival of our heavy industries, the increased sales in department stores, the rise in stock prices, better agricultural returns, increased wages, might be cited, but all of this is too well known to require extended comment.

Even more encouraging than all of these are the restored confidence of the American people and their determination to overcome all obstacles in the long, drawn-out fight against adverse conditions. Their spirit may be illustrated by an incident in the life of Napoleon. At Marengo the Austrians had overwhelmed the French, commanded by the Emperor in person, and retreat seemed inevitable. At that moment Desaix, who early in the morning at the first sound of the guns on the plains of Marengo, had put his corps into motion to join the main army, galloped into the presence of his great commander. Turning quickly, Napoleon said to his lieutenant:

"What think you of the battle?" "Sire", replied Desaix, glancing at his watch, "the battle is lost but there is yet time to gain another."

Instantly Napoleon ordered the charge and Desaix, placing himself at the head of his squadrons, met and crushed the Austrian assault at the cost of his own life, but that night the Emperor slept on the field of battle.

In such a spirit, under courageous and sympathetic leadership, have the American people fought and won this battle, and while the future presents its difficulties, it is bright with promise. My own attitude is perhaps best expressed by these lines:

"I hold not with the pessimists that all things are ill,
Or with the optimists that all things are well;
All things are not ill and all things are not well,
But all things shall be well,
Because God lives."

AIRPORT FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, with respect to the bill now pending, providing a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two letters from the Chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARK AND PLANNING COMMISSION,
July 1, 1935.

Hon. WILLIAM H. KING,
Chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR KING: The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, at its meeting June 29, had before it for consideration the so-called "Gibson bill" (S. 797), providing for a commercial airport for the District of Columbia at Gravelly Point, and H. R. 3806, providing for a commission of nine to select an airport site, and another commission to be appointed by the President to construct and operate the airport.

After thorough discussion, the Commission voted unanimously in favor of the Gibson bill. The Commission is of the opinion that the Gravelly Point site is the logical location for the ultimate airport for the District of Columbia, and believes that its construction should begin at once. The Commission further believes that the arrangement for a temporary airport in the interim of completion, as set forth in the Gibson bill, is logical and wise. The Commission, therefore, recommends favorable consideration of the Gibson bill by your subcommittee and your committee, and the passage of this legislation by Congress.

I attach hereto copy of letter transmitted some weeks ago to the House District Committee, setting forth our reasons for recommending Gravelly Point.

Respectfully yours,

FREDERIC A. DELANO,
Chairman.

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARK AND PLANNING COMMISSION,
March 9, 1935.

Hon. JENNINGS RANDOLPH,
Chairman Subcommittee on Parks and Playgrounds of the Committee on the District of Columbia,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. RANDOLPH: I regret that, due to our previously scheduled monthly Commission meeting over which I preside, I was unable to be present to make a statement at the close of the hearing on H. R. 3806, providing for immediate development of the site known as "Gravelly Point" for a public airport.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has given continuous study to the problem of an airport for the National Capital ever since 1927, and during this 9-year period has consistently and repeatedly endorsed the Gravelly Point site as being the only appropriate area suitable for a central commercial airport. This conclusion has not been dogmatic, for consideration and study have been given to more than 48 different sites in and around the District of Columbia. Consultation has been had with the various authorities concerned and with other experts.

The selection of a central commercial airport to serve the National Capital is vested with a larger public interest than obtains anywhere else in the United States. To and from Washington travel public officials from all over the United States, private citizens of all degrees of prominence, and leadership in national life having business with the Government. An airport that shall be most convenient and adequate for future needs is a first essential.

With these necessities as a background, the Commission feels that the Gravelly Point site should be chosen for the following principal reasons:

1. It is the most accessible to the Government departments, the Post Office, the leading hotels, the White House and Capitol, of any site of comparable size and freedom from uncontrolled hazards.

2. In comparison with travel time to the central business district prevailing elsewhere in the United States, Gravelly Point is less than one-half the average distance or about 10 minutes to the principal destination points in Washington.

3. A field of adequate size and of the highest standard can be developed within a reasonable period, for not exceeding $2,500,000, less than 5 percent of which need be spent for acquisition of land.

4. There is adequate area to extend the airport for future needs.

5. Reliable estimates given in the testimony of the Army engineers indicate that the site can be filled during a period of between 1 to 5 years depending on the appropriation made available.

6. The work can be coordinated with the deepening of the channels of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers and anticipate future maintenance work, thus saving on future regular appropriations for this purpose.

7. In respect to the disputed contention that the proximity to Bolling Field is a hazard, the Commission is of the opinion, after weighing all the evidence, that as both airports will be under the control of the Federal Government, regulations could be adopted and enforced that will insure safe operation. Cooperation in the design of the runways for the two airports would likewise insure the least interference. Both airports are so located as to be well adapted to the wind directions which, for over 70 percent of the time, are approximately parallel with the river valley at this point.

8. Ample precedent for the foregoing conclusions can be found in the satisfactory and safe operation for a number of years of the Army and Navy airports at Bolling Field and at the existing Washington and Hoover Airports.

9. As between a commercial airport and the military airport for Washington, an in-town convenient location for the commercial airport should take precedence. Military air maneuvers take place relatively infrequently compared with hourly commercial operation, and in time of emergency the commercial airport could be taken over for military use.

10. The sentiments of the public and civic agencies desiring an adequate commercial airport for Washington are united on the Gravelly Point site. These include the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the District Engineer, the Board of Trade, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the Interfederation of Citizens' Associations, the Washington Aero Club, the Washington Air Derby, and others.

During the period in which Gravelly Point would be under construction, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission believes that the present Washington airport could be made safe and more usable by closing Military Road, provided that a substitute road be constructed to accommodate the public that would be inconvenienced, and that the title to the road remain in the United States. Because of the definite limitations of size and the uncontrolled hazards surrounding Washington Airport, the Commission cannot endorse it as the central commercial airport for Washington.

Your committee may inquire why, with such repeated endorsements of the Gravelly Point site, no action has as yet been obtained. The answer is simple. Whenever legislation for Gravelly Point is before a committee of Congress and its many obvious advantages have been presented, those desiring to sell other sites to the Government intervene, request inspections of their sites, and have on several occasions asked for a special commission to investigate and report later. Before the committee concerned can make these inspections and complete hearings Congress is adjourned.

The question of who shall finance the airport has also caused delay.

It is my earnest hope that your committee, having taken such complete testimony, will proceed to adjust the financial question as seems equitable and recommend Gravelly Point as the central commercial airport for the National Capital.

Respectfully yours,

FREDERIC A. DELANO, Chairman.

NEUTRALITY—EDITORIAL IN NEW YORK POST

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in the New York Post of Tuesday, August 20, 1935, entitled "The Warning", dealing with United States neutrality.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Post of Aug. 20, 1935]

THE WARNING

A British youth laughs as he strolls with his girl at Folkestone. On the banks of the Moselle a German youth is singing as he makes his grapes ready for the wine press. Deep in the Maine woods a carefree fisherman casts his line.

This was so in August of 1914. It is so today.

In 1914 Austria was hunting for an excuse to meddle in Serbia. Sarajevo provided one.

In 1935 Mussolini does not even bother to hunt for an excuse. He intends to seize Ethiopia. He says so.

The so-called "peace parley" between French, British, and Italian envoys has collapsed completely.

With Mussolini determined upon having Ethiopia at any cost, this collapse was inevitable.

What chills the spines of European statesmen, what drives fear into the hearts of European peoples, is the consciousness that Mussolini's imperialistic ambitions are not bounded by Ethiopia—that while the Frenchman, the Britisher, the Russian, or the German may have no direct concern in an Italo-Ethiopian conflict, yet all may be dragged into a new whirlpool of war as a result of that conflict.

Collapse of the "peace conference" merely brings home the nearness of that possibility.

It would be folly for any man to underestimate the dangers in Europe today.

It will be even greater folly if the Congress of the United States does not act at once to prevent a repetition of the stupidity which, in 1917, sucked this Nation into the bloody holocaust across the Atlantic.

England has a stake in the Mediterranean, also in Africa. Her Empire is involved. France has her stake in Africa, her own selfish interests to consider. The mad leaders of Germany, secretly gloating, only await the war spark to drive for new plunder and old revenge.

The United States of America has no stake whatever in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute now.

But we know today that we were dragged into the World War to save the vast investment we had made in the allied cause.

We know now, or ought to know, that if we repeat our tactics of the World War, sell to belligerents and lend to belligerents—we can only end up by again becoming a belligerent ourselves.

Already Great Britain is scheming to draw the United States into the European whirlpool under the guise of "consultation."

Congress has before it a comprehensive neutrality program—a program which would provide for real neutrality the moment war starts. Such a program will cost us "war prosperity." But it will spare us the blight of war itself, not to mention the rigors of the inevitable post-war economic collapse.

Mr. President, call for enactment of that neutrality program—and Congress will follow your leadership.

Fight for peace—and the Nation will stand behind you.

SGT. STANLEY R. MORGAN—STORY OF AIRPLANE CRASH

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD the military history of Sgt. Stanley R. Morgan, Signal Corps, United States Army, and Stanley Morgan's graphic story of the crash which resulted in the deaths of Will Rogers and Wiley Post.

This story of Stanley Morgan's is a graphic and thoughtful recital of incidents as they occurred told by one who has been trained by our American Army in reporting details. The writing is a compliment both to Stanley Morgan and to the Army. Stanley Morgan's character and resourcefulness are well reflected in the communication.

In connection with the insertion of these two statements in the RECORD, I should like to stress a fact which is surely of public interest; that is the efficiency, the devotion to duty and the caliber of our men who occupy unpretentious, but extremely important positions for our Nation in various parts of the world.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Army's representative at Uncle Sam's most northern village, Staff Sgt. Stanley R. Morgan, Signal Corps, has lived in Point Barrow for 5 years. He was born in Payson, Utah, February 26, 1901, his present home, where his mother, Mrs. Joseph C. Morgan, resides. He first enlisted at San Francisco, Calif., January 20, 1920, and stated in his last enlistment papers that he was married and had two children. He gave his occupation as farmer, with a high-school education. Sergeant Morgan is unquestionably one of the busiest men in Alaska, for he holds practically all Government and civil positions in this section. He is in charge of the Signal Corps radio station, United States Commissioner, acting postmaster, Weather Bureau observer, news broadcaster, and amateur archeologist. In fact, Sergeant Morgan is the entire new deal in this community. He is a real friend and benefactor to the natives and is vitally interested in their welfare. The sergeant has an excellent collection of primitive tools and implements, which he obtained through much toil in excavating, now on display at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C. It has been definitely proved that these prehistoric tools and implements date back to the year 1100 A. D.

Sergeant Morgan is one of the most resourceful and highly trained noncommissioned officers in the Signal Corps, and the officer in charge was confident that he would exert every effort to erect properly the new radio station and home which had been shipped to him. This confidence was not misplaced, and this is what the sergeant did.

SERGEANT MORGAN'S GRAPHIC STORY OF CRASH

SEATTLE, WASH., AUGUST 16, 1935.—Following from Point Barrow: "10 p. m. last night attracted by a group of excited natives on beach, I walked down and discovered one native all out of breath gasping out in pidgin English a strange tale 'airplane she blew up.' After repeated questioning, I learned this native witnessed a crash of an airplane at his sealing camp some 15 miles south of Barrow and had run the entire distance to summon aid. The native claimed a plane flying very low suddenly appeared from the south. Apparently sighting the tents the plane then circled several times finally settled down on a small river near the camp. Two men climbed out, one wearing 'rag on sore eye' and other 'big man with boots.' The big man then called a native to the water's edge and asked the direction and distance to Point Barrow. The direction given, the men then climbed back into the plane and taxied off to the far side of the river for take-off into wind.

"After a short run the plane slowly lifted from water to a height of about 50 feet, banking slightly to the right, when, evidently, the motor stalled, the plane slipped off on its right wing and nosed down into the water, turning completely over, and the native claimed a dull explosion occurred and most of the right wing dropped off and a film of gasoline and oil soon covered the water. The native, frightened by the explosion, turned and ran, but soon controlled his fright and returned, calling loudly to the men in the plane. Receiving no answer, the native then made the decision to come to Barrow for help. With completion of story we knew the plane to be that of Post and Rogers and quickly assembled a crew of 14 Eskimos and departed in open whaleboat powered with a small gas motor. Hampered by recent ice floes and a strong adverse current, it took nearly 3 hours to reach destination. A dense fog with semidarkness gave the upturned plane a most ghostly appearance, and our hearts chilled at thought of what we might find there. As we approached nearer the plane we soon realized no human could possibly survive the terrific crash. The plane was but a huge mass of twisted broken wood and metal. The natives by this time had managed to cut into the cabin and extricate the body of Rogers, who had apparently been well back in the cabin when the plane struck and was more or less protected by the baggage carried therein.

"We soon learned we would have a difficult job freeing Post from the wreckage as the plane had struck with such terrific speed and had forced the engine well back into the cabin, pinning the body of Post securely. With some little difficulty we managed to tear the plane apart, and eventually released the body of Post. Both bodies were then carefully laid out and wrapped with eider-down sleeping bags found in the wreckage; then carefully placed in the boat. It is believed the natives felt the loss of these two great men as keenly as we, and as we started our slow trip back to Barrow one of the Eskimo boys began to sing a hymn in Eskimo, and soon all voices joined in this singing, and continued until our arrival at Barrow, when we silently bore the bodies from the beach to the hospital where they were turned over to Dr. Greist, who, with the kindly help of Mr. Brower, prepared and dressed the bodies. It is doubtful if a person in this little village slept that night; all sat around the hospital with bowed heads and with little or no talking."

RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN MEXICO

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I request to have inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD some data, compiled and published by the Baltimore Archdiocesan Confederation for the Defense of Religious Liberty in Mexico, in reference to the extent of religious persecution in Mexico.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I. PERSECUTION OF BISHOPS

A. Mexican prelates exiled from the country:

1. Most Rev. Archbishop L. Ruiz y Flores, apostolic delegate, San Antonio, Tex.
2. Most Rev. Archbishop Francisco Orozco y Jimenez.
3. Rt. Rev. Bishop J. Manriquez y Zarate.
4. Rt. Rev. Bishop S. Armora.
5. Rt. Rev. Bishop A. Guizar.

B. Mexican prelates exiled from their respective dioceses:

1. Archbishop of Durango.
2. Archbishop of Oaxaca.
3. Bishop of Campeche.
4. Bishop of Chiapas.
5. Bishop of Chilapa.
6. Bishop of Colima.
7. Bishop of Papantla.
8. Bishop of Sonora.
9. Bishop of Tabasco.
10. Bishop of Tehuantepec.
11. Bishop of Veracruz.
12. Bishop of Zacatecas.

C. Mexican prelates arrested, but later released:

1. Most Rev. Pascual Diaz, Archbishop of Mexico.
2. Rt. Rev. Joseph Echavarria, Bishop of Saltillo.
3. Rt. Rev. L. Altamirano y Bulnes, Bishop of Tulancingo.
4. Rt. Rev. Jose Garibi Rivera, Aux. Bishop of Guadalajara.

II. PERSECUTION OF PRIESTS

A. Martyrdom of priests (we use the term "martyr" without intention of anticipating the judgment of the church. The list is by no means complete):

Rev. Crescenciano Aguilar, Juanacatlan, Jalisco, 1925.
Rev. Luis Batis, Chalchihuites, Durango, 1926.
Rev. Jenaro Sanchez, Tamazulita, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Mateo Correa, Durango, Durango, 1927.
Rev. Julio Alvarez, San Julian, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Sabas Reyes, Tolotlan, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Vicente Lopez, San Martin, Mexico, 1927.
Rev. Ramon Adame, Yahualica, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Andres Sola, San Joaquin, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. J. Trinidad Rangel, San Joaquin, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. David Uribe, Cuernavaca, Morelos, 1927.

Rev. Espiridion Jimenez, Atenguillo, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Agustin Caloca, Colotlan, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Cristobal Magallanes, Colotlan, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Felix C. Castaneda, Jerez, Zacatecas, 1927.
Rev. Jose Maria Robles, Quilla, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Jose Isabel Flores, Zapotlanejo, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Miguel de la Mora, Colima, Colima, 1927.
Rev. Gumersindo Sedano, Ciudad Guzman, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Rodrigo Aguilar, Ejutla, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Miguel Pro, Mexico, Federal District, 1927.
Rev. Pedro Esqueda, Tecualtitan, Jalisco, 1927.
Rev. Margarito Flores, Tuliman, Mexico, 1927.
Rev. Pedro Razo, Dolores Hidalgo, Guanajuato, 1927.
Rev. Enrique Contreras, Pozos, Guanajuato, 1927.
Rev. Gregorio Gutierrez, San Rosa, Guanajuato, 1927.
Rev. Daniel Perez, Irapuato, Guanajuato, 1927.
Rev. Angel Martinez, Pueblo Nuevo, Guanajuato, 1928.
Rev. Junipero Vera, Falconi, Michoacan, 1928.
Rev. Jesus Mendez, Valtierra, Michoacan, 1928.
Rev. Agustin Martinez, Pueblo Nuevo, Guanajuato, 1928.
Rev. Toribio Romo, Tequila, Jalisco, 1928.
Rev. Rafael Alvarez, Dolores Hidalgo, Guanajuato, 1928.
Rev. Antonio Mendez, Armadillo, San Luis Potosi, 1928.
Rev. Jose Ramirez, Pareja, Michoacan, 1928.
Rev. Jose Perez, Panales, Guanajuato, 1928.
Rev. Justino Orona, Cuquio, Jalisco, 1928.
Rev. Atilano Cruz, Cuquio, Jalisco, 1928.
Rev. Martin Lawers, Irapuato, Guanajuato, 1933.
Rev. Vicente Silva, Nejapa, Oaxaca, 1934.

The diminution of the number of priests killed in recent years does not mean that the persecution has abated but that the persecutors have adopted other methods, since the killing of priests was found by them to injure their own cause.

"The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians."

B. Limitation and exiling of priests.

When the violent persecution began in 1926, there were in Mexico about 3,000 priests, scattered throughout the country. This number has been drastically reduced by the State legislatures, through an abuse of the power granted to them by article 130 of the constitution, which reads, in part, as follows: "* * * The State legislatures shall have the exclusive power of determining the maximum number of ministers of religious creeds according to the needs of each locality * * *." The reduction has at present reached the ridiculous figure of 334 priests to minister to about 15,000,000 people. The following list will illustrate the present condition:

State	Number of priests	Population per priest
Aguascalientes	2	66,450
Coahuila	5	87,285
Durango	2	246,765
Federal District	25	49,183
Guanajuato	39	25,000
Hidalgo	5	133,400
Jalisco	50	25,104
Mexico	34	29,120
Michoacan	33	31,769
Morelos	40	3,318
Nayarit	5	33,545
Nuevo Leon	28	14,920
Oaxaca	1	1,082,191
Puebla	23	50,018
Queretaro	2	16,827
San Luis Potosi	40	14,495

The limiting power has been so abused in some States that no bishops or priests are allowed to minister and have therefore been exiled. The following States are in this class: (a) Campeche; (b) Colima; (c) Chihuahua; (d) Chiapas; (e) Guerrero; (f) Lower California; (g) Sinaloa; (h) Sonora; (i) Tabasco; (j) Tamaulipas; (k) Tlaxcala; (l) Veracruz; (m) Yucatan; (n) Zacatecas.

Total area, without priests, 435,551 square miles.

Total population, without priests, 6,037,438 people.

As a result of this action, there are more than 2,500 persecuted priests living in hiding in various parts of Mexico. The majority of these priests are in Mexico City, where the size of the city and the possibility of ministering privately in the homes of faithful Catholics makes hiding more easy and assistance more certain.

Even the few duly registered priests are at times molested and arrested, but return to their flocks as soon as released. This general condition may be illustrated by the example of the archdiocese of Guadalajara, Jalisco, where from December 1934 to March 1935, 34 priests were imprisoned and 10 exiled.

III. PERSECUTION OF SEMINARIES

The seminaries being the source of the priesthood, the persecutors have made them, too, a target for their violences.

The seminaries of the following dioceses have been closed and confiscated: Mexico, Puebla, Aguascalientes, Leon, Guadalajara, Huejutla, Oaxaca, Morelia, Saltillo, Veracruz, Tacambaro, Yucatan.

The seminarians have traveled a long road of trials, many have been molested, and at least the seminarians of Mexico, Saltillo, and Puebla have been arrested as a body.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 3050. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Lake Champlain between Rouses Point, N. Y., and Alburg, Vt.;

S. 3105. An act to amend the act approved June 12, 1934, relating to the granting of the consent of Congress to certain bridge construction across the Tennessee River at a point between the city of Sheffield, Ala., and the city of Florence, Ala.;

H. R. 3462. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, approved March 4, 1913", and for other purposes;

H. R. 5711. An act to provide aid for needy blind persons of the District of Columbia and authorizing appropriations therefor;

H. R. 6510. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act;

H. R. 6623. An act to amend the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia in relation to providing assistance against old-age want;

H. R. 7617. An act to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8421. An act granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8422. An act granting pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8423. An act granting increase of pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8424. An act granting increase of pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8425. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain helpless and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War; and

H. R. 8426. An act granting pensions to certain soldiers of the Civil War.

CHANGE OF NAME OF INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I announce that at the conclusion of the consideration of the bill in which the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] is interested, I shall move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2665) to change the name of the Department of the Interior and to coordinate certain governmental functions, of which I have previously given an explanation to this body.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Illinois has an idea that he is going to pass the Ickes bill. I wish to make the prophecy that he is not going to do that at this time.

STABILIZATION OF BITUMINOUS COAL MINING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9100) to stabilize the bituminous coal mining industry and promote its interstate commerce; to provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal; to levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a drawback under certain conditions; to declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest; to conserve the bituminous-coal resources of the United States; to provide for the general welfare, and for other purposes; and providing penalties.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I believe that this bill, to control and regulate the bituminous-coal industry, because of its far-reaching effects, is one of the important measures brought before this Congress.

The objects of the bill are:

First. To stabilize the bituminous coal mining industry and promote interstate commerce in bituminous coal.

Second. To provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal.

Third. To levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a drawback under certain conditions.

Fourth. To declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest.

Fifth. To conserve the bituminous-coal resources of the United States.

Sixth. To provide for the general welfare, and for other purposes.

This bill deals with a great national resource, upon which a majority of our people depend for heat and light, and a very large part of our industry for power. It touches the people directly, going into every home, every business, every industry. No one in America can escape its effect and influence.

This is true, not just for today, but for future years, so long as bituminous coal continues to be a chief source of heat and energy for the American people.

This measure has the support of operators producing a majority of the commercial tonnage in America. It is backed by 90 percent of the men engaged in mining coal; and, with the exception of a few selfish interests, it has not been opposed by the consumer.

The proponents of this bill are intensely interested in its success. They believe that its failure would bring immediate catastrophe to the bituminous-coal industry, ruining many producers, impoverishing half a million miners and their 2,000,000 dependents, and jeopardizing the Nation's fuel supply.

The production and distribution of bituminous coal is a basic necessity not only for industry but also for transportation, and for the health and comfort of the people. Any stoppage of its supply faces the Nation with disaster. It is, therefore, affected with a public interest, justifying regulation and control.

Interstate commerce depends heavily upon it. Not only is it the principal source of power in transportation, but also of the energy required in the manufacture of most articles of trade between the States. The class I railroads of the country draw about 85 percent of their motive power directly from bituminous coal. Slightly more than 20 percent of the annual coal output goes for railroad use. Industrial users, including electric public utilities and byproduct plants, consume approximately 56 percent of the output. Thus, the very life of America's commerce has its origin in bituminous coal. To foster and safeguard the industry is a national problem and a national obligation.

America's future place among the nations of the world depends largely for its supply of energy upon bituminous coal. For that reason we have a duty to conserve it.

By the absence of effective regulation, this industry has, despite its best efforts, been unable to conduct itself in a manner that assures safety and equitable profits to its owners, fair wages and working conditions to labor, and a dependable supply for consumers at all times at reasonable prices. It indeed, in the absence of regulated conditions, faces chaos and destruction.

Unrestricted production and cutthroat competition have resulted in mining practices that waste 20 percent of our best bituminous reserves, and at the same time bring ruin to producers, and poverty to labor.

The Nation's major supply of fuel is in danger from day to day. Operators in the industry were bankrupt and miners on the verge of starvation when saved temporarily by the Government through the N. R. A.

This bill is designed to remedy these conditions by its provisions:

First. To conserve America's most important natural resource, now, through wasteful mining and operating practices, being so rapidly depleted that the National Government already is calculating the time when our most valuable bituminous deposits will be exhausted.

Second. To assure the consumer an adequate supply of fuel at reasonable prices, not only for the present, but in the long future when America will be forced to compete with other countries with respect to fuel and power.

Third. To stabilize an industry which for 50 years has failed to conduct successfully its own business, and to do this in the interest of the entire Nation, whose fuel supply is at stake.

Fourth. To provide a living wage for the 500,000 men in the industry and their 2,000,000 dependents, all of whom most of the time have lived close to starvation.

Fifth. To restore to the workmen and their families their rights as American citizens, and to put an end to conditions in those mining communities where many civil rights have been taken away from the miners.

Sixth. To accomplish these things without cost to the Government through private ownership and operation under Government supervision.

Let me tell you briefly, without making a complete analysis of the bill, how these ends are to be attained under the proposed legislation, and why I believe the plan set up is basically sound and practicable.

What first appeals to me is that the rights of all interests—the consumer, the producer, and the workman—are safeguarded by placing the industry under the control of a national commission appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the commission reporting to the Congress through the Department of the Interior.

This means that the bituminous-coal industry will be managed and operated in the interest and for the welfare of the entire Nation, but as a private enterprise, with due regard for consumer, investor, and workman. The commission has been given powers sufficiently broad to carry out effectively such intents.

What makes the plan so practicable, guaranteeing the greatest measure of success in operation, is that under the commission, for its assistance, are boards of producers upon which labor also is represented. These boards are thoroughly representative, being elected by the producers, marketing agencies, and labor in each of the twenty-odd districts to be established.

Thus under the commission and cooperating with it are practical coal men—operators and miners—who have not only a complete knowledge of the business but a personal interest in it. This should insure intelligent and successful administration.

To stabilize the industry several steps are necessary. Every authority and interest admits that the demoralization of the bituminous-coal industry comes from overproduction. With present facilities America can produce 100 percent more coal than it can consume. This has resulted in cutthroat competition and unfair trade practices, with ruin for the operator and starvation for the miner.

The fundamental remedy, then, as agreed by all, is to control production, prices, and trade practices. This is to be accomplished through the commission.

The bituminous-coal industry, for a little more than a year under the N. R. A., for the first time in half a century, except during the World War, was conducted successfully for both producer and miner, with reasonable prices for the consumer.

The second step in stabilization calls for fixing standard hours of labor and wages. This is absolutely vital, or competing sections of the country will be cutting each other's throats.

To make working hours in the industry uniform throughout the country, the daily and weekly hours agreed upon in contracts between producers of more than two-thirds the annual national tonnage and the representatives of more than half the mine workers shall be accepted by all producers.

As the cost of living differs in various sections of the country, the wage scale is to be negotiated by collective bargaining between employer and employee in each district, using the same principle of representation as that established for determining hours of labor.

The next step is to determine fair minimum and maximum prices for the consumer. This is made easier in the coal industry because labor costs amount to about 65 percent of the cost of production, as against a lower percentage in most industries. With the labor contracts agreed upon the district boards are to establish minimum prices for each grade and size of coal. These prices are to become effective, however, only with the approval of the commission, which shall confirm, modify, or disapprove them.

As the commission is to have power to require the producers to maintain uniform systems of accounting covering costs, wages, operations, sales profits, losses, and the like, the consumer is given adequate protection against unfair prices. As an additional safeguard the consumer is to be represented by a consumers' counsel and given the right of appeal to the commission if he believes prices excessive or oppressive.

For the purposes of preventing unfair practices, as defined in the bill, and to facilitate the movement of coal in interstate commerce, joint marketing agencies may be created under direction of the district boards, with the approval of the commission.

Carrying out the ideals of the N. R. A. with respect to the rights of labor, provision is made for collective bargaining and the rights of the workmen are fully protected in the bill. To assist in maintaining harmonious relations between the producer and the miner a labor board, to be appointed by the President and reporting to the Congress through the Department of Labor, is provided for.

A sincere effort has been made throughout to safeguard every interest, and to give each the fullest right to hearings in every controversy that may arise under the bill.

In practically every instance appeals from the district boards may be made either to the commission or to the labor board, and it is further provided that judicial review of any order of the commission or of the labor board may be had by an aggrieved party.

With the present successful operation of the industry assured, the commission is then empowered to plan for the future of bituminous coal. Because at least 20 percent of our most valuable coal reserve is being wasted through inefficient mining practices, the commission is authorized to investigate the problem with a view toward conserving this valuable resource.

First. The administrative costs of the commission and of the labor board are in effect to be paid for by the industry.

Second. The district boards are to be supported by their own members, assessments being made upon a tonnage basis.

Senators may be inclined to believe that eventually these costs will fall upon the consumer. This should not be true, as, by increased efficiency of operation under the plan set up, cost of production may be reduced even to a greater extent than the tax imposed. This is not an academic argument or mere theory. It is a very simple business proposition. Today, on account of gross overproduction, a majority of the mines in America are operating not more than 3 days a week, and yet there is the investment and administrative overhead to carry. Put the most efficient of these mines on full-time schedule, close the others, and the cost of coal to the consumer will be materially reduced.

Having outlined as briefly as possible the principal features of the bill, let me proceed to show the absolute need for some measure of this kind.

Almost the entire history of bituminous coal in America has been one of disaster and calamity for both workman and employer. The miner and his family have suffered and starved, and the operator and investor have gone broke.

At the same time, on account of unrestricted, cutthroat competition, the operators have resorted to wasteful methods of mining, so that the rich fields of bituminous coal upon which much of America's prosperity rests are fast being depleted. In this mad, competitive struggle, great quantities of valuable coal have been left in the ground in such condition that they never can be reclaimed. There is thus lost to the American people a considerable portion of its most valuable natural resource, upon which the Nation depends for most of its heat, light, and power, upon which steel and other metallurgical processes are dependent, and around which have been built many of our great industries, with their cities of millions. In our industrial civilization coal is as important to America as its food supply.

Let me say, as a warning to the American people, that we must very soon return even more to coal as the principal source of power. Today, like the profligates we have always been, we are rapidly depleting our oil reserves. According to conservative estimates, we shall consume during the next 16 years as much oil as we have consumed in the past 75 years.

This cannot continue indefinitely. The day is already in sight when oil can be used only for certain special purposes. For heat, light, and power generally we must return to coal, eventually obtaining even our motor fuel from some of its distillates. In the meantime, we must keep the coal industry alive; we must conserve its resources, protect the capital invested, and build up a body of strong, capable, intelligent workmen who will add their strength to the best citizenship of the American Nation.

Let me make one thing very clear before going further. Conditions in the bituminous industry, which this bill seeks to remedy, are not the result of the depression. For many years the production of bituminous coal has been a sick industry. With the single exception of the war period, the mine worker's income in the bituminous districts ranged from $500 to $800 annually. That is not a living wage for the 500,000 men in the industry and for their 2,000,000 dependents. Health, happiness, or good American citizenship cannot be built upon such a wage, and the operator, except during the war, has been steadily losing money over a long period of years. Even during the boom days of 1929, when all other industry was thriving, bituminous coal operated at a loss.

With these general facts before us—and I desire to deal only with facts—let us look at some of the details.

In considering the necessities for this legislation from the broad national viewpoint, I would say that the first concern of this Congress should be the conservation of this most valuable resource.

In no better way can I show you the immediate necessity for such conservation than to quote from the report of the National Resources Board recently submitted to the Congress by our President. This Board made exhaustive studies of our national resources, and has offered valuable recommendations for their conservation. In discussing the conservation of bituminous coal the report states—I quote:

> Stabilization of the coal industry is needed to minimize waste of the resource.
>
> In western Europe the average loss of coal in the mining of the beds now worked is from 5 to 10 percent. In the United States, according to careful field studies in 1923 by engineers of the Bureau of Mines and the United States Coal Commission, the average loss is 35 percent. Of this loss, 15 percent was considered unavoidable and 20 percent avoidable, using the standards of engineering already shown to be feasible by the practice of better companies. This meant that the avoidable loss amounted to 150,000,000 tons a year, left behind under conditions that virtually prevent its being recovered.
>
> * * * In the United States we are prone to ignore the loss in mining because coal seems so abundant, but the facts are that while our reserves of lignite and low-grade bituminous are indeed enormous, we are exhausting our best bituminous coals at a rate that makes their conservation a serious national problem. For example, with production at the 1929 rate, the life of the magnificent Pittsburgh bed in Pennsylvania is limited to a hundred years, and the high-grade portions of the steam in the gas and coking coal districts will be gone long before that.
>
> In the famous smokeless fields of southern West Virginia, the reserves in beds of commercial thickness are placed by Evanson at four and eight-tenths billion tons, which, at the 1929 rate of production, would last but 85 years. The same authority states that the highest grade gas and metallurgical coals are 11 percent exhausted in Kentucky and 22 percent exhausted in southern West Virginia and Virginia. Yet these coals, the Pittsburgh bed in Pennsylvania and the southern low and high volatile metallurgical coals, are the foundation of the American steel industry and their depletion will handicap not only steel itself but all industries depending on steel.
>
> The causes of the excessive waste attending the mining of our coals are complex, but the great underlying cause is destructive competition. The losses are nobody's fault in particular, for the individual operator is driven by economic pressure * * *. Prevention of such losses depends on relieving the conditions of poverty which have surrounded the industry. The members of this committee, who have given most thought to the question, are convinced that the necessary first step in reducing the waste of coal in mining is to aid the industry in establishing itself on a stable and profitable basis.
>
> Reduction in waste may also be expected from other results of a program of production control. * * * With some check on the expansion of capacity, steadier operation of the mines remaining will ensue, thereby increasing the percentage of extraction. It is well known that recovery of pillars depends on maintenance of a regular breakline and a systematic schedule of operations, and some part of the present waste is due to the simple fact of irregular and intermittent operations.

Mr. President, need we seek any higher or more authoritative source than this report to convince us that immediate action is necessary in order to prevent waste and to establish a program of conservation in the bituminous industry?

My concern for the consumer is that we have an adequate supply of coal at a reasonable price. In that I am looking into the future. In the past he has had more coal than he could use and at prices frequently below the cost of production. But if there shall not be conservation of coal resources and the elimination of wasteful methods of mining, the consumer of the future will suffer both through limited supply and exorbitant prices.

My next interest—personally my first—relates to the condition of men in the industry. Half a million men are engaged in the bituminous-coal industry, and, as previously stated, with the single exception of the war period, these men have been paid a pitiful wage, upon which no human being in a so-called "civilized country" could live adequately.

Because of unstable market conditions coal mining has been a seasonal industry, and the miner has never had anything like full-time work. For example, in 1923 he averaged only 179 days; in 1930, 187 days; in 1931, 160 days; in 1932, 146 days; and in 1933, 167 days. In many instances the pay was from $2.50 to $3 a day. The highest wage scale during this period was $5, and this usually was paid in districts with fewer workdays than the national average.

I take these figures from the Bureau of Mines as national averages. I could cite thousands of cases where both the days of work and the wage were less. Men were working in some of the bituminous-coal fields in nearby States for as little as $1.50 a day for 12 or 14 hours of work. Even during the golden era for coal under the N. R. A. the average miner did not make over $15 a week.

The condition of many of these miners, our fellow American citizens, has been worse than that of the serfs of old Russia. Not only were they forced to subsist on starvation wages but many civil rights were taken from them.

If nothing more demanded regulation of the coal industry by the Federal Government, this alone should. How the Nation has tolerated such conditions for years is beyond my understanding. Cannot the American people realize that this is the most certain way to break down our democratic institutions?

And now, what about the operator? So far as profits are concerned, he, as a rule, has fared as badly as the miner. The bituminous-coal industry has been losing money for years. I take my figures from the tax returns made to the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

In 1925 the industry lost $27,000,000. In 1928 the losses went to $28,000,000. During the boom year of 1929 the bituminous-coal industry operated at a loss of $15,822,000. As the depression came on this loss mounted in 1930 to $44,708,000, in 1931 to $48,784,000, and in 1932 to $51,944,000.

Common sense should tell us that such a condition cannot long continue without destroying the industry. And yet America as an industrial nation is dependent for its very life upon coal. Therefore, this is a national problem and one that must be accepted and settled by the Nation.

True, the bituminous-coal industry had some relief through the N. R. A., but this was only temporary. We must seek other measures for a permanent cure, and the time to make such provision is now.

Those who may not be familiar with the bituminous-coal industry may ask the very pertinent question, Does the bituminous-coal industry so differ from other great American industries that it must be given special consideration by the National Government?

Let the National Resources Board answer that question. Let me quote again from its recent report:

> The bituminous-coal industry, as the oldest and the most important source of energy, has suffered loss of markets to oil, natural gas, and water power. Competition within the industry has always been intense because of the widely scattered reserves and the thousands of producing units. Rivalries between districts and the legal obstacles of the antitrust laws have hitherto prevented any form of centralized organization.
>
> Lack of adequate profits has meant inadequate wages and excessive waste of coal resources. Coal was therefore one of the industries which could gain the most from the facilities for collective action offered by the National Industrial Recovery Act. Its experience under the Bituminous Coal Code indicates that continuation of some form of production control is necessary to effect the stabilization of this industry.
>
> Stabilization of the coal industry is needed to protect capital. In 1929, according to the Treasury Statistics of Income, there were 1,437 bitminous-coal companies producing approximately 46 percent of the total output that operated at a loss, and their deficits exceeded the income of the companies making a profit, so that the industry as a whole reported a net loss even during that year of boom. Virtually no other business covered by the Treasury's record showed such wide-spread money losses as the mining of bituminous coal.
>
> Stabilization of the industry is needed to protect wage standards. The pressure of low prices upon wages in coal mining is direct and cruel. Whereas in manufacturing wages constitute 23 percent of the cost of the product, in coal mining they make up 65 percent. Any savings the operator can make in supplies, in power, in overhead, look small in comparison with the wage cost, and the pressure to reduce wages in periods of low prices is almost irresistible. Hence arises on the part of mine workers the insistent demand for collective bargaining. Fifty years of bitter experience have proven beyond question that underlying the turbulent history of labor relations in this industry is the competitive pressure which often made it difficult or impossible for the employer to pay a decent wage or earn a profit.

And that brings us to another question, namely, why cannot the bituminous-coal industry stabilize its own business, without Government supervision? The simple answer is that in 50 years it never has done so. Never during all that time, except during the war period, when the whole world was crying for American coal, has the business been conducted on a fairly satisfactory basis, either for the operator or the miner.

The reason is that the productive capacity of the American bituminous-coal industry is at least 100 percent greater than the consuming needs of the country. America today is using annually 350,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, but the industry can easily throw upon the market 800,000,000 tons or more with present mines and equipment.

During brief periods of boom times mines have been opened everywhere in coal-bearing sections of the country. They run from large operations with heavy investments to small ones operated by a few men. These small openings are so great in number that they have been given various descriptive names, such as "father-and-son mines", "pigeonhole mines", "gopher holes", and "snowball mines." Yet small as the individual mines may be, their number has a serious unstabilizing effect upon both market prices and labor.

Fifty years of bituminous-coal mining have proven that the industry cannot regulate itself, either for the good of the operator, or his employees, or for the country. If added proof were needed, it could be found in the records of the subcommittee of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate, which gave weeks to hearings on this bill. Almost every operator—the leading coal producers of America—told this committee that the bituminous-coal industry needed governmental supervision. And they were all equally candid in admitting that, except for certain unusual periods, the bituminous-coal industry never had any prosperity except through the aid of the Government under the N. R. A.

An editorial published in the Black Diamond, a trade weekly publication of the coal industry, dated March 2, 1935, and entitled "Government Control", states the matter frankly.

As a matter of fact—

It says—

> such stability, or approximate stability, that the industry has ever attained has inevitably come from forces other than those exercised by the producers. It was due to the stabilization of labor through union control of wages that a large section of the bituminous-coal industry for a time enjoyed a degree of prosperity; it was only when N. R. A. forced standardized wages upon the remainder of the industry that figures approximating profits were found in the books of many companies in the heretofore nonunion fields. Frequently enough, it is true, high rates of wage for union labor have penalized the union operators, but there are few of them that would go back, if they could, to the days before the union.

If we are to take the word of the operators themselves—and who better should know the needs and exigencies of their business—the Federal Government must keep some supervision over the bituminous-coal industry. Added to that is the affirmation of the men laboring in the industry; and finally the declarations of various governmental agencies.

From the testimony of operators before the subcommittee, the chief difference of opinion related to the form and method of governmental supervision.

To my mind this is a question that must be settled now. There must be supervision over the industry or it will suffer the most violent and disastrous collapse in its history.

The code, under the N. R. A., failed for the simple reason that the act did not give sufficient authority to supervise the industry successfully. The administrative authorities, therefore, hesitated to resort to the courts to force compliance or to punish for violations of the code.

It operated practically on a voluntary basis. This succeeded for a comparatively short time when the industry was in a bankrupt, chaotic condition. But with a few months' profitable operation—small as the gain may have been—certain producers began to cut prices in violation of their code agreements. This tended to unstabilize the industry. I believe the number of violations was comparatively small—perhaps not more than 5 or 10 percent; but it was sufficient to dislocate the entire industry and to nullify the code. As Mr. Roberts said in his testimony, "It was like a weak link in a chain."

The Government made little effort to punish for such violations because it was not sure of its ground under the N. R. A. The chief violations of the code agreements came about through cutting prices below those established under the code. But as there was grave doubt whether the National Industrial Recovery Act gave the right to fix prices—and it has now been decided by the Supreme Court that the act did not give such power—there were few prosecutions for price cutting.

To show the seriousness of the situation under the N. R. A., let me again quote from the subcommittee's record. This is a paragraph from a letter sent out March 2, 1935, by Appalachian Coals, Inc., to the members of its marketing association, which produces 40,000,000 tons of coal a year. It reads as follows:

> Chiseling has reached such an acute state all but one subdivision of division 1 agreed that drastic measures must be taken to protect contract tonnages for those producers who are observing code prices. A resolution authorizing code authorities to permit special competitive prices to be named to protect such producers on renewals of contracts was presented to the National Coal Board of Arbitration for prompt decision.

This is a frank declaration that code violations so seriously affected price structures that the law-abiding operator was compelled to appeal to the code authorities for permission to cut prices in line with those of the violators of the code. In other words, the market was controlled by the so-called "chiseler."

We do not definitely set up a method of production control in the bill, but we recognize its importance by instructing the Commission to study methods for such control and to report its findings and conclusions to the next Congress.

We now have before us, after months of constant work, study, and revision, a bill which I believe meets the present situation and lays the groundwork for permanent stabilization of the bituminous-coal industry.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Concluding, let me say that, to my mind, the problem of bituminous coal narrows down to these simple propositions:

To safeguard the country's future supply of fuel; to insure the economic and civic welfare of millions of our citizens; and to establish on a sound basis an industry that is vital to the whole people, some form of regulation by the Congress is imperative.

The N. R. A., though temporarily beneficial to the industry, failed to give permanent relief. For that reason we cannot consider voluntary code control as a solution of the problem.

There remains, then, the only alternative: To regulate the industry fully through public agencies for the welfare of the Nation.

It is that or chaos.

During the delivery of Mr. GUFFEY's speech the following debate occurred:

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. GUFFEY. I do.

Mr. BAILEY. I have listened with great interest to what the Senator is having to say. He mentioned the matter of prices. I have been rather concerned to find, as definitely as possible just what is in contemplation with respect to prices to the consumer of bituminous coal. How much is it proposed to raise the price per ton?

Mr. GUFFEY. The maximum increase that will take place under this bill is 2¾ cents a ton.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield for a question.

Mr. DIETERICH. I am much interested in what the Senator from Pennsylvania says to the effect that our first concern should be conservation. I will ask him if it is not a fact that the measure now pending before the Senate has nothing to do with conservation; that the conservation provisions which were in the former bill have been eliminated?

Mr. GUFFEY. A study is to be made under the pending bill.

Mr. DIETERICH. There is no plan provided looking to conservation?

Mr. GUFFEY. Oh, yes, there is; a study is to be made in an effort to find a means of conserving 20 percent, which is now wasted. The commission to be set up will be expected to establish rules to prevent the waste of that 20 percent.

Mr. DIETERICH. The Senator does not understand my question.

Mr. GUFFEY. Yes; I understand the Senator's question.

Mr. DIETERICH. There is no plan provided in the pending bill as to what should be done along the line of conserving the coal, except that the Commission is to make an investigation?

Mr. GUFFEY. That is correct. We eliminated the $300,000,000 provision found in the original bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. On the point of the price, as I understood the Senator, he stated that the price would be increased by 2½ percent. Is that correct?

Mr. GUFFEY. Two and three-quarters percent above the code price.

Mr. BAILEY. Is that all the consumer would be required to pay extra?

Mr. GUFFEY. That is all, if the code price were established.

Mr. BAILEY. One of the objects of the bill is to increase the wages of the coal miners. Is not that true?

Mr. GUFFEY. No; the present wage scale will continue.

Mr. BAILEY. There is no intention of providing any increase?

Mr. GUFFEY. That would be a matter of negotiation between the mine owners and the workers.

Mr. BAILEY. I had been under the impression that there was an effort here to relieve the very bad conditions with respect to the wages of the miners. Now the Senator says that that is not the intention of the bill; that the intention is not to help the miners by increasing their wages.

Mr. GUFFEY. The same wage scale would be used. Wages will depend entirely on the amount of production and the number of days of work the miners can be given. They were profitably employed during the days of the N. R. A.

Mr. BAILEY. We can have a great deal of argument, and then we can have a great deal of information. It all depends on what we are driving at. Will the bill increase the wages of the miners, or will it not?

Mr. GUFFEY. The present wage will be continued under the proposed plan.

Mr. BAILEY. So the Senator's answer is that it will not increase the wages?

Mr. GUFFEY. We hope it will increase the amount of employment for the miners in the respective districts. In some districts it will increase the wages very materially. It will stop cutthroat competition, such as there is in Logan County, W. Va., and Harlan County, Ky., where all civil rights have been taken away from the miners and workers.

Mr. BAILEY. As to the matter of the civil rights, of course I will defend the civil rights. But if I am to vote for the bill, the prospect of increasing the wages would be an inducement. The Senator tells me, however, that there is no prospect of that. The Senator is the sponsor for the bill. Let us get the facts.

Mr. GUFFEY. I said that under the present scale the increase would be 2¾ percent. The wage agreements are to be negotiated through collective bargaining between the mine owners and the mine workers. What they will do I do not know. I will not predict as to that.

Mr. BAILEY. There is no intention, though, of increasing the wages of the miners above the present scale; that is, the pay they are now receiving?

Mr. GUFFEY. I cannot say that. I cannot answer that question. That is a matter of bargaining.

Mr. BAILEY. Is that a part of the purpose of the bill?

Mr. GUFFEY. Collective bargaining?

Mr. BAILEY. No; an increase in the wages of the miners?

Mr. GUFFEY. I hope that the result of the bill will be to raise the standard of living and the incomes of the miners engaged in the industry.

Mr. BAILEY. That would increase their wages.

Mr. GUFFEY. Yes.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me call the Senator's attention to the fact that he said it would increase the cost of coal by 2½ or 2¾ percent. Is that correct?

Mr. GUFFEY. That is correct, under the present scale.

Mr. BAILEY. Three hundred and fifty-eight million tons of coal are mined and sold in the United States. That appears from the report on the bill.

Mr. GUFFEY. That is correct.

Mr. BAILEY. Two and a half percent of that is nine million. Is that all that is intended to be divided among the miners?

Mr. GUFFEY. That goes to the Government.

Mr. BAILEY. That is just the expense of operating, is it not?

Mr. GUFFEY. No; the maximum expense, as estimated under the old Labor Board, was about $1,700,000. The balance goes into the Public Treasury; that is the revenue.

Mr. BAILEY. I am interested in knowing what the miners will get under the Senator's statement. I want to know what the miners will get. Is the intention back of the bill to increase his wages, or is it not?

Mr. GUFFEY. I hope it will; but that is a matter of negotiation between the mine owner and the worker.

Mr. BAILEY. Let us come right down to the point. Assume that it will. By how much will that increase the price of a ton of coal to the consumer? That is what I am interested in.

Mr. GUFFEY. If wages were increased 10 percent, the increase would be about 6½ cents per ton.

Mr. BAILEY. That would be just 10 percent of the daily wage of the miner. What is that?

Mr. GUFFEY. It depends on the district. There are thirty some districts in the country. It depends on the vein and the district.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to me?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, let me inform the Senator from North Carolina that the record of the hearings held by the Senate committee shows that the average compensation of a coal miner in the United States is now less than $57 a month.

Mr. BAILEY. Then it is certainly intended to give him an increase of more than 10 percent.

Mr. NEELY. It is hoped that this bill will prevent reductions in the present inadequate wages of the miners; and stabilize the mining industry so that the miners, the operators, and the public will all enjoy increased prosperity. Since the National Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional many wage reductions and many increases in hours of service have been effected. If this bill is not passed, the wage-slashing practice may be expected to extend into every bituminous-coal mining region in the country.

Mr. BAILEY. Since the Senator has undertaken to clear the matter I am very much obliged to him, and I do not wish to press him further. I am looking for information. It is not in view that we are going by this legislation to undertake to increase the wages of the miners who are receiving only $57 a month, by the small sum of $5.70 a month. We know we do not have that in mind. Do we not really intend to increase the wages of the miners by at least 50 percent per ton, which would give them only $75 a month?

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, that statement is ridiculous and absurd. To say we are endeavoring to increase the wages 50 percent per ton would be absurd. We do hope to increase the earning power by stabilizing the industry, and increase the consumption of coal, if possible.

Mr. BAILEY. I desired to get at what the miner was going to get out of this in the first instance. I should like to have a frank statement. We do not intend to continue the system under which he gets $57 a month. Now what do we intend? Do we intend that he shall get $75 a month, $80 a month, or $100 a month?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. The intention of the bill, Mr. President, is not greatly to increase the wages by increasing the price of a ton of coal. The purpose is to stabilize the coal industry so that the miner who is now employed 2 days a week will be employed 4 or 5 days a week. The object is to increase wages not by raising the price of a ton of coal, but by destroying the cutthroat competition which has made bankrupts of 90 percent of the coal operators and beggars of untold thousands of miners. The miner's wages will obviously be doubled if his employment is increased from 2 to 4 days a week.

Mr. BAILEY. Let us assume that state of facts. The miners are working now 2 days a week and producing a certain number of tons a day.

Mr. NEELY. Between 2 or 3 days a week on the average.

Mr. BAILEY. If they work 4 days a week, I suppose they produce twice as many tons as they do if they work 2 days a week?

Mr. NEELY. If they work 4 days a week they would produce approximately twice as many tons of coal as they produce now.

Mr. BAILEY. Then in order that they shall receive their reward they will have to be double the present consumption of coal.

Mr. NEELY. Yes.

Mr. BAILEY. Is there any provision in this bill whereby the consumption of coal may be increased in America?

Mr. NEELY. Yes; because any legislation which increases the prosperity of any of the great basic industries of the United States increases the prosperity of all the people, and consequently their capacity to consume the necessaries of life.

Mr. BAILEY. The theory is that by way of increasing the wages of the miners they are made more prosperous, and they will buy more groceries, and the grocery-store man will buy more coal? Is that the theory of the bill?

Mr. NEELY. In my opinion, the Senator from North Carolina now correctly indicates the philosophy of the legislation.

Mr. BAILEY. That is the philosophy of the legislation. Then we are out on a limb, are we not?

Mr. NEELY. No; we are on solid ground.

Mr. BAILEY. How do we increase the consumption of any article by way of increasing its price? I always thought we increased consumption by decreasing price. Is it the theory that we can increase prices and then expect an increase of consumption in a country in which 20,000,000 men are not able to buy anything without Government aid, and in a country in which the tax charged is rising every time the Congress meets? Those are practical questions.

Mr. NEELY. The Senator is usually very practical and instructive, but his experience during the last 5 years should have taught him that the consumption of foods in this country depends not upon their cheapness but upon the prosperity of those who desire them. The fact of the matter is that, as a rule, we consume most when both wages and commodity prices are high. For example, in 1930 and 1931, when all the products of the farm were on the bargain counter, when wheat in Nebraska was 23 cents a bushel, the American people consumed less wheat than they consume now when wheat is more than a dollar a bushel, because the people now have money with which to buy.

Mr. BAILEY. Let the Senator at this point turn his argument to hogs, the price of which has gone up, and tell us whether the consumption of hogs is increasing or decreasing. Then we shall have the complete picture.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, on the subject of hogs the Senator from North Carolina is a better authority than the Senator from West Virginia. But in the matter of coal the Senator from West Virginia makes no such admission.

Mr. BAILEY. I would not think of matching my authority with the authority of the Senator from West Virginia on the question of hogs or of coal either. I simply desire to sit, as Paul did, at the feet of Gamaliel and try to learn some facts; that is all. I am asking the Senator simply one fact: If the increase in the price of hogs has not reached the point where there is a consumer's strike on?

Mr. NEELY. If the Senator from North Carolina will be as amiable and sincere as the Apostle Paul, sitting at the feet of Gamaliel, he will not find it difficult to support the Guffey coal bill. But to revert to hogs, we have deliberately made them scarce, and have thus increased the price of pork. But there is no such thing as a scarcity of coal. One great trouble with the coal industry has been that ever since the World War our productive capacity has been 40 percent greater than our power to consume. There is no sound basis for a comparison between hogs and coal in this case.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I made no comparison between hogs and coal. I made an analogy as between hogs and wheat in order that the argument may have presented both those phases of the question. The Senator has totally misapprehended my statement. I should like to say something about the Apostle Paul. I do not see just where he comes into this situation. I have heard of his repute as the great Apostle and the transformer of a great religion. I have heard many things said about his literary capacity, and he did have a great literary capacity. It was he who said: Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels "——

Mr. NEELY. "And of angels." Please do not omit the second preposition. It would grate upon, if not jar, my eardrums for the distinguished Senator to misquote the Scriptures.

Mr. BAILEY Mr. President, I would not jar the Senator's ears for anything on earth, because I feel if I did it might destroy some remnants there which—well, I will say no further.

Mr. NEELY. The Senator is urged to refrain from withholding the expression of a single relevant thought, however uncomplimentary it may be to me.

Mr. BAILEY. But I never before heard the Apostle Paul put forward as an example of amiability. I have made a discovery this morning. I knew he was a great theologian and a great orator and a great logician, but I never before heard the example of Paul held up as being one of amiability.

Mr. NEELY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. NEELY. Does the Senator from North Carolina think that he could have been less than amiable who said:

> And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will suspend until we have order in the Chamber.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask who has the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] had the floor, and still has the floor theoretically.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I shall now resume my remarks.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Drummond, in a remarkable sermon, translates "charity" as "love", and using "love" as a substitute for "charity", the language of Paul would be:

> Though I give my body to be burned and have not love——

Mr. BAILEY. That is, to be burned by coal, I take it.

Mr. NEELY. That is one more irrelevancy. Does the Senator from North Carolina think that anyone who had such love for humanity as the great Apostle manifests in the 13th chapter of First Corinthians could be destitute of amiability?

Mr. BAILEY. I would not call that amiability. I think that was a very heroic attitude.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

Mr. GUFFEY. I shall now resume my discussion, and I decline to yield further until I finish my remarks.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. GUFFEY. No; I must decline to yield at this moment.

After the conclusion of Mr. GUFFEY's speech,

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On August 19, 1935:

S. 208. An act for the relief of the Consolidated Ashcroft Hancock Co., Inc., Bridgeport, Conn.;

S. 447. An act conferring jurisdiction on the United States District Court for the District of Oregon to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the suit in equity of Rakha Singh Gherwal against the United States;

S. 1347. An act for the relief of Robert J. Smith, alias William McClocklin;

S. 1577. An act for the relief of Skelton Mack McCray;

S. 1640. An act for the relief of Dan Meehan;

S. 2076. An act for the relief of Domenico Politano;

S. 2140. An act for the relief of certain purchasers of lands in the borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey;

S. 2160. An act for the relief of the George C. Mansfield Co. and George D. Mansfield;

S. 2168. An act for the relief of the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania;

S. 2225. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Western Union Telegraph Co.;

S. 2247. An act directing the conveyance of certain lands to the regents of the University of New Mexico;

S. 2388. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to cancel patent in fee issued to Victoria Arconge;

S. 2577. An act to eliminate the requirement of cultivation in connection with certain homestead entries;

S. 2635. An act for the relief of Sudden & Christenson, Inc., John A. Hooper, Emil T. Kruse, Edward Kruse, Gilbert Loken, and G. W. McNear, Inc., or their successors in interest; and

S. 2751. An act for the relief of Walter C. Price and Joseph C. Le Sage.

On August 20, 1935:

S. 280. An act for the relief of Hazel B. Lowe, Tess H. Johnston, and Esther L. Teckmeyer;

S. 490. An act for the relief of F. T. Wade, M. L. Dearing, E. D. Wagner, and G. M. Judd;

S. 540. An act for the relief of Fred Luscher;

S. 658. An act for the relief of K. W. Boring;

S. 1045. An act for the relief of A. Cyril Crilley;

S. 1046. An act for the relief of E. Jeanmonod;

S. 1070. An act for the relief of William A. Thompson;

S. 1214. An act for the relief of Oliver B. Huston, Anne Huston, Jane Huston, and Harriet Huston;

S. 1326. An act for the relief of Robert A. Dunham;

S. 1409. An act for the relief of the General Baking Co.;

S. 2374. An act for the relief of Elliott H. Tasso and Emma Tasso;

S. 2393. An act for the relief of the widow of Ray Sutton;

S. 2426. An act to provide for the creation of a memorial park at Tampa, in the State of Florida, to be known as "The Spanish War Memorial Park", and for other purposes;

S. 2695. An act to add certain lands to the Medicine Bow National Forest, Wyo.; and

S. 3058. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and for other purposes.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution of the Senate, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 2215. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended; and

S. J. Res. 65. Joint resolution to extend the period of suspension of the limitation governing the filing of suit under section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate, each with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 1374. An act authorizing the survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and the Territory of Alaska; and

S. 2888. An act to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 7974. An act to withdraw and restore to their previous status under the control of the Territory of Hawaii certain Hawaiian homes lands now in use as an airplane landing field;

H. R. 8598. An act to provide for the inspection and regulation of vessels engaged in the transportation of inflammable, explosive, and like dangerous cargoes in navigable waters of the United States;

H. R. 8977. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a site for the erection of a post-office building at Columbus, Miss.;

H. R. 9116. An act to extend the provisions of veterans' laws and regulations to persons who served in Russia during the World War, and their dependents; and

H. J. Res. 286. Joint resolution for the relief of Kam N. Kathju.

COMMERCE IN MUNITIONS, ETC., IN TIME OF WAR

Mr. DIETERICH obtained the floor.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I thank the Senator for his courtesy.

Yesterday on behalf of the Foreign Relations Committee I reported Senate Joint Resolution 173 intended as a substitute for all the neutrality resolutions and bills which have been referred to the Foreign Relations Committee. With the consent of the Senator from Illinois, I desire to make a very brief statement.

A subcommittee of the Senate was appointed about 30 days ago to confer with a committee of the State Department which has been studying these questions for about a year. We had a number of meetings jointly with that committee of the State Department. I feel that I have a right to say that the State Department is seriously and sincerely desirous of having legislation dealing with neutrality, as were the members of the subcommittee.

For the past week we have had meetings every day. Yesterday at 11 o'clock the full committee, with the exception of the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and, I think, one other Senator, voted to report the joint resolution. That announcement was also made yesterday afternoon.

Mr. President, I feel that if unanimous consent should be given temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business and those who favor the joint resolution so intensely would desist from any further speeches, we might get a vote in a very few minutes on it. If the debate should be prolonged, under the rule of the Senate any Senator could call for the regular order at any time, and then the Senate would recur to the consideration of the unfinished business.

In view of that statement, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 173.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield for that purpose?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I be pardoned to say that while I shall not object to the request for appropriate consent as suggested by the able Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, I do not wish it understood that my silence in this regard or my acquiescence in the request at all obligates me to support the measure. I am opposed to the measure, but I am not against the request of the able chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent to lay aside temporarily the unfinished business and proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 173. Is there objection?

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, may we not have the joint resolution reported by title?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be reported by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 173) providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to belligerent countries; the prohibition of the transportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent states; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing arms, ammunition, or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DIETERICH. I understand the parliamentary situation to be that when consideration of the joint resolution shall have been completed, I shall be entitled to the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the present occupant of the chair.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, personally I have no objection to the proposal made by the Senator from Nevada, but I think there should be a larger attendance; and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrnes	Gibson	Long
Ashurst	Capper	Glass	McAdoo
Austin	Caraway	Gore	McCarran
Bachman	Chavez	Guffey	McGill
Bailey	Clark	Hale	McKellar
Bankhead	Connally	Harrison	McNary
Barbour	Copeland	Hastings	Maloney
Barkley	Costigan	Hatch	Metcalf
Black	Davis	Hayden	Minton
Bone	Dieterich	Holt	Moore
Borah	Donahey	Johnson	Murphy
Brown	Duffy	King	Murray
Bulkley	Fletcher	La Follette	Neely
Bulow	Frazier	Lewis	Norbeck
Burke	George	Logan	Norris
Byrd	Gerry	Lonergan	Nye

O'Mahoney	Schall	Thomas, Utah	Wagner
Overton	Schwellenbach	Townsend	Walsh
Pittman	Sheppard	Trammell	Wheeler
Radcliffe	Shipstead	Truman	White
Reynolds	Smith	Tydings
Robinson	Steiwer	Vandenberg
Russell	Thomas, Okla.	Van Nuys

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 173. Is there objection?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I give notice that if, after unanimous consent shall have been given, what appears to be a prolonged debate shall ensue, I will feel constrained to call for the regular order.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I did not quite understand the statement of the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia stated that if the joint resolution should seem likely to lead to prolonged debate he would call for the regular order. The Chair understands that that is the rule, anyway.

Mr. BORAH. I ask the Senator from West Virginia to restate his position.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, my statement was to the effect that if granting the request of the Senator from Nevada shall result in prolonged debate on the joint resolution—although I intend to vote for the joint resolution and I am enthusiastically in favor of it—I shall nevertheless feel constrained to call for the regular order, because I am convinced that if the Guffey coal bill shall not be passed before the adjournment of the present session of Congress there will be a Nation-wide coal strike and such distress in the coal fields as we have never before had.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TYDINGS. If the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Nevada shall be granted, may the Senator from West Virginia or any Senator then set aside the consideration of the joint resolution when he wishes to do so?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the parliamentary clerk that at any time during the proceedings any Senator may call for the regular order.

Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 173) providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to belligerent countries; the prohibition of the transportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent states; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing arms, ammunition, or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war, which had been reported as an original joint resolution from the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the joint resolution be dispensed with, because it was read in full to the Senate yesterday, and appears in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The joint resolution is as follows:

Resolved, etc., That upon the outbreak or during the progress of war between, or among, two or more foreign states, the President shall proclaim such fact, and it shall thereafter be unlawful to export arms, ammunition, or implements of war from any place in the United States, or possessions of the United States, to any port of such belligerent states, or to any neutral port for transshipment to, or for the use of, a belligerent country.

The President, by proclamation, shall definitely enumerate the arms, ammunition, or implements of war the export of which is prohibited by this act.

The President may, from time to time, by proclamation, extend such embargo upon the export of arms, ammunition, or implements of war to other states as and when they may become involved in such war.

Whoever, in violation of any of the provisions of this section, shall export, or attempt to export, or cause to be exported, arms, ammunition, or implements of war from the United States, or any of its possessions, shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both, and the property, vessel, or vehicle containing the same shall be subject to the provisions of sections 1 to 8, inclusive, title 6, chapter 30, of the act approved June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 223–225; U. S. C., title 22, secs. 238–245).

In the case of the forfeiture of any arms, ammunition, or implements of war by reason of a violation of this act, no public or private sale shall be required; but such arms, ammunition, or implements of war shall be delivered to the Secretary of War for such use or disposal thereof as shall be approved by the President of the United States.

When in the judgment of the President the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist he shall revoke the same and the provisions hereof shall thereupon cease to apply.

SEC. 2. That for the purposes of this act—

(a) The term "Board" means the National Munitions Control Board, which is hereby established to carry out the provisions of this act. The Board shall consist of the Secretary of State, who shall be chairman and executive officer of the Board; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Secretary of War; the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of Commerce; the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate; and the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, or some member of each committee whom the chairman of the respective committees may designate. Except as otherwise provided in this act, or by other law, the administration of this act is vested in the Department of State;

(b) The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense, includes the several States and Territories, the insular possessions of the United States (including the Philippine Islands), the Canal Zone, and the District of Columbia;

(c) The term "person" includes a partnership, company, association, or corporation, as well as a natural person.

Within 90 days after the effective date of this act, or upon first engaging in business, every person who engages in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing any of the arms, ammunition, and implements of war referred to in this act, whether as an exporter, importer, manufacturer, or dealer, shall register with the Secretary of State his name, or business name, principal place of business, and places of business in the United States, and a list of the arms, ammunition, and implements of war which he manufactures, imports, or exports.

Every person required to register under this section shall notify the Secretary of State of any change in the arms, ammunition, and implements of war which he exports, imports, or manufactures; and upon such notification the Secretary of State shall issue to such person an amended certificate of registration, free of charge, which shall remain valid until the date of expiration of the original certificate. Every person required to register under the provisions of this section shall pay a registration fee of $500, and upon receipt of such fee the Secretary of State shall issue a registration certificate valid for 5 years, which shall be renewable for further periods of 5 years upon the payment of each renewal of a fee of $500.

It shall be unlawful for any person to export, or attempt to export, from the United States any of the arms, ammunition, or implements of war referred to in this act to any other country or to import, or attempt to import, to the United States from any other country any of the arms, ammunition, or implements of war referred to in this act without first having obtained a license therefor.

Licenses shall be issued to persons who have registered as provided for, except in cases of export or import licenses where exportation of arms, ammunition, or implements of war would be in violation of this act or any other law of the United States, or of a treaty to which the United States is a party, in which cases such licenses shall not be issued.

The Board shall be called by the chairman and shall hold at least one meeting a year.

No purchase of arms, ammunition, and implements of war shall be made on behalf of the United States by any officer, executive department, or independent establishment of the Government from any person who shall have failed to register under the provisions of this act.

The Board shall make an annual report to Congress, copies of which shall be distributed as are other reports transmitted to Congress. Such report shall contain such information and data collected by the Board as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the control of trade in arms, ammunition, and implements of war. It shall include a list of all persons required to register under the provisions of this act, and full information concerning the licenses issued hereunder.

The Secretary of State shall promulgate such rules and regulations with regard to the enforcement of this section as he may deem necessary to carry out its provisions.

SEC. 3. Whenever the President shall issue the proclamation provided for in section 1 of this act, thereafter it shall be unlawful for any American vessel to carry any arms, ammunition, or implements of war to any port of the belligerent countries named in such proclamation as being at war, or to any neutral port for transshipment to, or for the use of, a belligerent country.

Whoever, in violation of the provisions of this section, shall take, attempt to take, or shall authorize, hire, or solicit another to take any such vessel carrying such cargo out of port or from the jurisdiction of the United States shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both; and, in addition, such vessel, her tackle, apparel, furniture, equipment, and the arms, ammunition, and implements of war on board shall be forfeited to the United States.

When the President finds the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation, and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply.

SEC. 4. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall have cause to believe that any vessel, domestic or foreign, whether requiring clearance or not, is about to carry out of a port of the United States, or its possession, men or fuel, arms, ammunition, implements of war, or other supplies to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a foreign belligerent nation, but the evidence is not deemed sufficient to justify forbidding the departure of the vessel as provided for by section 1, title V, chapter 30, of the act approved June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. —; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 31), and if, in the President's judgment, such action will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign nations, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to require the owner, master, or person in command thereof, before departing from a port of the United States, or any of its possessions, for a foreign port, to give a bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in such amount as he shall deem proper, conditioned that the vessel will not deliver the men, or the cargo, or any part thereof, to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent nation; and, if the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall find that a vessel, domestic or foreign, in a port of the United States, or one of its possessions, has previously cleared from such port during such war and delivered its cargo or any part thereof to a warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent nation, he may prohibit the departure of such vessel during the duration of the war.

SEC. 5. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States, or of its possessions, by the submarines of a foreign nation will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign nations, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall thereafter be unlawful for any such submarine to enter a port or the territorial waters of the United States or any of its possessions, or to depart therefrom, except under such conditions and subject to such limitations as the President may prescribe. When, in his judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply.

SEC. 6. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that the maintenance of peace between the United States and foreign nations, or the protection of the lives of citizens of the United States, or the protection of the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or the security of the United States requires that the American citizens should refrain from traveling as passengers on the vessels of any belligerent nation, he shall so proclaim, and thereafter no citizen of the United States shall travel on any vessel of any belligerent nation except at his own risk, unless in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President shall prescribe: Provided, however, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to a citizen traveling on the vessel of a belligerent whose voyage was begun in advance of the date of the President's proclamation, and who had no opportunity to discontinue his voyage after that date: And provided further, That they shall not apply under 90 days after the date of the President's proclamation to a citizen returning from a foreign country to the United States or to any of its possessions. When, in the President's judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply.

SEC. 7. In every case of the violation of any of the provisions of this act where a specific penalty is not herein provided, such violator or violators, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. 8. If any of the provisions of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 9. The sum of $20,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by the Secretary of State in administering this act.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I tender a resolution which I ask to have read and remain on the table, subject to the debate as it proceeds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 194) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That there be no further legislation in the present session of the Congress upon the subject contained in the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 173) providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to belligerent countries; the prohibition of the transportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent states; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing arms, ammunition, or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war, and that the whole subject of the measure to be left to the President, to be acted upon under appropriate Executive orders as conditions and circumstances arise and shall call for.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield for a question?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is the Senator proposing the resolution which has just been read as a substitute for the joint resolution of the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. LEWIS. I am, sir. Such is the proposal I shall make later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois offers the resolution which has just been read as a substitute for the joint resolution reported by the committee.

Mr. PITTMAN. Question!

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is this resolution offered as a substitute?

Mr. LEWIS. I answer "yes"; it is offered as a substitute for the joint resolution.

Mr. BORAH. The effect of the resolution is to postpone further legislation?

Mr. LEWIS. For this session, remitting the whole subject to the President for the utilization of Executive orders on the subject if it shall become necessary.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, would not that be the effect if we should vote down the proposal which is before the Senate?

Mr. LEWIS. Whatever may be the effect, I tender the resolution as expressing my purpose.

Mr. LONG (and other Senators). Vote!

Mr. LEWIS. I do not ask for a vote at this time. Such would not be consistent with my request that the resolution lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment, in the nature of a substitute, offered by the Senator from Illinois.

Several Senators called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I do not ask for a vote at this time. I ask that the resolution remain on the table. Later, as the debate proceeds, I shall possibly——

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask, then, for a vote on the joint resolution.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think it is eminently fair that some one conversant with the proposed legislation should make a statement about it. I was willing to permit discussion of the joint resolution without having it read; but certainly we should have some explanation of the measure.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I made a brief statement explanatory of the joint resolution yesterday, when I presented it. I also had the joint resolution published in the RECORD. However, in about 10 minutes I will describe its meaning.

The first provision of the joint resolution is as follows:

That upon the outbreak or during the progress of war between, or among, two or more foreign states, the President shall proclaim such fact, and it shall thereafter be unlawful to export arms, ammunition, or implements of war from any place in the United States, or possessions of the United States, to any port of such belligerent states, or to any neutral port for transshipment to, or for the use of, a belligerent country.

That provision is mandatory, and is to apply to all the warring countries when the President shall proclaim the existence of war. The other provisions of section 1 are designed to implement the first provision. They provide a penalty of a fine not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both, and the confiscation of the property.

The second provision of the joint resolution is with regard to the licensing of manufacturers, exporters, and importers of arms, ammunition, or implements of war. They must register, and a license will be given to them when they register, except that a license will not be given to them in contravention of the provision I have just read, or any other law or treaty of the United States. That is the registration provision. It was originally carried in a bill called the "Pope bill", which is on the calendar. We have greatly abbreviated the registration bill, because that was a separate measure requiring rules and regulations and separate punishment, separate fines, and so on. Now it is all being carried in one measure, so we abbreviated it.

The third provision of the joint resolution is section 4, which is as follows:

Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall have cause to believe that any vessel, domestic or foreign, whether requiring clearance or not, is about to carry out of a port of the United States, or its possessions, men or fuel, arms, ammunition, implements of war, or other supplies to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a foreign belligerent nation, but the evidence is not deemed sufficient to justify forbidding the departure of the vessel as provided for by section 1, title V, chapter 30, of the act approved June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. —; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 31), and if, in the President's judgment, such action will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign nations, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to require the owner, master, or person in command thereof, before departing from a port of the United States, or any of its possessions, for a foreign port, to give a bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in such amount as he shall deem proper, conditioned that the vessel will not deliver the men, or the cargo, or any part thereof, to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent nation; and, if the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall find that a vessel, domestic or foreign, in a port of the United States, or one of its possessions, has previously cleared from such port during such war and delivered its cargo or any part thereof to a warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent nation, he may prohibit the departure of such vessel during the duration of the war.

That is the existing law, with the exception that where the President has not the necessary evidence to justify forbidding departure of a vessel, but has reason to believe it is about to violate our neutrality, he may require a bond.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator whether the articles mentioned—implements of war, and so forth—include such commodities as wheat, corn, cotton, meat, and other food products?

Mr. PITTMAN. In my opinion, they do not; nor do I believe they do in the opinion of the committee, for the reason that today the definition of arms, ammunition, and implements of war is very generally recognized in international law. As a matter of fact, at this very session the Senate ratified a treaty or convention dealing with arms and implements of war, in which they were categorically described; so I think there is no fear of that.

Section 5 deals with submarines. It merely provides that in time of war submarines of belligerent countries may have special regulations imposed on them in addition to the provisions of the law now in existence. For instance, submarines may be required to notify the Navy Department when they are coming into a port, and they may be required to stay on the surface and depart on the surface. That was found necessary, also.

Section 6 is intended to restrain citizens of the United States from traveling on vessels of belligerent countries. It provides, in effect, that if they travel on the ship of a belligerent country after the proclamation of the President that war exists between certain countries, they travel at their own risk. It expressly provides, however, that those who are on ships of belligerent countries when war is declared to exist by the proclamation, and are traveling to ports, will naturally be allowed to go to those ports.

It also provides that on the outbreak of war between two or more foreign states, if the President declares such states to be at war, then 90 days will be given to any citizen to take any ship he desires to take, belligerent or neutral, so that he may get out of the war zone and return home.

These are the provisions of the joint resolution, mandatory provisions against the export of arms and munitions to any warring country; regulations with regard to the registration of those engaged in the manufacture, export, or import of arms. Mandatory license shall be granted to them except to make exports contrary to the proposed act, or any other law or treaty of the United States. There is a provision restraining citizens from traveling on vessels of belligerent countries. There is a provision regulating our ships carrying munitions of war to or for belligerent countries during the period of the war, and also a provision, as I have stated, restraining our citizens from traveling on ships of belligerent countries.

Mr. President, I have stated the substance of the entire joint resolution. I say frankly that the committee did not deal with the question of credits during war, although a joint resolution on behalf of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], and others, did deal with that question and was referred to our committee.

After long conferences and many meetings with the committee of the office of the Secretary of State, including the Secretary himself, the Under Secretary, Mr. Moore, the Assistant Secretary, and their experts, our subcommittee came to the unanimous conclusion that these provisions were so protective in themselves that there would be little reason for a country wishing to borrow money from the United States, and there were other reasons why they would not; that the whole question of existing debts owing to the United States by foreign countries under the legislation which has already been enacted with regard to those countries, which have not paid their debts, reached the large countries, and the committee were unanimously of the opinion that the subject was too intricate, too involved, for us to attempt to pass a measure dealing with it at this session of the Congress.

I hope we may have a vote on the joint resolution as soon as possible.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, will not the Senator explain section 5?

Mr. PITTMAN. Section 5 reads:

SEC. 5. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States, or of its possessions, by the submarines of a foreign nation will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign nations, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall thereafter be unlawful for any such submarine to enter a port or the territorial waters of the United States or any of its possessions, or to depart therefrom, except under such conditions and subject to such limitations as the President may prescribe. When, in his judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply.

We have found that submarines may come into a port without knowledge, stay as long as they choose without knowledge, go outside of our territorial waters, and possibly engage in war right beyond our borders, and it is undoubtedly necessary to place additional restrictions on them, that is, to put them in the same position in which surface ships are placed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield to me?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. When it becomes known that the submarines of nations at war are operating from a base within the territorial waters of the United States, or from a port in the United States, that fact very seriously endangers the peace of the United States.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I am not inclined to oppose the joint resolution, but it occurred to me that under the terms of international law warships of foreign countries have a right, in time of war, to come within our borders, and to stay 24 hours, to recoal, to refuel, to reprovision, and then leave. I understand we have agreed to such a regulation.

Mr. PITTMAN. But that does not limit us.

Mr. HALE. This provision would take us out from that agreement, would it not?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think any reasonable regulation in harmony with that would be objectionable, because these regulations were all originally adopted with reference to surface ships. Now there is a new instrument, namely, the submarine. It can travel both under the water and on the water. I think it is entirely reasonable to require them to travel on the surface of the water.

Mr. HALE. Might there not be the contention that we were not allowing them a privilege which other ships of war had?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think so, nor do I think we would ever object to having a foreign country say to us, "Your submarines must travel on the surface when in our waters."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield to me?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. Take the illustration the Senator from Nevada has given. So long as a warship remains upon the surface its presence is known, and all warships other than submarines remain on the surface. It would be a very wholesome restriction to require a submarine of a belligerent entering a port of the United States, the United States being neutral, to make its movements entirely upon the surface, as suggested by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. HALE. But we could go further, under this measure, and refuse them the right to come within the borders of the United States; and could not that be considered as an act of war?

Mr. PITTMAN. There is a statute now on the books, to which we refer in the pending joint resolution. We merely modify the statute by requiring a bond in certain cases.

The plain intent is that the President may in time of war place other limitations upon the submarines of a belligerent; that is, he may do so if he finds it to be necessary in order to preserve our neutrality and our peace. I cannot conceive of anything on earth of that kind or character that could be considered an unneutral act.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, it seems to me perfectly clear that all that is intended and all that is done by the section under discussion is the placing of submarines under the same regulations under which other vessels of a belligerent power are placed in time of war. We now have on the books a statute which regulates their use of our ports in time of war and gives power to carry out and to effectuate that policy, but, obviously, a vessel which operates under the surface can violate the existing statute with regard to surface vessels of a belligerent power without our being aware of it. The only intent is to meet that situation; and I think all this section does is to place the submarine in the same category and under the same regulations, for the purpose of using our ports in time of war, in which all other naval arms or vessels of a belligerent power are placed.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada a question in regard to section 5.

Section 5 provides that the President may make proclamation, after which it shall be unlawful for a submarine to enter a port or the territorial waters of the United States, or any of its possessions, or to depart therefrom, except under certain conditions specified. I understand that present international usage, which the Senator has just been discussing, is that any war vessel may come into a port for about 24 hours in order to refuel, and then leave.

It seems to me this section raises another question. If a nation is at war and the President issues a proclamation regulating how that nation's submarines may come into United States ports, the American regulation differing from that of other nations, would not that raise a very serious question, and might it not involve us in war?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think so at all. I think it is a common-sense question. We have applying to surface ships a law which was enacted when there were nothing but surface ships, and which allowed them to come into our ports and remain for 24 hours for the purpose of refueling and obtaining provisions. That applies today to submarines, as well as to any other kind of craft. But when we merely impose a requirement that they shall travel on the surface, I think that any nation which would object to that would be captious.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Rhode Island yield to me?

Mr. GERRY. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON. In my judgment, it would not be an unneutral act if the United States should see fit to prohibit submarines from entering into the territorial waters of the United States or into its ports, provided the prohibition extended to all belligerents. If it were made to apply to a single belligerent and not to apply to other belligerents, there might arise a claim that it constituted an unneutral policy or act. But the United States has the right to protect its neutrality, and in order to do so it may say to every nation at war, "Keep your warships out of our waters. Keep your armed forces out of our territory." Of course, if they do not observe the order, another question arises.

Mr. GERRY. The point I was raising was just what the Senator from Arkansas has brought out. Does this resolution apply to all nations or only to one or two?

Mr. ROBINSON. It applies to all belligerents.

Mr. GERRY. But the President could otherwise apply it?

Mr. ROBINSON. No; I think not. The special restrictions which section 5 contemplates may be directed at submarines, apply clearly, in my judgment, to all belligerents.

Mr. GERRY. Then the Senator thinks that if it applies to all, none can complain?

Mr. ROBINSON. If it applies to all, none can complain.

Mr. GERRY. Was not that question raised in connection with some of the blockading operations during the World War?

Mr. ROBINSON. Many questions may be raised, and in case of another war numerous questions heretofore not presented will be raised; but before applying the special restriction, the President must determine that it is calculated to preserve the security of the United States and the neutrality of the United States.

Mr. GERRY. And apply to all nations.

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; to all belligerents.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let me call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the restriction applies to all nations. The language in section 5 requires proclamation by the President when one or more foreign states engage in war. In section 5, line 21, the language is—

> And shall make proclamation thereof.

It further provides—

> It shall thereafter be unlawful for any submarine—

That language refers to a submarine of the belligerent powers coming under the declaration of the President's proclamation, so it must be universal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution is still before the Senate, and is open to amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am not going to detain the Senate by offering an amendment or by seeking to change the joint resolution, since there is little hope of success. But I wish to express an individual view with reference to one provision of the measure. That provision is found on page 9, section 6:

> SEC. 6. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that the maintenance of peace between the United States and foreign nations, or the protection of the lives of citizens of the United States, or the protection of the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or the security of the United States requires that the American citizens should refrain from traveling as passengers on the vessels of any belligerent nation, he shall so proclaim, and thereafter no citizen of the United States shall travel on any vessel of any belligerent nation except at his own risk.

Mr. President, I expressed the view in the committee, with which view the committee did not agree, that passing a resolution which went no farther than placing the risk on the citizen himself did not reach the real issue. I do not think that an American citizen should be permitted to travel at all upon a belligerent ship when we are a neutral. To say that he shall travel at his own risk only solves a part of the question. It is the Nation which is most vitally concerned, and no citizen should be permitted to place himself in a place of peril, all the evil consequences of which cannot be confined to the citizen.

If he ventures into the war zone, if he goes upon a belligerent ship, to a certain extent he involves, or may involve, his nation in case he is killed. The killing of a citizen is one of the things which contributes to a feeling of war psychology and a feeling of resentment. It ought not to be permitted to occur. In other words, Mr. President, it is not alone the citizen who is involved, but the entire nation. It is not only the citizen who is concerned, but the entire nation is concerned.

My contention was, and my contention now is, that the citizen ought to be prohibited from traveling upon belligerent ships. It is not sufficient to say that he travels at his own risk, because it to some extent may involve his nation, even if he is personally willing to assume the risk.

I, myself, should have much preferred, therefore, to see the resolution so worded as to prevent the traveling of our citizens upon belligerent ships, except under such circumstances as that of returning home or escaping from a war zone, when they might take any ship they could find. But for an American citizen to initiate a movement, for an American citizen to start from the United States and go to Ethiopia or to Italy, or a group of American citizens to go into the war zone, in my opinion, is a risk which they or he ought not to be permitted to take under any circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PITTMAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum by reason of the fact that the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH] has just stepped out of the Chamber and had the floor when I interrupted for the purpose of having the joint resolution considered.

Mr. ROBINSON. The junior Senator from Illinois had the floor.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; he had the floor. I see that the Senator from Illinois has now returned so I withdraw my suggestion of the absence of a quorum.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 173) was passed.

Mr. PITTMAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ROCKLAND-WESTCHESTER HUDSON RIVER BRIDGE, N. Y.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I wish to recur to the bill (S. 3030) granting the consent of the Congress to the Rockland-Westchester Hudson River Crossing Authority to construct a bridge. On page 13775 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of yesterday there appears a statement which I am sure was made through inadvertence and misunderstanding or mistake on the part of the senior Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND]. The Senator quotes me as saying that I withdrew my objection to the passage of Senate bill S. 3030. This, indeed, was not the case. I now ask therefore that the vote by which that bill was passed be reconsidered.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I certainly misunderstood the Senator yesterday, and what he has said this morning is in full accord with the understanding we now have. Therefore I interpose no objection whatever.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] asks unanimous consent that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered.

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the vote by which the bill was passed is reconsidered.

COLLECTION AND PUBLICATION OF TOBACCO STATISTICS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2215) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to collect and publish statistics of the quantity of leaf tobacco in all forms in the United States and Puerto Rico, owned by or in the possession of dealers, manufacturers, quasi-manufacturers, growers' cooperative associations, warehousemen, brokers, holders, or owners, other than the original growers of tobacco. The statistics shall show the quantity of tobacco in such detail as to types, groups of grades, and such other subdivisions as to quality, color, and/or grade for particular types, as the Secretary shall deem to be practical and necessary for the purposes of this act, shall be summarized as of January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year, and an annual report on tobacco statistics shall be issued: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall not be required to collect statistics of leaf tobacco from any manufacturer of tobacco who, in the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, according to the returns of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the record of the Treasurer of Puerto Rico, manufactured less than 35,000 pounds of tobacco, or from any manufacturer of cigars, who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, manufactured less than 185,000 cigars, or from any manufacturer of cigarettes who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding year, manufactured less than 750,000 cigarettes: And provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall omit the collection of statistics from any dealer, manufacturer, growers' cooperative association, warehouseman, broker, holder, or owner who does not own and/or have in stock, in the aggregate, 50,000 pounds or more of leaf tobacco on the date as of which the reports are made. For the purposes of this act, any tobacco which has deteriorated on account of age or other causes to the extent that it is not merchantable or is unsuitable for use in manufacturing tobacco products shall be classified with other nondescript tobacco and reported in the 'N' group of the type to which it belongs."

SEC. 2. Section 2 of said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture shall establish standards for the classification of leaf tobacco, and he is authorized to demonstrate such standards, to prepare and distribute samples thereof, and to make reasonable charges therefor. He shall specify the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades, which shall be included in the returns required by this act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall prepare appropriate blanks upon which the returns shall be made, shall, upon request, furnish copies to persons who are required by this act to make returns, and such returns shall show the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades and such other information as the Secretary may require."

SEC. 3. Section 5 of the said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have access to the tobacco records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and of the several collectors of internal revenue for the purpose of obtaining lists of the persons subject to this act and for the purpose of aiding the collection of the information herein required, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the several collectors of internal revenue shall cooperate with the Secretary of Agriculture in effectuating the provisions of this act."

SEC. 4. If any provision of this act, or the application of such provision to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the act and the application of such provisions to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid, shall not be affected thereby.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House with an amendment, on page 2, line 16, of the House engrossed amendment to strike out "shall" and insert "may."

The motion was agreed to.

STABILIZATION OF BITUMINOUS-COAL-MINING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9100) to stabilize the bituminous-coal-mining industry and promote its interstate commerce; to provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal; to levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a draw-back under certain conditions; to declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest; to conserve the bituminous coal resources of the United States; to provide for the general welfare, and for other purposes; and providing penalties.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President——

Mr. MURPHY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Logan	Robinson
Ashurst	Davis	Lonergan	Russell
Austin	Dieterich	Long	Schall
Bachman	Donahey	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Duffy	McCarran	Sheppard
Bankhead	Fletcher	McGill	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Barkley	George	McNary	Steiwer
Black	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Glass	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Gore	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Guffey	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Hale	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hastings	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hatch	Norris	Wagner
Capper	Hayden	Nye	Walsh
Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Chavez	Johnson	Overton	White
Clark	King	Pittman
Connally	La Follette	Radcliffe
Copeland	Lewis	Reynolds

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of Senators present while I make some observations concerning the pending measure.

I was very much interested in the discussion of the subject by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY]. He discussed the bill generally without explaining just exactly what the bill which we are asked to enact would effectuate and what the result would be upon the coal and other industries and upon labor. No one would quarrel with his statement as to the desirability of conserving the Nation's resources. The first bill presented seemed to major upon that particular proposition, but the bill afterward passed by the House, and which is under consideration by the Senate at the present time, has nothing whatever to do with the conservation of coal except that it provides that a study shall be made of the subject by the commission to be appointed under the bill.

So far as the Senate is concerned, this particular bill has never been considered by any committee. We have not had the advantage of the hearings before the committee that we should have had to enable us properly to pass upon an important measure of this kind. It is true a subcommittee was appointed to hold hearings on a former bill, a bill which those interested now admit has been materially changed, and judging by the propaganda coming to me from those who are interested, the bill has been materially improved by the change. There were hearings held under the old bill by the subcommittee under the direction of the chairman, the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. Those hearings were reported to the full committee but before they were in print the bill was voted out with a favorable recommendation, upon condition, as stated by most of the Senators, that they reserved the right to take whatever position they desired concerning the bill when it reached the floor of the Senate. I was among that particular group.

I do not know of any measure that has attracted more attention and concerning which there has been more propaganda and more solicitation, one way or the other, than the pending measure. I think, perhaps, every source that possibly could be conceived of as being able to influence the vote of a Member of Congress has been brought to bear for or against this particular bill. Every kind of pressure and influence has been brought to bear to try to induce Members of Congress to support the measure.

I was somewhat shocked at the statement of the senior Senator from West Virginia to the Senate that if this bill should not pass there would be a Nation-wide coal strike. That particular sort of pressure has been availed of from various sources since this bill has been under consideration. My answer to that is that whenever any group can by the threat of violence cause a deliberative body such as the Senate to pursue a certain course of action, this Republic and the laws of this Republic have failed.

I wonder how many Senators and how many Members of the other House of Congress are here who would probably have stayed at home if someone had put them under fire. There is something inherent in the American spirit, and especially in Members of the Congress, which resents anyone thinking that we are cowards and uninformed as to subjects which come before us.

That does not mean much in this body but to the membership of any group it is heralded that the threat, the fear produced in the legislators is what brought about the enactment or disapproval of a measure. I do not think any Member of the Senate would possibly deviate from what he thought was his duty and his responsibility by reason of the fact that some threat of violence had been made.

I do not know of any measure in my State that has brought about more activity for and against it than has this particular bill. I have received numerous telegrams and other communications relative to it. In my State the miners are divided on the subject. One particular group wants the bill enacted; the other particular group wants it defeated. The business men and the chambers of commerce in my State, who represent the business interests of the State, are almost unanimous in asking me to oppose this measure. I conceive it to be my duty, as a Member of the Senate, to use my own judgment, to avail myself of my own knowledge of the business affairs of my State and of the country, to study the measure that is to be enacted into law, and then to give to my people the benefit of my honest judgment upon it, and not to follow the solicitation of someone of whose motive and interest I may not be fully cognizant.

I am for the conservation of the bituminous-coal industry of this country. I am for an adequate wage being paid to those who toil in the mines. I am for an adequate return upon the investment of those who have invested their money in coal properties.

So far as the general statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] is concerned, I am for all the principles which he has enunciated, but this bill violates every single one of them.

I am not going to discuss the constitutionality of the proposed measure, not that I believe it is constitutional, but because enough discussion has been had along that line. I am going to discuss its effect upon the business, the industries, and the labor of my own State, and when I discuss that it will likewise apply to every other State in the Union except two—West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

If this bill were properly labeled and bore its correct title, it should be entitled "A bill to provide a means by which West Virginia and Pennsylvania may control the coal markets of the United States of America."

I am interested in its effect upon my people. I am opposed to the bill in behalf of every business interest in my State except possibly some coal companies in Illinois that have extensive holdings in Pennsylvania and West Virginia and that are speaking or representing themselves as speaking for the coal production of Illinois. I am opposing the bill on behalf of labor in my State. I am opposing it on behalf of the miners of my State.

The history of mining in Illinois is interesting. This bill is an evidence of ingratitude to those who have toiled and fought for a decent wage. The story of the production of coal in Illinois, when the workmen were unionized, and met the competition of coal produced in fields where unfair labor was employed, is an interesting one. They saw their coal market taken away from them by reason of the fact that they remained loyal to the principles of labor. From 1918 down to 1932 there was a gradual decline, when the tonnage became less and less, while on the other hand in the State of West Virginia, which now stands sponsor for a labor cause operated by unfair labor, the tonnage increased and doubled itself time and again. Now the bill seeks in an indirect way to allocate the coal production of my State, where it has reached the bottom, with the coal production of West Virginia and Pennsylvania, where it has reached the peak.

It is true that under N. R. A. the coal industry was benefited. I am not opposing the principle of N. R. A. It may be that in enacting that principle a great deal of difficulty was met in translating the Golden Rule into a rule of business conduct, but N. R. A. is the best example of what propaganda can do. Propaganda from all the service clubs brought it into being. Propaganda has brought it into disrepute. Yet the underlying principles of N. R. A. are the correct principles in the business conduct of any industry.

I say the coal business was benefited to some extent under N. R. A., but N. R. A. has not been followed in this bill. In the code authority pertaining to coal under N. R. A. the country was divided into five districts. District no. 1 was composed of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, part of Virginia, and the Eastern States. There was a reason for that. It was because there was producton and a market within that district. It was compact. At that time the natural market to which the coal produced in Pennsylvania, since the fires in the furnaces of the manufacturers have died out, naturally was the markets in New York State and the seaboard.

District no. 2, under the N. R. A., was comprised of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, another sensible, compact district, a district with a market within itself, containing the great metropolitan city of Chicago with its manufacturing activities and its various other activities which consume bituminous coal. That market at one time was supplied from the three States in that little group. It was our home market. Only a small percentage of the coal produced in Illinois finds its way into interstate commerce. It is mined in the State of Illinois, and it is consumed by the manufacturing industries and the homes of the State of Illinois. But when, as I say, Illinois, remaining faithful to labor, could not produce its coal at the same price and compete with the States of West Virginia and Pennsylvania, the coal from those States began to find its way into the Illinois market.

What does this bill do? Why does it do it? It consolidates districts nos. 1 and 2. It reaches from the eastern line of the State of Pennsylvania to the western line of Iowa. It takes in part of the coal fields of Tennessee and Kentucky. It takes in an area which produces 90 percent of the bituminous coal used in the United States. Pennsylvania and West Virginia are the mountain regions where "old king coal" dwells. Those States have the market of the Eastern States. They have the market on the Atlantic seaboard; but they desire to take in the market of Chicago, unfairly acquired so far as labor is concerned; and I am talking now about labor. They are going to fix a price in order that they may avail themselves of the market of Chicago, which means that we in Illinois cannot sell our coal in our own home market, in our own home State, not for interstate consumption but for intrastate consumption, except by fixing a competitive price which will enable coal to be shipped from eastern Pennsylvania and sold in our territory at a profit.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield for a question; yes.

Mr. NEELY. Does the Senator from Illinois believe the enactment of the pending bill would inure to the benefit of the coal operators of West Virginia at the expense of the coal operators of the State of Illinois?

Mr. DIETERICH. I certainly do.

Mr. NEELY. Then, does not the Senator from Illinois think it is remarkable that three or four of the greatest——

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I do not wish to be interrupted for that purpose. The Senator from West Virginia may have the floor later. I do not expect him to agree with me, but I am telling him what my investigation of this bill discloses to me. I think it is my duty to represent my State and its people. I think it is my duty to prevent its people and its industries from suffering hardships which will inure to the benefit of the citizens of some other State. I am here defending my people and their interests; and the interests of my people are the same as the interests of the people of every other State outside of West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator to ask him a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield.

Mr. GUFFEY. A few moments ago the Senator stated that district no. 1 extended from eastern Pennsylvania clear to Illinois.

Mr. DIETERICH. Minimum price-fixing area no. 1 extends from eastern Pennsylvania to western Iowa.

Mr. GUFFEY. Oh, the Senator is talking about the other district? That is all right.

Mr. DIETERICH. Yes. It takes in some 10 or 15 districts. I am talking about the price-fixing area. I am talking about the kernel of this bill, and that is found on page 14, in the minimum price-fixing area.

The mechanics of the bill are as follows: The districts within themselves ascertain the cost of production, and fix a price at the mine for consumption where no outside competition exists. Then, when coal from other districts finds its way to such a marketing area, the price is fixed to meet competition, to make them fair competitors one with the other. In other words, the mines located 50 miles from the city of Chicago must fix a price which is a fair competitive price with the mines of eastern Pennsylvania, 1,200 miles away; and they do not do it by lowering freight rates. They do not do it by lowering wages. They do it by forcing our poor people—and coal is the fuel of the poor—to pay a price which is exorbitant for Illinois coal.

That is the policy of this bill, and that is the purpose behind the bill. Its advocates may conceal it and veneer it over with all the beautiful lectures on labor they desire; and no one wishes to see labor trodden under foot. They may do it on the basis of conservation, but the real forces behind the bill are the coal barons of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield once more?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. DIETERICH. I do.

Mr. NEELY. Does not the Senator from Illinois know that the most prominent coal operators of West Virginia are not only opposed to the bill, but they have sent out an appeal for $25,000 to maintain a lobby to defeat it?

Mr. DIETERICH. I do not know anything about that. There has been a great amount of propaganda going on. I know of one concern which was represented to be for the bill which afterward came and denied it. The coal operators do not understand the bill. The bill has been misrepresented. The bill is misunderstood.

I realize that in making this talk I take the hazard of being misquoted and misunderstood. I am stating what the text of the bill is. I do not care who is for it or who is against it. That does not change the cold letter of the law which we are asked to enact here.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President——

Mr. DIETERICH. I do not care for a running discussion. That is not my nature at all. I am more of a peaceful disposition. [Laughter.]

Mr. NEELY. I assure the Senator that there is no intention of engaging in any sort of warfare. May I call the Senator's attention to some testimony which was given in behalf of some coal operators of West Virginia? Then I promise not to interrupt him again.

Mr. DIETERICH. I do not wish to be discourteous to the Senator, but I was not there to cross-examine the witnesses. I do not know what interest they had in the matter. I do not know how truthful they were. It might have been possible to impeach them. Much of this testimony, when we read the record of hearings, is the testimony of those who have been schooled and primed. In other words, expert testimony, when truthful, is the most valuable testimony in the world. When it is not truthful, it is the most damaging and of less weight than any other testimony that can be adduced.

Mr. NEELY. Will the Senator from Illinois permit me to tell him—and the record will verify the fact—that Mr.

Francis, the president of the Island Creek Coal Co., of West Virginia, one of the greatest coal companies in the world, appeared before both the Senate and the House committees in opposition to the bill?

Mr. DIETERICH. I have tried to be courteous to my friend from West Virginia. I know he is a friend of mine, and I am a friend of his; but I would rather not have him interrupt me. If I make any statements to which he does not agree, he may, in an orderly way, refute those statements. I do not know what took place before his committee. We had no means of knowing, because the original bill was never considered by the committee but was withdrawn, and finally this bill was put in.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, this will be my last interruption.

Mr. DIETERICH. I have seen the hearings before the committee. I have read those hearings.

Mr. NEELY. Will not the Senator permit me to call his attention to the fact——

Mr. DIETERICH. I am not going to let this matter turn on what some operator wants or does not want. I wish to stay with the text of the bill. Too many smoke screens have been thrown around the real purpose of the bill. I do not care what the operators may have said about it.

Mr. NEELY. I assure the Senator I do not wish to read any testimony; but I should like to correct one statement, to the effect that no Senator was given an opportunity to know what went on before the committee.

Mr. DIETERICH. Oh, they probably were given an opportunity to know.

Mr. NEELY. Here are 700 pages of printed evidence that was taken.

Mr. DIETERICH. Certainly; and if we had time to read all the 700 pages of evidence we should be here 24 hours in the day, and we should have to have a longer year. If you want to hide anything, put it in one of those volumes of evidence taken before a committee, and you have it completely hidden, unless somebody wishes to fish it out to use it for his own purposes.

Mr. NEELY rose.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I respectfully ask that I not be interfered with any further.

I have stated the real purpose of the bill. I am not going to burden the Senate by analyzing its provisions in the matter of the minimum price-fixing areas which attempt to put Pennsylvania and West Virginia on a fair competitive basis with Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois for the Chicago coal market.

I wish to call the attention of the Senate to some of the provisions of part II, and this is the real meat of the bill. If this were left out, those back of the bill would not care for codes of fair competition or anything else. I am not saying that the author of the bill is trying to do anything improper. I do not blame him for trying to get an advantage for the State of Pennsylvania; and if it were not a fact that the citizenship of my State would have to pay for that advantage, and if it were not a fact that it would be an injustice to citizens of other States in the United States, I might not be opposing the bill. I do not know of anyone more lovable and whose reasonable measures I would rather support than the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, but we cannot vote for the junior Senator from Pennsylvania in this bill. In acting on the bill, we have to vote with the knowledge that it is going to have its effect on the citizenship of the United States outside of West Virginia and Pennsylvania, who will have to pay the price that is laid down.

Talk about an increase in the price of coal of 2¾ cents; when you fix the minimum market areas for coal produced in Illinois, and Indiana coal, which finds its way into the Illinois markets and to its own market at Gary, when you have to raise that to meet the price of coal shipped from eastern Pennsylvania, to say that it is 2½ cents is simply nonsense.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield.

Mr. LONG. As I understand the Senator, if the benefit Pennsylvania is to get had to be paid for by the people of Wyoming, the Senator from Illinois would not be arguing against the bill?

Mr. DIETERICH. I said Illinois or any other State.

Mr. LONG. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. DIETERICH. Oh, no; I referred to other States as well as my own.

In paragraph 2, on page 13, it is provided:

> Each district board shall, from time to time on its own motion or when directed by the Commission, establish minimum prices free on board transporation facilities at the mines for kinds, qualities, and sizes of coal produced in said district, with full authority, in establishing such minimum prices, to make such classification of coals and price variations as to mines and consuming market areas as it may deem necessary and proper.

Mr. President, this is the significant part of title II of the bill. I read from page 17, paragraph (b):

> (b) District boards shall, under rules and regulations established by the Commission, coordinate in common consuming market areas upon a fair competitive basis the minimum prices and the rules and regulations established by them, respectively, under subsection (a) hereof. Such coordination, among other factors, but without limitation, shall take into account the various kinds, qualities, and sizes of coal, and transporation charges upon coal. All minimum prices established for any kind, quality, or size of coal for shipment into any consuming market area shall be just and equitable, and not unduly prejudicial or preferential, as between and among districts.

I will not read from this provision further, but on page 14 there is a provision for nine areas, as follows:

> Area 1: Eastern Pennsylvania, district 1; western Pennsylvania, district 2; northern West Virginia, district 3; Ohio, district 4; Michigan, district 5; Panhandle, district 6; southern no. 1, district 7; southern no. 2, district 8; west Kentucky, district 9; Illinois, district 10; Indiana, district 11; Iowa, district 12; that part of southeastern, district 13, comprising Van Buren, Warren, and McMinn Counties in Tennessee:
>
> Area 2: Southeastern, district 13, except Van Buren, Warren, and McMinn Counties in Tennessee.
>
> Area 3: Arkansas-Oklahoma, district 14.
>
> Area 4: Southwestern, district 15.
>
> Area 5: Northern Colorado, district 16; southern Colorado, district 17; New Mexico, district 18.
>
> Area 6: Wyoming, district 19; Utah, district 20.
>
> Area 7: North Dakota and South Dakota, district 21.
>
> Area 8: Montana, district 22.
>
> Area 9: Washington, district 23.

If those who drew the bill wanted to have this board do something, if they wanted to be equitable about it, why did they not leave it to the board to investigate and determine what the minimum-price area should be under this particular bill? Who drafted the bill? Who suggested that these districts be as they are proposed to be established? If they wanted to follow N. R. A., why did they not follow N. R. A.?

Mr. President, I do not know that I care to take up any further time of the Senate. As I have said, I could not be true to myself, to the business interests of my State, or to the labor interests of my State and vote for a bill which would do what this one would accomplish.

It allocates the tonnage which can be mined in each district. It allocates it according to the production of 1934, which was practically the production of 1933. In my State it allocates it down to the very bottom, when, as I have said, other States, operating under unfair labor conditions, have taken away the markets of my own State. It gives them the advantage of what their cheap labor and their cheap mining has produced for them, and pegged it and practically stabilized it at those figures.

It simply means, regardless of what scale of wages will be paid—and it is no improvement over N. R. A. in the matter of wage scales—that less and less miners will be employed, with a minority employed, perhaps, at a fair wage.

It is not labor that is back of this bill. Back of the bill, as I have said, are the extensive coal interests which are intermingled in Pennsylvania and West Virginia and the moving spirit of Illinois, the Peabody Coal Co., is interested in those coal fields.

I thank the Senate.

DONATION OF ARMY EQUIPMENT TO POSTS OF THE VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7199) to provide for the donation of certain Army equipment to posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate recede from the amendments it adopted a few days ago to the bill. I may say that I have found other ways and means of accomplishing the object which was designed to be accomplished.

The motion was agreed to.

DISPOSITION OF SURPLUS REAL PROPERTY OF FEDERAL AGENCIES

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2888) to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes, which were, on page 1, line 8, to strike out "device" and insert "devise"; on page 2, line 10, after "(b)" to insert "pending a sale", and on page 4, line 11, after "Columbia", to insert "except the Post Office Department."

Mr. CONNALLY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

HIGHWAY TO CONNECT NORTHWESTERN PART OF UNITED STATES WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA, YUKON TERRITORY, AND ALASKA

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1374) authorizing the survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and the Territory of Alaska, which were, on pages 2 and 3, to strike out all of sections 3 and 4, and to amend the title so as to read: "An act relative to the proposed survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and the Territory of Alaska."

Mr. McNARY. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The amendment was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT COLUMBUS, MISS.

Mr. CONNALLY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8977) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a site for the erection of a post-office building at Columbus, Miss., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1434) thereon.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 7974. An act to withdraw and restore to their previous status under the control of the Territory of Hawaii certain Hawaiian homes lands now in use as an airplane landing field: to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

H. R. 8598. An act to provide for the inspection and regulation of vessels engaged in the transportation of inflammable, explosive, and like dangerous cargoes in navigable waters of the United States; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 8977. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a site for the erection of a post-office building at Columbus, Miss.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

H. R. 9116. An act to extend the provisions of veterans' laws and regulations to persons who served in Russia during the World War and their dependents; to the Committee on Finance.

H. J. Res. 286. Joint resolution for the relief of Kam N. Kathju; to the Committee on Immigration.

LOANS BY THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

Mr. LEWIS obtained the floor.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I desire to have the Senate consider House bill 6776, to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state, by title, the bill to which the Senator refers.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6776) to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, my attention was diverted. Has the Senator made request for the consideration of a bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I have.

Mr. McNARY. Is it on the calendar?

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is on the calendar, and was brought to the attention of the able Senator from Oregon by the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD].

Mr. McNARY. Is that the bill about which the Senator is speaking?

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is a bill to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended. The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] discussed it with the Senator from Oregon today.

Mr. McNARY. I think my colleague in the House, Mr. PIERCE, introduced the bill there.

Mr. COSTIGAN. That is true.

Mr. McNARY. I offered the bill in the Senate, and it is coupled now, I understand, with the House amendment.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. Will the Senator briefly advise us of the contents of the bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, the bill is in the nature of an amendment to section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, which, as heretofore amended, authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan not exceeding $125,000,000 on reasonable and adequate security for the benefit of drainage districts, levee districts, levee and drainage districts, irrigation districts, and similar districts, also mutual nonprofit corporations and incorporated water users' associations. The bill presented here, as amended in the Senate committee, adds reclamation districts, and, furthermore, deals with a special situation which, in part contributed to the introduction of the amendment. It has been found as an incident of the Government's policy of buying and arranging to buy considerable tracts of land, including cut-over forest lands, that the Federal Government has frequently been reducing to a substantial extent the taxable resources of various tax units in several States.

Testimony, for example, before the Committee on Banking and Currency indicated that in one county in Texas approximately one-third of the county's land has thus been taken out of the taxable unit. It is urged that such counties and other political subdivisions and lawful districts ought to be aided in reasonable efforts to refinance their outstanding obligations if possible to do so advantageously. The amendment to section 36, in the form of a new section called "36A", is designed to advance that possibility.

In the committee, which carefully considered the subject and heard witnesses, it was further proposed that the suggested authorization be extended to and for the benefit of counties, other political subdivisions of States, and State-authorized districts in which the United States has acquired lands for watershed protection, timber production and conservation, protection of grazing areas, or preservation of wildlife.

The bill was appropriately referred to the Farm Credit Administration, the Agricultural Department, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and comes to the Senate without any present objection from those agencies. The Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation appeared before the committee at its final session and stated in effect that it would be possible, he believes, out of existing funds already appropriated for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the stated uses, if required, to find the sum of not exceeding $10,000,000 specified in the bill, to be safeguarded by adequate security, and that he had no objection to offer on behalf of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the enactment of the measure as amended by the Senate committee.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, is the bill before the Senate for consideration?

Mr. COSTIGAN. As I understand the parliamentary situation, the request has been made that the bill be considered, but the request has not been acted upon.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senate committee had made a favorable report of the bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senate committee favorably reported the measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6776) to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment in section 1, page 1, line 11, after the words "drainage district" to insert "reclamation district", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first two sentences of section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, are amended to read as follows:

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered to make loans as hereinafter provided, in an aggregate amount not exceeding $125,000,000, including commitments and disbursements heretofore made, to or for the benefit of drainage districts, levee districts, levee and drainage districts, reclamation districts, irrigation districts, and similar districts, mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water-users' associations duly organized under the laws of any State, and to or for the benefit of political subdivisions of States which have or propose to purchase or otherwise acquire projects or portions thereof devoted chiefly to the improvement of lands for agricultural purposes. Such loans shall be made for the purpose of enabling any such district, political subdivision, company, or association (hereafter referred to as the 'borrower') to reduce and refinance its outstanding indebtedness incurred in connection with any such project; or, whether or not it has any such indebtedness, to purchase, acquire, construct, or complete such a project or any part thereof, or to purchase or acquire additional drainage, levee, or irrigation works, or property, rights, or appurtenances in connection therewith, and to repair, extend, or improve any such project or make such additions thereto as are consonant with or necessary or desirable for the proper functioning thereof or for the further assurance of the ability of the borrower to repay its loan: Provided, That it is not intended that additional lands will thereby be brought into production."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next committee amendment was on page 3, after line 11, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 3. The Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 as amended, is further amended by adding after section 36 thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 36A. In addition to the authority granted to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by section 36 of this act, as amended, the Corporation is authorized and empowered to make loans, as hereinafter provided, in an aggregate amount not exceeding $10,000,000 to or for the benefit of counties, political subdivisions of States, political subdivisions of counties, and districts, duly organized under the laws of any State, in which the United States has acquired or shall hereafter acquire lands for purposes of watershed protection, timber production and conservation, protection of grazing areas, or preservation of wildlife. Such loans shall be made for the purpose of enabling any such county, political subdivision, or district (hereinafter referred to as the 'borrower') to refinance its outstanding indebtedness existing at the time the United States acquired or shall have acquired such land.

"Such loans shall be subject to the same terms and conditions as loans made under section 5 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, except that (1) the terms of any such loans shall not exceed 40 years; (2) each such loan shall, in the opinion of the Corporation, be reasonably and adequately secured, and, in respect to the type of security, shall be secured (a) by bonds, notes, or other obligations for the payment of which shall be pledged the full faith and credit and taxing power of the borrower or of such taxing authority as may be authorized pursuant to State law to levy assessments, taxes, or other charges for the repayment of said obligations, or (b) by bonds, notes, or other obligations which are a lien on real property situated within the boundaries of the borrower, which is taxable under existing laws, or shall be secured by both of such methods, and (c) by such other collateral as may be acceptable to the Corporation; and (3) the borrower shall agree, insofar as it may lawfully do so, that so long as any part of such loan shall remain unpaid the borrower will in each year apply to the repayment of such loan, or to the purchase or redemption of the obligations issued to evidence such loan, an amount equivalent to a proportionate part of the principal of the loan, taking into consideration the number of years through which the loan will mature and taking into consideration the intention to place on the taxpayers a burden as nearly uniform as practicable throughout the entire term of the loan, and that it shall at all times make provision for such reasonable reserves as may be approved by the Corporation. No loan shall be made under this section until the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (a) shall have determined that by reason of the acquisition of said land by the Government the financial condition of the borrower has been sufficiently affected to warrant the making of such loan; (b) has satisfied itself as to the security supporting the outstanding bonds or other obligations of the applicant; and (c) in the case of a loan to reduce or refinance the outstanding indebtedness of an applicant, has been satisfied that an agreement has been entered into between the applicant and holder of its outstanding bonds or other obligations under which the applicant will be able to purchase or refund all or a major portion of such bonds or other obligations at a price determined by the Corporation to be reasonable after taking into consideration the average market price of such bonds over the 6 months' period ending July 1, 1935, and under which a reduction will be brought about in the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of the applicant, or under which a reduction in its annual charges of principal and interest will be accomplished, resulting in benefit to the community and promoting its general welfare. Loans made under this section shall bear interest at a rate or rates to be fixed by the Corporation.

"When a loan is authorized pursuant to the provisions of this section and it shall then or thereafter appear that repairs and necessary extensions or improvements to the properties of borrower are necessary or desirable for the further assurance of the ability of the borrower to repay such loan, the Corporation, within the limitation as to total amount provided in this section, may make an additional loan or loans to such borrower for such purposes.

"The proceeds of any loan applied for by a borrower under this section may be paid either to such borrower or to the holders or representatives of the holders of the bonds, notes, or other obligations to be reduced and refinanced in connection with such loan, and such loans may be made upon promissory notes collateraled by such bonds, notes, or other obligations, or through the purchase of securities issued or to be issued by such borrower. In the discretion of the Corporation, the borrower may, if consistent with State law, be authorized to deliver to the holders of such original obligations, refunding bonds bearing the same rate of interest and issued on the same basis of the refunding bonds to be held by the Corporation."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, have all the committee amendments been acted upon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. I have an amendment with which the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] is familiar.

I offer as an amendment the bill which has been acted upon favorably and unanimously by the Judiciary Committee, which extends for 2 years the life of the Electric Home and Farm Authority. It is very desirable that this action be had at this session, because the Electric Authority is contemplated to be used very much in connection with rural electrification. The object is to continue the sale of electric facilities. There is no objection to this amendment, so far as I know, from any private power company or from any public power company of any kind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, after line 3, after the committee amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 4. That notwithstanding any other provision of law, Electric Home and Farm Authority, a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, shall continue until February 1, 1937, or such earlier date as may be fixed by the President by Executive order, to be an agency of the United States. During the continuance of such agency the present investment in the capital stock of such corporation, for the use and benefit of the United States, shall be continued, and such corporation is hereby authorized to use all its assets, including capital and net earnings therefrom, and all moneys which have been or may hereafter be allocated to or borrowed by it, in the exercise of its functions as such agency.

Mr. NORRIS. The amendment reincorporates the Electric Home and Farm Authority, the operation of which was carried on by the officers of the T. V. A., although they had no investment in it. The President had designated them as the officers of the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

That brought forth some criticism against the T. V. A., which it was desired to avoid, because the T. V. A. had no more interest in it than anyone else. In fact, the private power companies in direct competition in Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama were the greatest beneficiaries from it by reason of the sale of the increased current which was brought about by this corporation, which has induced manufacturers of various electrical appliances to manufacture the appliances, which the Authority helped them to sell. It has resulted so far in a financial gain for the private power companies. There has been no loss of money. It enables homes to be supplied with electric refrigerators, electric hot-water heaters, electric irons and wringers at practically half the price the purchasers are now compelled to pay.

In connection with the national scope of electrifying rural communities, the Electric Home and Farm Authority desires to carry on the same sort of sales methods in other parts of the country that it has carried on in the States where the Authority has been so successful. So it has reincorporated in the District of Columbia; and the officers of the T. V. A., who were formerly officers of this organization, are no longer officers and have nothing to do with the corporation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. KING. I was wondering how they could sell for one-half of the price charged by manufacturers, since they are not a manufacturing concern.

Mr. NORRIS. Here is a chart showing the number of major appliance sales per 1,000 domestic customers for 40 of the largest power companies. The Tennessee Electric Power Co., operating in Tennessee, has increased by 140 per 1,000 customers. The next one is the Georgia Power Co. Then comes the Alabama Power Co. All these companies have largely increased the sale of electric current, because the people buy these electric appliances for one-half what they used to pay for them. This organization, the Electric Home and Farm Authority, which is incorporated, borrows its money from the R. F. C. The organization has made arrangements with the manufacturers of large electric appliances, such as the General Electric Co. and other companies manufacturing various electric appliances, to manufacture an appliance which is not so glittering or so beautiful to look at, but is just as good and possesses all the superior qualities of the best that are made; and, on account of the increased sales it procures, it makes these special prices. That is the total object of this corporation. It does not do anything else.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, how large an appropriation is the corporation seeking?

Mr. NORRIS. No appropriation whatever. There will be no such thing as an appropriation.

Mr. KING. They are reincorporating in the District of Columbia?

Mr. NORRIS. They are now reincorporated.

Mr. KING. Is the Delaware corporation dissolved?

Mr. NORRIS. It is dissolved. It goes out of existence and everything is turned over to the new corporation.

Mr. KING. It is merged in the new corporation?

Mr. NORRIS. It is merged in the new corporation, which is to last only 2 years.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not object to consideration of the measure. It seems to me, however, that it is in line with some of the policies of some of the organizations under this administration to project the Federal Government into fields of endeavor which heretofore have been regarded, and properly regarded, as belonging to private initiative. If we may loan Federal money at a low rate of interest to corporations and put them into competition with organizations or individuals——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the private corporations have benefited because of the existence of this organization. For instance, the Tennessee Electric Power Co. has made greater advancement in the sale of electric current in the past year than has any other company, I think, in the world.

It was given a badge of honor by some large associations. The Alabama Power Co. has also increased its sales. But there was some prejudice against the Electric Home and Farm Authority, because when it was previously operating its officers were officers of the T. V. A., though they received no salary from it. In order to avoid all that and to extend its operations into sections of the country where they are going to try to introduce rural electrification, the President thought it was better to incorporate it. That has already been done; it has already been incorporated.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, as part of my remarks, to have printed an analysis of its activities, showing what it has done, also a copy of the articles of incorporation here in the District, and, so that anyone may read them who wants to, and also the order of the President setting it up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matters referred to are as follows:

ELECTRIC HOME AND FARM AUTHORITY

(A District of Columbia corporation)

(1) Electric Home and Farm Authority began operations as an agency of N. R. A. in January 1934. Its purpose was to make electrical appliances more easily available to purchasers through (a) offering to such purchasers the advantages of low financing rates (5 percent per annum) and long-term credit (3 to 4 years); (b) inducing manufacturers to reduce the price of such appliances; and (c) inducing utility companies to offer power for the operation of such appliances at cheaper rates. The corporation has not entered the distributing or selling fields—those functions have been performed by the regularly established distributors, dealers, and utilities.

To date the corporation has operated in a comparatively small area in the Southeastern States (Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee). Its operations have been so successful that those States have become the most progressive in the Union in the purchase of appliances. At the same time, the leading power companies in the area while voluntarily reducing rates to come within the E. H. F. A. plan have taken the lead over all other utility companies in the country in sales of appliances and per-customer increase of kilowatt-hour consumption (see exhibits A, B, and C attached hereto).

(2) The private utility companies have indicated a willingness to cooperate in the rural electrification program by building new lines into rural areas on condition that credit for the purchase of load-building appliances be made available throughout the country in the manner in which E. H. F. A. has made that credit available in the southeastern States. Particularly as an adjunct of the rural-electrification program, therefore, it has become important to extend the benefits of the E. H. F. A. to the rest of the country in connection with the purchase of electrical appliances and inside plumbing appliances which become practicable on the farm with the availability of the electric water pump.

(3) To meet the criticism that E. H. F. A.'s original Delaware charter was too broad and to place it in a position to render service on a national scale, E. H. F. A. has been reincorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia with a very simple charter and control of its board of directors has been transferred from the Tennessee Valley Authority to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Rural Electrification Administration. (Copies of the certificate of incorporation of the District of Columbia corporation, and of an Executive order under which the District corporation has taken over the business of the Delaware corporation are attached hereto as exhibits D and E, respectively). The Delaware charter is to be surrendered immediately.

(4) The purpose of the proposed statute is to give to the District of Columbia corporation until February 1937, the same kind of legislative confirmation as was given in January (in the statute extending the powers of the R. F. C.) to Commodity Credit Corporation and Export-Import Bank, two other virtual R. F. C. subsidiaries. (See pp. 3–4, exhibit F, as marked.) February 1937 is the date of expiration of the lending powers of R. F. C. The statute will give the Corporation a period of life sufficient to justify manufacturers, utilities, distributors, and dealers in making any adjustments necessary to cooperate under the E. H. F. A. plan.

EXHIBIT A

Relative position of C. & S. companies on electrical world chart of appliance sales by 100 power companies serving more than 10,000,000 domestic customers

	Number of domestic meters	Refrigerators		Ranges		Water heaters
		1934	1933	1934	1933	1934	1933
Tennessee Electric Power Co	30	2	19	1	5	3	5
Georgia Power Co	23	1	5	2	11	1	16
Alabama Power Co	40	4	12	13	25	13	21

Refrigerator sales increases reported by E. E. I.

State	Rank of State by percent increase	1933	1934	Increase	Percent increase
Tennessee	1	9,793	26,822	17,029	173.9
Georgia	2	11,828	29,363	17,535	148.2
Alabama	8	9,785	16,914	7,129	72.9

Percent realization manufacturers' quota, 1934

	Percent	Rank in United States
Georgia	353.4	1
Tennessee	274.2	2
Alabama	235.3	3

Average U. S. percent realization 135.8.

EXHIBIT D

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION OF ELECTRIC HOME AND FARM AUTHORITY—No. 23346

Know all men by these presents, that we, the undersigned citizens of the United States, the majority being citizens and residents of the District of Columbia, to form a corporation for the purposes hereinafter stated under and pursuant to title 5, chapter 9, section 261, of the Code of the District of Columbia, enacted by the Congress and approved by the President of the United States, do hereby certify that—

First. The name of the corporation shall be "Electric Home and Farm Authority", and the object or purpose for which it is formed is to aid in the distribution, sale, and installation of electrical apparatus, equipment and appliances (together with plumbing and other apparatus, equipment and appliances, operated thereby or in connection therewith), and in furtherance of such purposes.

(a) To lend money; and to purchase, discount, sell, rediscount, and otherwise deal in notes, conditional sale contracts, chattel mortgages, trust receipts, and other evidences of debt; to endorse or guarantee the notes or obligations of others; and to acquire the property and assets and assume the liabilities of Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., a Delaware corporation.

(b) To borrow a sum or sums of money not exceeding in the aggregate the sum by which the total face amount of obligations of others held by the corporation at the time of borrowing, exceeds the amount, if any, of all then existing liens upon or charges against such obligations; and to issue notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt, and as security therefor, with the consent of stockholders, to mortgage, pledge, hypothecate, assign, or otherwise give a lien on all or any part of the corporate estate.

The corporation shall exercise and enjoy all the powers, rights, and privileges granted to or conferred upon corporations of a similar character by the Code of the District of Columbia now or hereafter in force and the enumeration of the foregoing powers shall not be deemed to exclude any powers, rights, or privileges so granted or conferred.

Second. The corporation shall exist for 2 years from the date of its incorporation.

Third. The amount of capital stock of the corporation shall be $850,000, divided into 8,500 shares of par value of $100 each.

Fourth. During the first year of its existence the corporation shall be managed by a board of eight trustees, namely, Gladding B. Coit, George R. Cooksey, Thomas G. Corcoran, Sam Husbands, John K. McKee, Emil Schram, and Max O. Truitt (each of them so long as he may continue to be an officer or employee of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation), and Morris L. Cooke or his successor in office as Administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration. By vote of a majority of the trustees then holding office, the membership of the board of trustees may at any time be increased to 10 members and the vacancy thereby created filled.

The board of trustees by affirmative vote of the majority of the entire board may appoint from the trustees an executive committee of three members, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum and, to such extent as may be provided by the bylaws, shall have and may exercise all or any of the powers of the board of trustees.

Fifth. The principal office of the corporation shall be at 1825 H Street NW., in the city of Washington, D. C., but the corporation shall have the power to maintain other offices within or without the District of Columbia.

Sixth. The corporation reserves the right to amend, alter, change or repeal any provision in the certificate of incorporation in the manner now or hereafter prescribed by statute and all rights conferred on the stockholders are granted subject to this reservation.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands and seals this 1st day of August 1935.

GLADDING B. COIT.	[L. S.]
MORRIS L. COOKE.	[L. S.]
GEORGE R. COOKSEY.	[L. S.]
THOMAS G. CORCORAN.	[L. S.]
SAM HUSBANDS.	[L. S.]
JOHN K. MCKEE.	[L. S.]
EMIL SCHRAM.	[L. S.]
MAX O'RELL TRUITT.	[L. S.]

CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

I, Ann E. Saur, a notary public in and for the District of Columbia, do hereby certify that Gladding B. Coit, Morris L. Cooke, George R. Cooksey, Thomas G. Corcoran, Sam Husbands, John K. McKee, Emil Schram, and Max O. Truitt, parties to the foregoing and annexed certificate of incorporation of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, bearing date on the 1st day of August 1935, personally appeared before me in the said city of Washington, the said Gladding B. Coit, Morris L. Cooke, George R. Cooksey, Thomas G. Corcoran, Sam Husbands, John K. McKee, Emil Schram, and Max O. Truitt, being personally known to me as the persons who signed the said certificate, and each of said persons acknowledged the same to be his act and deed.

Given under my hand and seal this 1st day of August 1935.

[SEAL] ANN E. SAUR, Notary Public.

My commission expires August 31, 1927.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF DEEDS,
District of Columbia.

This is to certify that the foregoing is a true and verified copy of the certificate of incorporation of the Electric Home and Farm Authority and of the whole of said certificate of incorporation, as filed in this office the 1st day of August, A. D. 1935.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of this office this 2d day of August, A. D. 1935.

[SEAL] W. J. THOMPKINS,
Recorder of Deeds, District of Columbia.

EXHIBIT E

AUGUST 13, 1935.

EXECUTIVE ORDER DESIGNATING THE ELECTRIC HOME AND FARM AUTHORITY, A CORPORATION ORGANIZED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, AS AN AGENCY OF THE UNITED STATES

I hereby designate the Electric Home and Farm Authority, a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, as an agency of the United States to continue, insofar as permitted by its certificate of incorporation, the functions of, and to carry on the business hitherto engaged in by, Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware.

The direction included in Executive Order No. 6514, of December 19, 1933, that the outstanding stock of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of Delaware, be voted by the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, is hereby rescinded, and I hereby direct that the outstanding stock of the said Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., be voted jointly by the trustees of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 12, 1935.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like now to complete what I was saying.

Mr. NORRIS. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought he had concluded.

Mr. KING. I was not directing my very brief remarks—I came into the Chamber after the Senator had submitted this bill—to the T. V. A. or its manifold activities, although I wish to be entirely frank in stating that I did not vote for the Tennessee Valley Authority measure, for I believed that it would be the mother of a large number of agencies that would derive their funds from the Federal Government, and that such agencies would enter into a field which properly under our concept of the utilization of capital had been occupied by private individuals or by organizations of individuals to carry on legitimate business.

It is a very easy thing, if one can borrow money at a small rate of interest or have it given to him by large grants from the Federal Treasury, to engage in competitive business to the disadvantage of legitimate private business.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. That does not occur under this bill in any respect. Manufacturing concerns are not competed with; they manufacture the appliances themselves. The dealers are not interfered with; the dealers handle them. There is no competition with anybody in this matter, because the same people are manufacturing the cheaper refrigerators and appliances as are manufacturing expensive ones. It is merely a means by which, by reducing the price and thereby increasing consumption, a larger number may take advantage of the benefits of electricity, for instance.

Mr. KING. It is a selling agency, then?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; it is a selling agency, and it does not cost the taxpayers a cent. As a matter of fact, this corporation has operated with a profit. They get something out of the sales, because they guarantee the sales which are made and the corporation superintends the sales. So, as a matter of fact, they make some money out of it.

Mr. KING. I shall not object to the consideration of the bill. It is not a proposition de novo. If it were, it would probably result in some discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, and for other purposes."

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I want to thank the able Senator from Illinois for his helpful and unvarying courtesy.

Mr. LEWIS. I appreciate the thanks of the Senator from Colorado.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8632) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for the reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama; and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate;

H. R. 396. An act for the relief of the Virginia Engineering Co., Inc.;

H. R. 531. An act granting compensation to Walter F. Northrop;

H. R. 918. An act for the relief of Flensburger Dampfercompagnie;

H. R. 1299. An act giving jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co.;

H. R. 1550. An act for the relief of Douglas B. Espy;

H. R. 1771. An act for the relief of Pauline Fornabaio;

H. R. 1912. An act for the relief of William J. Ryan, chaplain, United States Army;

H. R. 1962. An act for the relief of Albert H. Jacobson;

H. R. 2936. An act for the relief of J. H. Taylor & Son;

H. R. 3184. An act for the relief of H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley;

H. R. 3557. An act for the relief of Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning;

H. R. 3596. An act for the relief of William H. Ames;

H. R. 3709. An act for the relief of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co.;

H. R. 3783. An act for the relief of George W. Rhine, doing business under the name of Rhine & Co.;

H. R. 4086. An act for the relief of Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke";

H. R. 4178. An act for the relief of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee; and

H. R. 4799. An act to provide for the reimbursement of certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed as a result of the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 396. An act for the relief of the Virginia Engineering Co., Inc.;

H. R. 531. An act granting compensation to Walter F. Northrop;

H. R. 918. An act for the relief of Flensburger Dampfercompagnie;

H. R. 1299. An act giving jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co.;

H. R. 1550. An act for the relief of Douglas B. Espy;

H. R. 1771. An act for the relief of Pauline Fornabaio;

H. R. 1912. An act for the relief of William J. Ryan, chaplain, United States Army;

H. R. 1962. An act for the relief of Albert H. Jacobson;

H. R. 2936. An act for the relief of J. H. Taylor & Son;

H. R. 3184. An act for the relief of H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley;

H. R. 3557. An act for the relief of Helena C. VonGroning and Stephan VonGroning;

H. R. 3596. An act for the relief of William H. Ames;

H. R. 3709. An act for the relief of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co.;

H. R. 3783. An act for the relief of George W. Rhine, doing business under the name of Rhine & Co.;

H. R. 4086. An act for the relief of Ellis Duke, also known as "Elias Duke";

H. R. 4178. An act for the relief of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee; and

H. R. 4799. An act to provide for the reimbursement of certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed as a result of the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931.

FILING OF SUITS UNDER WORLD WAR VETERANS ACT, 1924

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 65) to extend the period of suspension of the limitation governing the filing of suit under section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, which was, on page 1, line 4, to strike out "of" and insert "in."

Mr. BLACK. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

PRINTING AND BINDING OF CERTAIN PUBLIC DOCUMENTS

Mr. HAYDEN. By direction of the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably without amendment the bill (S. 3440) to amend certain acts relating to public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents and acts amendatory thereof, and I submit a report (No. 1430) thereon. The report of the committee is unanimous, and I ask for the present consideration of the bill. I may explain that the purpose of the proposed legislation, among other things, is to increase the number of daily copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD apportioned to Senators and Representatives in Congress and to reduce the number of bound copies. It has been found, by a study, that there are in storage many hundreds of bound copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD unused which will have to be sold for waste paper.

In further explanation, and to be more explicit, let me say that the passage of this bill will not cause any additional cost to the Government. It proposes to increase the number of copies of the daily CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for each Senator from 88 to 105, and for each Representative from 60 to 75 copies, which the Public Printer estimates will involve an additional cost of $62,522.30. It also proposes to reduce the number of bound copies of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD from 4,000 copies to approximately 1,800 copies, which it is estimated will result in a reduction of $45,496.85.

By eliminating the printing of the combined volume of laws for the entire Congress and printing the laws for each session of Congress as Statutes at Large will effect a saving of $17,005.54. It is estimated that there will be a saving of approximately $1,000 by reducing the number of copies of memorial addresses. Thus it will be seen that there is an estimated reduction of $63,502.39 against the increase in the daily RECORD of $62,522.30.

It is important that this bill should be passed by the close of the present session of Congress as it would be impractical to begin distribution in the middle of a Congress, particularly as to Statutes at Large, which will be distributed to the various judicial offices throughout the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3440) to amend certain acts relating to public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents and acts amendatory thereof, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That certain acts relating to the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents and acts amendatory thereof, be amended as follows:

TITLE I

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 616) of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 151), as relates to the publication of eulogies of deceased Members of Congress, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

151. Memorial addresses; preparation; distribution: There shall be compiled, prepared, printed with illustrations, and bound in cloth in one volume, in such style, form, and manner as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, without extra compensation to any employee therefor, the legislative proceedings of Congress and the exercises at the general memorial services held in the House of Representatives during each session relative to the death of any Member of Congress, together with all memorial addresses and eulogies published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during the same session of Congress in connection therewith, and such other matter as the committee may consider relevant thereto; and there shall be printed as many copies as may be required to supply the total quantity hereinafter provided, of which number 50 copies, bound in full morocco, with gilt edges, suitably lettered as may be requested, shall be delivered to the family of the deceased, and the remaining copies shall be distributed as follows:

Of all eulogies on deceased Members of Congress there shall be delivered, through the Postmaster of each House, to each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner, one copy.

Of the eulogies on deceased Senators there shall be furnished 250 copies for each Senator of the State represented by the deceased and 20 copies for each Representative therefrom.

Of the eulogies on deceased Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners there shall be furnished 250 copies for the successor in office of the deceased Member; 20 copies for each of the other Representatives, Delegates, or Resident Commissioners of the State, Territory, or insular possession represented by the deceased, and 20 copies for each Senator therefrom.

TITLE II

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

That chapter 23, section 14 (28 Stat. 603), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 182), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

182. CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; indexes: The Joint Committee on Printing shall designate to the Public Printer competent persons to prepare the semimonthly and the session index to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and shall fix and regulate the compensation to be paid by the Public Printer for the said work and direct the form and manner of its publication and distribution.

182a. Same; daily and permanent forms: That the public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which shall be issued in daily form during each session and shall be revised, printed, and bound promptly, as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, in permanent form, for distribution during and after the close of each session of Congress. The daily and the permanent RECORD shall bear the same date, which shall be that of the actual day's proceedings reported therein. The "usual number" of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD shall not be printed.

182b. Same; illustrations; maps; diagrams: No maps, diagrams, or illustrations may be inserted in the RECORD without the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. All requests for such approval should be submitted to the Joint Committee on Printing, through the Chairman of the Committee on Printing of the respective House in which the speech desired to be illustrated may be delivered. Illustrations shall not exceed in size a page of the RECORD and shall be line cuts only.

That chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 617), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 183), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

183. Same; gratuitous copies; subscriptions: The Public Printer shall furnish the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as follows and shall furnish gratuitously no others in addition thereto:

Of the bound edition to the folding room of the Senate 5 copies for the Vice President and each Senator; to the Secretary and Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, each, 2 copies, and to the Joint Committee on Printing not to exceed 100 copies; to the folding room of the House of Representatives 3 copies for each Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner, and to the Clerk, Sergeant at Arms, and Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, 2 copies.

Of the daily edition to the Vice President and each Senator, 105 copies; to the Secretary and Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, each, 25 copies; to the Secretary, for official use, not to exceed 35 copies; and to the Sergeant at Arms for use on the floor of the Senate, not to exceed 50 copies.

To each Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, 75 copies; to the Clerk, Sergeant at Arms, and Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, 25 copies; to the Clerk, for official use, not to exceed 50 copies, and to the Doorkeeper for use on the floor of the House of Representatives, not to exceed 75 copies.

To the Vice President and each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, there shall also be furnished (and shall not be transferable) 3 copies of the daily RECORD, of which 1 shall be delivered at his residence, 1 at his office, and 1 at the Capitol.

In addition to the foregoing the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD shall also be furnished as follows:

There shall be printed and held in reserve by the Public Printer, in unstitched form, as many copies of the daily RECORD as may be required to supply a semimonthly edition, which shall be bound in paper cover together with each semimonthly index when the same is issued and shall then be delivered promptly and without delay as hereinafter provided.

To each committee and commission of Congress, 1 daily and 1 semimonthly copy.

To each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, 1 semimonthly copy.

To the President of the United States, for the use of the Executive Office, 10 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and 1 bound copy.

To the Chief Justice of the United States and each of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1 copy of the daily.

To the offices of the marshal and clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, each, 2 copies of the daily and 1 semimonthly copy.

To the offices of the Vice President and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, each, 6 copies of the daily and 1 semimonthly copy.

To the Sergeant at Arms, the Chaplain, the Postmaster, the superintendent and the foreman of the folding room of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively; to the Secretaries to the Majority and the Minority of the Senate, and to the Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, each, one copy of the daily.

To the offices of the Official Reporters of Debates of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, each, 15 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 3 bound copies.

To the office of the stenographers to committees of the House of Representatives, 4 copies of the daily and 1 semimonthly copy.

To the office of the Congressional Record Index, 10 copies of the daily and 2 semimonthly copies.

To the offices of the superintendents of the Senate and House document rooms, each, 3 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 1 bound copy.

To the offices of the superintendents of the Senate and House press galleries, each, 2 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 1 bound copy.

To the offices of the Legislative Counsel of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, and the Architect of the Capitol, each, 3 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 1 bound copy.

To the Library of Congress for international exchange and for official use in Washington, D. C., not to exceed 145 copies of the daily, 5 semimonthly copies, and 150 bound copies.

To the library of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, each, 3 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and not to exceed 15 bound copies.

To the library of the Supreme Court of the United States, 2 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and not to exceed 5 bound copies.

To the Public Printer for official use, not to exceed 75 copies of the daily, 10 semimonthly copies, and 2 bound copies.

To the Director of the Botanic Garden, two copies of the daily.

To The National Archives, 5 copies of the daily, 2 semimonthly copies, and 2 bound copies.

To the library of each executive department, independent office, and establishment of the Government now in Washington, D. C., or which may be created, except those designated as depository libraries, and to the libraries of the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Naval Observatory, and the Smithsonian Institution, each, 2 copies of the daily, 1 semimonthly copy, and 1 bound copy.

To the Government of the Philippine Islands at Manila, 10 copies in both daily and bound form.

To the offices of the Governors of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, each, five copies in both daily and bound form.

To the office of the Governor of the Panama Canal, five copies in both daily and bound form.

To each ex-President and ex-Vice President of the United States, one copy of the daily.

To the Governor of each State, one copy in both daily and bound form.

To the United States Soldiers' Home and to each of the national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers, and to each of the State soldiers' homes now established or which hereafter may be created for either Federal or Confederate soldiers, one copy of the daily.

To the Superintendent of Documents, as many bound copies as may be required for distribution to depository libraries.

To the Department of State, not to exceed 150 copies of the daily, for distribution to each of our embassies and legations abroad, and to the principal consular offices in the discretion of the Secretary of State.

To each foreign legation in Washington whose government extends a like courtesy to our embassies and legations abroad, one copy of the daily, to be furnished upon requisition of and sent through the Secretary of State.

To each newspaper correspondent whose name appears in the Congressional Directory, and who makes application therefor, for his personal use and that of the paper or papers he represents, one copy of the daily and one copy of the bound, the same to be sent to the office address of each member of the press or elsewhere as he may direct: Provided, however, That not to exceed four copies in all shall be furnished to members of the same press bureau.

All copies of the daily edition shall, unless otherwise directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, be supplied and delivered promptly on the day after the actual day's proceedings as originally published. Each order for the daily RECORD shall begin with the current issues thereof, if previous issues of the same session are not available. The apportionment herein specified for daily copies shall not be transferable for the bound form and any allotment of daily copies not used by any Member during a session shall lapse when the session ends.

The Public Printer is authorized to furnish to subscribers the daily RECORD at $1.50 per month, payable in advance.

That chapter 23, section 24 (28 Stat. 604), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 184), and Public Resolution No. 25 (35 Stat. 1169), approved March 4, 1909 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 186), be, and are hereby, repealed.

TITLE III

DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT

334. (Judicial Code, sec. 227, amended.) Printing, binding, and distribution of reports and digests: That so much of section 683 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 334), as relates to the distribution of reports and digests of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States to the law library of the Supreme Court, be, and is hereby, amended by striking out the words "to the law library of the Supreme Court, 25 copies" and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"To the Library of Congress for the use of the law library and for international exchange, not to exceed 150 copies each of the bound and advance editions."

TITLE IV

PUBLICATIONS TO THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

139. International exchange of Government publications: That, for the purpose of more fully carrying into effect the provisions of the convention concluded at Brussels on March 15, 1886, and proclaimed by the President of the United States on January 15, 1889, there shall hereafter be supplied to the Library of Congress not to exceed 125 copies each of all Government publications for distribution, through the Smithsonian Institution, to such foreign governments as may agree to send to the United States similar publications of their governments for delivery to the Library of Congress.

139a. Distribution of Government publications to the Library of Congress: That there shall be printed and furnished to the Library of Congress for official use in Washington, D. C., and for international exchange as provided in section 139 of this title, not to exceed 150 copies of the publications described in this section, to wit: House documents and reports, bound; Senate documents and reports, bound; Senate and House journals, bound; public bills and resolutions; the United States Code and supplements, bound; the Official Register of the United States, bound; and all other publications and maps which are printed, or otherwise reproduced, under authority of law, upon the requisition of any congressional committee, executive department, bureau, independent office, establishment, commission, or officer of the Government: Provided, That confidential matter, blank forms, and circular letters not of a public character shall be excepted.

In addition to the foregoing, there shall be delivered as printed to the Library of Congress 10 copies of each House document and report, unbound; 10 copies of each Senate document and report, unbound; and 10 copies of each private bill and resolution and 50 copies of the laws in slip form.

That Public Resolution No. 16 (31 Stat. 1464), to regulate the distribution of public documents to the Library of Congress for its own use and for international exchange, approved March 2, 1901 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 139), and Public Resolution No. 25 (35 Stat. 1169), approved March 4, 1909 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 186), and section 7 of the act (43 Stat. 1106) approved March 3, 1925 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 139a), be, and are hereby, repealed.

TITLE V

MANUSCRIPT OF ANNUAL REPORTS

That chapter 209, section 3 (39 Stat. 336), of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, approved July 1, 1916 (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 108), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

108. Manuscript of annual reports and accompanying documents: The appropriations made for printing and binding shall not be used for any annual report or the accompanying documents unless the manuscript and proof therefor is furnished to the Public Printer in the following manner: Manuscript of the documents accompanying such annual reports on or before the 15th day of November of each year; manuscript of the annual reports on or before the 10th day of December of each year; complete revised proofs of the accompanying documents and the annual reports on the 5th and 10th days of December of each year respectively; and all of said annual reports and accompanying documents shall be printed, made public, and available for distribution not later than within the first 5 days after the assembling of each regular session of Congress. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the annual reports of the Smithsonian Institution, the Commissioner of Patents, the Comptroller of the Currency, or the Secretary of the Treasury.

TITLE VI

STATUTES AT LARGE

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 615), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended, as relates to the publication and distribution of the Statutes at Large (U. S. C., title 1, sec. 30, and title 44, sec. 196), be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

196. Statutes at Large; contents; admissibility in evidence: The Secretary of State shall cause to be compiled, edited, and indexed the United States Statutes at Large, which shall contain all the laws and concurrent resolutions enacted during each session of Congress, and also all conventions, treaties, and international agreements to which the United States is a party and which have come into force since the date of the adjournment of the session of Congress next preceding, including all proclamations issued since that date.

196a. Same; distribution: The Public Printer shall print, and after the final adjournment of each session of Congress, bind and deliver to the Superintendent of Documents as many copies of the Statutes at Large as may be required for distribution as follows:

To the President of the United States, 4 copies, 1 of which shall be for the library of the Executive Mansion;

To the Vice President of the United States, 2 copies;

To each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner in Congress, 1 copy;

To the Chief Justice of the United States and to each of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1 copy;

To the offices of the Legislative Counsel of the Senate and House of Representatives, each, 1 copy;

To the Senate Library, not to exceed 25 copies;

To the House Library, not to exceed 50 copies;

To the Library of Congress for international exchange and for official use in Washington, D. C., not to exceed 150 copies;

To the library of the Supreme Court of the United States, 2 copies;

To the Architect of the Capitol, 1 copy;

To the Public Printer, 2 copies;

To the National Archives, not to exceed 5 copies;

To the Department of State, including those for the use of embassies, legations, and consulates, not to exceed 600 copies;

To the Treasury Department, including those for the use of officers of customs, not to exceed 300 copies;

To the War Department, not to exceed 200 copies;

To the Navy Department, not to exceed 100 copies;

To the Department of the Interior, including those for the use of the United States Supervisor of Surveys and registers and receivers of public-land offices, not to exceed 300 copies;

To the Post Office Department, not to exceed 50 copies;

To the Department of Justice, including those for the judges and the officers of the United States and territorial courts, not to exceed 800 copies;

To the Department of Agriculture, not to exceed 100 copies;

To the Department of Commerce, not to exceed 100 copies;

To the Department of Labor, including those for the officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, not to exceed 175 copies;

To the government of the Philippine Islands, at Manila, 10 copies;

To the offices of the Governors of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, each, two copies;

To the office of the Governor of the Panama Canal, three copies;

To the library of the court of last resort of each State, Territory, and insular possession, and of the District of Columbia, each, one copy;

To each designated depository library in each State, Territory, and insular possession, one copy;

To each independent office and establishment of the Government now in Washington, D. C., or which hereafter may be created, not to exceed six copies; and

To the library of the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Naval Observatory, and the Smithsonian Institution, each, one copy.

In addition to the foregoing the Public Printer shall print 1,200 copies of the Statutes at Large, of which 300 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 900 copies for the use of the House of Representatives. The "usual number" shall not be printed.

That so much of chapter 23, section 73 (28 Stat. 614), of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as relates to the publication and distribution of pamphlet copies of the statutes of each session of Congress (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 195), be, and is hereby, repealed.

TITLE VII

OWNERSHIP OF GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

Government publications shall remain public property: All Government publications furnished by authority of law to officers of the United States Government, for their official use, shall be stamped "Property of the United States Government", and shall be preserved by such officers and by them delivered to their successors in office as a part of the property appertaining to the office. Government publications furnished depository libraries shall be made available for the free use of the general public and must not be disposed of except as the Superintendent of Documents may direct.

That section 1777 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 89), and so much of chapter 433, section 1 (22 Stat. 336), of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act, for 1883, approved August 7, 1882, relating to statutes furnished judges to remain public property (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 90), and section 506 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 90), and chapter 23, section 74 (28 Stat. 620) of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 92), relating to ownership of publications furnished officers for official use be, and are hereby, repealed.

That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report on House bill 8632, being the bill amending the Tennessee Valley Authority Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8632) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at or near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

FOREIGN DEBTS DUE THE UNITED STATES AS PAYMENT OF TAX LEVIED BY CONGRESS ON THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, this morning when the able Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee [Mr. PITTMAN] presented the joint resolution touching the matter of embargo and neutrality, he informed the Senate, in response to a query from one of the Senators on the opposite side of the aisle, that, among other details, the subject of the lending of money to belligerents at war or the matter of the debts of foreign nations now due to the United States was to be regarded as being too delicate and intricate to be then intruded into the discussion or attempted to be embodied in an expression of the then defined legislation.

Mr. President, at this moment I cannot avoid adverting to the fact that the Congress have just now passed a tax bill levying $250,000,000 upon the taxpayers of our country, at once payable, and that my honorable colleagues passed a few moments ago a measure termed an "embargo and neutrality measure", which, as I view it, deprives America of an equal opportunity for trade as against the other nations of the world while the other nations of the world are accorded complete opportunity over and through the world as against us. That is my view of the effect of the measure. I take the liberty now to call attention to the fact in connection with the foreign debts due this country and which are now payable, that if one-fourth of the interest now due on the debts were paid by our foreign debtors, the exact amount of the taxes we today lay upon our Nation would at once be met and could at once be paid to our Nation and be lifted from our citizens.

(At this point Mr. LEWIS was interrupted by a message from the House of Representatives, by requests for the consideration of bills and a conference report, which appear under the appropriate headings.)

Mr. LEWIS. Now I trust I may resume. It is reported that the Secretary of the Treasury, John Sherman, when Senator from Ohio, touching resumption of specie payments uttered the apothegm that "the way to resume is to resume." Thus, I trust I may follow that example. I resume my speech.

Mr. President, I ask the serious attention of my colleagues to what I now wish to express to them.

The amount of $250,000,000 which we are to pay in addition to vast other sums we will be called on to pay, the sum referred to being represented by the tax passed by both bodies, is interesting, sir, in the comparison to the situation of our debtors as stated for them. We have a report of yesterday, which comes from England, reading as follows:

The report sent in to us from yesterday's note issue redemption offers further evidence that this August the nation's holiday is extending well beyond the bank holiday week-end. The rise of £3,500,000 in the circulation is recorded. The increase is all the more remarkable because it follows an upward leap of over £7,000,000 the week before.

The report continues:

This is another indication of the rapid rising of the prosperity of England.

Adding further that "the coming month will show much more in proportion to the gain thus disclosed in these other months, including August and the months preceding it", all this is disclosed by this very favorable report and an appropriate boast upon the record.

Following that, sir, we have the statement from another source of the Government. Turning from the other actual facts, we have the further recital, "The bankers' clearing-house return for the week ending August 7 indicates a total value of checks of £103,000,000 in excess of the week before." It will be observed that this last increase enabled the Treasury of England quite to exceed that which is reported from many other treasuries measured by their outstanding debt.

I am rising now to suggest, with the record before us, that England has in the last week arranged a dual loan, part of which will go to those who are supporting Ethiopia, and part to those who are supporting Italy. This is on the basis of financing national loans.

While she is able to do this from her plethora, as to which we, of course, all extend congratulations, I cannot but submit that at such moment England should be paying to the United States, out of the abounding sum which is the legitimate object of her boast, something of the debt she owes to the United States, surely now, and, particularly, a portion of the interest that was due to be paid this Monday just passed. By such contribution to her debt England could offset completely the obligation of $250,000,000 which we are now newly fastening upon the people of the United States.

I now bring to the attention of the Senate that France has lately closed a new compact with Russia by which Russia arranges a compromise of the 7,000,000,000 francs which Russia had borrowed from France at the outset of the World War as a sustaining power to Russia to enter into the war in aid of France. The subsequent course of Russia in the World War is too familiar to those who sit about me to call for any further reference other than to say that, of course, France became exceedingly resentful of the attitude of Russia and for awhile declined every form of commercial undertaking or what may be termed "industrial compact."

Now, France is enabled, by a new arrangement with Russia, to obtain a compromise of this 7,000,000,000 francs, the exact sum of which I am unable to reveal, not that I should not be glad to do so, but that feature has not been communicated to me. However, France has obtained this advantage, for which we praise her, and in the meantime France is extending a loan to Italy under conditions favorable, I dare say, to Italy, and the uses of which all of us now understand. Also France, in the meantime, engages a new trade treaty with Russia that excludes in its operation any benefits to the United States. I cannot but call the attention of this artistic and proud land with its patriotic people that a sense of duty and patriotism would be well exhibited and clearly demonstrated if they would likewise contribute something of the debt owing to the United States, particularly of the interest they owe.

If these two lands I describe should now pay to us the money due this week as interest we could lift the whole tax of this year's expenses from our United States. Note, sirs, I beseech you, since the sum is but a small proportion of the amount these debtor lands are now arranging to lend to lands entering into military conflict, that this honorable body shall, by appropriate course, demand of the Government of the United States and the officials in power in the United States that they take official notice of these loans which are being executed, and of these advances which are being consummated, and that our Government call upon those nations, who now show their full capacity to pay their debts, to contribute to the United States a part of that which they owe us, that we may from such money lift a part of the burden which we are compelled to lay upon our own people out of the necessities of the situation which now exists in our land, exceeding in all respects $50,000,000,000, including the twenty-five billion due the United States from the foreign debtor nations.

Mr. President, I do not know what course this administration expects to take. I do not wish to mask my disappointment that through the long session I have not seen anything brought forward that advised this coordinating body in our national affairs as to any particular arrangement suggested that seems to promise or lead to the payment of these debts or their adjustment upon any basis whatsoever. For myself, I could not allow this session to end, so far as my duty lies to my beloved people of the State of Illinois who, in common with those in other States of the United States, must bend under the obligations and burdens that were placed upon our land, by our necessities, without protesting my country granting for any reason whatsoever any cancelation of these debts due or surrendering the adjustment of these debts that the result may be applied at this time and credited to the calls of our own Nation.

Mr. President, I trust as we all do, that the conflict, which seems promised from reports in the public press, may not materialize. We beseech the fates that no war shall break forth with its furious lightning that shall flame with all the hell that it carries against the lives of men and the civilization of the earth. Sirs, let us not forget that we have seen wars breaking out and extending themselves from just so little a cause as now prevailing between Ethiopia and Italy. We revive the memory of Austria and Serbia, and remember that the Holy Scripture admonishes mankind to "beware of the cloud no larger than a man's hand." I summon you to the thought that if these possibilities shall arise in these nations heretofore characterized as our Allies, to whom we advanced with large generosity our money and our aid, in their travail, but who by manner in their silence, and by silence in their form of speech, decline even to concede their existence, and I call to their attention and to the attention of the eminent statesmen who represent them that if the hour shall move on, as is now feared, which shall involve those nations again in conflict, it will be this Nation—this United States—that will be the very first one to whom they will turn for aid.

We will hear from their envoys the cry, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink." Having that possibility before us, which is clearly without their contemplation, I make free to admonish that one of the methods by which they may obtain future favors from this over-generous land is to disclose a willingness to pay their debts and to deal with them with a standard of national honor.

I therefore avail myself of the moment during which I have obtruded in the debate on measures before the Senate again to call attention to the debtors that the hour is ripe for some payment of the debts, and the hour of necessity when America commands. I insist on the duty of my administration to exact action in some form and method by which the citizens of my beloved country may be relieved of the unconscious burden of taxation now to be laid upon them, and at the same time our America as a great nation of independence may stand before the world as a people who, fulfilling their obligations to all nations, will press in every proper cause all other nations to fulfill their obligations to us, and to prepare them for what we hold our immediate right, we exclaim, "Gentlemen, this is America."

STABILIZATION OF BITUMINOUS-COAL-MINING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9100) to stabilize the bituminous-coal-mining industry and promote its interstate commerce; to provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal; to levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a drawback under certain conditions; to declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest; to conserve the bituminous-coal resources of the United States; to provide for the general welfare, and for other purposes; and providing penalties.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I refer to page 8, section 4, of the pending measure. The first sentence thereof reads as follows:

While this act is in effect and for 60 days thereafter, the provisions of the antitrust laws of the United States shall not apply to any producer of bituminous coal who has accepted and obligated himself to comply, and who complies with the provisions of this section, or to any marketing agency or board created under and operating in compliance with this section.

It will be observed that this provision relates alone to the producers and to their agents. It does not and cannot possibly confer any benefit upon labor. I venture to say that this provision did not originate in the councils of labor. I cannot conceive of a workingman desiring to have coal, a fuel, controlled by monopoly. I regard the provision not only as not in the interest of labor but as distinctly against the interest of labor.

I have just been advised that the authors of the bill are willing to accept the amendment; and I, therefore, move to strike out the following language:

While this act is in effect and for 60 days thereafter, the provisions of the antitrust laws of the United States shall not apply to any producer of bituminous coal who has accepted and obligated himself to comply, and who complies with the provisions of this section, or to any marketing agency or board created under and operating in compliance with this section.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I am authorized to say, on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], and to speak for myself and the others who are in favor of the proposed legislation, that there is no objection to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, on page 10, in line 9, after the word "industry", I move to insert the words "of the district in question", so as to read:

The remaining member of each district board shall be selected by the national organization of employees representing the preponderant number of employees in the industry of the district in question.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, there is no objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to strike out paragraph (g), part II, on page 22, in the following words:

(g) The price provisions of this act shall not be evaded or violated by or through the use of docks or other storage facilities or transportation facilities, or by or through the use of subsidiaries, affiliated sales or transportation companies or other intermediaries or instrumentalities, or by or through the absorption, directly or indirectly, of any transportation or incidental charge of whatsoever kind or character, or any part thereof. The Commission is hereby authorized, after investigation and hearing, and upon notice to the interested parties, to make and issue rules and regulations to make this subsection effective.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, this paragraph, as I understand, lodges in the Bituminous Coal Commission Authority to put into effect rules and regulations which of necessity must affect the prices charged for the use of docks or other storage facilities or transportation facilities.

It seems to me this is a section which ought to be of real interest to all Members of the Senate who have within their several States dock facilities, whether they be upon the Great Lakes or in the other ports along the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard. I do not see, either, how any such language as is contained in this section can be anything but in derogation of the general authority conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission over all transportation facilities.

It strikes me, too, that the language is wholly unnecessary, because, as I understand, it is provided in another part of the bill that the minimum price shall be f. o. b. on the transportation facilities at the mine.

The character of control and the degree of control which ought to be exercised over docks are matters which were pretty thoroughly discussed at the time the water-carrier bill was pending before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate. There was so much divergence of view, so much opposition to that proposed legislation, that the authority originally intended to be conferred was eliminated from the bill when it was reported to the Senate. It seems to me every consideration which eliminated control over docks and wharves from that proposed legislation speaks against this control in that particular in this bill. This paragraph trespasses, it impinges upon the legislation which, through a long course of years, has conferred jurisdiction on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

For these reasons, the subsection to which my amendment refers ought to be eliminated from the bill.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I hope the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine will not prevail. If it should prevail, it would put every coal operator and every mining establishment in the country at the mercy of such concerns as the United States Steel Corporation, which own transportation systems which are used in marketing their captive coal. In my judgment, it would be very injurious to the whole purpose of the bill if the amendment should be adopted; and I hope it will be voted down.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to address a question to the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] as to the formation of the district boards provided for under subsection (a) of part I, pages 9 and 10. The inquiry I have in mind pertains to the next to the last sentence of the first paragraph on page 10.

After providing that the district boards shall consist of not less than 3 nor more than 17 members, all of whom except 1 shall be producers, the bill, as amended, provides that—

> The remaining member of each district board shall be selected by the national organization of employees representing the preponderant number of employees in the industry of the district in question.

What would happen in the case of any district where there was no national organization? Would the employees in that case have any representation? And, if not, does the Senator think they ought to be denied any representation?

I am seeking the Senator's view about the matter. It has been brought to my attention. It is possible that there might be such a district that had no national organization in it. It might be desirable that it should have; but, if it did not have, I am wondering whether the employees would have any representation at all on this board.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I am informed that at the present time there is no such district in the United States; that in all districts in which coal is commercially produced and marketed, there is a national organization.

Mr. BARKLEY. What would happen in this case: Suppose there were a district—and I have one in mind—in which the national organization is in existence, but it may not represent a preponderance of all the employees in the district. In that case, would the employees be denied representation on this board?

As I understand the language of this section, one member, representing the employees, must be selected from the national organization which represents a preponderance of all the employees in that district. If it had no preponderance—in other words, if there were no other organization in the district, and the national organization did not have a preponderance of employees in the district—it seems to me they would be without representation. I am wondering whether it is desirable to enact a provision which would bring about that result.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the paragraph following the one from which he has just read, and inquire if he does not believe that paragraph contains sufficient authority to justify the appointment of an additional member or members of the board.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator refer to the following paragraph, or the following sentence?

Mr. NEELY. The following paragraph.

Mr. BARKLEY. It reads:

> In case any marketing agency comprising a substantial number of code members in any producing field within a district establishes, to the satisfaction of the Commission, that it has no representation upon the district board and that it is fairly entitled thereto, the Commission may, in its discretion, after hearing, increase the membership of such district board so as to provide for such representation.

I think that applies to a marketing agency and I do not think that any organization of employees could be designated as a marketing agency.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky may be correct about that. The Senator from West Virginia was under the impression that the authority provided was probably broad enough to enable the Commission to make an appointment of representatives of the employees.

Mr. BARKLEY. I can understand how under that language in any such district where a national organization such as the United Mine Workers has within its membership a majority of all the employees in the district, it would have representation on the board, but if its membership represented only a minority of the total number of employees in the district, I do not believe under that language that any representation of the employees at all could be selected.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I desire to vote for the pending bill, if I possibly can, and with the amendment which has just been adopted with the acquiescence of the authors of the bill the measure is greatly improved. I think that is a very fair concession. It will probably be more difficult for the authors of the bill to accede to the amendment which I shall now propose; but, if they could do so, I believe I would be in a position to support the bill, for whatever that may be worth.

To those who are interested in the proposed legislation, I may point out that on page 7, section 3, under the title "Tax on bituminous coal", I wish to offer an amendment to strike out all after "Sec. 3", in line 2, down to and including the words "internal revenue" in line 12.

If we want to help the miners and the operators to sell coal and to permit the miners to get shorter working hours and more pay, it is not necessary to levy a tax upon coal in order to do it. There is no reason in the world why a tax upon coal will make any more work for a miner. As a matter of fact, the greater the tax is on coal the greater its cost and the smaller the quantity of coal purchased, because people could not, with the money they have, buy the same amount of expensive coal which they would buy if they were purchasing cheaper coal. Therefore there can be no sound or valid argument why a tax upon coal will help a single miner in the United States.

On the other hand, there is any amount of data, there are any number of facts, to support the statement that a tax upon coal will be greatly harmful to the millions of people all over the country who have to use soft coal as a means of keeping warm in the wintertime.

Furthermore, the more we increase the price of coal, whether by taxes or otherwise, the greater we make the necessity of industrial concerns using some other kind of fuel than coal. As a matter of fact, if this tax shall stand, I predict it will cause many industrial concerns to turn to oil as a means of generating steam and power, rather than coal, which they may now be using, and to that extent we will accentuate rather than decrease the grief of the miners who must have markets in order to sell the products which they work to mine.

May I ask, Would the amendment I have suggested be satisfactory to the authors of the bill?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I am sorry to say it would not be, unless the authors of the bill were willing entirely to withdraw the proposed legislation.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I say, with no reflection on the authors of the bill, that there can be no reason whatsoever, except the reason of naked camouflage, for taxing soft coal 15 percent of its value at the mine and saying that that will be beneficial to the miner. Every tax upon coal makes it cost more, and to that extent decreases the ability of those who must have coal to consume it, and to that extent makes less work for the miners who must mine it, and it makes less work for the operators who must sell it.

There can be no reason in the world for levying this tax on coal. This is a tax on the fuel of the poor, a tax on the fuel of industry, in Kansas, Colorado, Illinois, Montana, Iowa, Missouri, and every other State in the Union. It is a tax upon the fuel of the 20,000,000 people who either are now or lately have been upon the relief rolls of the country. As it increases the price of coal, it will increase the money which the Federal Government must expend in order to take care of those who are the victims of the depression. It would be almost equivalent to putting a tax upon bread, because people have to have food by which to live, and in the wintertime they have to have fuel by which to live.

There can be no justification in the interest of the burdened coal miner for putting a tax upon the product of his toil. On the other hand, his market will be decreased without his receiving any commensurate benefit at all with the decrease of his market.

I hope Senators will give this amendment their consideration. I ask anyone, either the author of the bill or anyone else, what justification there can be for putting a tax of 15 percent upon the fuel of the poor. Is there any man here who will rise and defend the wisdom of putting a tax upon coal? I shall be glad to yield to him if there is one in the Chamber. No one dares defend a tax upon soft coal, the fuel of the poor in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, and all the other large populous centers of this country, where the poor cannot afford to buy hard coal, and must forsooth depend upon soft coal in order to keep them warm through the winter.

Furthermore, it is a tax upon industry, increasing the cost of manufacturing goods, which every farmer must pay, as the cost of production of goods requires an increase in the price.

In order that Senators may know on what they are about to vote, I will state that my amendment is to strike from the bill the following provision:

> There is hereby imposed upon the sale or other disposal of all bituminous coal produced within the United States an excise tax of 15 percent on the sale price at the mine, or in the case of captive coal the fair market value of such coal at the mine, such tax, subject to the later provisions of this section, to be payable to the United States by the producers of such coal, and to be payable monthly for each calendar month, on or before the first business day of the second succeeding month, and under such regulations, and in such manner, as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

I submit this thought: Let us assume that a ton of soft coal costs $4 at the mine. By the pending bill the cost would be increased 15 percent, or 60 cents; so that the man who required a ton of soft coal, instead of paying $4 a ton for the soft coal with which to heat his house in the wintertime, by virtue of the language of the pending bill, would be required to pay $4.60 a ton, and not one miner in the United States would get one extra cent by virtue of that tax. The cost of the coal the consumer would have to buy would be increased, in the illustration I present, by 60 cents a ton, and not one miner in the United States would get 1 cent more a day because of that increase.

Are we willing to do that? Are we willing to increase the cost of a ton of soft coal? It will be noted that hard coal is not taxed under the bill, although it is notorious that the distress in the anthracite districts is greater than is the distress in the bituminous districts. Hard coal is the coal of the well-to-do and the rich, but soft coal is the fuel of the poor. We cannot tax the coal of the rich in order to help the anthracite miner—if the assistance of the miner is what is desired—but we can tax the coal of the poor in order to help the bituminous miner.

Let every consumer of coal of this Nation know that if this bill shall become a law there will be added to the cost of every ton of coal purchased an increase of 15 percent, none of which will go to the miner, none of which will go to the operator, but all of which will go to the Government.

There is a provision in the bill to the effect that a certain group of producers is to receive 90 percent of the so-called "tax" as a rebate. I know that; but how about the man who will not receive the rebate? He is not going to pay a 15-percent tax on the value of the coal at the mouth of the mine and take the tax out of his pocket. He is going to pass it on to the consumer. We may have all the other provisions of the bill without the 15-percent tax, and I make the prophecy, for whatever it is worth, that if this tax shall remain in the bill the net result will be to accentuate the distress in the mining fields of the Nation, because by increasing the cost of the product many industrial concerns will be driven to use oil or some other means of fuel in their respective plants.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Or we shall confront precisely the same situation we confronted under A. A. A., and we shall be asked to put compensatory taxes upon oil or electric energy.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not like constitutional arguments on the floor of the Senate. I think men ought to resolve those things in their own minds, because lawyers may differ; but, if I may be permitted just a passing sentence, I think even if this bill is a good bill, and even if every sentence of it is good as a matter of political philosophy to help the coal miners, the inclusion of the tax provision and the wording which is used here will nullify the whole act as soon as it can be carried to the courts.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. Has the Senator's attention been called to section 12, page 40, of the bill:

> SEC. 12. No coal may be delivered upon a contract made prior to the effective date of this act at a price below the minimum price at the time of delivery upon such contract, as established pursuant to part II of section 4 of this act, and such contract shall be invalid and unenforceable.

Does the Senator think that provision is constitutional?

Mr. TYDINGS. I certainly do not. I do not think there is a single exception in the decisions of the Supreme Court where contracts within the category mentioned in the description just given us by the language of this bill have ever been permitted to be set aside by law by an act of the Congress or an act of the legislature of any State in the Nation.

If that opinion is worth anything, the Senator is welcome to have it.

Mr. DIETERICH. I think it is good.

Mr. TYDINGS. Even that is a minor issue, however, because the bill may contain provisions that although certain parts of it are unconstitutional, if so found by the courts, that shall not invalidate other parts of the bill. What I desire to leave with the Senate is the thought that by this bill we are taxing a commodity the same as if we should tax bread, the same as if we should tax shoes, the same as if we should tax shelter. What justification can there be for doing so when there is going to be no benefit whatsoever to the miner? If it is possible to get benefits for the miner by way of minimum wages, maximum hours of work, and the like, why not get them directly? Why whip the devil around the stump through the medium of taxation, and unnecessarily increase the cost of the fuel of the poor, and take work from the miner, because the fuel will cost more, which will decrease its consumption and force industry to look for other means of energy than coal?

I hope my amendment to strike out all after section 3, line 2, page 7, down to and including the words "Internal Revenue" in line 12, will prevail.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, if this amendment should be adopted, the purpose of the bill would be entirely defeated.

Of course, everyone who has read the bill and who has studied its philosophy knows that the purpose of this particular section is to prevent the destruction of this bill, if enacted, by chiseling coal operators, who were described by one of the witnesses before the Senate committee in the aggregate and in their competitive wars against each other as being a frantic mob. If this amendment should prevail, there would be no means of compelling a truce on the part of the operator who wishes to continue to engage in his murderous competitive practices, which sooner or later in every mining community end in wiping out the wage scales and lowering the standard of living of those who dig the coal and load it upon the coal cars.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. NEELY. I will set my distinguished friend from Illinois an example, and I will yield to him just as frequently as he wishes to interrupt me, although he refused to yield to me a little while ago.

Mr. DIETERICH. Will the Senator from West Virginia explain why, in dividing the various districts throughout the United States into nine minimum-price areas, those who did so did not conform to the division which was made by the coal code authority of N. R. A.?

Mr. NEELY. I cannot answer that question. I do not know why it was done.

Mr. DIETERICH. The Senator does not know?

Mr. NEELY. No; I do not know why this bill did not adopt some other principle. I do know that I approve the principle which was adopted; but why some other principle was not adopted, I do not know.

Mr. DIETERICH. That was the principle which was in existence, and that was the principle the bill is intended to perpetuate, as I understand. Why were not the provisions adopted which were made by the Coal Code Authority of N. R. A.?

Mr. NEELY. I think what the Senator from Illinois really means is, Why is not this bill drawn so as to conform in every particular to the N. R. A. legislation, in order that the Supreme Court would certainly hold it to be unconstitutional? A studious effort was made to avoid that contingency.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me again?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. There could not be any more constitutional questions raised by virtue of the nine districts in existence under the N. R. A. than by virtue of those provided for by this bill. To give the Senator an illustration, was it not the purpose of the bill that Pittsburgh, using Pennsylvania coal, could purchase the coal at the price which was fixed at the mouth of the mine, at the place of delivery, and that Chicago, which is a marketing area, and Gary, Ind., would have to pay the competitive price fixed upon the cost of coal delivered in Chicago and at Gary from the fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia?

Mr. NEELY. No; Mr. President. That thought was not in the mind of anyone, and the result indicated could not possibly occur.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. MURPHY. On the contrary, if the Senator pleases, my reading of the bill indicates that that is clearly the thought; and if I am in error I shall be glad to have the Senator point out wherein the error lies.

I read beginning with line 12 on page 13, describing the duties of the district boards:

> Each district board shall, from time to time on its own motion or when directed by the Commission, establish minimum prices free on board transportation facilities at the mines for kinds, qualities, and sizes of coal produced in said district, with full authority, in establishing such minimum prices, to make such classification of coals and price variations as to mines and consuming market areas as it may deem necessary and proper. In order to sustain the stabilization of wages, working conditions, and maximum hours of labor, said prices shall be established so as to yield a return per net ton for each district in a minimum price area, as such districts are identified and such area is defined in the subjoined table designated "Minimum-price area table", equal as nearly as may be to the weighted average of the total costs, per net ton, determined as hereinafter provided, of the tonnage of such minimum-price area.

As I understand, the district board fixes an f. o. b. minimum price for the district. There is created a market area, and a market area I assume to be a city where nonnative coal is received in competition with native coal. To illustrate, the State of Iowa is created a single district. Let us assume that an f. o. b. mine price of $2 a ton is fixed. That is the minimum price. But embraced in the State of Iowa are the city of Des Moines, the city of Sioux City, and the city of Davenport, the city of Burlington, the city of Ottumwa, and other cities which are designated market areas. Also in Iowa are numerous small towns, such as, for instance, Adel. The point is that the mine price f. o. b., or the district price, will apply in a town like Adel, a small community, but the mine price f. o. b., or the district price, will not apply in the market area defined in the bill. The question arises as to how that price shall be fixed, and that is covered by paragraph (b) on page 17 in this language:

> (b) District boards shall, under rules and regulations established by the Commission, coordinate in common consuming-market areas upon a fair competitive basis the minimum prices and the rules and regulations established by them, respectively, under subsection (a) hereof. Such coordination, among other factors, but without limitation, shall take into account the various kinds, qualities, and sizes of coal, and transportation charges upon coal.

So that the boards representing the various districts embraced in this area meet together and fix not the mine price f. o. b. for coal, but they take into account the mine prices f. o. b. for coal in every one of the districts; having done which they take into consideration as coordinating factors the various kinds, qualities, and sizes of coal and the transportation charges upon that coal.

I submit from my reading of the bill—and if I am in error I should like to have that error pointed out, because I think it is fraught with great significance to my State and to the State represented in part by the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH] who preceded me—that means we shall have two prices for coal in a given district. We shall have one minimum price for coal in the small towns in my State and we shall have a market area price in the market areas, or the larger cities of the State; and the price in the large cities of the State will be fixed after taking into account the transportation charges, from West Virginia and Pennsylvania. In other words, the freight differential, which now operates to the advantage of the producers in Illinois and Iowa and Indiana, will be wiped out. We have to meet their coal not at the mine price f. o. b., but at the price of coal f. o. b. at the point of delivery. The miner who produces the coal does not get any more wages; his wages are covered in the f. o. b. mine price of coal.

What is the purpose of that provision? I am apprehensive that its purpose is to open our market to the coal of West Virginia and of Pennsylvania.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURPHY. I yield.

Mr. GUFFEY. How great is the difference between the freight rates from Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Iowa and the local freight rates to the respective markets in the Senator's State?

Mr. MURPHY. I am not carrying in my mind the exact figures as to freight rates.

Mr. GUFFEY. I have them to give to our friend from Illinois, who said it was about 1,200 miles from Chicago to Pennsylvania, while the greatest distance it can be carried from Pennsylvania to Chicago is 640 miles, and the maximum freight rate from Pennsylvania to Chicago is $3.29 a ton; and from the western part of the State it is $3.04 a ton; the lowest local freight rate to Chicago, Ill., from within the State of Illinois is $1.50 a ton; and the maximum to Chicago from within Illinois is $1.79 a ton.

Mr. MURPHY. Where are the latter rates from?

Mr. GUFFEY. From the respective coal fields in Illinois.

Mr. MURPHY. From points in Illinois?

Mr. GUFFEY. To points in Illinois.

Mr. MURPHY. There is a differential of how much?

Mr. GUFFEY. It is $1.57 in one case. The provision is designed to protect the consumer.

Mr. MURPHY. How does it protect him?

Mr. GUFFEY. The freight rate cannot be added. The purchaser buys a carload f. o. b. and pays his own freight.

Mr. MURPHY. On the contrary, what I have just read will not protect the consumer.

Mr. GUFFEY. The Senator and I read the English language a little differently then. The provision is put in there to protect the consumer.

Mr. MURPHY. I refer again to page 17, where it is plain that "such coordination, among other factors", determines what the market price shall be, the cordination being effected by the district boards, and such coordination of prices shall take into account the transportation charges upon coal.

Wherein is there any protection to the consumer at all? As I read it——

Mr. GUFFEY. One cannot pay a dollar and a half in one case and $3.29 in the other case and pretend to say that the one is competitive with the other. The market is going to absorb it. The whole intention is to protect the consumer of the coal.

Mr. MURPHY. The whole intention of this bill, as I read it, is to protect the right of West Virginia and Pennsylvania to go into these markets and to protect their right to go in.

Mr. GUFFEY. How can the Senator say that, in view of the difference in the freight rate?

Mr. MURPHY. We have the benefit now of the differential. It costs that much more for Pennsylvania coal to reach our market, does it not?

Mr. GUFFEY. Who changes the freight rate? The proposed coal commission cannot change the freight rate. Is not that under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. MURPHY. That is absolutely true, but the proposed commission shall, under this provision, take into account the difference in the transportation charges in fixing the market prices of coal in a given market area. It can undo what the Interstate Commerce Commission has done, if I read the provision correctly.

I agree with the Senator from Pennsylvania that the bituminous-coal board proposed to be set up cannot change the freight rate; no; but they can change the effect of the freight rate in fixing the market price for coal in a market area. By fixing that market price, the miner does not get any more; he is not particularly benefited; his benefit is confined to the mine price.

What will be the effect upon the industries of our area of taking away the advantage to them of a freight differential? It will obviously hamper their ability to compete.

Now, taking a different approach to it, let us assume a Pennsylvania district, an industrial district, if you please, where Pennsylvania coal is used and the market-area price does not govern. The industrialists buy their coal more cheaply at the district price than at the market-area price. They are competing with the industries in my section of the country that have to pay the market-area price.

I have taken great care to try to understand these provisions of the bill. I recognize that a tremendous problem confronts the coal industry of West Virginia and of Pennsylvania, and I should like to help in the solution of the problem, but I do not want the interest of my State to be hurt when the problem is being solved.

If I have made an error in the statement of my interpretation of this bill I should like to have pointed out wherein I am in error.

Mr. GUFFEY. It was not the idea of the framers of the bill to hurt any one State. Thirty-one States produce bituminous coal, and I think every market area is properly protected as to its market and as to price. That was the idea of this bill, and those who advocate it stand on that.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I should like to ask the author of the bill a question. He was not present when I asked the chairman of the subcommittee the question. Why did not the framers of the bill in drawing it adopt the districts as set out in the bituminous code authority under the N. R. A.? In that instance, there were five districts. Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, a part of Virginia, and the Eastern States up to the Atlantic seaboard constituted one district, and Illinois, Iowa, and Indiana another district. What is the reason the framers of the bill did not adopt those districts? If it is intended by this bill to preserve the benefits which it is said the industry derived from the N. R. A., why did not its framers adopt those districts if it was not for the purpose pointed out by the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I hold in my hand the statistical abstract of the United States for the year 1934. I am going to read what this tax will cost every State in the Union, and I wish to prove the case as I go along.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator on what basis he is basing the tax?

Mr. TYDINGS. Just a moment.

Mr. GUFFEY. Fifteen percent on a $2 rate is how much?

Mr. TYDINGS. Let us see about that.

Mr. GUFFEY. Wait a moment. How much rebate, how much draw-back is there? Let the Senator be honest and fair with his auditors.

Mr. TYDINGS. Just let the Senator sit still, because this is the part that hurts when people find out how much they are going to pay for it.

First of all, there were produced in the United States last year 327,000,000 tons of bituminous coal. We exported that same year, in round numbers, more than we imported about 20,000,000 tons of coal. So, for the purposes of my argument, I am going to assume that 300,000,000 tons of coal were used by business and individual consumers in the United States.

I have here figures showing the average cost of soft coal by States, and, after taking all the cities in the country from one end of it to the other, I find the average retail cost of a ton of soft coal is $7. It is higher than that in some communities and slightly lower than that in a few others.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me develop these figures; then I will yield; but I cannot give the picture if in the middle of it I am interrupted. Then, I will be delighted to yield to the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. I may not want the Senator to yield then.

Mr. GUFFEY. May I call the Senator's attention to a fact which perhaps he has overlooked?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; not until I finish.

So, as I was saying, we have 300,000,000 tons of coal used in the United States, and the average retail price of that coal is $7 a ton.

That means that the bituminous coal bill for the United States is seven times $300,000,000 or $2,100,000,000.

Let us assume, for the sake of argument, that coal sells at the mine for $2 a ton, with which I do not agree, but I shall take the illustration of the Senator from Pennsylvania. This bill would put a tax of 15 percent on that coal bill.

Mr. GUFFEY rose.

Mr. TYDINGS. Just a moment. What does that mean? It means a 15-percent tax, and a 15-percent tax on $2 per ton means 30 cents per ton.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. In just a moment. Thirty cents extra per ton on 300,000,000 tons means $100,000,000 that comes out of the pockets of the consumers of this country. Those figures cannot be denied.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I deny the figures. The Senator has not read the bill.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Maryland is going to rely on the facts.

Mr. GUFFEY. There is a 90-percent rebate on that 15 percent. In other words, the total tax is 3 cents per ton, which would bring the tax down considerably below the Senator's figure. A tax of 3 cents per ton on 350,000,000 tons a year would make the country's total tax paid to the Government about $10,000,000.

Mr. TYDINGS. Under the Senator's peculiar brand of mathematics, 15 percent of $2 is 3 cents. [Laughter.] What the Senator is trying to say is that those operators who come under the code will get 90 percent of the tax rebated to them. But how do we know they are going to rebate that 90 percent of the tax to the consumer, and will not let those who are under the code pay that tax out of their own pocket?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. Just a moment. I cannot yield now.

I wish to consider these figures by States. I have taken only $2 a ton and I have shown by the figures, which cannot be gainsaid, that without the rebate this will cost the American consumer $100,000,000 a year on $2-a-ton coal.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Maryland a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. Not now. The Senator would not yield to me at all when he was speaking. I have already yielded twice and I shall yield again when I finish with him on the witness stand.

Mr. GUFFEY. I am perfectly willing.

Mr. TYDINGS. Understand, the Statistical Abstract, page 681, giving the cost of coal by States, enables me to tell any Senator, I believe, what coal sold for in his State last year. A fair average price was around $7 a ton. Is the Senator from Pennsylvania so naive as to suppose that the imposition of a 15-percent tax at the mine will not be utilized by every intermediate holder all the way down to the ultimate consumer to boost that price; that it will remain at the original 30 cents paid at the mine? Will not the shipper add something on because he will tell the dealer it is taxed, and will not the retailer add something more because of the tax, and the ultimate consumer will pay it all because of this tax? But, for the purposes of the argument, I take the $2 figure mentioned by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Let us see how it affects the various States. As I stated originally, there were 320,000,000 tons of bituminous coal consumed in the United States in 1934. There are 120,000,000 men, women, and children in the country. The per capita consumption of bituminous coal is about 2½ tons. If the increase is 30 cents a ton on the $2 coal of the Senator from Pennsylvania, 2½ tons per person means two and one-half times 30 cents, or 75 cents per capita tax on every man, woman, and child in the country.

Let us translate that into dollars by States. All we have to do is to take the population of a State and multiply it by 75 cents, or take three-quarters of the figure, and that will give us in round numbers what the tax would be on the consumption of coal in the respective States.

In the State of Maine it would cost the people $600,000 a year.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, why not stick to the facts?

Mr. TYDINGS. In New England it would cost the people $6,000,000 a year. In Maine, having a population of 800,000 people, it would cost $600,000 a year. In New Hampshire it would cost $300,000 a year extra. In Vermont it would cost about $225,000 a year extra; in Massachusetts, $1,000,000; in Rhode Island, nearly $200,000; in Connecticut, $1,150,000.

In the Middle Atlantic States, having a population of 26,945,000, it would cost the people three-quarters of that amount, or, in round numbers, about $18,500,000. It would cost New York $8,000,000 extra. It would cost New Jersey over $1,000,000 extra. It would cost Pennsylvania about $7,000,000 extra.

In the east north central States, having a population of 25,000,000, it would cost about $18,000,000 extra, of which Ohio would pay $4,500,000 extra; Indiana would pay $2,400,000 extra; Illinois would pay $6,000,000 extra; Michigan would pay $3,600,000 extra; Wisconsin would pay about $2,400,000 extra.

In the west north central States, having a population of 13,425,000, those States altogether would pay in round numbers about $10,000,000 extra. Minnesota would pay $1,800,000 a year extra. Iowa would pay $1,800,000 a year extra. Missouri would pay $2,500,000 a year extra; North Dakota $400,000; South Dakota nearly $600,000.

Nebraska would pay about $1,000,000 a year extra. Kansas would pay about $1,400,000 a year extra. Delaware would pay $180,000 a year extra. Maryland would pay $1,200,000 a year extra.

The District of Columbia would pay $300,000 a year extra. Virginia would pay $1,800,000 a year extra. West Virginia would pay $1,300,000 a year extra. North Carolina would pay $2,400,000 a year extra. South Carolina would pay $1,200,000 a year extra. Georgia would pay $2,300,000 a year extra.

Florida would pay $1,100,000 a year extra. Kentucky would pay $1,800,000 a year extra. Tennessee would pay $1,800,000 a year extra and so would Alabama. Mississippi would pay $1,500,000 a year extra. Arkansas would pay $1,200,000 extra. Louisiana would pay $1,500,000 extra.

Mr. LONG. Oh, no, we would not. [Laughter.]

Mr. TYDINGS. Oklahoma would pay $1,800,000 extra. Texas would pay $4,500,000 a year extra.

Montana would pay $350,000 a year extra. Idaho would pay $100,000 a year extra. Wyoming would pay $150,000 a year extra.

Colorado would pay $750,000 a year extra, New Mexico $100,000, Arizona $100,000, Utah $100,000, and Nevada $75,000 extra.

The State of Washington would pay about $1,000,000 extra. Oregon $700,000 extra, and California $4,500,000 extra of this tax; and that is on the basis of $2 coal.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The able Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] has used calculations which he must concede are subject to numerous and material modifications. I wish to ask him whether he has counted the cost in terms of dollars to society of a disorganized bituminous-coal industry in which lowered living standards and other dangerously antisocial conditions have long been tragic consequences of the failure of government to introduce into that industry some ordered control in the public interest?

Mr. TYDINGS. I thank the Senator from Colorado for giving me a delightful bit of logic with which to buttress my argument.

He asks whether I have counted the cost to society of this bill. I have been counting the cost to society in increased cost of coal, the fuel of the poor, bituminous coal—not anthracite, not the fuel of the house that is heated by an oil-burning system, but the fuel of the poor, with 20,000,000 on relief, those who are unemployed. I have been counting the extra cost of the 15-percent governmental tax on this coal, and that upon coal which costs but $2 a ton. In conclusion, I am only adopting the same argument which the Senator from Colorado himself adopted when, as a member of the Tariff Commission, he continually pointed out how tariff taxes increase the cost of goods to the consumers of the United States.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland, in his remarks, has estimated for the State of Colorado, under his far too liberal calculation, an approximate increase in the total cost of coal of $750,000. I recall very well a succession of great coal strikes in the State of Colorado, making his questionable figures less impressive, in which many millions of dollars in increased costs were thrown upon the taxpayers and coal consumers of that State, and in which uncounted lives were sacrificed because of lawlessness and disorganization dominating the bituminous-coal industry. May I again ask the Senator from Maryland whether he has made any calculation, and, if so, whether he will give it to the Senate, showing the cost to the people of the United States of critical and prolonged coal strikes during which the prices of coal have been raised to the consumers of the United States as much as $2 to $10 per ton?

Mr. TYDINGS. I again thank the Senator for giving me another bit of logic with which I may buttress my argument.

I have just read in the newspapers that a number of the housewives in Detroit are organizing a Nation-wide consumers' league, complaining against the high price of meat. I understand that on one occasion it was necessary to call out the police force in the town of Detroit to prevent the rioting of the poor, who could not afford to get the necessities of life because of another tax which Congress levied upon those necessities. If we should keep on taxing the necessities of life and the necessities of fuel, I ask the Senator whether the little strike to which he refers, bad though it was, might not take on Nation-wide proportions.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIETERICH. I have been somewhat concerned about the language of this bill. Since the Senator from Maryland has paid considerable attention to it, I should like to ask him what he understands by the language found in various places in the bill where appeals are allowed to the board, to the circuit courts of the United States, and the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, from actions of the Commission and the Labor Board in the matter of finding the facts, where the bill says, for instance, on page 33, under the title of "Organization of the code":

> The finding of the Commission or Labor Board as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive.

I notice that the term "substantial evidence" is used there. Does that mean that if there is any evidence which substantiates the finding, no matter what the weight or preponderance of the evidence may be, and no matter whether it is manifestly against the weight or preponderance of the evidence, it is to be taken as conclusive?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes. Does the Senator desire an actual illustration of the phrase about which he is asking?

Mr. DIETERICH. I should like to have it.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will tell the Senator what "substantial evidence" is.

We will suppose that a man was shot on the steps of the Capitol, and that 15 people saw the slayer shoot the victim, and all 15 of them said he had on brown shoes and blue pants and a white shirt and a light hat. Therefore, we go out in the streets somewhere and find a man dressed in that way. We bring him before the bar of justice. We describe the clothing he has on. We find it tallies with the testimony of 15 witnesses. That would be substantial evidence. Therefore, we ought to hang the man. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator one question.

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Regarding one State, if the Senator will investigate, he will find that Louisiana is blessed with natural gas, which is burned in the stoves.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is true; but the amount of which Louisiana would be relieved according to the figures I have read would be added to some other State, for I viewed the Nation as a whole, and took only an average.

Mr. President, in my judgment there is not a miner in the country who is going to profit by this tax. If we desire to bring in a minimum-wage scale and maximum hours of work, let us bring them in frontally. If we are not going to bring them in frontally, then, for heaven's sake, let us not disguise them by penalizing the consumers of the country 15 percent on the mine cost of every ton of coal they have to have.

This argument about the rebate is not a fair argument, because the rebate of 90 percent of the tax goes back to the mine owner provided he complies with the rules and the regulations of the central commission.

Any mine owner who does not wish to comply with the rules and regulations of the central commission does not get his money back. There will be plenty of mine owners who will not wish to comply with the rules and regulations of the central authority. The tax is going all the way on to the consuming public, and it is going to be added to as it goes along.

There is no justification for the proposed tax; and, indeed, I doubt whether anyone seriously contends that the Congress has a right to levy a commodity tax of this character on a product at the mouth of the mine for the purposes enumerated in the bill. It is not a regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, although the title of the bill says the bill is enacted in order better to control interstate commerce.

I do not wish to get in the position of delaying the bill by speaking more than is necessary. I rose only to show what this tax would mean to the consumer. I shall now take my seat, expressing the hope that the tax will be taken from the bill.

LET AMERICA BEWARE!

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, all day yesterday and today I have been trying to get 3 or 4 or 5 minutes, or perhaps a little bit longer, for the purpose of putting in the RECORD some data relating to this Ethiopian-Italian-British situation, and, perhaps I should add, the situation as it affects Europe and Africa as a whole.

I have before me an editorial from a paper published today in Washington. I seldom find in this newspaper anything in an editorial way which impresses me; but on its front page there is this editorial, which is headed "Will Congress Keep Us Out of War?"

And it continues this particular comment:

> Britain to ask United States to help curb war. Diplomats already moving to get Washington to line up against Italy. This is the news from Europe. It may prove the most fateful news for us since the World War.

I ask to have this entire editorial printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VAN NUYS in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I was furnished by a friend last night with a copy of the first history, I think, about which we know anything, written by Herodotus, and I find the following note on page 187:

> Where the south declines towards the setting sun lies the country called Ethiopia, the last inhabited land in that direction. There gold is obtained in great plenty.

I think I can explain to the Senate, learned as the Members are, by reading from this book I have here, which cost only $1, which can be purchased at any drugstore [laughter], and the World Almanac, which now sells for 50 cents—with $1.50 worth of information—I think I can explain the cause of nearly all the European and African trouble. [Laughter.]

"There gold is obtained in great plenty," says this man, writing 2,480 years ago:

> Huge elephants abound, with wild trees of all sorts, and ebony, and the men are taller, handsomer, and longer-lived than anywhere else.

I was surprised at what the World Almanac contained about this country. I showed it to a learned Member of this body this morning, and found that he was as much affected by the disclosures as I was. Therefore I shall read an extract from a very short article which appears in the World Almanac of 1935, which will be found on page 637:

> Ethiopia—Empire of Abyssinia.
> Area, estimated, 350,000 square miles.
> Population, estimated, 10,000,000.
> Capital, Addis Ababa; population, estimated, 70,000.

I read the following:

> Ethiopia (or Abyssinia) is a mountainous volcanic country in northeast Africa. * * * The agricultural and mineral resources of the country are comparatively undeveloped.

In other words, they have remained there ever since this history was written, 2,484 years ago.

> And its wealth of water power is unused. In the lower country and deep valleys, which are very hot, sugarcane, cotton, coffee, and rubber are produced, while grain, fruit, tobacco, potatoes, etc., are grown in the higher temperate country. The upper slopes are given over to cattle raising. Hides, skins, coffee, and beeswax are the chief exports and cotton goods the chief imports.
>
> A railroad 487 miles long, built under French auspices, runs from Jibuti, the French-owned port on the Red Sea, to the capital.

Trade through Jibuti, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and British Somaliland in 1929–30 was: Imports, $4,758,955; and exports, $4,614,843.

Trade with the United States was: 1933, imports, $27,078; exports, $181,164; 1932, imports, $38,024; exports, $229,214.

The religion is Christianity of the Coptic sect. Education is for the clergy alone, and the people are generally illiterate.

German scientists describe the Abyssinians as "a mixed Hamito-Semitic people", and other ethnologists assert that the "true Abyssinian type contains no Negro blood whatever and none of the Negro qualities, either physical or mental." The royal family claims descent from Menelik, the son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. Ethiopia (or Abyssinia) is the only country in Africa that was neutral in the World War. It applied for membership in the League of Nations in 1923. After an investigation into the existence of slavery in the kingdom and the promulgation of a decree in June 1923 making slave trading punishable by death the country was admitted into the League, September 28, 1923.

Now I come to something to which I want every Senator to listen, and I hope I may have the undivided attention of all Senators, in order that I may give them note of something which has never been brought out in the public press. This may be changed next year—it probably will be changed the next time the World Almanac is printed—but these are the facts, nonetheless:

Great Britain and Italy agreed among themselves in December of 1925 that they would support each other to secure for the British the right to build a dam at Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile, for the irrigation of the Sudan, and the Italians to build a railway between Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

In other words, a contract was entered into by Great Britain and Italy that they would mutually exploit Ethiopia in 1925. One of them was to have the power and water resources, the other was to have the right to build a railroad across the country.

Mr. COPELAND. Whose country?

Mr. LONG. Ethiopia. These countries were going down there together to exploit it for both of them in 1925.

Lake Tsana is at an altitude of about 6,000 feet.

Senators can imagine a lake 6,000 feet above sea level. I do not think there is a lake in this country to compare with that. The potentialities of a lake 6,000 feet above the level of the sea are more immense than we can comprehend, compared with what we have in this country. The lake—

Is about 40 miles long, 30 miles wide, with an area of about 1,200 square miles. The Blue Nile flows out a relatively broad stream, and 21 miles from the lake makes a plunge of 80 feet into a narrow gorge.

We all know how important it is that Great Britain shall have the control of the immense supply of the waters of the Nile and the headwaters of the Nile.

In the next 30 miles it descends 2,000 feet in a series of falls, and near the Sudan Plains there is an additional fall of 2,000 feet. Possibilities of easy power development are great.

Ethiopia, who had not been consulted, protested to the League of Nations in 1926.

In other words, Ethiopia had not been consulted about this trade which had been made by Great Britain and Italy to go down there as partners and exploit this undeveloped, rich country which had been in that condition for 2,400 years or more. Therefore Ethiopia, which had been admitted to the League of Nations in 1923, after complying with certain requirements which had been demanded by the countries composing the League of Nations, filed a complaint over what Italy and Great Britain had agreed to in the way of exploiting this country, over which the Ethiopians had set up their own government.

What happened when they made this complaint?—

Great Britain and Italy protested that no encroachment was intended and the matter was dropped. Italy and Ethiopia, in a joint statement issued in Rome September 29, 1934, reiterated their mutual attitude of friendship and nonaggression.

In other words, when Ethiopia exposed the thing in a plea filed with the League of Nations, Great Britain and Italy stated that they intended no such thing, and Italy went on the side lines and made a still deeper friendship with them, and issued one of these pronouncements to the world of their undying friendship, and stating that there would be no aggression by either party, Italy or Ethiopia, or anybody else.

The United States, after a lapse of 20 years, reestablished diplomatic relations with Ethiopia in 1928, Addison E. Southard being sent to Addis Ababa as minister and consul general. Emperor Haile Selassie, on July 16, 1931, gave the people a constitution providing a legislative body of two chambers with responsible ministers to carry out its decisions.

I will read no further, because that is about all of the article; but I will make a statement, and then read one further excerpt.

Ethiopia has been found to be a very rich country. Its resources are very badly needed. Not only is the population of these countries demanding an outlet, but the fact is that even the rocks of the Ethiopian country have been found to be petroliferous. They have found various and sundry mineral resources. The colonies of Great Britain need the water supply, they need the water power. Those resources are needed by these various countries so much so that they speculated upon going into a mutual contract for the conquest, or development, or whatever they wish to call it, of this country, now called Abyssinia.

Mr. President, this country of America may be brought into a war. We passed a joint resolution today which means a good deal, but will not prevent this country from being dragged into a war again. I am calling to the attention of the Senate the fact that Ethiopia's trade does not mean anything to this country; that it has been but a few years since we reestablished our diplomatic relations with them. However, as cruel as the Italian policy is, whether Mr. Mussolini is justified or not is not a matter of moment. I trust that before we meet here again there will be no such thing as a security floated in the United States or that the President of the United States will permit any action of any kind that will entangle us by cords of sympathy or by trade understandings that will lead us into a possible conflict, regardless of the merits or demerits of the cause of anybody else.

Of course, most of the people in this country are of English descent, and there is a natural bond of sympathy between us. We all have more or less English blood in our veins. Nonetheless, we have to look at England a little bit. We have to remember how the French acquired their colonies in Africa, and we have to remember how England acquired her colonies in Africa.

Then, again, in connection with these so-called "philanthropic expeditions" which are pursued by the countries composing Great Britain, it is well that we bear in mind something I now read as reflecting that policy. I read this for a particular further reason. Ethiopia is a country wherein there are produced large quantities of opium, as well as containing minerals and water-power resources which are available.

I read from Ridpath's History of the World, volume 7, page 286, the following:

Following the course of events, we come now to consider the history of the so-called "opium war" between England and China.

We never find this printed in an American schoolbook. I know of no schoolbook today that is taught in the United States which tells of the opium war between England and China. Perhaps I am one of the Senators late to learn about it, but it has only been a relatively few years that I was particularly acquainted with the matter.

The circumstances leading to this unfortunate and disgraceful catastrophe had their root partly in the industrial and political constitution of the Chinese Empire, partly in the commercial transactions of the British East India Co., but more properly in the wanton avarice and conscienceless policy of the home Government of Great Britain. The matter at issue related to the introduction and sale of opium by British traders in the ports of China.

And they might have said, in the ports of the United States, through China.

Such importation had begun under the auspices of the East Indian Co., and was carried on by that gigantic corporation until 1834, when the charter and exclusive rights of the company expired. Meanwhile the opium trade had become important. Many districts in India produced the poppy in exuberant abundance. The drug drawn therefrom was carried by the ships of the company to the Chinese ports and sold to native merchants, under whose encouragement the opium-smoking habit spread rapidly among the people. The Imperial Government—took the alarm and adopted the policy of excluding the opium ships from all the harbors of China.

That is, the Government of China—

The measures looking to this end were reasonable in the highest degree. The right of the Chinese authorities to protect the people of the Empire from the disastrous effects of the opium habit could not be gainsaid with the slightest show of reason. The trade in opium had meanwhile passed from the monopoly of the British East India Co. to the general merchant marine of the Kingdom. At this time the ports which were open to English commerce and English intercourse in general were Canton and Macao. In these ports of entry the British Government had planted superintendents, whose conduct, instead of being directed with judicial fairness and in accordance with the principles of international law, was wholly biased by the interests of the illicit trade of their countrymen.

Nor did the home Government in this emergency take the first step toward the maintenance of the right and honor in its dealing with the Chinese authorities. Even when Captain Elliott, chief superintendent in the port of Canton, made one appeal after another to the ministry for instructions covering the discharge of his duties, he received no reply. Matters were allowed to drift in their own pernicious course. The British traders became bolder and bolder, discharging enormous cargoes of the deadly drug under the very eyes of the Chinese officers. After a while the Government sent out a dispatch to Captain Elliott telling him virtually that those who traded in opium against the edict of the Emperor would have to take the consequences; that the British authorities would not interfere to protect those merchants who were engaged in the illicit trade, but that they must bear such losses as their own persistency and the execution of the Chinese laws might entail. This was equivalent to saying that the British traders in the East might provoke a war with China, with the implied inference that after the war was begun Great Britain would defend her interests without looking into the justice or injustice of the conflict. It was clear that as soon as hostilities should be precipitated, excesses would be committed by the Chinese, and unacquainted as they were with the usages of European warfare, and that the home Government of England would be obliged to take up the cause of its traders and other subjects on the coast of China.

The war came on. The imperial officers in the Chinese ports demanded that the introduction of opium should absolutely cease, and that the cargoes now in store should be given up for destruction.

The cause of the war was that the Chinese Government demanded that the importation of opium into China by Great Britain and her loyal merchants should be brought to a close, and because the Chinese closed their ports to the opium trade that England had foisted upon China the war came on.

At length, in 1839, Captain Elliott was constrained to comply with this demand. It was agreed that all the opium then in the hands of Englishmen should be surrendered to the native officers, and he also exacted a pledge—of no validity—from the merchants that they would cease to traffic in the drug. Accordingly, on the 3d of April, in the year just named, 20,383 chests of opium were given up to the mandarins, and, under direction of Imperial Commissioner Lin, were destroyed. It was this event—though the same had been brought about in virtual conformity with the instructions which Captain Elliott had received—that precipitated hostilities. A declaration of war was made by the English Government in 1840, and the East Indian Fleet was sent to the Chinese coast. Native armies were thrown into the field; but in the conflict which ensued they were like sheep for the slaughter. There could be but one result. What could the diminutive, undisciplined, half-armed men of the Orient, though fired with the valor of Spartans, do before the shining bayonets and vomiting cannon of Great Britain?

As a matter of course, the English were constantly victorious. In the first year the British Fleet captured the town of Chusan, and in 1841 the Bogue Forts were easily taken. It is narrated that when one of the Chinese towns was captured, the Tartar general, in the hour of defeat, shut himself up in his house, and ordered his servants to burn him to death. It was the custom of the routed Chinese to drive their wives and children into wells and ponds, and then cut their own throats in the very frenzy of their hopeless rage. When the British squadron sailed up the River Peiho against the Chinese capital, some futile efforts were made at negotiations, but the movement came to naught. The important city of Ningpo, distant somewhat from the sea, was taken, and then Amoy, far to the south, fell into the hands of the British.

Not, however, until an army was planted in front of Nankin, did the Imperial Government realize the hopelessness of further resistance.

At any rate, without reading further, Mr. President, the results of the opium war are pretty well known, and I read this conclusion:

It is that of the opium war of Great Britain with China. If there be a single instance in the recent history of mankind more highly illustrative of the possible meanness, avarice, and arrogance of the strong—an example of the willful persecution and unmerited punishment of an unoffending people by one less numerous but more mighty than themselves—it is that of the opium war of Great Britain with China.

What else did they do? When they had forced the opium trade on China, what else did they do? Here is a little further article which relates to what happened to this oriental country which undertook to throw the opium trade from its borders and to civilize and protect its people.

It goes on to tell—

Finally, an indemnity of four and a half million pounds sterling was wrung from the Chinese Government as the price of war, and to this was added another large sum to pay for the opium which had been destroyed at the outbreak of hostilities.

Great and wonderful Great Britain! So this is that friend of civilization and of humanity which forced the opium trade on China, which entered into agreement to exploit Ethiopia, which can carry on a war as long as there is an American dollar afloat or as long as there is a soldier of its own or some other country in the trench.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. May I add a word as to the modern conditions regarding the opium traffic which will add to the strength of what the Senator is saying. In order that the Indian monopoly in opium might be continued, about 1910, as I recall it, there was an arrangement, which I suppose was a forced arrangement, by which Great Britain insisted that China should decrease her acreage of opium 10 percent a year. By that time the drug addicts, the opium addicts of China had been developed largely through the effort spoken of by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], and there was a demand in China for opium; naturally they turned to the development of the poppy cultivation in China, and that became such a serious menace to the monopoly in India that, as I say, about 1910, as I recall it, an arrangement was entered into, forced I suppose upon China, by which there was to be a 10-percent reduction a year in the acreage, so that by the end of 1920 there might be no poppies developed in China. The war intervened, and I do not know what the situation is now. But I think, as much as I admire the British nation, that what it has done is to perpetuate the opium traffic of the world, and through what we call the free ports of China to make possible by carrying opium into those ports and then by free exportation from those ports we have found the opium business of the world promoted.

I wanted to say that much, not alone to reinforce what the Senator has said, but in order that we might realize just exactly where the responsibility lies in the continuation of the opium business of the world. I think the Senator, regardless of what his main purpose may be in his presentation of these facts, has rendered a public service, a world service, by calling attention to this particular evil.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New York. America owes a great deal to this European diplomacy. We are indebted to them for our opium trouble not only in America but throughout the world today.

As the statesman from New York has pointed out, not only did England force this evil in China and through China into the world, but when this evil became so profitable that the Chinese began to participate in it they forced the Chinese to cease their participation in the growing of poppies and the production of opium, in order that they might control the profits out of what we know to be a curse against the human race.

We had a little experience in 1918. We were drawn into a war, step by step, until when the time came for actual declaration of war as a matter of fact, to large extent we found that we had already been in the war. The American people should look askance upon these so-called "humane" efforts insofar as concerns Ethiopia.

The only reason why Italy and Great Britain did not go in there together in 1925 was because the exposure seemed to be too imminent at the time, and they were not in a position to justify that kind of encroachment upon territory which did not belong to them. Ethiopia has water power, has many resources, including minerals, and various and sundry products, including the product of opium. Ethiopia is desired by many countries, probably by Italy to some extent and probably by Great Britain to some extent.

But let America not be deluded or fooled any further. There is no good purpose on the part of those countries in their exploitation or even defenses. They are over there only to use someone else for their marauding encroachment which they are making either upon one another or upon someone probably innocent. There is nothing to be gained by an alliance with them. Let America be a burned child afraid of the fire. Eleven billion dollars of indebtedness owed to us, never to be paid, is the reward for our last adventure, to say nothing of our wounded and dead and the hatred of the entire European and probably Asiatic countries, which resulted from that move which we were told would make free the world for the sake of democracy, but which was to carry along such activities as are indicated in the articles which I have read.

America beware. In the name of the soldiers who sleep in unmarked graves; in the name of the millions suffering for our last mistake; in the name of all humanity let America beware.

EXHIBIT A

[From the Washington Daily News of Aug. 21, 1935]

WILL CONGRESS KEEP US OUT OF WAR?

Britain to ask United States to help curb war. Diplomats already moving to get Washington to line up against Italy. This is the news from Europe. It may prove the most fateful news for us since the World War. It means that we are close to the edge. Powerful forces are pulling us toward the swift and treacherous current of Old World conflict. Once we are in none can predict the disaster which may engulf us.

If it is true that the United States Government is discussing economic action against Italy, as the cables state, our neutrality and safety already are jeopardized. Anyway, the British pressure is strong. We have succumbed before. Will we succumb again?

Congress must answer. The gravest responsibility laid on Congress by the Constitution is the power over peace and war. That does not mean merely the power to make or to withhold a declaration of war after events have made the decision for Congress. It means the power so to mold events and to make policies in advance that will keep us free from such war entanglements.

The domestic legislation engaging Congress in its closing week is important, but only infinitesimal beside the colossal question of American neutrality in the threatened African-European war. This is its first and supreme job now. If Congress adjourns without passing the pending neutrality bills, it will betray its trust.

If Congress and the administration avoid passing the neutrality laws, it will be for the specific purpose of permitting possible American intervention. We believe that is the road of destruction. We believe the American public—which pays the price—is overwhelmingly opposed to such action, regardless of the excuse.

There are plenty of impressive reasons given, of course. We should help the Ethiopian under dog, it is said. We should join with other powers in protecting the peace machinery from the Italian aggressor, it is said. All we would have to do would be to give our moral, diplomatic, and economic support to Britain or the League; there is no thought of military intervention by us, it is said.

Not one of these arguments can stand before the facts. We cannot save the Ethiopian for democracy, because Ethiopia already is a country of slavery. Much as we deplore the domination of the weak by the strong in the Italian-Ethiopian case, it is less fateful to the world than Japanese conquest of China, British domination in India, and other imperialist domination elsewhere. If we are going out to protect the weak from the strong, we shall have to fight all of the great powers—including ourselves.

There was a time not so long ago when we had a gambler's chance to save the world-peace machinery. The United States—wisely, we believe—took that chance. But we lost. We lost when the British tories broke up the Coolidge Geneva Arms Conference. We lost in the Manchurian crisis when the British tories sided with the Japanese militarists against us and prevented a united front of world powers to save the world-peace machinery. And we lost a few weeks ago when these same British tories deserted France and Italy and made a separate naval deal with Hitler, which reverses the naval situation in which we are so vitally interested.

Now this same British Tory Government wants our help against Italy. Why? Not because of some poor black semisavage in Ethiopia, whose lot is about the same as similar natives under Italian and British rule. The real issue is between British Tory imperialism and Italian Fascist imperialism. Mussolini challenges British naval dominance of the Mediterranean. The Mediterranean, the Suez, and Egypt are the keys to India and the whole British Empire.

If Britain goes to war, it will not be to protect the Ethiopian or the League of Nations but to save her own skin. Certainly we do not blame her for that. Nor do we blame her for trying to draw us in on her side. We doubtless would do the same if we were in her place.

Far from being anti-British, all of our national sympathies are with the British people. But our sympathy does not extend to the point of wanting to fight a war to curb Fascist imperialism and to protect British imperialism.

We learned in the World War, and at the Paris Peace Conference and at the Geneva Arms Conference and during the Manchurian desertion, and through the recent Baldwin-Hitler naval deal, that we simply cannot make the world safe for peace with the present set-up; that we can only endanger our own peace in the effort.

That explains American public sentiment today in favor of neutrality in this crisis. The most dangerous thing we can do is drift. The only direction we can drift is toward war, if not today then tomorrow.

If we escape, it will be because the President and Congress put us in a position to maintain that difficult position. The first, and by far the most essential step, is passage of the pending neutrality bill, particularly the ban on all war credits, now.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 414. An act to convey certain lands and buildings to the city of Reno, Nev.;

S. 1448. An act for the relief of certain claimants who suffered loss by fire in the State of Minnesota during October 1918;

S. 2578. An act authorizing distribution of funds to the credit of the Wyandotte Indians, Oklahoma;

S. 2644. An act for the relief of the estate of Harry F. Stern; and

S. 3092. An act to provide funds for cooperation with White Bird School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3019) to amend sections 1, 3, and 15 of "An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes", approved June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269).

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION IN THE DISTRICT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. KING submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7167) to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, authorize appropriations, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with the following amendments:

On page 4 of the Senate engrossed amendment, in line 20, strike out "7" and insert "8"; on page 5 of the Senate engrossed amendment, lines 11 and 12, strike out "or by the District"; on page 8 of the Senate engrossed amendment, after line 26, insert the following:

"DISTRICT CONTRIBUTIONS

"Sec. 5. (a) The District of Columbia shall pay contributions, in addition to its contributions as an employer, in the following amounts: For the calendar year 1936, $100,000; for the calendar year 1937, $125,000; and for the calendar year 1938, $175,000.

"(b) The contributions required by this section for each calendar year shall be paid by the District to the Board, and shall, immediately upon receipt by the Board, be paid into the District Unemployment Fund."

On page 9 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 2, strike out "5" and insert "6"; on page 9 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 8, strike out "6" and insert "7"; on page 9 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 15, strike out "7" and insert "8"; on page 11 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 12, strike out "8" and insert "9"; on page 12 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 2, strike out "9" and insert "10"; on page 13 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 17, strike out "10" and insert "11"; on page 14 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 2, strike out "three" and insert "one"; on page 15 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 12, strike out "11" and insert "12"; on page 18 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 3, strike out "12" and insert "13"; on page 18 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 5, strike out "decisison" and insert "decision"; on page 19 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 21, strike out "12" and insert

"13"; on page 20 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 10, strike out "13" and insert "14"; on page 21 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 9, strike out "act" and insert "Act"; on page 21 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 22, strike out "14" and insert "15"; on page 22 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 7, strike out "15" and insert "16"; on page 23 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 6, strike out "16" and insert "17"; on page 23 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 21, strike out "17" and insert "18"; on page 24 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 21, strike out "18" and insert "19"; on page 26 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 6, strike out "19" and insert "20"; on page 27 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 2, strike out "20" and insert "21"; on page 27 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 6, strike out "21" and insert "22"; on page 27 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 17, strike out "22" and insert "23"; on page 27 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 22, strike out "23" and insert "24"; and on page 28 of the Senate engrossed amendment, line 5, strike out "24" and insert "25"; and the Senate agree to the same.

WILLIAM H. KING,
R. S. COPELAND,
ARTHUR CAPPER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

VINCENT L. PALMISANO,
HENRY ELLENBOGEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

THE BUSINESS AND POLITICAL SITUATION

Mr. HASTINGS obtained the floor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Logan	Robinson
Ashurst	Davis	Lonergan	Russell
Austin	Dieterich	Long	Schall
Bachman	Donahey	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Duffy	McCarran	Sheppard
Bankhead	Fletcher	McGill	Shipstead
Barbour	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Barkley	George	McNary	Steiwer
Black	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Glass	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Gore	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Guffey	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Hale	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hastings	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hatch	Norris	Wagner
Capper	Hayden	Nye	Walsh
Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Chavez	Johnson	Overton	White
Clark	King	Pittman
Connally	La Follette	Radcliffe
Copeland	Lewis	Reynolds

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM"

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, on August 13 the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], in a speech on the floor of the Senate, called attention to the fact that for some time there has been considerable criticism of the present administration. The distinguished Senator then said he desired to say a few words about what the administration has done in the 2 years and 5 months since it has been in power.

Mr. President, I heard part of that speech, and I have since read it with great care. I was particularly interested in the following paragraph:

> Mr. President, nearly 2,000 years ago the great Savior of mankind, who spake as never man spake, said, among other things, "By their fruits ye shall know them." This wise method of judging the works of men never has been and never will be improved upon. Whatever anyone may think about the matter, it will be by this rule that President Roosevelt and his administration will be judged.

As I thought about this statement and this administration, I was reminded of a quotation which I think is in the Bible also; namely—

> Their folly shall be manifest unto all men.

And, Mr. President, as I heard the praise by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee of this administration, my mind drifted to the Democratic platform of 1932. It seemed to me the American people might well be cautioned, as was done by Paul the Apostle in his letter to the Ephesians, when he said:

> That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.

Certainly the people of America have been tossed to and fro, and certainly they have been carried away with every wind of doctrine; and it seems to me not too much to say that the sleight and cunning craftiness of the "brain trust" have been lying in wait to deceive them. It is well known that there are persons who are so certain of their position that they think they are justified in a certain kind of deception in order that they may bring great reward to the people whom they deceive. The average "brain truster" looks upon the American people as an ignorant and howling mob, and seems to think that in order to get results for them he must exercise a certain amount of craftiness and a certain amount of deception.

However, Mr. President, I agree with the doctrine laid down by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee when he says:

> By their fruits ye shall know them.

Instead of that text, he might well have taken some one of these:

> Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

Or this:

> The way of transgressors is hard.

Or perhaps this:

> We are perplexed, but not in despair.

And if he had been sufficiently familiar with the Bible, he undoubtedly would have turned to the book of Job and quoted this language:

> Thou shalt be secure, because there is hope.

Or this from the book of Romans:

> And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.

But after all, Mr. President, I am not quite so sure that the American people can attach to the word "promise" so much importance as they gave to it in 1932. Neither am I certain that the word "hope" means quite so much to them, so far as this administration is concerned, as it did a year or two ago; and it may be that the considerable criticism of the present administration, of which the Senator from Tennessee speaks, is largely due to the fact that this administration has forgotten the definition of the word "promise", and has left to the American people little or nothing but hope, and "hope deferred maketh the heart sick."

The N. R. A. bill, of which he speaks, was full of promise and hope. The magnificent Blue Eagle was supposed to control the field, the factory, and the forest. As the Senator from Tennessee grieves over its dead body he finds satisfaction in knowing that this great bird once lived, and that its soul still flutters about, protecting the children from labor, the wage earner from long hours, and monopolies from the threatened hand of the Department of Justice; and it might well be noted that to sustain the angelic wings of this defunct bird it is costing the taxpayers something like $700,000 or $800,000 every month.

The Senator from Tennessee goes on to say:

> The goal of Mr. Roosevelt's policies has been recovery. * * * Two years and five months of unrelenting toil and masterful leadership have removed substantially every distress that afflicted our people on March 4, 1933. * * * Now some are forgetting everything except inconsequential mistakes, and they are beginning to criticize the President.

Mr. President, I think the country will be a little surprised to learn that the goal of Mr. Roosevelt's policies has been recovery; and I am sure they will be greatly relieved to know that every distress that afflicted our people on March 4, 1933, has been substantially removed.

Some of us have begged the administration to center its attack upon a recovery program; but if we apply the principle laid down by the Senator from Tennessee, namely, that "by their fruits ye shall know them", I think we shall discover that the administration has put reform ahead of recovery, and it is that kind of fruit by which Mr. Roosevelt expects to be known to future generations.

I doubt whether the 10,000,000 persons now out of work, a number but slightly below the number unemployed when this administration began, can be persuaded that the masterful leadership of Mr. Roosevelt has removed substantially every distress that afflicted them. I doubt whether the 20,000,000 persons who are now on relief will agree with the Senator from Tennessee when he says that recovery is here, and that the distress that afflicted us has disappeared. I am not yet persuaded that the people of the land who walk the streets and receive their daily bread from the hands of a central government are entirely content. Neither am I satisfied that they are content to receive from the Federal Government money for doing useless things. I think the Senator from Tennessee has overstated his case when he assures us that we are free from distress, and that the country is once more enjoying prosperity.

The Senator from Tennessee is pleased to note that the farmers have gotten out of the depression and are back to normal, and he contends that when that condition exists the whole country is also prosperous. I doubt whether it may be said that the farmer is back to normal when his prosperity depends upon the size of the check he receives from the Federal Government, based upon a promise not to grow things.

It may be that the Agricultural Adjustment Act is the distinguished accomplishment of the Roosevelt administration; but, oh, how proud we should be now if we could bring back the lives of the 6,000,000 little pigs that Mr. Wallace destroyed. How much happier the average housewife would be if, when she went into a butcher ship, she could purchase at a reasonable price enough pork for dinner, instead of looking at it with wistful eyes and watering mouth, and realizing that pork is now one of the dainty dishes that only the well-to-do can afford.

It is a strange sort of philosophy, Mr. President, when the fruits of a great administration shall be known and praised by the scarcity of the food and clothing it creates.

The distinguished Senator from Tennessee says:

> Some say that what has been done is not economically sound. Perhaps it is not; but it has done the job.

Mr. President, does the Senator from Tennessee admit that the prosperity that has come to the farmer has been brought about by a policy that is not economically sound? If it be true, as the Senator from Tennessee says, that perhaps the policy is not sound, what hope does he hold out for the farmer in the years to come from the adoption of such a policy? If we adopt the Senator's test to this policy—namely, "By their fruits ye shall know them"—may I inquire whether it may not be reasonably expected that the fruits of a policy that is not economically sound will some day bring discredit upon the administration that is responsible for such a policy. And, of course, there can be no sound economic policy which has for its base the largess, the bounty of the Federal Treasury. Prosperity that is bought and paid for cannot be relied upon by either this or future generations. Prosperity that is built upon a false economic plan cannot be a thing of which people may proudly boast. So, even if it be admitted that the condition of the farmer is that described by the Senator from Tennessee, it should not be looked upon as anything more than a temporary relief for the farmer, and that at the expense of other people of the Nation.

But, Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee says that in addition to the farmer there are two other classes of persons that have been greatly benefited. Those two classes are the bankers and the laboring men.

I am glad to know the Senator thinks this administration has done so much for these two classes of persons. It may be that it has done great things for the banker; but, if that be true, it seems to me rather strange that the banker does not appreciate it. I thought the banker was in the mind of the President when he promised to drive the money changers from the temple. He certainly has had but little if any defense here. I have not heard a banker spoken of respectfully in the Senate during the past 2½ years. I really did not know we had done so much for him. The bankers with whom I come in contact do not even mention what has been done for the banker, but they are constantly talking about what has been done to the banker. I know that an effort has been made to place the control of banks in this administration. I know that this administration desired to have that done, and we have just gone through a difficult fight to prevent it. I realize that we have invested Government funds in the preferred stock of many of the banks of the Nation, and that in itself gives the administration a certain amount of control over all of them; but it never occurred to me that this could be pointed to with pride as one of the great things that had been done for the bankers.

But, after all, it seems to me that this is not of very great importance, because the bankers are not very numerous, and none of them has more than one vote; so it becomes of little importance whether the administration has done much or little for them.

But, Mr. President, it is entirely different with the working man. There are a great many working men in the country, and if we add the 10,000,000 who have no jobs, we have a real host, indeed. I should think, however, that if we could find jobs for the 10,000,000 who are now idle the Senator from Tennessee would have very much greater reason to rejoice about what had been done for the working man than he could possibly have under the present conditions. Men and women who have jobs are not entirely happy when there are millions walking the streets and ready and willing to take the job occupied by another. The worker cannot maintain his normal independence under conditions of this kind. Neither can the worker be entirely happy when he finds that the pay envelop has not been increased, while the food and clothing he buys has increased in price from 50 to 100 percent. It is difficult for the average worker to get much consolation out of what this administration has tried to do for him when thousands of them have lost their jobs and homes because of the processing tax. It will be difficult for the Senator from Tennessee to satisfy the worker out of a job because of the importation of the kind of articles he has been accustomed to make.

Mr. President, I do not deny that this administration has made some effort to assist the workingman, but it cannot be true that it has been very successful when we remember that there have been more strikes during this administration than during the same length of time in any previous administration.

The Guffey coal bill is urged upon us by certain classes of workers, and the President is so anxious to comply with their request that he is urging upon the Congress not to permit doubts as to its constitutionality to prevent us from passing it. But it is of but little credit to the administration to seek the popularity of the workingman by urging the adoption of unconstitutional acts by the Congress, and thus endeavor to place the blame for its failure upon the Supreme Court.

The effort made to assist the worker has not been in the right direction. The worker wants a job. He wants freedom and a job requiring reasonable hours of work and at a living wage. This cannot be brought about by direct congressional action, or by an Executive order of any kind, It can be ultimately done and only be done by a revival of the business of the country.

But, Mr. President, we are assured by the Senator from Tennessee that this administration has also done great things for the business man, for he says, "Nor has the business man's plight been overlooked", and further, "There has likewise been a vast improvement in the transportation business." It may be, as the Senator says, that the business man's plight has not been overlooked, but he might very well have added that everything the President and his advisers could think of that would disturb and distress the business man has been recommended to the Congress; everything that would destroy his confidence and make the future more uncertain has been in progress since the first 2 or 3 months of this administration.

The recommendations of the Chamber of Commerce, which represents the business people of the Nation, have been scornfully rejected and ignored, and the Chamber of Commerce itself has been spoken of in this body in such uncomplimentary terms by administration Senators that one is bound to reach the conclusion that there is but little sympathy here for its objectives.

The business man has pleaded with us not to disturb him at this time by increased taxes, but the President had recommended it, and there was no turning back.

Under the social-security bill we have laid a tax so drastic and revolutionary in character that he knows not where he stands.

I do not deny that there has been improvement, but whatever improvement there has been, has been in spite of the administration's activities instead of as a result of them.

My own judgment is that the declaration by the Supreme Court that the National Recovery Act was void was the greatest incentive to business that has come since the adoption of the Economy Act. The last shreds of the Economy Act, as we all know, have but recently passed out of the picture with the approval of the President.

No, Mr. President; the Senator from Tennessee can gather but little fruit to store up for the credit of this administration by any reference to what it has done for the business man.

But let me pass on and make one further observation. The Senator from Tennessee says:

> Therefore we find that $2,500,000,000 of our regular annual income is paid by the consumers of the country, rich and poor alike, men and women alike.

And further along he says:

> Of course, in the foregoing figures I have not included some $600,000,000 or $700,000,000 known as the "processing tax", which the Government receives and pays out as a special fund.

I assume the Senator would admit that the processing tax must be paid by the consumer also, and that this makes a total of $3,200,000,000 that is being paid annually by the consumers of the Nation. This, as I understand it, is being paid in part by the banker and the workingman, for whom the Senator says this administration has done so much. This demonstrates that all classes of people of the Nation ought to be interested in the amount of money that is being expended by this administration.

If the Senator from Tennessee had desired to show that President Roosevelt had greater qualities than other Presidents, he might with accuracy have pointed to his record and said, "Here is the greatest spending President this country has ever known." He could with accuracy have said that Mr. Roosevelt has found and will have spent during the first 3 years in office a sum of money about equal to all of that that had been spent by all of the Presidents from Washington to Wilson, a period of 124 years, a sum of about $24,500,000,000.

I wonder if he feels that the consumers of the Nation, who he says are paying all of the annual taxes, with the exception of about $500,000,000, will be proud of this record when they realize, as they must realize ultimately, that the greater burden of it all is to fall upon them.

Is it to be considered a great accomplishment to create an annual deficit of about $4,000,000,000 a year in the face of a promise that there should be no deficit at all? Is it to be considered a great accomplishment to promise to reduce Government expenses by something like 25 percent, and then at the very first opportunity to increase them by pretty nearly 100 percent? Is it to be considered a great accomplishment to promise economy by reducing the bureaus and commissions and the number of Government employees, and right in the face of it to increase the number of bureaus a hundredfold and the number of employees by nearly 200,000?

The economy bill, enacted early in this administration, was supposed to save a billion dollars. It was urged upon the Congress to save the country from bankruptcy, but the itching palm of the great spender could not permit it to last long. He soon began to whittle it away, until the other day, the last chip fell into the basket.

If putting the Government into competition with private enterprise is an accomplishment; if extravagance, want, and waste form an accomplishment; if the taking of a sullen attitude toward the decision of the Supreme Court is an accomplishment; if the undertaking of a change of our form of government and making out of it a new social order is an accomplishment; if the Senator from Tennessee wants to list all of these in his laudatory remarks about the President of the United States, then I am again willing to apply the test to President Roosevelt, and say, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. President, I might continue, but I doubt whether it is worth while. The country knows the facts, and I am satisfied that the people of the Nation will follow the Senator's suggestion and judge the President by the rule suggested. If that be done, however, the criticism of the President, of which the Senator so bitterly complains, will grow as the appalling facts are more fully appreciated. His promises will not be forgotten. His ruthless disregard of them will not be forgiven. The Federal Constitution shall not be destroyed. The rights of the several States shall be preserved. This country shall pay its honest debt. The unemployed shall not be permitted to go without a job, but, Mr. President, if these things are to be done, we must get rid of the vagaries that beset us. We must not be led into the social order that destroys freedom of action. We must hold fast to principles that have made us great; discover and correct the faults that come with the growth of progress, and, in my judgment, these things cannot be done unless we have courage enough to freely and vigorously criticize the mistakes of those in authority as such mistakes from time to time appear.

COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY (S. DOC. NO. 126)

Mr. WALSH. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the President's message pertaining to the cotton-textile industry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which will be read and lie on the table:

The legislative clerk read as follows:

To the Congress:

Last April I appointed a Cabinet committee, consisting of the Secretary of Commerce, as chairman, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Labor, to make a survey of the conditions and problems of the cotton-textile industry. I am now in receipt of a communication signed by the members of the committee, with which they submit their findings and recommendations.

This letter and these findings and recommendations of the committee I am immediately transmitting herewith for the information of the Congress.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 21, 1935.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, this report will command a great deal of public interest and attention. Therefore, I move that the message, with the accompanying papers, be printed with illustrations as a Senate document.

The motion was agreed to.

MARY SKY NECKLACE—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 122)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return herewith, without my approval, S. 1696, "An act for the relief of Mary Sky Necklace."

The bill provides for the payment to the county of Bon Homme, S. Dak., of the sum of $374.43 in settlement of its claim against Mary Sky Necklace for taxes assessed against property which she purchased, with the approval of the Office of Indian Affairs, from trust funds held to her credit by the Federal Government, and with an understanding on her part that the property would be nontaxable.

It does not seem to me that the Federal Government is properly chargeable with any obligation to pay the taxes on such property, either as to the accumulated taxes contemplated by the bill, or as to the future taxes which, by that principle, would be assumed to be a governmental obligation as long as the land remained in Indian ownership.

There are, moreover, many cases of a similar character for which this proposed enactment would constitute an unwise precedent.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 21, 1935.

JOHN W. BECK—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 123)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return herewith without my approval, S. 457, authorizing me to summon John W. Beck, lieutenant, United States Army, retired, before a retiring board, to inquire whether at the time of his retirement under section 24b, National Defense Act, as amended, he was incapacitated for active service, and whether such incapacity was a result of an incident of service, and if, as a result of such inquiry, it is found that he was so incapacitated, I am authorized to nominate and appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the said John W. Beck, a first lieutenant, Regular Army, and place him immediately thereafter upon the retired list of the Army, with the same privileges and retired pay as are now or may hereafter be provided by law or regulation for officers of the Regular Army.

The measure further provides that no back pay or allowances shall be held to have accrued prior to its passage.

From the facts in this case on record in the War Department, I find that John W. Beck's retirement was accomplished in strict accordance with the provisions of existing law and his rights were duly safeguarded. The records clearly indicate that he had no incapacitating disability at the time of his retirement, but was retired under the provisions of section 24b of the National Defense Act, as amended, because of unfavorable records of service. Therefore, I can see no reason for singling him out for preferential treatment at this time for the purpose of changing his retired status and thereby increasing his compensation.

Further, I note that the Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, House of Representatives, Report No. 1272, and Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, Senate Report No. 200, contains a letter from the Veterans' Administration which recites the military service record of an individual who is not the beneficiary of this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 21, 1935.

HARRY T. HERRING—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 124)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return herewith, without my approval, S. 1426, authorizing me to appoint Harry T. Herring as a lieutenant colonel, United States Army, and to place him on the retired list of the Army as a lieutenant colonel, with the retired pay and allowance of that grade.

From the facts in this case of record in the War Department, it appears that Harry T. Herring never held a commission in the Regular Army. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy on June 13, 1905; and was honorably discharged as a graduated cadet, July 12, 1905, having been found physically not qualified to perform the full duties of an officer of the Army because of organic heart disease. He subsequently served during the World War as an emergency officer in the Ordnance Department in the grades of captain, major, and lieutenant colonel. In 1920, he was one of the many emergency officers examined for commission in the Regular Army, and was again found not qualified for such appointment because of physical disability.

I am also advised that Colonel Herring is now receiving compensation from the United States Veterans' Administration amounting to $35 per month.

In view of the foregoing, I do not consider that this former emergency officer is entitled to the benefits of the Regular Army retired list. It would be unjustly discriminatory to place him on the retired list of the Army, when many others in similar circumstances are denied equal consideration. The retirement system of the Regular Army was provided for the twofold purpose of attracting desirable permanent personnel to the service and of vitalizing the active list. Its maintenance for such purpose is vital to the national defense and should not be jeopardized by utilizing it as a means of relief, or for placing upon such retired list persons other than the permanent personnel of the military stablishment.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 21, 1935.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

STABILIZATION OF BITUMINOUS COAL-MINING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9100) to stabilize the bituminous coal-mining industry and promote its interstate commerce; to provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal; to levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a draw-back under certain conditions; to declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest; to conserve the bituminous-coal resources of the United States; to provide for the general welfare, and for other purposes; and providing penalties.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, before a vote is taken on the Tydings amendment I wish to express the hope that it may be defeated, for the reason that if it shall prevail the only means of enforcing the provisions of the proposed law will have been stricken from the measure. Therefore, I hope that the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I should like a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment. I will ask the friends of the bill to join me in getting a roll call on this amendment. I demand the yeas and nays on this question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I rose a moment ago for the purpose of asking that the clerk state the amendment before the vote is taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, line 2, after "Sec. 3", it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the words "Internal Revenue" in line 12.

Mr. TYDINGS. The amendment simply provides for striking out the tax.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will proceed with the roll call.

Mr. NEELY. I suggest the absence of a quorum. This is a very important amendment, and a majority of the Senators should be present when it is voted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names.

Adams	Dieterich	Lonergan	Robinson
Austin	Donahey	Long	Russell
Bachman	Duffy	McAdoo	Schall
Bailey	Fletcher	McGill	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Frazier	McNary	Sheppard
Barbour	George	Maloney	Shipstead
Black	Gerry	Metcalf	Smith
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Steiwer
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	Gore	Murray	Thomas, Utah
Burke	Guffey	Neely	Townsend
Byrd	Hale	Norbeck	Trammell
Byrnes	Harrison	Norris	Truman
Capper	Hastings	Nye	Tydings
Caraway	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Clark	Holt	Overton	Wagner
Copeland	Johnson	Pittman	Walsh
Costigan	King	Radcliffe	White
Davis	La Follette	Reynolds

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BULKLEY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] who is absent from the city. I understand on this vote he has been specially paired, which leaves me free to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MCNARY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS of Utah (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE] and vote "nay."

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). Has the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have a general pair with that Senator. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE];

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO]; and

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] with the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] is absent on official business.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. If present, that Senator would vote "nay." Therefore, I allow my vote to stand.

Mr. NEELY. The senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] was called to the White House a few moments ago and authorized me to say that if he were present on this roll call he would vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the following Senators are detained in important committee meetings: The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the junior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

I also announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] is detained on important departmental matters.

I wish further to announce that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE] are unavoidably detained.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 44, as follows:

YEAS—29

Austin	Dieterich	Hastings	Trammell
Bailey	Duffy	King	Truman
Barbour	George	Metcalf	Tydings
Burke	Gerry	Norbeck	Walsh
Byrd	Gibson	Overton	White
Caraway	Glass	Russell
Clark	Gore	Schall
Copeland	Hale	Smith

NAYS—44

Adams	Donahey	McAdoo	Radcliffe
Bachman	Fletcher	McGill	Reynolds
Bankhead	Frazier	Maloney	Robinson
Black	Guffey	Minton	Schwellenbach
Brown	Harrison	Moore	Sheppard
Bulkley	Hayden	Murray	Shipstead
Bulow	Holt	Neely	Steiwer
Byrnes	Johnson	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Capper	La Follette	Nye	Thomas, Utah
Costigan	Lonergan	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Davis	Long	Pittman	Wagner

NOT VOTING—23

Ashurst	Chavez	Keyes	Murphy
Barkley	Connally	Lewis	Pope
Bilbo	Coolidge	Logan	Townsend
Bone	Couzens	McCarran	Vandenberg
Borah	Dickinson	McKellar	Wheeler
Carey	Hatch	McNary

So Mr. TYDING's amendment was rejected.

Mr. COPELAND obtained the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I ask the Senator if he intends at some time during his remarks to offer an amendment?

Mr. COPELAND. No.

Mr. TYDINGS. I wonder if the Senator would mind if I should offer an amendment of one word only to the bill. Then, of course, the Senator would have the floor; but, as many Senators are on the floor at this time, I should like them to know what the next amendment will be.

Mr. COPELAND. I will yield at any time to a Senator who has an amendment so short as one word.

Mr. TYDINGS. Then, Mr. President, on page 7, line 4, I move to strike out "15" and insert in lieu thereof "5." That will simply reduce the tax from 15 percent to 5 percent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, at this late hour in the session I dislike to take even a moment in discussing the bill. There are certain circumstances, however, which, to my mind, necessitate saying something about it.

It is strange how the passage of time changes the alinement regarding measures which appear before us. On May 3, 1926, I introduced in the Senate what was known as "Senate bill 1477", to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in coal and to promote the general welfare dependent upon the use of coal.

Again on January 4, 1928, I introduced what was known as "Senate bill 2029", to promote consolidations and cooperation in the mining and marketing of bituminous coal. The latter bill provided for voluntary cooperation and consolidation of the soft-coal mines. I was aware then, as I am now, of the great number of miners out of work. The war, with the need for larger quantities of coal, particularly soft coal, had necessitated a much larger production. The hard coal was used by our naval vessels and vessels in foreign trade at that time. Soft coal was in unusual and unheard-of demand. Everybody who had any coal land opened a mine, and by reason of that emergency thousands of men were induced to go into mining.

When the war ended and there was no longer the same demand for labor, thousands of coal miners—if I remember correctly, at that time 450,000 of them—found themselves without work. The bill to which I last referred was introduced in the House by the then Representative from Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Jacobstein, a very able economist, and was introduced by me in the Senate.

We took counsel of those who had knowledge of constitutional law, and concluded that the bill was a proper one.

It legalized consolidations by exempting them from the operation of the Sherman antitrust law. It limited these consolidations to regional areas approved by the Secretary of Commerce. It set up the necessary legal machinery for restricting the overproduction of soft coal. It placed in the Secretary of Commerce the responsibility and power to supervise such consolidations in order to protect the public, the independent mine owners, and mine labor from exploitation.

At that time I had a running battle with my very able colleague, whom I love dearly—the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]—who was then opposing my bill which had to do with the improvement of the conditions of the coal miners. He had able support from the then Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. David A. Reed. Knowing so much more about the rules than I did, they knew just exactly how to defeat me in my efforts; and they did a fine job.

The first bill was introduced in 1926, and the next one in 1928. Those bills, as I have reviewed them, might seem to indicate that if I favored legislation of that sort in 1926 and 1928, I ought to favor this bill.

My first bill was pretty broad. It set up a fact-finding body in the coal industry. It created a separate and distinct labor board to deal with labor relations in the coal industry. It provided for complete control and operation of the industry in the case of an emergency.

The second bill, that of 1928, was more limited in scope. I had hoped at that time that I might gain the support of the Senator from West Virginia—I mean the present Senator, Mr. NEELY. The Senator no doubt recalls the battles we had, when I had to remind him all the time of my love and affection in spite of his opposition to the bill, and to promise him that in time of his candidacy for reelection I should go down and help him.

The 1928 bill legalized consolidations in the coal industry, primarily for the purpose of controlling production. We had come to believe the first bill was too broad, and consequently the 1928 bill was much more limited in scope.

Without going into detail, it is a fact, as we demonstrated at that time, that there may be half a dozen mines, three or four of them in reality valueless, while the rest of the group may be very valuable. But it was impossible legally to bring about those consolidations which would make for more profitable production of coal, and we were seeking to permit consolidations of that sort.

When we come to the present bill, however, it really earmarks the coal industry as a public utility—I do not think I should dispute the thought back of that—and yet, after all, it goes far beyond either of the bills I have mentioned, or both of them combined. The Guffey bill, as I understand it, seeks to solve the problem of overproduction by two methods: First, by the establishment of a minimum price, with penalties for violation; second, by the establishment of quotas for districts and for mines.

It seems to me, as I view the bill, that the writer of it must have been familiar with the British coal-mine statute, because in much the same way as here proposed they attempt to control the industry in England. It works pretty well over there, but they do not have State rights and a Supreme Court, as we have, and which we must consider.

The coal bills which we presented in 1926 and 1928 left the problem to the industry itself through cooperative methods, while in the Guffey bill the solution is sought through price fixing, through a Government agency, and with penalties imposed by the Government. It is a Government set-up.

Mr. President, I never like to be in opposition to any measure which may be helpful to labor. When I think of three or four hundred thousand or four hundred and fifty thousand families who are in distress, of course my heart goes out to them. But I cannot and must not disregard the fact that I represent in part a State which has a population of 13,000,000, one-tenth of the population of the United States. It has an urban population, speaking of the cities, villages, and towns, of ten and a half million, a rural population is immediately adjacent to these urban communities of about a million and a half, and a farm population of 1,717,000.

Mr. President, what could I say to the 3,152,000 families in New York State if I voted for this bill? Fifteen thousand of those families are living on Government bounties, but over 3,000,000 of them are paying their share of the processing tax and other mounting costs of government.

I say to my brethren on this side of the aisle that we cannot afford to disregard what the housewives are saying at the breakfast tables of the United States. I have no question that in every household in the United States when the bacon and eggs are served, if they are lucky enough to have them, the wife says to her husband, "John, do you know how much this bacon cost? It cost 40 cents a pound."

Pork chops, which some of us used to enjoy, 2 years ago were 19 cents a pound, and now they are 38 cents a pound.

Lard 2 years ago cost 10 cents a pound, and is now selling for 19 cents a pound.

When the women of the country are distressed we can well afford, as a party, to give thought to what is going on. No matter what benefits may have been given to our people by reason of legislative enactments, the fact remains that every family in this country on a budget is suffering great distress by reason of the high prices, not alone of food but of the textiles and of all the things they buy.

Mr. President, what can I say to the more than 3,000,000 families in my State when the price of coal is increased materially, as it will be under this bill? It is not alone those who suffer in the coal regions who must be considered. If I had gifts at my disposal, I would give them prosperity and happiness and even luxury; but I cannot think alone of those poor people, distressed as they are, living in the coal regions. I have to think of 3,000,000 families in my own State who are suffering because of high prices.

If the figures given us by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are correct, the enactment of this bill will mean that in my State $10,000,000 a year will be added to the price of coal. The people—the six or seven million—in the great city of New York, not in the palaces of Fifth Avenue alone, but in the tenement houses, burn no wood. We have 500,000 persons living in 1 square mile in New York City, and in every one of those little tenement apartments is a coal stove. Those people have no money with which to go out and buy a ton of coal—they buy it by the bushel. Think of the added burden to the people of my city when we add 40 or 50 cents a ton to the price of coal, pyramided as it will be, buying as they are in small amounts.

Mr. President, I wish I might vote for the pending bill. I was approached this morning by a very influential official, not of our administration, but of a powerful and useful organization in this country, a man I love and admire and respect; he hoped I might support this bill. But I am here to represent in part the biggest State in the Union in population, one-tenth of all our citizens. How can I go back to New York and tell my fellow citizens that I voted a tax of $10,000,000 on my State?

This is all I shall say about the matter. I am truly regretful that I cannot vote for the bill. I have not given all the reasons why I cannot. There are others.

I have consulted with eminent constitutional lawyers in this body and out of it, and I am assured that we have not the power under the Constitution to enact this measure. Therefore, because in my opinion it is unconstitutional, and because it imposes a further and great burden upon the people of my State and upon the people of the Nation, I am forced, much against my heart and inclination, to vote against the measure.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I shall not engage in argument on this bill, because, as I interpret the senatorial mind, it is scarcely open to argument upon the proposal. If it were I would have no hesitancy in saying that it could easily be convinced that this bill, from the standpoint of justice, as well from the standpoint of the legality of the measure, should be discarded by the Senate.

I do not care to present a legal argument, Mr. President, on this bill, because under the actual cases decided there can, in my judgment, be no question about the invalidity of this bill. Outside of political and official circles it is questionable whether five reputable lawyers of established reputation as lawyers in the United States could be found who would give it their full approval. However, that is not the worst aspect of this bill. The worst feature of this bill, Mr. President, is an infirmity and defect in the legislative program as we are now developing it. This Nation cannot remain free and happy if we are to legislate for groups. But beyond all that, Mr. President, if groups are to legislate for themselves, the end of things is not very far distant. That is the situation confronting us, and to this program the Democratic Party is willing to commit itself.

I have heard it said, Mr. President, that we must pass this bill because we face chaos if we do not pass it. We invite chaos when we refuse to consider a measure on its merits. We invite chaos inevitably when we do not candidly examine the grounds upon which legislation is based and determine whether there is legal basis for such legislation.

I do not put my judgment on any legal question above that of anyone else, nor do I undertake to pass upon any bill with respect to its validity for any other Senator. However, Mr. President, I am the judge of my own oath to support the Constitution of the United States, without mental evasion or equivocation, and so far as I am concerned, if I supported this bill, I would be voting for a bill which upon every leg of it could not stand the test of independent court judgment.

Mr. President, I am going to make this statement now, as a great jurist of Massachusetts long ago made it. The stress and strain of our constitutional system or of the system of free government in America will not come upon the executive branch, it will not rest upon the legislative branch. Both may be weak and vacillating; both may be ambitious for power. But it will rest at last upon a free, upon a courageous, upon an upright judiciary, and when that fails us, all fails us.

Is it right for me as a Member of this body to vote for a measure and send it to the court of this country when I know that that court ought to hold the act invalid? Am I fair to the judiciary, am I fair to the court, but beyond that, am I fair to the American people when I do that?

There is no chance for individual liberty to last, there is no chance for it to survive, if we break down the judiciary. It is the function of the court, it is the function of our Government, to uphold the right of the one man against the ninety and nine, and if that is not Americanism then Americanism is not worth defending.

Absolutism we might have had without the sacrifices of the Revolution. Yet the doctrine, essentially American, is reversed. If the majority desires to do something, the rights of the minority account for nothing and may be overridden. If there are chiselers in this or that occupation, and we mean by that the minority, then we may override them, when the heart and soul of the American system, of all of it, is to protect the rights of the minority, those inalienable and immemorial rights of free men, that we did not surrender either to State governments or to the National Government. And we think we are getting somewhere, we think we are getting somewhere by going back to the doctrine of absolutism in all of its hideousness, legislating not only for groups but permitting groups to write legislation for a population of free people.

Mr. President, there is nothing new in the theory of representative government. A thousand years before the American Government was established our English ancestors, the Anglo-Saxon branch, from which so many of us sprang, had evolved the system of representative government. There is nothing new, Mr. President, in the division and distribution of public powers. A great Frenchman had taught it. It was familiar doctrine to almost every man who sat in the Constitutional Convention, although it is an important principle. There is nothing new in the fact that we have a written Constitution.

Mr. President, the one new principle in the American system of government, upon which it rests, upon which it has been builded, and upon which it must rest if our people shall remain free, is simply the concept of individual liberty as the inalienable right of every man by virtue of the fact that he is a responsible moral being.

No one granted us liberty. No one granted us freedom. The men who had the courage to carve out this Republic and to set it on its way, and for a century and a half to drive it forward—those men did not concede that liberty came down from anyone. They asserted that every man, by virtue of the fact that he was a responsible moral being, was of right free and equal with every other man, and they surrendered the liberty of the individual only in the interest of the common welfare.

They wrote into the Constitution the safeguard of the rights of the individual. They wrote them there because they knew the individual had to have his rights protected in an organic law and they set up a judicial system to guarantee the enforcement of those rights.

What does the majority need with the Constitution unless it is going to obey it? What need has an all-powerful majority of the Constitution to enable it to ride roughshod over a helpless minority? We may indulge ourselves as we please, but the hateful doctrine which proceeds upon any other theory and contrary to what I am feebly trying to say is not an American doctrine. We shall never solve American problems or the problems of a free people by any such legislation.

Let me repeat: Every man must interpret his oath to support the Constitution. I quarrel with no man who interprets any particular legislation or any particular proposal contrary to the interpretation which I place upon it. But I must put my own interpretation upon it. I shall not knowingly under any condition or circumstance vote to place upon the shoulders of our courts the responsibility of deciding the validity of an act when I am convinced—convinced, Mr. President, and I use the word "convinced" in its full significance—that the act is invalid.

Mr. President, beyond the obvious infirmities of the bill, and of far greater importance, as it seems to me, are the things which we are attempting to do not only in the face of decided cases, but contrary to the universal experience of the race. I know that the restraints under which men must live if they are to enjoy freedom and liberty may sometimes become irksome. We may become impatient of those restraints. But there is no other way so far as I know, and certainly not under our system, for us to retain our full freedom unless we are willing to suffer the seeming inconveniences and apparent hardships imposed by those restraints upon us as a people.

Mr. President, I had not expected to speak, but I have felt compelled to speak upon this measure. I felt compelled to register my own position upon it. I felt compelled to make this declaration upon the bill before the final vote is taken upon it. That it is not a sound economic measure will be demonstrated by time, I think, if it is enacted. But upon that point I do not care to speak because it is not upon that ground that I place my vote.

I place my vote not only upon the conviction, but the very firm conviction, that upon several legs, indeed upon all the legs upon which this legislation stands, it falls clearly under the condemnation not only of general principles, but of decided cases.

I base it further than that, Mr. President, upon the broader proposition that we now seek in America to impose the will of a majority upon the minority with respect to matter which lies wholly without the field of Federal action and control, if indeed it does not lie without the field of governmental control altogether; for, be it remembered, when those who built our institutions were doing so they said they were delegating some powers to the Federal Government; they recognized that others would necessarily be drawn along by implication; they stated they were reserving some other powers to the States; but it is as clear as the sun at noontime that they were also reserving other powers unto the people themselves and were not vesting them in any government, State or Federal.

We are impatient to meet our problems in the way in which we have always met them and always solved them, and we seek now to ride roughshod over the rights of the minority, over the rights of those who are less than the majority, and impose our will upon the minority with respect to the thing which free men have reserved to themselves—the right to regulate and to control, certainly as against the Federal or general Government, a domestic industry, an industry operating wholly within a single State.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask those who are in favor of the bill to join me in having the yeas and nays. I have no desire to delay the matter. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. NEELY obtained the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, were the yeas and nays ordered?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, this amendment proposes to reduce the tax provided in the bill from 15 to 5 percent.

The cost of producing coal in Indiana and Illinois is considerably less than the cost of producing similar coal in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The cost of producing coal in Iowa is about 40 cents a ton more than it is in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. If this amendment should prevail, the unethical operators of the States which enjoy low production cost would pay the 5 percent tax, deduct it from the wages of their miners, continue their ruthless competitive practices, and thereby defeat the purposes of the law. If this amendment prevails, the bill will lose much, if not all, of its value.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. NEELY. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. In view of the fact that 90 percent of the tax assessed goes back to the operator anyhow, what difference does it make if the tax is made 100 percent, insofar as that argument is concerned?

Mr. NEELY. All the difference in the world. The rebate of 90 percent of the 15 percent tax is the seductive inducement that will impel the coal operators of unethical proclivities to obey the law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]. On that amendment the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator in charge of the bill if it is the purpose to complete the measure this evening, or to go forward with it tomorrow.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, it is the hope of those who are in charge of the bill that it may be passed tonight, but in order to accommodate some Senators who are absent, and some who desire to leave, I now submit the following unanimous-consent request:

That hereafter no Senator shall speak more than once nor for more than 10 minutes on the bill, nor more than once on any amendment, nor for more than 5 minutes on any amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, some of us have not had an opportunity to say a word in regard to the bill. I have no objection to a limitation of debate to half an hour on the bill and 5 or 10 minutes on any amendment. I think very few Senators will avail themselves of that opportunity. I am not so sure that I shall do so. If the Senator will modify the proposed agreement as suggested, I shall not object to it.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I shall object to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

The clerk will call the roll on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have been asked by a number of Senators to request that the amendment be stated. I realize that it is out of order after the roll call has begun.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, by unanimous consent, the amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 7, line 4, it is proposed to strike out "15" and to insert in lieu thereof "5", so as to read:

SEC. 3. There is hereby imposed upon the sale or other disposal of all bituminous coal produced within the United States an excise tax of 5 percent on the sale price at the mine—

And so forth.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will continue the calling of the roll.

The calling of the roll was resumed.

Mr. BULKLEY (when his name was called). I repeat the announcement of my general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] and that he is specially paired on this question. I vote "nay."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Again referring to my pair, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS of Utah (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. If present, however, he would vote as I have voted. Therefore I shall allow my vote to stand.

Mr. NYE (after having voted in the negative). Has the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. NYE. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia. If he were present he would vote "yea". Having voted "nay", I shall have to withdraw my vote.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the following Senators are detained in important committee meetings:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the junior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

I also announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE] are unavoidably detained.

I further announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] is detained on important departmental matters.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO]; and

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE].

The result was announced—yeas 36, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—36

Austin	Connally	Hale	Schall
Bailey	Copeland	Hastings	Smith
Barbour	Dieterich	King	Townsend
Borah	Duffy	McKellar	Trammell
Brown	Fletcher	Maloney	Truman
Burke	George	Metcalf	Tydings
Byrd	Gerry	Norbeck	Vandenberg
Caraway	Gibson	Radcliffe	Walsh
Clark	Gore	Russell	White

NAYS—40

Adams	Frazier	McCarran	Reynolds
Bachman	Guffey	McGill	Robinson
Bankhead	Harrison	Minton	Schwellenbach
Bulkley	Hayden	Moore	Sheppard
Bulow	Holt	Murphy	Shipstead
Byrnes	Johnson	Murray	Steiwer
Capper	La Follette	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
Costigan	Lonergan	Norris	Thomas, Utah
Davis	Long	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Donahey	McAdoo	Pittman	Wagner

NOT VOTING—20

Ashurst	Carey	Glass	McNary
Barkley	Chavez	Hatch	Nye
Bilbo	Coolidge	Keyes	Overton
Black	Couzens	Lewis	Pope
Bone	Dickinson	Logan	Wheeler

So Mr. TYDING'S amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, with the approval of the Senator in charge of the bill, I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent. I have not had an opportunity of conferring with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] regarding it. I am sure, however, the Senator will approve it.

I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its labors today it take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow; that after the meeting of the Senate tomorrow no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 20 minutes on the bill, or more than once or longer than 10 minutes on any amendment which may be pending or which may be offered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. McNARY. May I ask the Senator whether he thinks it is impossible to conclude consideration of the bill tonight?

Mr. ROBINSON. I have been informed that it is, by Senators who say they desire to speak on it.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, line 23, after the word "title" it is proposed to insert the words "Provided, That not more than three members of the commission shall be members of the same political party."

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, there is no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desired to offer an amendment to the amendment, and I did not know that the Chair had put the question. The amendment I had in mind was to strike out "five" in the provision for the membership of the commission, and to insert "three."

Mr. McNARY. That goes to the number of members of the board?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. I am not reaching that; I am simply asking that there shall be representation of both the two major parties.

Mr. KING. I did not want to be cut off from offering the amendment.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on today, August 21, 1935, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

S. 491. An act for the relief of Fred Herrick;

S. 1988. An act to extend the times for the commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Rulo, Nebr.;

S. 2626. An act to authorize the sale of Federal buildings;

S. 2743. An act to authorize the erection of a suitable memorial to Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals within the Canal Zone;

S. 3060. An act to amend section 6 of title I of the act entitled "An act to maintain the credit of the United States Government", approved March 20, 1933, as amended; to extend the time within which applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended, may be filed; and for other purposes;

S. 3050. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Lake Champlain between Rouses Point, N. Y., and Alburg, Vt.;

S. 3105. An act to amend the act approved June 12, 1934, relating to the granting of the consent of Congress to certain bridge construction across the Tennessee River at a point between the city of Sheffield, Ala., and the city of Florence, Ala.;

S. 3135. An act to authorize the purchase of the Winnie Mae by the Smithsonian Institution;

S. J. Res. 59. Joint resolution providing for the preparation and completion of plans for a comprehensive observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution of the United States;

S. J. Res. 122. Joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into an agreement amending the agreement between such States consented to by Congress in Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission; and

S. J. Res. 168. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 16 to May 23, 1936, inclusive.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN BRIDGES

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 9070) to authorize the construction of certain bridges and to extend the times for commencing and/or completing the construction of other bridges over the navigable waters of the United States, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 1442) thereon. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 54, after line 3, to insert:

ST. CROIX RIVER AT HUDSON, WIS.

SEC. 28 (a). That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Highway Commission of the State of Wisconsin and the Department of Highways of the State of Minnesota are hereby authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the St. Croix River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the city of Hudson, Wis., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

(b) There is hereby conferred upon the Highway Commission of the State of Wisconsin and the Department of Highways of the State of Minnesota all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 3, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, to insert:

MISSOURI RIVER AT DECATUR, NEBR.

SEC. 29. (a) That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the county of Burt, State of Nebraska, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation between the towns of Decatur, Nebr., and Onawa, Iowa, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

(b) There is hereby conferred upon the county of Burt, State of Nebraska, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

(c) The said county of Burt, State of Nebraska, is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

(d) In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 3, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, to insert:

MISSOURI RIVER AT SOUTH SIOUX CITY, NEBR.

SEC. 30 (a). That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the county of Dakota, State of Nebraska, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the cities of South Sioux City, Nebr., and Sioux City, Iowa, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

(b) There is hereby conferred upon the county of Dakota, State of Nebraska, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

(c) The said county of Dakota, State of Nebraska, is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

(d) In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 3, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, to insert:

HUDSON RIVER AT NYACK, N. Y.

SEC. 31 (a). That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Rockland-Westchester Hudson River Crossing Authority, State of New York, to construct, maintain, and operate a highway bridge, causeway, and approaches thereto across the Hudson River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in the vicinity of the village of Nyack, Rockland County, and the village of Tarrytown, Westchester County, N. Y., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

(b) If tolls are charged for the use of such bridge and causeway, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge, causeway, and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of the bridge, causeway, and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge and causeway shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of tolls shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge, causeway, and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge, causeway, and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 3, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, to insert:

MISSOURI RIVER AT NIOBRARA, NEBR.

SEC. 32 (a). That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the village board of the village of Niobrara, county of Knox, State of Nebraska, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Niobrara, Nebr., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

(b) There is hereby conferred upon the Village Board of the Village of Niobrara, county of Knox, State of Nebraska, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

(c) The said Village Board of the Village of Niobrara, county of Knox, State of Nebraska, is hereby authorized to fix the charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

(d) In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 4, to change the section number from 28 to 33.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CONTROL OF AIR TRANSPORTATION

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, with reference to Senate bill 3027, granting certain powers to the Interstate Commerce Commission with respect to air transportation, I ask to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Secretary of State bearing on the subject.

I also ask that amendments in keeping with the letter be printed and lie on the table.

There being no objection, the amendments were ordered to be printed and to lie on the table, and the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AUGUST 19, 1935.

The Honorable BURTON K. WHEELER,
Chairman Committee on Interstate Commerce,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR WHEELER: I am in receipt of your letter of August 9, 1935, requesting that I comment on the latest committee print of Senate bill 3027, which confers upon the Interstate Commerce Commission certain regulatory powers with respect to the establishment of and control over transportation by air of passengers and property in interstate and foreign commerce.

Among the powers which the bill confers upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to exercise control over foreign air commerce are those enumerated in section 405 (a) relating to the issuance of certificates of public convenience and necessity and the powers conferred under section 408 (a) relating to control over rates, fares, charges, classifications, and practices.

Under general international practice no air transport enterprise may operate over any country, with or without landing, except by permission of the country over which the enterprise would operate. In granting to foreign air transport companies an authorization to operate over its territory any government may, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, specify the conditions under which the line will be permitted to operate. It is suggested, therefore, that in vesting in the Interstate Commerce Commission control over air transportation such control should be consistent with the sovereign rights of foreign governments to determine the conditions under which air transport enterprises may be established and operated in their territories.

The Department had occasion to consider the terms of the bill H. R. 5174, entitled "A bill to encourage and regulate the use of aircraft in commerce and for other purposes", known as the "Lea bill", which was referred to the Department of State for an expression of views by the Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives on February 11, 1935. The views of the Secretary of State in regard to certain provisions of the bill H. R. 5174, in which it was sought to confer upon a proposed air commerce commission certain powers with regard to foreign air commerce, were as follows:

"Paragraph (18) of section 301 of the bill provides that any person engaging or desiring to engage in foreign air commerce shall make application to the proposed Air Commerce Commission for the approval of the air line operation. While it may be implied from the present language of this section that the authority of the Commission with respect to the matters covered thereby is to be exercised only so far as American territory is concerned, it is, nevertheless, believed to be preferable to incorporate in this section language showing that the authority of the Commission with respect to the various matters covered thereby is to be exercised so far as United States territory is concerned. The operation of an air transport line in any foreign country is, of course, regulated by the laws and regulations of that country.

"It also seems to be desirable to provide in paragraph (1) of section 303 that the authority of the Commission with respect to the regulation and control of rates, charges, etc., in interstate and/or foreign air commerce, as stated in the paragraph, is to be exercised, with respect to foreign air commerce, insofar as United States territory is concerned."

In connection with the foregoing, mention may be made of the multilateral convention known as the "Habana Convention on Commercial Aviation", signed at Habana, Cuba, on February 20, 1928, to which the United States is a party, Treaty series, no. 840, a copy of which is enclosed. Article I of this convention reads:

"The high contracting parties recognize that every state has complete and exclusive sovereignty over the air space above its territory and territorial waters."

While under the terms of the Habana convention (art. IV) each contracting state undertakes in time of peace to accord freedom of innocent passage above its territory to the private aircraft of other contracting states, it is specifically provided that the operation of aircraft over the territory of any contracting state shall be in accordance with the conditions laid down in the convention. The convention sets forth a number of conditions that may be imposed by a contracting party with respect to flights over its territory by aircraft of other contracting parties. Among the rights reserved by the convention to each contracting state the following may be cited: To prescribe the routes to be flown over (art. V); to require certificates of airworthiness (art. XII); and certificates of competency of the members of the operating crew (art. XIII); to prohibit the transportation of certain commodities (arts. XV, XVI, and XVII); and to establish reservations and restrictions in favor of national aircraft with respect to commercial operations wholly between points in national territory (art. XXII).

An air transport company of any country a party to the Habana Convention on Commercial Aviation desiring to secure operating rights over territory of another country also a party to the convention is, under the practice followed in applying the provisions of the convention, required to apply for the necessary authorization to the government of the country in which the company desires to operate.

The United States is also a party to the multilateral convention known as "the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules Relating to International Transportation by Air", signed at Warsaw, Poland, on October 12, 1929, Treaty Series No. 876, a copy of which is enclosed. The more important provisions of this convention are those of chapter II, relating to the form and legal effect of transportation documents—passenger tickets, baggage checks, and air waybills—and those of chapter III, establishing the conditions under which the aerial carrier shall be liable for damages caused in the transportation of passengers and property. Mention may also be made of chapter IV, providing in effect that in the case of transportation performed partly by air and partly by some other mode of transportation the provisions of the convention shall apply only to transportation by air as defined in article 1 of the convention.

Section 403 (m) of Senate bill 3027 reads:

"The term 'foreign commerce' means commerce between any place in the United States and any place in a foreign country, whether such commerce moves wholly by air or partly by air and partly by other forms of transportation."

It is of interest to compare the above definition of foreign commerce with the provisions of article 1 of the Warsaw Convention of October 12, 1929, which article relates to the scope of the convention and is as follows:

"(1) This convention shall apply to all international transportation of persons, baggage, or goods performed by aircraft for hire. It shall apply equally to gratuitous transportation by aircraft performed by an air transportation enterprise.

"(2) For the purposes of this convention the expression 'international transportation' shall mean any transportation in which, according to the contract made by the parties, the place of departure and the place of destination, whether or not there be a break in the transportation or a transshipment, are situated either within the territories of two high contracting parties, or within the territory of a single high contracting party, if there is an agreed stopping place within a territory subject to the sovereignty, suzerainty, mandate or authority of another power, even though that power is not a party to this convention. Transportation without such an agreed stopping place between territories subject to the sovereignty, suzerainty, mandate, or authority of the same high contracting party shall not be deemed to be international for the purposes of this convention.

"(3) Transportation to be performed by several successive air carriers shall be deemed, for the purposes of this convention, to be one undivided transportation, if it has been regarded by the parties as a single operation, whether it has been agreed upon under the form of a single contract or of a series of contracts, and it shall not lose its international character merely because one contract or a series of contracts is to be performed entirely within a territory subject to the sovereignty, suzerainty, mandate, or authority of the same high contracting party."

It will be observed that while under subsection (k) of section 403 of Senate bill 3027 commerce between places in territory under the jurisdiction of the United States but partly over the air space of a foreign country would apparently constitute "interstate commerce", such transportation would, under article 1 of the Warsaw convention of October 12, 1929, constitute international transportation within the meaning of this article, if there should be an agreed stopping place in the foreign country. It will also be observed that the term "foreign commerce" as defined in subsection (m) of section 403 of Senate bill 3027 includes transportation partly by air and partly by other forms of transportation as well as transportation wholly by air, while chapter IV of the Warsaw convention provides that in the case of combined transportation partly by air and partly by any other mode of transportation, the provisions of the convention shall apply only to the transportation by air. It is stated, however, that nothing in the convention shall prevent the parties in the case of combined transport from inserting in the document of air transportation conditions relating to other modes of transportation, provided that the provisions of the convention are observed as regards the transportation by air.

In connection with the Warsaw convention referred to, attention is also invited to section 408 (a) of Senate bill 3027. Subsection (a) states that it shall be the duty of every carrier subject to the provisions of the bill to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable regulations and practices relating to the issuance, form, and substance of tickets, receipts, bills of lading, and manifests, the manner and method of presenting, marking, packing, and delivering property for transportation, etc. It is suggested that, so far as concerns international transportation by air as defined by the Warsaw convention, the Interstate Commerce Commission should, in adopting any regulations relating to transportation documents, be required to conform to the provisions of this convention.

Mention may also be made of article 34 of the Warsaw Convention, which states that the convention shall not apply to international transportation by air performed by way of experimental trial by air-navigation enterprises with a view to the establishment of regular lines of air navigation, nor to transportation performed in extraordinary circumstances outside the normal scope of an air carrier's business.

The United States has entered into bilateral air navigation agreements with the following countries: Canada (Executive Agreement Series, No. 2); Italy (Executive Agreement Series, No. 24); Union of South Africa (Executive Agreement Series, No. 54); Germany (Executive Agreement Series, No. 38); Sweden (Executive Agreement Series, No. 47); Norway (Executive Agreement Series, No. 50); Denmark (Executive Agreement Series, No. 58); Great Britain (Executive Agreement Series, No. 76).

This Government is conducting negotiations for similar agreements with several other countries. Each of these agreements sets forth the conditions under which civil aircraft of each party may be flown over territory of the other party. While these agreements relate to air navigation in general, all of them, with the exception of the one between the United States and Canada, specifically provide that no regular air transport route may be operated over the territory of the parties to the agreements without their consent. It is the general international practice to make a reservation of this kind in the negotiation of international air navigation agreements. The agreement with Canada is, in accordance with this international practice, interpreted to require special consent for the operation of a regular air route over the territory of either party. Under all the agreements referred to commercial operations where the point of origin and the point of destination are both within the territory of any of the parties may be reserved to national aircraft.

These bilateral air-navigation agreements are based upon the authority conferred upon the Secretary of Commerce in subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act, approved May 20, 1926, to permit foreign civil aircraft and/or airmen serving in connection therewith to operate aircraft in the United States on a reciprocal basis. In cases where the United States has no air navigation agreement with a foreign country, American aircraft may not enter that country without special authorization, and the agreements referred to were negotiated largely for the purpose of relieving the Department of Commerce, the Department of State, and American diplomatic missions abroad of the burden of handling individual requests of American aviators for permission to make flights in foreign territory.

In addition to the agreements referred to, there is one between the United States and Colombia (Department of State press release dated Feb. 23, 1929) relating to the operation of aircraft for commercial purposes in the United States, the Canal Zone, and Colombia. The agreement with Colombia is based upon the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, and upon laws and regulations pertaining to the Government of the Canal Zone.

Copies of all the bilateral agreements referred to above are enclosed.

The United States has also concluded with several countries a series of bilateral agreements providing in each case for the reciprocal recognition by each country of certificates of airworthiness in connection with aircraft exported from the other country as merchandise, as well as another series of bilateral agreements providing for the issuance by each country of licenses to nationals of the other country authorizing them to pilot civil aircraft. It is assumed that it is unnecessary to furnish detailed information in regard to these agreements for the reason that they would not appear to have any direct bearing on the questions presented in the pending Senate bill, unless perhaps there should be some intention to confer upon the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to issue certificates of airworthiness for export and to license pilots of civil aircraft.

It would seem that the provisions of the Senate bill 3027 conferring upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the authority to require an air carrier to obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity in order to engage in interstate or foreign transportation applies to foreign aircraft entering or departing from United States territory as well as to American aircraft engaged in such services. While the bilateral air navigation agreements which the United States has negotiated with a number of countries, as referred to above, require special authorization for the establishment and operation of a regular air transport route, a principle also found in air navigation agreements between the European countries, it does not appear that it would be necessary for aircraft of a country which is a party to an air agreement with the United States to obtain an authorization from this Government in order to carry passengers and property on an occasional flight to United States territory. It is suggested, therefore, that, if the Interstate Commerce Commission is to be clothed with authority to require foreign aircraft to obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity in order to transport passengers and property in United States territory, it would be well to provide that such certificates will be required only in the event that the operators of the foreign aircraft should seek to establish a regular air transport route in United States territory.

It seems to be clear that the effect of the pending bill, S. 3027, would be to repeal certain provisions of the Air Commerce Act, approved May 20, 1926, as amended, but it does not seem to be entirely clear as to what effect the pending bill would have upon subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, relating to the entry of foreign civil aircraft and airmen on a reciprocal basis. It is my understanding that subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, confer upon the Secretary of Commerce authority to permit not only the entry of foreign aircraft engaged in special or touring flights but also the operation of foreign aircraft in United States territory in commercial operations on a regular route. If the effect of Senate bill 3027 should be to repeal subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, it is suggested that an unsatisfactory situation may result in that a question may be raised as to the validity of the bilateral reciprocal air navigation agreements between the United States and other countries, which are based upon the authority conferred upon the Secretary of Commerce under subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, to permit the entry of foreign civil aircraft. In this connection I invite attention to the importance of retaining some general provision of law which may be relied upon as authority for the negotiation of these bilateral air navigation agreements.

If it is the purpose of the pending Senate bill to repeal subsections (b) and (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act only to the extent of conferring upon the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to determine whether foreign aircraft may operate commercial air routes in United States territory on a regular schedule, it is suggested that it would be well for this to be made clear in the pending bill.

Subsection (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, states that no foreign aircraft shall engage in interstate or intrastate air commerce. The term "air commerce" is defined in section 1 of that act to mean "transporation in whole or in part by aircraft of persons or property for hire, navigation of aircraft in furtherance of a business, or navigation of aircraft from one place to another for operation in the conduct of a business."

Since the provisions of Senate bill 3027 have to do particularly with the matter of conferring upon the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to regulate the transportation of passengers and property, there seems to be some doubt as to the effect which the bill would have on the regulation of interstate air commerce as mentioned in subsection (c) of section 6 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926, considered in connection with the broad definition of air commerce contained in section 1 of that act.

The matter of the establishment of air transport lines to be operated to and from American territory will probably be interwoven to a great extent with the foreign policy of this Government. It is suggested, therefore, that if the Interstate Commerce Commission is to be authorized to pass upon applications for air lines to operate to or from foreign countries, your committee might desire to consider whether the interest which the Department of State has in this matter might not be appropriately recognized to the extent of having it stated in the bill that the Secretary of State shall be consulted to such extent as he may consider advisable from the standpoint of international policy before approval is granted by the Interstate Commerce Commisison for the establishment of any air transport line to be operated to or from United States territory, and that the Secretary of State shall conduct the negotiations with foreign governments whenever it may be necessary in order to enable the Interstate Commerce Commission to pass upon applications for authority to establish air transport lines to be operated to or from foreign territory. A similar recommendation was made by this Department in commenting on the bill H. R. 5174, referred to elsewhere in the present report.

I earnestly recommend that there be included in the pending Senate bill a provision to the effect that nothing in the bill shall be construed to modify the obligations imposed upon the Government of the United States by any treaty, convention, or agreement to which the United States is a party or to empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to make any regulation in contravention of any such treaty, convention, or agreement.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of Brig. Gen. Frederick Blair Kerr, Adjutant General's Department, Pennsylvania National Guard, to be brigadier general Adjutant General's Department, National Guard of the United States, and also Brig. Gen. Walter Allen DeLamater, New York National Guard, to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably the nomination of J. Theodore Marriner, of Maine, now a Foreign Service officer of class 1 and a secretary in the Diplomatic Service, to be also a consul general.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of George C. Sweeney to be United States Judge, district of Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. I move that this nomination be confirmed.

The motion was agreed to.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles W. James to be United States marshal, southern district of Indiana.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLER. I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of Daniel S. Foster to be postmaster at Saranac Lake, N. Y., be passed over, and that it be recommitted to the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination will be recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. McKELLAR. As to all the other nominations of postmasters on the calendar, I ask unanimous consent that they be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess in accordance with the order heretofore entered.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.), under the order previously entered, the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, August 22, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 21 (legislative day of July 29), 1935

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE

Bert E. Haney, of Oregon, to be United States circuit judge, ninth circuit, to fill an additional position created by the act approved August 2, 1935.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES

Michael J. Roche, of California, to be United States district judge, northern district of California, vice Frank H. Kerrigan, deceased.

Leon R. Yankwich, of California, to be United States district judge, southern district of California. (To fill position created by act approved Aug. 2, 1935.)

Albert Lee Stephens, of California, to be United States district judge, southern district of California. (To fill position created by act approved Aug. 2, 1935.)

REAPPOINTMENT IN THE OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS OF THE ARMY

GENERAL OFFICER

To be major general, Reserve

Maj. Gen. John Francis O'Ryan, Reserve, from December 15, 1935.

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Commander Newton L. Nichols to be a captain in the Navy from the 30th day of June 1935.

Lt. Comdr. Allan W. Ashbrook to be a commander in the Navy from the 30th day of June 1935.

Lt. Comdr. Robert O. Glover to be a commander in the Navy from the 1st day of July 1935.

The following-named lieutenants to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy from the 30th day of June 1935:

Lunsford Y. Mason, Jr.
Paul S. Slawson
Valentine M. Davis

The following-named ensigns to be lieutenants (junior grade) in the Navy from the 2d day of June 1935:

Harry Sosnoski	Frederic N. Howe
Joseph A. Jaap	Ralph C. Johnson
Louis A. Bryan	Clarence E. Kasparek
Joseph H. Kuhl	Walter D. Innis
Francis D. Foley	George F. Rice
William M. Ryon	Kenneth P. Letts
Louis J. Kirn	William C. Jonson, Jr.
Robert H. Kerr	Robert L. Strickler
Travis R. Leverett	Magruder H. Tuttle
William P. Schroeder	Roland E. Stieler
Wallace H. Weston	Charles B. Lanman
Paul E. Emrick	Frank E. Wigelius
William A. Stuart	Emerson E. Fawkes
Salem A. Van Every, Jr.	Sheldon W. Brown
Marcus W. Williamson	John H. Morse, Jr.
Harmon T. Utter	Roland H. Dale
Richard H. Best	Peris G. Bunce
James V. Reilly	John L. Chittenden
William L. Richards	Robert E. Coombs, Jr.
John Munholland	George L. Bellinger
William B. Short, Jr.	Dennis S. Crowley
John R. Van Evera	Aquilla G. Dibrell, Jr.
Harry S. Cook	Robert B. Moore
Ray M. Pitts	Samuel S. McCornock
George E. Hughes	Daniel F. Smith, Jr.
Herbert J. Campbell	Donald K. McLeod
Archibald W. Greenlee	Isador J. Schwartz
Earl R. Eastwold	Lionel A. Arthur
DeWitt W. Shumway	James M. Clement
Truman E. Carpenter	Thomas W. Hopkins
Harry G. Moore	Arthur A. Goodhue
Alfred R. Matter	Howard E. Born
Robert J. C. Maulsby	Carl F. Faires, Jr.
Burdette E. Close	Thomas P. Lowndes
James G. Craig, Jr.	Richard O. Greene
Edwin C. Asman	Wallace C. Short, Jr.
Theodore S. Lank	William B. B. Lyons
George E. Pierce	Richard D. Adams
Richard H. Gorsline

Lt. John F. Rees to be a lieutenant commander in the Navy from the 30th day of June 1935.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy from the 30th day of June 1935:

Harry F. Miller
Everett E. Mann
James M. Hicks

The following-named surgeons to be medical inspectors in the Navy, with the rank of commander, from the 30th day of June 1935:

Joel J. White	Wilbur O. Manning
Edwards M. Riley	John L. Frazer, Jr.
Lewis W. Johnson

Assistant Dental Surgeon (Temporary) Richard F. Redden to be an assistant dental surgeon in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade), from the 17th day of August 1935.

William A. Smith, a citizen of New Jersey, to be an assistant dental surgeon in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade), from the 17th day of August 1935.

POSTMASTERS

CALIFORNIA

James A. Lee, to be postmaster at Glendora, Calif., in place of Frederick Weik. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

CONNECTICUT

Francis L. Bibeault to be postmaster at Moosup, Conn., in place of W. F. Sheldon. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

IOWA

Vivian A. Meredith to be postmaster at Norway, Iowa, in place of I. G. Schloeman. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

MASSACHUSETTS

Alice E. Roberts to be postmaster at Nantucket, Mass., in place of A. E. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

NEBRASKA

William Fred Hund to be postmaster at Cedar Bluffs, Nebr., in place of O. M. Fenstermacher, removed.

Chris A. Weber to be postmaster at Spalding, Nebr., in place of H. A. Riley. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1935.

NEW JERSEY

Edward Willis Hoagland to be postmaster at Neshanic Station, N. J., in place of C. M. Ekholm. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1934.

PENNSYLVANIA

Bernard H. Kerrigan to be postmaster at Bryn Mawr, Pa., in place of J. C. Whitby. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

WASHINGTON

Clyde F. Shrauger to be postmaster at Mount Vernon, Wash., in place of Alfred Polson. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

WEST VIRGINIA

Wilma J. Starcher to be postmaster at Cowen, W. Va., in place of E. E. Miller, removed.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 21 (legislative day of July 29), 1935

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

George C. Sweeney to be United States district judge, District of Massachusetts.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Charles W. James to be United States marshal, southern district of Indiana.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

To be colonels

Harold L. Parsons
Julian C. Smith

To be lieutenant colonels

Louis W. Whaley
Frank Whitehead
Roswell Winans
Alfred H. Noble

To be majors

Richard O. Sanderson
Edwin J. Mund
Harold C. Major
Herman R. Anderson
Clarence M. Ruffner
Julian P. Brown

To be captains

James E. Jones
James H. N. Hudnall
Thomas C. Perrin

POSTMASTERS

COLORADO

George H. Duke, Hotchkiss.

CONNECTICUT

Stephen T. Platt, Centerbrook.
Edward Champlion, Eagleville.
Marian C. Adams, Glenville.
Robert A. Brookes, Higganum.
Martin W. Sinnott, New Hartford.
Patrick H. McCarthy, Newtown.
William J. Rourke, Orange.
James O. White, Taftville.

GEORGIA

Blanche Chambless, Alapaha.
Martha C. Aultman, Byron.
Mary L. Ellis, Experiment.
Robert L. Jackson, Hapeville.
Walter H. Maxwell, Winder.

ILLINOIS

Joseph T. Cline, Downers Grove.
Harry J. Young, Marissa.

INDIANA

Anthony M. Schuh, Kentland.
Luther M. Shoemaker, Kewanna.
Reginald W. Cook, Montpelier.
Henry T. Cain, Remington.
Leo Bertram Whitehead, Syracuse.

KENTUCKY

Sara K. Bugg, Fredonia.
Press J. Blackburn, Princeton.
James P. Mahan, Williamsburg.

MARYLAND

Orlando Harrison, Berlin.
Thomas Bayard Crew, Betterton.
Egbert L. Quinn, Jr., Crisfield.
Showard T. Culver, Hebron.
Mary C. Bishop, Queenstown.
Edward L. Bachtell, Smithsburg.

MICHIGAN

Francis E. Maloney, Osseo.

MISSOURI

Francis T. McClure, Alma.
Paul C. Catlett, Birch Tree.
James E. Sharp, Gideon.
William L. Klein, Harris.
William A. Bickel, Lockwood.
Walter E. Evans, Meadville.

MONTANA

William H. Fluhr, Belt.
Carl A. Walker, Musselshell.

NEBRASKA

Alberta Walkington, Bartley.
Lulu M. Kennedy, Bradshaw.
George D. Carroll, Brady.
Nick Warth, Carroll.
Albert Bernard Hassman, Coleridge.
George L. O'Gara, Laurel.
Frank E. Faling, Maywood.
Patrick F. Tully, North Bend.
James A. Dunlay, Orleans.
Emil H. Mack, Petersburg.
Bruce P. Boyd, Pierce.
Frank L. Cummins, Plattsmouth.
Justus H. LaMunyon, Shelby.
Ransler M. Hefner, South Sioux City.
Earl W. Isgrig, Tekamah.
Mary E. Corkle, Tilden.
William M. Gross, Wisner.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Clayton F. Bamford, Center Ossipee.
Lester Nathaniel Plummer, Enfield.
Rowland A. Lewin, Hanover.

NEW JERSEY

Cecil R. McConnell, Annandale.
George H. Todd, Budd Lake.
Anna B. Craft, Columbus.
William C. Nestor, Jr., Franklin.
Edna E. Lewis, Laurel Springs.
William B. Cowperthwait, Medford.
Frederick Raymond Barker, Runnemede.
Frank A. Robertson, Washington.

NEW YORK

Nellie B. Taillon, Fort Covington.
John L. McDermott, Manlius.
Lena C. Freeborn, Randolph.
Eva W. Wheat, Rose Hill.
Thomas F. Cunningham, Ticonderoga.
Mildred E. Perry, Wampsville.

NORTH CAROLINA

Olivia A. Oppelt, East Flat Rock.
John E. Patterson, Leaksville.

OKLAHOMA

Mabelene M. Hudspeth, Afton.
Paul L. Anderson, Jr., Boley.
Ortho Voorhees Stevens, Collinsville.
Alice L. Woolman, Coweta.
Edith White, Dustin.
Clay B. Burnham, Hanna.
Joseph R. Reed, Lawton.
Nelle E. Murphy, Okemah.
Mary A. Ferren, Shamrock.
Fred Allison, Westville.

OREGON

Otis A. Snook, Drain.

PENNSYLVANIA

Ray E. Wagner, Millerstown.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Houston Manning, Latta.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Walter Ulmer, Hosmer.
Henry J. Werner, Ramona.
Strauther M. Blair, Sturgis.
Peter S. Frohlech, Willow Lake.

TENNESSEE

Joe F. Odle, Camden.
Hubert S. Bell, Madison.
Leland D. Jordan, Shelbyville.

TEXAS

Bolivar C. Ivy, Huntington.
Zella Cook, Pleasanton.

VIRGINIA

Elizabeth B. Mosby, Columbia.
Margaret T. Daniel, Craigsville.
John Wesley Moore, Eastville.
Adrian Garrett Carter, Edinburg.
Harry Thomas Scarborough, Parksley.
William W. Ware, Jr., Toano.

WASHINGTON

Dirk C. Thiemens, Ephrata.

WEST VIRGINIA

Marion T. Jones, Kimball.
Clyde M. Rightmire, Mill Creek.
David J. Blackwood, Milton.
Joseph F. Graham, Tunnelton.

WISCONSIN

John F. Gretz, Cleveland.
Martin A. Thorpe, Darien.
Anna Metz, Little Chute.
John Duchateau, Luxemburg.
Maude A. Whalen, Pelican Lake.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Thou, O God, our strength and shield, accept our thanksgiving and praise for the dawn and the promise of another day. Hear, we beseech Thee, for the groanings of the great human family which is striving against fears, turmoils, and threatened tragedies. Many feel themselves to be only beasts of prey, weary on the long, long road and waiting for the night to come. Almighty God, help and comfort all who linger so frightfully in these realms and thrust into them by the tyranny of unholy ambitions. Lord God of Hosts, subdue and defeat all agencies of intolerance, bigotry, hate, and the gods of war. We pray Thee to touch the soul of every nation and every tongue that man may rise as the child of our common Father. Bless all instrumentalities by which light, faith, and happiness are diffused throughout our land. Inspire seriousness in the heart of the Congress, and may we never undervalue the preciousness of that which has been committed to us. Through Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 7927. An act to authorize the Secretary of State to lease to citizens of the United States any land heretofore or hereafter acquired under any act, Executive order, or treaty in connection with projects, in whole or in part constructed or administered by the Secretary of State through the International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, American section.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 3137. An act for the relief of Pauline McKinney;

S. 3389. An act to provide for the appointment of two additional judges for the southern district of New York;

S. 3414. An act to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York;

S. 3433. An act limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to counsel in certain cases; and

S. J. Res. 173. Joint resolution providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to belligerent countries; the prohibition of the transportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent states; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing arms, ammunition, or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 3806) entitled "An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. KING, Mr. TYDINGS, and Mr. AUSTIN to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2215. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On August 12, 1935:

H. R. 351. An act for the relief of Jane B. Smith and Dora D. Smith;

H. R. 2125. An act for the relief of George William Henning;

H. R. 3090. An act for the relief of Mayme Hughes;

H. R. 3230. An act for the relief of Rufus Hunter Blackwell, Jr.;

H. R. 3979. An act to safeguard the estates of veterans derived from payments of pension, compensation, emergency officers' retirement pay and insurance, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7022. An act to authorize the selection, construction, installation, and modification of permanent stations and depots for the Army Air Corps and frontier air defense bases generally; and

H. R. 8554. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1935, and June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

On August 13, 1935:

H. R. 4507. An act to amend sections 1, 2, and 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the commemoration of the termination of the War between the States at Appomattox Court House, Va.", approved June 18, 1930, and to establish the Appomattox Court House National Historical Monument, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6995. An act granting pensions to veterans of the Spanish-American War, including the Boxer Rebellion and the Philippine Insurrection, their widows and dependents, and for other purposes.

On August 14, 1935:

H. R. 6511. An act to amend the air mail laws and to authorize the extension of the Air Mail Service;

H. R. 6990. An act to fix the hours of duty of postal employes, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 7260. An act to provide for the general welfare by establishing a system of Federal old-age benefits, and by enabling the several States to make more adequate provision for aged persons, blind persons, dependent and crippled children, maternal and child welfare, public health, and the administration of their unemployment compensation laws; to establish a social-security board; to raise revenue; and for other purposes.

On August 15, 1935:

H. R. 6228. An act authorizing a capital fund for the Chippewa Indian Cooperative Marketing Association; and

H. R. 8963. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Connecticut and Middlesex County to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Connecticut River at or near Middletown, Conn.

On August 19, 1935:

H. R. 4665. An act authorizing the filling of vacancies in certain judgeships; and

H. R. 6453. An act to amend the act of May 13, 1924, entitled "An act providing for a study regarding the equitable use of the waters of the Rio Grande", etc., as amended by the public resolution of March 3, 1927.

On August 17, 1935:

H. J. Res. 351. Joint resolution authorizing the use of public parks, reservations, and other public spaces in the District of Columbia, and the use of tents, cots, hospital appliances, flags, and other decorations, property of the United States, by Washington (D. C.) 1935 Improved, Benevolent, and Protective Order of Elks of the World, and for other purposes.

On August 20, 1935:

H. J. Res. 290. Joint resolution to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the ratification of Joint Resolution No. 59 of the Legislature of Puerto Rico, approved by the Governor May 5, 1930, imposing an import duty on coffee imported into Puerto Rico", approved June 18, 1934.

OMNIBUS PRIVATE BILLS

The SPEAKER. Permit the Chair to make a statement. In the omnibus bills which were passed on yesterday there were included several bills which had previously passed the Senate and were on the Speaker's table. The Chair feels that those Members who are interested in those particular bills should have an opportunity to ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the Senate bills, so that they can be taken out of the omnibus bills when they are reported to the Senate. The Chair will therefore first recognize Members who have such bills. The Chair understands there are a number of Members on the floor who have such bills.

MINNESOTA FIRE CLAIMS

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1448) for the relief of certain claimants who suffered loss by fire in the State of Minnesota during October 1918.

The SPEAKER. Is that one of the bills in the omnibus bill that was passed yesterday?

Mr. PITTENGER. It is one of the bills in the omnibus bill passed on yesterday.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the procedure by which title IV of the omnibus bill (H. R. 3662) was passed on yesterday will be vacated, and the House bill laid on the table.

There was no objection.

ESTATE OF HARRY F. STERN

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2644) for the relief of the estate of Harry F. Stern.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the proceedings by which the bill H. R. 2386 was passed on yesterday will be vacated and the bill H. R. 2386 laid on the table.

There was no objection.

PROMOTION OF MASTER SGT. STANLEY R. MORGAN

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I observe from the RECORD that yesterday Mr. HOEPPEL, the gentleman from California, took occasion to criticize the Military Affairs Committee of the House with respect to its attitude toward enlisted men because it tabled a resolution introduced by him providing for the promotion of a technical sergeant of the Signal Corps in the Army to the rank of master sergeant of the Signal Corps of the Army. The sergeant involved is and was the then technical sergeant, Stanley R. Morgan, who rendered such outstanding and valiant service in connection with the accident in which two of America's most distinguished and beloved citizens met their death.

To keep the record clear, I desire to state that the criticism and the remarks of Mr. HOEPPEL were unjustified, uncalled for, and unwarranted by reason of the fact, which he ought to and might have known, that prior to the introduction by him of his resolution in the House the Chief Signal Corps Officer of the Army had already recommended the creation of a vacancy in and the promotion of Technical Sgt. Stanley R. Morgan to the grade of master sergeant. In the second place, prior to the presentation of the resolution to the committee for its consideration—in fact, to be precise and exact, the recommendation of the Chief Signal Corps Officer was and had been approved by General MacArthur, Chief of Staff, shortly after 9:30 yesterday morning. This fact was released to the press at or about 9:45 o'clock.

It follows, therefore, there was nothing to be accomplished by any action which might be taken by the committee with respect to the Hoeppel resolution, inasmuch as former Technical Sergeant Morgan had already been promoted by an order which had been approved, which action had been taken by the War Department.

At the time the resolution of Mr. HOEPPEL was before the committee for consideration, which was near noon yesterday, Sergeant Morgan had been a master sergeant for 2 hours.

It is a fact that the resolution was tabled. I think that the records will show that it was done on my motion, for the reasons which I have given. Any other action would have been one of supererogation, and nothing but an idle gesture, if not an affront to the War Department. In the third place, at the time Mr. HOEPPEL sought consideration of his resolution by the House, there was, therefore, no occasion, necessity, nor reason for any such contemplated action, nor for the critical remarks he made.

It is undoubtedly true that Mr. HOEPPEL is entitled to credit for originally suggesting the advisability of the action which was taken by the War Department, and I do not desire to detract from any credit therefor to which he is entitled in the premises.

ELECTION OF MEMBER TO COMMITTEES

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 359), and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 359

Resolved, That CHARLES F. RISK, of Rhode Island, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the following standing committees of the House of Representatives, to wit: Patents, Pensions, and World War Veterans' Legislation.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The SPEAKER. Permit the Chair to make a statement. This is Calendar Wednesday. Business can only be transacted, except business which comes regularly on Calendar Wednesday, by unanimous consent. The Chair feels that the conference reports upon the Speaker's table should be quickly disposed of. The Chair would also like to have the opportunity of recognizing Members who have bills which have been advanced through both Houses and are awaiting action upon some amendment, in order that they may be finally disposed of, just as was done upon yesterday. If permitted, the Chair proposes to spend a reasonable time to that effect before taking up the business on Calendar Wednesday, but the Chair feels the most important thing before the House, and the Chair hopes the House will agree with him, in view of the fact that adjournment may be taken at an early date, is the disposition of the conference reports.

The Chair, therefore, recognizes the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN].

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a conference report on the bill (H. R. 8632) to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama; and for other purposes. In view of the fact that the House must act first, it seems imperative that consideration be had now.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK].

COLLECTION OF THE REVENUE ON INTOXICATING LIQUOR

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill H. R. 9185, to insure the collection of the revenue on intoxicating liquor, to provide for the more efficient and economical administration and enforcement of the laws relating to the taxation of intoxicating liquor, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House may be read in lieu of the report and that the name of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McLEAN], which was by clerical error omitted from the statement of the managers, be added thereto.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (H. R. 8632) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the said bill, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the amendment of the Senate insert the following:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That subdivision (i) of section 4 of the Act entitled 'An Act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes', approved May 18, 1933, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following proviso: 'Provided, That nothing contained herein or elsewhere in this Act shall be construed to deprive the Corporation of the rights conferred by the Act of February 26, 1931 (46 Stat. 1422, ch. 307, secs. 1 to 5, inclusive), as now compiled in section 258a to 258e, inclusive, of Title 40 of the United States Code.'

"SEC. 2. That subdivision (j) of said section 4 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"'(j) Shall have power to construct such dams, and reservoirs, in the Tennessee River and its tributaries, as in conjunction with Wilson Dam, and Norris, Wheeler, and Pickwick Landing Dams, now under construction, will provide a nine-foot channel in the said river and maintain a water supply for the same, from Knoxville to its mouth, and will best serve to promote navigation on the Tennessee River and its tributaries and control destructive flood waters in the Tennessee and Mississippi River drainage basins; and shall have power to acquire or construct power houses, power structures, transmission lines, navigation projects, and incidental works in the Tennessee River and its tributaries, and to unite the various power installations into one or more systems by transmission lines. The directors of the Authority are hereby directed to report to Congress their recommendations not later than April 1, 1936, for the unified development of the Tennessee River system.'

"SEC. 3. That said section 4 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding a new subdivision, (k), at the end of said section as follows:

"'(k) At any time before the expiration of five years from the date when this section, as amended, becomes law may in the name of and as agent for the United States and subject to approval of the President, dispose of any of such real property as in the judgment of the Board may be no longer necessary in carrying out the purposes of this act, but no land shall be conveyed on which there is a permanent dam, hydraulic power plant, fertilizer plant or munitions plant, heretofore or hereafter built by or for the United States or for the Authority.'

"SEC. 4. That subdivision (c) of section 5 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"'(c) To cooperate with National, State, district, or county experimental stations or demonstration farms, with farmers, landowners, and associations of farmers or landowners, for the use of new forms of fertilizer or fertilizer practices during the initial or experimental period of their introduction, and for promoting the prevention of soil erosion by the use of fertilizers and otherwise.'

"SEC. 5. That said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding a new section after section 9 of said Act, as follows:

"'SEC. 9a. The Board is hereby directed in the operation of any dam or reservoir in its possession and control to regulate the stream flow primarily for the purposes of promoting navigation and controlling floods. So far as may be consistent with such purposes, the Board is authorized to provide and operate facilities for the generation of electric energy at any such dam for the use of the Corporation and for the use of the United States or any agency thereof, and the Board is further authorized, whenever an opportunity is afforded, to provide and operate facilities for the generation of electric energy in order to avoid the waste of water power, to transmit and market such power as in this Act provided, and thereby, so far as may be practicable, to assist in liquidating the cost or aid in the maintenance of the projects of the Authority.'

"SEC. 6. That section 10 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto a proviso as follows: 'Provided further, That the Board is authorized to include in any contract for the sale of power such terms and conditions, including resale rate schedules, and to provide for such rules and regulations as in its judgment may be necessary or desirable for carrying out the purposes of this Act, and in case the purchaser shall fail to comply with any such terms and conditions, or violate any such rules and regulations, said contract may provide that it shall be voidable at the election of the Board: Provided further, That in order to supply farms and small villages with electric power directly as contemplated by this section, the Board in its discretion shall have power to acquire existing electric facilities used in serving such farms and small villages: And provided further, That the terms "States", "counties", and "municipalities" as used in this Act shall be construed to include the public agencies of any of them unless the context requires a different construction.'

"SEC. 7. That said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding a new section after section 12 of said Act, as follows:

"'SEC. 12a. In order (1) to facilitate the disposition of the surplus power of the Corporation according to the policies set forth in this Act; (2) to give effect to the priority herein accorded to States, counties, municipalities, and nonprofit organizations in the purchase of such power by enabling them to acquire facilities for the distribution of such power; and (3) at the same time to preserve existing distribution facilities as going concerns and avoid duplication of such facilities, the Board is authorized to advise and cooperate with and assist, by extending credit for a period of not exceeding five years to, States, counties, municipalities, and nonprofit organizations situated within transmission distance from any dam where such power is generated by the Corporation in acquiring, improving, and operating (a) existing distribution facilities and incidental works, including generating plants; and (b) interconnecting transmission lines; or in acquiring any interest in such facilities, incidental works, and lines.'

"SEC. 8. That said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding to section 14 of said Act the following:

"'The Board shall, on or before January 1, 1937, file with Congress a statement of its allocation of the value of all such properties turned over to said Board, and which have been completed prior to the end of the preceding fiscal year, and shall thereafter in its annual report to Congress file a statement of its allocation of the value of such properties as have been completed during the preceding fiscal year.

"'For the purpose of accumulating data useful to the Congress in the formulation of legislative policy in matters relating to the generation, transmission, and distribution of electric energy and the production of chemicals necessary to national defense and useful in agriculture, and to the Federal Power Commission and other Federal and State agencies, and to the public, the Board shall keep complete accounts of its costs of generation, transmission, and distribution of electric energy and shall keep a complete account of the total cost of generating and transmission facilities constructed or otherwise acquired by the Corporation, and of producing such chemicals, and a description of the major components of such costs according to such uniform system of accounting for public utilities as the Federal Power Commission has, and if it have none, then it is hereby empowered and directed to prescribe such uniform system of accounting, together with records of such other physical data and operating statistics of the Authority as may be helpful in determining the actual cost and value of services, and the practices, methods, facilities, equipment, appliances, and standards and sizes, types, location, and geographical and economic integration of plants and systems best suited to promote the public interest, efficiency, and the wider and more economical use of electric energy. Such data shall be reported to the Congress by the Board from time to time with appropriate analyses and recommendations, and, so far as practicable, shall be made available to the Federal Power Commission and other Federal and State agencies which may be concerned with the administration of legislation relating to the generation, transmission, or distribution of electric energy and chemicals useful to agriculture. It is hereby declared to be the policy of this Act that, in order, as soon as practicable, to make the power projects self-supporting and self-liquidating, the surplus power shall be sold at rates which, in the opinion of the Board, when applied to the normal capacity of the Authority's power facilities, will produce gross revenues in excess of the cost of production of said power and in addition to the statement of the cost of power at each power station as required by section 9 (a) of the "Tennessee Valley Act of 1933", the Board shall file with each annual report, a statement of the total cost of all power generated by it at all power stations during each year, the average cost of such power per kilowatt hour, the rates at which sold, and to whom sold, and copies of all contracts for the sale of power.'

"SEC. 9. That said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding after Section 15 of said Act a new section as follows:

"'SEC. 15a. With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Corporation is authorized to issue bonds not to exceed in the aggregate $50,000,000 outstanding at any one time, which bonds may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds to carry out the provisions of Sec. 7 of this amendatory Act. Such bonds shall be in such forms and denominations, shall mature within such periods not more than fifty years from the date of their issue, may be redeemable at the option of the Corporation before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated therein, shall bear such rates of interest not exceeding 3½ per centum per annum, shall be subject to such terms and conditions, shall be issued in such manner and amount, and sold at such prices, as may be prescribed by the Corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That such bonds shall not be sold at such prices or on such terms as to afford an investment yield to the holders in excess of 3½ per centum per annum. Such bonds shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed both as to interest and principal by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof, and such bonds shall be lawful investments, and may be accepted as security, for all fiduciary, trust, and public funds, the investment or deposit of which shall be under the authority or control of the United States or any officer or officers thereof. In the event that the Corporation should not pay upon demand, when due, the principal of, or interest on, such bonds, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holder the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and thereupon to the extent of the amount so paid the Secretary of the Treasury shall succeed to all the rights of the holders of such bonds. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized to purchase any bonds issued hereunder, and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to use as a public-debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act, as amended, are extended to include any porchases of the Corporation's bonds hereunder. The Secretary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell any of the bonds of the Corporation acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of the bonds of the Corporation shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Corporation shall have power to purchase such bonds in the open market at any time and at any price. No bonds shall be issued hereunder to provide funds or bonds necessary for the performance of any proposed contract negotiated by the Corporation under the authority of section 7 of this amendatory Act until the proposed contract shall have been submitted to and approved by the Federal Power Commission. When any such proposed contract shall have been submitted to the said Commission, the matter shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and the Commission's determination of the matter shall be final. The authority of the Corporation to issue bonds hereunder shall expire at the end of five years from the date when this section as amended herein becomes law, except that such bonds may be issued at any time after the expiration of said period to provide bonds or funds necessary for the performance of any contract entered into by the Corporation, prior to the expiration of said period, under the authority of section 7 of this amendatory Act.'

"SEC. 10. That section 26 of said Act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 26. Commencing July 1, 1936, the proceeds for each fiscal year derived by the Board from the sale of power or any other products manufactured by the Corporation, and from any other activities of the Corporation including the disposition of any real or personal property, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States at the end of each calendar year, save and except such part of such proceeds as in the opinion of the Board shall be necessary for the Corporation in the operation of dams and reservoirs, in conducting its business in generating, transmitting, and distributing electric energy and in manufacturing, selling, and distributing fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients. A continuing fund of $1,000,000.00 is also excepted from the requirements of this section and may be withheld by the Board to defray emergency expenses and to insure continuous operation: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the use by the Board, after June 30, 1936, of proceeds accruing prior to July 1, 1936, for the payment of obligations lawfully incurred prior to such latter date.'

"SEC. 11. That said act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding after section 26 of said act a new section, as follows:

"'SEC. 26a. The unified development and regulation of the Tennessee River system requires that no dam, appurtenant works, or other obstruction, affecting navigation, flood control, or public lands or reservations shall be constructed, and thereafter operated or maintained across, along, or in the said river or any of its tributaries until plans for such construction, operation, and maintenance shall have been submitted to and approved by the Board; and the construction, commencement of construction, operation, or maintenance of such structures without such approval is hereby prohibited. When such plans shall have been approved, deviation therefrom either before or after completion of such structures is prohibited unless the modification of such plans has previously been submitted to and approved by the Board.

"'In the event the Board shall, within 60 days after their formal submission to the Board, fail to approve any plans or modifications, as the case may be, for construction, operation, or maintenance of any such structures on the Little Tennessee River, the above requirements shall be deemed satisfied, if upon application to the Secretary of War, with due notice to the Corporation, and hearing thereon, such plans or modifications are approved by the said Secretary of War as reasonably adequate and effective for the unified development and regulation of the Tennessee River system.

"'Such construction, commencement of construction, operation, or maintenance of any structures or parts thereof in violation of the provisions of this section may be prevented, and the removal or discontinuation thereof required by the injunction or order of any district court exercising jurisdiction in any district in which such structures or parts thereof may be situated, and the Corporation is hereby authorized to bring appropriate proceedings to this end.

"'The requirements of this section shall not be construed to be a substitute for the requirements of any other law of the United States or of any State, now in effect or hereafter enacted, but shall be in addition thereto, so that any approval, license, permit, or other sanction now or hereafter required by the provisions of any such law for the construction, operation, or maintenance of any structures whatever, except such as may be constructed, operated, or maintained by the Corporation, shall be required, notwithstanding the provisions of this section.'

"SEC. 12. That said Act be, and the same is hereby, further amended by adding at the end of said Act a new section, as follows:

"'SEC. 31. This Act shall be liberally construed to carry out the purposes of Congress to provide for the disposition of and make needful rules and regulations respecting Government properties entrusted to the Authority, provide for the national defense, improve navigation, control destructive floods, and promote interstate commerce and the general welfare, but no real estate shall be held except what is necessary in the opinion of the Board to carry out plans and projects actually decided upon requiring the use of such land: Provided, That any land purchased by the Authority and not necessary to carry out plans and projects actually decided upon shall be sold by the Authority as agent of the United States, after due advertisement, at public auction to the highest bidder, or at private sale as provided in Sec. 3 of this amendatory Act.'

"SEC. 13. That section 4 of said Act of May 18, 1933 (48 Stat. 58), be amended by adding subsection (l) as follows:

"'(l) Shall have power to advise and cooperate in the readjustment of the population displaced by the construction of dams, the acquisition of reservoir areas, the protection of watersheds, the acquisition of rights-of-way, and other necessary acquisitions of land, in order to effectuate the purposes of the Act; and may cooperate with Federal, State, and local agencies to that end.'

"SEC. 14. That subsection (b) of sec. 9 of said Act be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'(b) All purchases and contracts for supplies or services, except for personal services, made by the Corporation, shall be made after advertising, in such manner and at such times sufficiently in advance of opening bids, as the Board shall determine to be adequate to insure notice and opportunity for competition: Provided, That advertisement shall not be required when, (1) an emergency requires immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the services; or (2) repair parts, accessories, supplemental equipment, or services are required for supplies or services previously furnished or contracted for; or (3) the aggregate amount involved in any purchase of supplies or procurement of services does not exceed $500; in which cases such purchases of supplies or procurement of services may be made in the open market in the manner common among businessmen: Provided further, That in comparing bids and in making awards the Board may consider such factors as relative quality and adaptability of supplies or services, the bidder's financial responsibility, skill, experience, record of integrity in dealing, ability to furnish repairs and maintenance services, the time of delivery or performance offered, and whether the bidder has complied with the specifications.

"'The Comptroller General of the United States shall audit the transactions of the Corporation at such times as he shall determine, but not less frequently than once each governmental fiscal year, with personnel of his selection. In such connection he and his representatives shall have free and open access to all papers, books, records, files, accounts, plants, warehouses, offices, and all other things, property, and places belonging to or under the control of or used or employed by the Corporation, and shall be afforded full facilities for counting all cash and verifying transactions with and balances in depositaries. He shall make report of each such audit in quadruplicate, one copy for the President of the United States, one for the chairman of the Board, one for public inspection at the principal office of the Corporation, and the other to be retained by him for the uses of the Congress: Provided, That such report shall not be made until the Corporation shall have had reasonable opportunity to examine the exceptions and criticisms of the Comptroller General or the General Accounting Office, to point out errors therein, explain or answer the same, and to file a statement which shall be submitted by the Comptroller General with his report. The expenses for each such audit shall be paid from any appropriation or appropriations for the General Accounting Office, and such part of such expenses as may be allocated to the cost of generating, transmitting, and distributing electric energy shall be reimbursed promptly by the Corporation as billed by the Comptroller General. The Comptroller General shall make special report to the President of the United States and to the Congress of any transaction or condition found by him to be in conflict with the powers or duties entrusted to the Corporation by law.'

"SEC. 15. That the sections of this Act are hereby declared to be separable, and in the event any one or more sections of this Act, or parts thereof, be held to be unconstitutional, such holding shall not affect the validity of other sections or parts of this Act."

And the Senate agree to the same.

JOHN J. MCSWAIN,
LISTER HILL,
NUMA MONTET,
DONALD H. MCLEAN,
CHARLES A. PLUMLEY,
Managers on the part of the House.

E. D. SMITH,
B. K. WHEELER,
G. W. NORRIS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

We will discuss amendments adopted in conference by referring section by section to the House bill, H. R. 8632, because the amendment as agreed upon consists of one amendment from a parliamentary standpoint.

Section 1 remains the same.

Section 2 remains the same except that the Directors of the Authority shall report their recommendations as to the unified development of the Tennessee River System to the Congress not later than April 1, 1936. The House bill provided that such report should be included in their next annual report to be filed in December 1935, and except in changing of a dam.

Section 3 is practically the same, though there is a verbal change by substituting some language of the Senate bill for the House language.

Section 4 remains the same.

Section 5 remains the same.

Section 6 remains the same.

Section 7 is modified by an amendment providing that the Board is authorized to advise and cooperate with States, counties, municipalities, and nonprofit organizations in acquiring existing distributing systems by extending credit to them for a period not exceeding 5 years. It will be recalled that the Senate bill provided that the Authority may purchase outright and take title to such distributing systems, but should resell the same within 5 years if the State, county, municipality, or nonprofit organization should offer to buy, and in failure of such sale within 5 years from date of this act to report the facts to Congress for its determination.

Section 8 is modified by providing that the allocation of value to the several properties should be reported in each annual report if the power-generating property should have been completed prior to the end of the preceding fiscal year. This is a simple change in order to give the Board time to make the allocation after the construction is finished.

Section 9 is changed considerably by adopting the Senate language in large measure, but the amount of $100,000,000 is reduced to $50,000,000 to conform to the House provision, and by providing that the proceeds from the sale of such bonds may be used to carry out the provisions of section 7 of the amendatory act, which are substantially the provisions found in section 7 of the House bill to which reference is hereby made.

Section 10 is modified by preserving the principle of congressional control through appropriations over the activities of the Board. But an exception was made as to funds necessary to carry on the business of generating and distributing electricity and of manufacturing and selling fertilizers. It is manifest that long-term contracts could not be made if the power of the T. V. A. to carry out those contracts is dependent upon appropriations by Congress. Furthermore, we have provided that a fund of $1,000,000 may be constantly kept on hand by the corporation to meet emergencies, such as breaks or threatened breaks in dams or destruction of any of the property by the forces of nature, so that said $1,000,000 may be constantly available to make repairs, or to prevent damage, and thus to insure continuance of operations in the manufacture and distribution of electric energy and fertilizers.

Section 11 remains the same as in the House bill.

Section 12 remains the same except that it is modified by specifying that only property which, in the opinion of the Board, is necessary to carry out plans and projects decided upon may be held and retained by the Corporation, and that any other land not so necessary shall be sold either as provided in the House bill, or as provided in section 3 of this amendatory act, to wit, by private sale with the approval of the President.

Section 13 remains the same as in the House bill.

Section 14 is substantially the same as in the House bill.

Section 15 remains the same as in the House bill.

JOHN J. MCSWAIN,
LISTER HILL,
NUMA F. MONTET,
CHARLES A. PLUMLEY,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to discuss the matter in detail. I merely call attention to the very noteworthy fact that this conference report is signed by all five conferees on the part of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD by inserting a letter which I have this day written to the Honorable Charles West, a former Member of this House, and also a bill introduced by myself on March 9, 1933.

The letter and bill H. R. 1672 are as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS,
Washington, D. C., August 21, 1935.

Hon. CHARLES WEST,
The White House, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. WEST: In the rush of our conversation the other day I could not find the bill I mentioned, but I now enclose you copy of the bill introduced on March 9, 1933, H. R. 1672, where for the first time in all the world the name "Tennessee Valley Authority" may be found in print, and this bill was dictated by me the next morning after the idea occurred to me, and the bare outline conceived in my mind.

Subsequently, we incorporated these general ideas into the mechanics of the amendment offered by me in the Committee on Military Affairs to what was then Senate Joint Resolution 46 introduced by Senator NORRIS in the Seventieth Congress, first session. My amendment was the basis of the House bill reported by the Committee on Military Affairs, and will be found the basis, and in most parts the identical language agreed upon by the conferees, between the House and Senate. That bill received a pocket veto by President Coolidge. Almost the identical language was later agreed upon by the conferees in the next Congress, and was actually vetoed by President Hoover. If Mr. Judson King does not have these facts in the legislative history which he has been preparing for the last 2 years, then I can furnish it to him from my files.

The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD would not show my amendment except as it was referred to in remarks extended by me in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 12, 1931, where my amendment appears on page 2037.

I am very pleased that the conferees have agreed on the T. V. A. bill, and hope there will be no trouble in having the House approve the report of the managers on the part of the House. I am very pleased that Dr. Morgan telephoned me late yesterday afternoon and told me that he is happy over the outcome, and that all this experience for the last 4 months has been very instructive and beneficial to him, and that it will be reflected in the future work of the T. V. A. Dr. Morgan stated to my extreme gratification that the bill which the conferees have agreed upon is superior to the bill which the directors prepared and submitted to us early in March. All of which confirms my faith in parliamentary government. Out of the conflict of ideas and the crucible of discussion a safe and sane result usually issues.

I shall be pleased to comply with your suggestion that we get together at some convenient time for further discussion of a retrospective nature along this line.

With sincere personal regards, I am,

Yours truly,

J. J. MCSWAIN.

[Enclosure]

[H. R. 1672, 73d Cong., 1st sess.]

A bill to provide for the common defense; to aid interstate commerce by navigation; to promote flood control; to promote the general welfare by creating the Tennessee Valley Development Authority; and to operate the Muscle Shoals properties

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a body politic incorporate by the name and title of the "Tennessee Valley Development Authority" (hereinafter briefly designated as the authority), with power to contract and to be contracted with, to sue and to be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction, and with authority and power to issue corporate obligations in the form of long-time bonds, not exceeding 40 years to maturity, and bearing interest not exceeding 4 percent, and to secure the same by a lien upon the property of the United States hereinafter vested and to be invested by future purchase or future construction in the United States, and to pledge the income from all of said property in order to secure said bonds, and the aggregate amount of said bonds shall not exceed $100,000,000, to be issued in installments as the same may be needed.

SEC. 2. That all powers hereby or hereafter vested in said authority shall be exercised by three trustees, to be appointed by the President of the United States, and to be confirmed by the Senate, for the terms of 5, 10, and 15 years, respectively, and thereafter all appointees shall be for the full term of 15 years, and all vacancies, by death, resignation, or discharge shall be filled for the respective unexpired terms in the same way as original appointments. Said trustees shall subscribe to such oath as shall be prescribed by the President of the United States and shall be subject to removal by said President for nonfeasance, misfeasance, or malfeasance in office. After the members of the board shall have been appointed and qualified they shall organize by electing one of their number as chairman and another of their member as vice chairman, and they shall elect a secretary and such other officers, agents, and employees from time to time as shall appear to them to be necessary and proper for carrying on the duties and powers hereby and herein imposed upon them.

SEC. 3. The property of the United States in the States of Alabama and of Tennessee, either now existing or hereafter to be acquired or constructed, in, along, by, or near the Tennessee River and any of its navigable tributaries, and such other tributaries as the States of Tennessee and Alabama may, by appropriate legislation, make subject to said authority, in order to promote the navigation and flood control of said river system, and all other powers and properties incident and appurtenant thereto, are hereby intrusted to said authority to accomplish the purposes and policies of this act. Said trustees shall be paid an annual salary at the rate of $6,000, and shall receive in addition thereto quarters, heat, and light at or near headquarters at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

SEC. 4. The powers, jurisdiction, and trusteeship of said authority extend to the Wilson Dam, and the power house and nearby steam plant and nitrate plant no. 2 and nitrate plant no. 1 in that neighborhood, and Waco Quarry, and all real estate and personal property appertaining thereto and used in connection therewith, and all other dams, locks, navigation projects, flood-control facilities, and power projects anywhere in, or hereafter to be placed or constructed in, along, near, or by said Tennessee River or tributaries thereof shall be under the absolute jurisdiction of said authority, in order that there may be complete cooperation and interrelation by and between all activities of the United States in said area, and said authority shall control, manage, and conduct all such activities so as to accomplish the greatest efficiency and economy.

SEC. 5. Said authority may employ and discharge all such officers, agents, and employees as it may deem necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, and to fix the compensation thereof, and to pay the same from the funds arising from the operation of said properties irrespective and regardless of any and all requirements of the civil-service laws.

SEC. 6. Said authority shall proceed to operate such part or parts of said nitrate plants as said trustees may find to be reasonably adaptable for the production of nitrogenous plant food, useful as a fertilizer or a fertilizer ingredient, and to that end said authority may modify or improve existing plants, and may, after 1 year of demonstration in producing nitrogenous plant food and upon the written approval of the President of the United States, establish one unit of a phosphoric-acid plant, so that the entire property may produce ammonium phosphate for use as a fertilizer. All such fertilizers or fertilizer ingredients as may be produced by said authority shall be sold for cash, and in quantities of carload lots free on board Muscle Shoals, Ala., and the price thereof shall be fixed by the said authority so as to represent the cost of production, including 4 percent on the reasonable fair value of the plant employed in such production, and with 4 percent additional as profit on the gross turnover.

SEC. 7. Said authority shall have power at any time after commencing operation of said nitrate and/or fertilizer plants to lease said plants for a term not exceeding 50 years, on such terms and conditions as the President of the United States shall approve in writing, and such lease may include an agreement by the authority to supply power at the prevailing market price of power sold at said plant to other users of power in order that the lessee may operate said fertilizer plant or plants.

SEC. 8. Said authority shall operate all hydroelectric- and steam-power plants that now exist or may hereafter be acquired or constructed in said area; and after supplying all power necessary to operate said nitrate and fertilizer plants and all navigation locks and facilities and all power necessary for use in constructing and developing other projects and improvements in said area, the authority shall sell on the best terms obtainable, at the switchboard, all surplus power developed at any place or plant held and operated by said authority.

SEC. 9. If it shall appear that increased net revenues may be obtained from the sale of power and that the purposes of this act may hereby be more effectually accomplished, then the said authority is hereby empowered to build a transmission line or lines to the point of use and consumption by private enterprises, and in such event shall sell the power at the end of the transmission line or lines. Said authority shall have power to establish interconnecting power lines between the separate plants of the United States, or with plants belonging to either private enterprises, or to State or municipal authorities, either in the State of Tennessee or of Alabama or of any adjoining State or States, so as to accomplish and produce greater uniformity in the supply of electric energy in that section of the United States.

SEC. 10. The authority shall employ competent accountants and auditors and shall keep accurate and complete records of all acts, proceedings, and transactions, and shall make an annual report thereof to the President of the United States, and the same shall be transmitted to Congress. It shall be the duty of the President of the United States to cause the General Accounting Office to audit the books and accounts of said authority once every year. All net revenues arising from the operation of said properties, after the payment of expenses and interest charges, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and there earmarked as "Tennessee Valley Development Authority funds."

SEC. 11. Said authority shall control, manage, and develop all such reforestation projects within 25 miles of each side of said Tennessee River, either in Tennessee or Alabama, that may be by appropriate legislation of either or both of said States, in conjunction with such deeds and leases from any private person, firm, or corporation as may thereby be made subject to said authority. But said authority shall not purchase any land for reforestation purposes and shall promulgate rules, regulations, and orders under which it will accept and use lands deeded or leased by either States, counties, municipal corporations, or private landowners for practical forestation or for reforestation purposes.

SEC. 12. Said authority shall construct a flood-control and stream-flow regulation dam in Clinch River, at the site commonly known as Cove Creek Dam, according to such plans as shall meet the approval of the trustees, who shall, after due advertisement, let a contract for said purpose to the lowest responsible bidder, and shall pay the cost of such dam from the proceeds of the sale of the necessary sale of bonds herein authorized to be issued, and secured as aforesaid by all the property and net revenues under the control of said authority. In like manner said authority may proceed to construct such other dams, storage reservoirs, locks, canals, power houses, and transmission lines from time to time as may appear to be wise and proper and as may be approved in writing by the President of the United States, from funds derived from the sale of bonds, as aforesaid.

SEC. 13. Said authority is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to encourage by all fair and reasonable means and measures the establishment of private enterprises in the region of said Tennessee Valley, in order that they may be customers and users of the electric power to be developed by the authority. To this end said authority may operate barges on said Tennessee River in said area to encourage the construction and operation of private enterprises therein.

SEC. 14. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved; but no such modification or repeal shall operate to impair the obligation of any contract made by said authority under the power conferred by this act.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I want to call the gentleman's attention to a matter in connection with section 14 wherein the committee's report requests the Comptroller General of the United States to audit annually the accounts of the T. V. A.

I would like to suggest to the gentleman that he do what he can to have enacted into law House bill H. R. 200, introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHANNON], which would establish a procedure for cost accounting and cost reporting for Federal agencies. I do not believe he could do anything that is more necessary than to provide a good system of bookkeeping for the Government agencies, one that would provide a yardstick for the things in which the Government is interested, one which would put good business practice into all Government agencies. It would enlighten the Members of Congress in expenditures and receipts of Government. Then it would not be necessary to incorporate in reports the things contained in this section. I do hope in the future the gentleman will use his good offices to have that bill enacted into law. It will show up the T. V. A. and the enormous expenditures that the Government is making on this socialistic project.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCLEAN], a member of the committee.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I signed this conference report and I advise its adoption. The situation in which I now find myself illustrates the well-recognized principle that sound legislation is the result of compromise. Experience has taught that it is well that it should be so. The very object of controversy in committee and floor debate is to develop that which is best for the general welfare, and to give the minority thought full play for its constructive criticism, which not infrequently finds its way into the final product of the will of the majority or results in the defeat of unwise proposals.

Let it not be understood that in taking the position I do I have in any way changed my attitude toward the philosophy of the Tennessee Valley project. I still believe it is fraught with danger and to a very considerable extent is an unfair burden upon taxpayers in districts not affected by the expenditures being made, and that entirely too much money is being spent in the Tennessee Valley without regard to the constantly increasing national debt and its ultimate payment by generations yet unborn. As a member of the committee of conference it was my duty to endeavor to reconcile the differences in proposed legislation between the Senate and the House of Representatives, and I believe that out of the controversy surrounding proposed legislation affecting the Tennessee Valley Authority there is now before the House a piece of legislation which will meet many of the criticisms, restrain many of the unwise activities, and clarify many misunderstandings. What is of greater importance than anything else is the fact that the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, who brought upon themselves much of the criticism that has been advanced against them, should have a better understanding of their obligations to the Government of the United States and to the Congress; and I believe that in the future we shall see more orderly procedure so far as that agency is concerned.

One of my principal complaints in this controversy was the fact that the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority had entirely disregarded the Congress. There were indications that they held it in contempt. They had made no report as to their plans, purposes, or ultimate objectives, as they were required to do by the act in order that Congress might guide and control the nature, sequence, and extent of the development. There now can be no doubt in this regard, for we have specifically provided in the pending bill that on or before the 1st of April of next year there shall be such a report by this governmental agency to the Congress which created it and whose agent it is.

One other matter to which I desire to call particular attention is that in the original bill which came before the House there was a provision that power should be granted this Authority to issue $100,000,000 of bonds to be used in the purchase of integrated electrical systems, the title to which should be taken by the Tennessee Valley Authority, which, in turn, could dispose of such portions as it might desire, taking the loss on the undesirable part to the detriment of the Treasury of the United States. In other words, the Tennessee Valley Authority sought the right to act as broker in the purchase and sale of electrical distribution plants. That was the original language of the pending legislation. The conferees decided unanimously that such power should be denied, and that the Authority should have no greater power than to advise and cooperate with those municipalities which desired to provide their own electrical distribution plants and if, perchance, they desired to borrow money for the purpose of purchasing those plants by themselves, the title to vest in the municipality, that the Tennessee Valley Authority might have the power to make them loans for such purposes.

This power is subject to these limitations: The bonds cannot be issued in excess of $50,000,000, or one-half of the amount previously asked, nor without the approval of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury. Under these circumstances certainly no bonds will be issued unless they conform to the orderly procedure of Government financing, and this will be a check on the Authority. Also, any project which it is proposed to finance must have the approval of the Federal Power Commission. In this regard it is necessary that the attitude of the conferees should be definitely understood.

When you start to draw a statute with one object in view, of course your mental processes deal with a given situation, which may be entirely different from other situations which may develop. For instance, the right to purchase and sell electrical distribution plants is entirely different from the proposition of lending money to a municipality that desires to purchase a plant. In this instance the attempt has been made to alter the existing language. It seems to me it would have been much better had we put entirely new language in the final draft, because our effort to modify existing language may readily result in misunderstanding and in a false construction of the statute. Others do not agree with me.

I have no desire to delay the proceedings by asking for further time in order that we may rewrite this language—I am as anxious to get back to the hills of northern New Jersey as the rest of you are to get to your respective homes—and I have been given assurances that there will be no misunderstanding as to the construction to be placed upon this language; that it will be definitely understood by everybody concerned that the Tennessee Valley Authority has no power to buy electric distribution plants on the credit of the United States for the purpose of sale; that their power is limited entirely to lending money to municipalities, subject to the approval of the Federal Power Commission. I sought the privilege of placing this statement before the Members of the House so that there can be no argument as to the legislative history of this statute and how it should be construed.

Mr. Speaker, I feel, in spite of the turmoil, the vexations, and the criminations and recriminations that have gone on while this bill was pending, that we now have a better understanding between the Congress and its creature, the Tennessee Valley Authority. The directors of the Authority should have a better understanding of the obligations which they owe to the Government and Congress in the discharge of their duties, and, although, as I have said, I cannot bring myself to favor the objectives intended to be brought about by the Tennessee Valley Authority, I feel that if we must have a new law, we have written a much better piece of legislation than was first proposed by the Authority itself, and much good should come as the result of the adoption of this report. [Applause.]

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to a member of the committee of conference, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL].

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I think it is evident that the House desires no detailed discussion of this conference report. It is printed in full in this morning's RECORD. We know what it is. We know that it comes to the House as a unanimous report, having been signed by all the conferees on the part of the House and having been signed by all the conferees on the part of the Senate.

It is in many respects better than the bill that the House passed. It is in many respects better than the bill the Senate passed. The conference report is, on the whole, highly satisfactory and most pleasing to me. I hope the House will adopt it.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Referring to the vote of the House, during consideration of the House T. V. A. bill, in regard to the proposed tax-exemption features of the bonds authorized by this act, the gentleman will recall that a motion to make these bonds tax exempt was defeated in the House by a very decided margin. I notice in the report on section 15 (a) that these bonds shall be subject to such terms and conditions, shall be issued in such manner and amount, and sold at such price as may be prescribed by the Corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Can the gentleman inform me whether those provisions will preclude the issuance of tax-exempt bonds?

Mr. McSWAIN. I am thoroughly satisfied those provisions do not make that possible, because in order to make bonds tax exempt it must be so authorized in the statute which authorizes the issuance of the bonds. For this reason the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, sent down the amendment which I offered and which the House defeated; so that I am quite satisfied that language is not susceptible of being interpreted as favoring tax-free bonds.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK].

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain excerpts and figures.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, that no one may be misinformed, I made a short talk on the presentation of the conference report on the T. V. A. and obtained permission to extend and revise my remarks, so I am really extending my remarks by leaving Washington altogether and mailing my speech back to the Printer for the permanent RECORD. In this way my colleagues do not have to listen, and those who care to read can get information direct from the Tennessee Valley, where I am in effect making a report after years of study and my second personal inspection.

FIRST SECTION

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

I say "years of study" because I have been studying Muscle Shoals and the Tennessee Valley for some 15 years. Even though that area is located some thousand miles from my home in Texas, I had an idea—admittedly a limited idea—when I first became acquainted with Muscle Shoals that the completion and proper utilization of the Government's investment there, together with the development of the valley as a whole which would result from it, could contribute tremendously to the well-being not only of the South but of the Nation at large. The long controversy in which the Muscle Shoals issue was embroiled led me to give more careful thought and study to the various questions involved; and now, when I see what has been done in the valley within the past 2 years and I catch a glimpse of the vision of the future, I find that my idea has ceased to be a mere philosophic speculation and has become a living, practical reality.

A Congressman must view his duties in a dual capacity. First, he must think of his country as a whole and then of the immediate requirements of his own district and State. Generally speaking, I must naturally look out for the interests of Texas and my district. However, by virtue of modern transportation and means of communication, the advance of industry, and the changing conditions of time, I believe we must all view our positions from the point of view of America as a whole.

Of course I intend to show the specific benefit of the T. V. A. to any part of the Nation. Within less than 100 miles of my own district is the Colorado River authority, created by the State of Texas, and on which several million dollars will be spent for development. This was formerly an Insull dam on which the work stopped when the Insull empire crashed. It will now be completed by the State of Texas, through Federal funds, and will be a similar enterprise to the T. V. A. I was interested in the T. V. A. before I ever heard of the Colorado River authority, but this gives me a greater personal interest in all matters concerning flood control, conservation, and the production of cheap power.

NATIONAL VIEWPOINT IMPORTANT

We people in the South must realize that we can no longer be merely the "solid South." If we isolate ourselves from the interests of the rest of the Nation we may well expect to destroy ourselves. In the South we have long believed that cotton is king. Yes; cotton was king. By virtue of cotton we have survived. But, for all we know, cotton will destroy us economically, socially, and politically if we continue to depend upon it alone. Think that over. It is a tremendous problem and we must solve it. I cannot discuss that thoroughly now, but I do want to say that we are faced with tremendous changes in all phases of our lives, and that as those changes take place I want the South to be prosperous.

But the South cannot be prosperous unless the Nation is prosperous. For the first time since the Civil War, the South is getting what it wants, whether right or wrong. We must be liberal and progressive enough to fight for the same thing for other portions of the country. I hope that all sections of the country will realize that if the South builds up its own prosperity it will have the purchasing power to buy the products of the North and West. In general, such a condition will increase the living standards of all America.

In fact, barring certain minor local differences, the fundamental economic and social problems of the South are similar to the problems of other sections of the country. Rugged individualism—what the professors call "the laissez faire" doctrine—has depleted the South's natural resources and impoverished its people, the same as it has done in every other section of the country. The South's greatest need is a sound basic structure which will provide its people with the purchasing power they need to maintain a comfortable standard of living for themselves and at the same time contribute to the prosperity of other sections of the Nation. But the same is true of every part of the country. Tom Marshall once said that what this country needed was a good 5-cent cigar. If he were alive today I am sure he would amend that by saying that what the country needs is the nickel to pay for that cigar.

NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TENNESSEE VALLEY PROJECT

The very fact that distress is so wide-spread today and the need so apparent for basic changes in our economic structure, if we are to continue to maintain the American standard of living in the future, combine to give the Tennessee Valley project a peculiarly national character and significance.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is attempting to substitute care and forethought in the development of a region for the wasteful hit-or-miss methods of rugged individualism—(make profits and let the country wash away!)—so that there will be some assurance in the future that there will always be enough available wealth to support a high standard of living. Recognizing that rugged individualism—individualism, opportunity, and wealth for the few—as this country has known it, has deprived millions of people of any real individualism of their own, the T. V. A. seeks to restore that right to the great masses of people. By conserving natural resources and by creating a sounder basic structure in the valley it will put business on a more even keel; it will make it possible for capital legitimately invested in the valley to be safer and less speculative; employment to be more wide-spread and regular; and agriculture to be more secure.

If these objectives are obtained, there is no reason why similar methods, adapted to local conditions, could not produce like results in other parts of the country.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is developing a great river for flood control, navigation, and electric power. It is distributing that power over a wide area to farmers and city people alike at rates which make it possible for the average man to use power extensively. The dams which the Tennessee Valley Authority is building could be duplicated on large streams in all parts of this country, and low-cost power could be made available Nation-wide.

The Tennessee Valley Authority's land-use program, combining as it does the stopping of soil erosion through the planting of forests on steep hillsides, the conversion of land taken out of agricultural production into pasturage, the use of fertilizer to encourage plant growth on badly eroded land and to stop the erosion on cultivated fields through the growing of cover crops in off-crop seasons, and in land terracing should and will be applied to other sections of the country.

In short, the problems of the Tennessee Valley are the problems of America, and the Tennessee Valley project is, in my opinion, the greatest coordinated movement in the whole United States of America. It means higher living standards, cheaper power, the conservation of our lands and forests, and all the things that lead to human betterment.

MY TRIP THROUGH THE VALLEY

But I started out to tell you about my trip through the Valley. I started at Norris, Tenn., a beautiful little town near Knoxville. It is on more or less the top of the Tennessee Valley, whereas you know the Tennessee Valley touches Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Kentucky. I stayed several days in Norris.

I saw at Norris hundreds of happy people working gigantic machinery, grinding up rock of the mountain to be made into gravel and sand for the Norris Dam. I saw emplacements for power machinery, passages, and tunnels through this immense dam—a scene of human activity scarcely equaled in the world. I went out to the dam at night and saw it flooded with light. Standing on a mountain side several hundred feet above the valley where the construction work is going on, I saw men working who looked as though they were only a foot or two high.

As you go into the dam itself you register, and there you see a snappy young man from the University of North Carolina, who takes your name. Looking in the guest book, you will see thousands of names of people from everywhere in the United States and from foreign countries as well. Right beside my name I saw the names of two young men from England, and up above were the names of Chinese students. Humanity is attracted to Norris because of the great interest in the work of the Tennessee Valley Authority and because of what the Authority has already achieved.

I was particularly impressed with the fact that the police are really guards and guides for the thousands of people who visit Norris. There is practically no crime or vice for these police to contend with. In fact, what impresses one particularly is the absence of the usual exploitation and brutalities which have characterized so many large engineering projects in the past. There is a marked absence of dissatisfaction among the workers at Norris, of labor troubles, and of personal exploitation.

TOWN OF NORRIS

The town of Norris is a bright little place. It is not squared off like so many drab-looking towns, where trees have been cut down and buildings concentrated in a limited area. Instead, the houses are well built and beautifully placed on hillsides, where the natural growth of timber has been preserved. Those who planned and built Norris had the brains and the imagination to preserve the natural beauty of the place and to give the dwellings the advantages of beautiful vistas and an artistic appearance.

DIRECTORS OF T. V. A.

While at Norris I again met, and saw first hand, the work of the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The directors are Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the board, Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, and David E. Lilienthal.

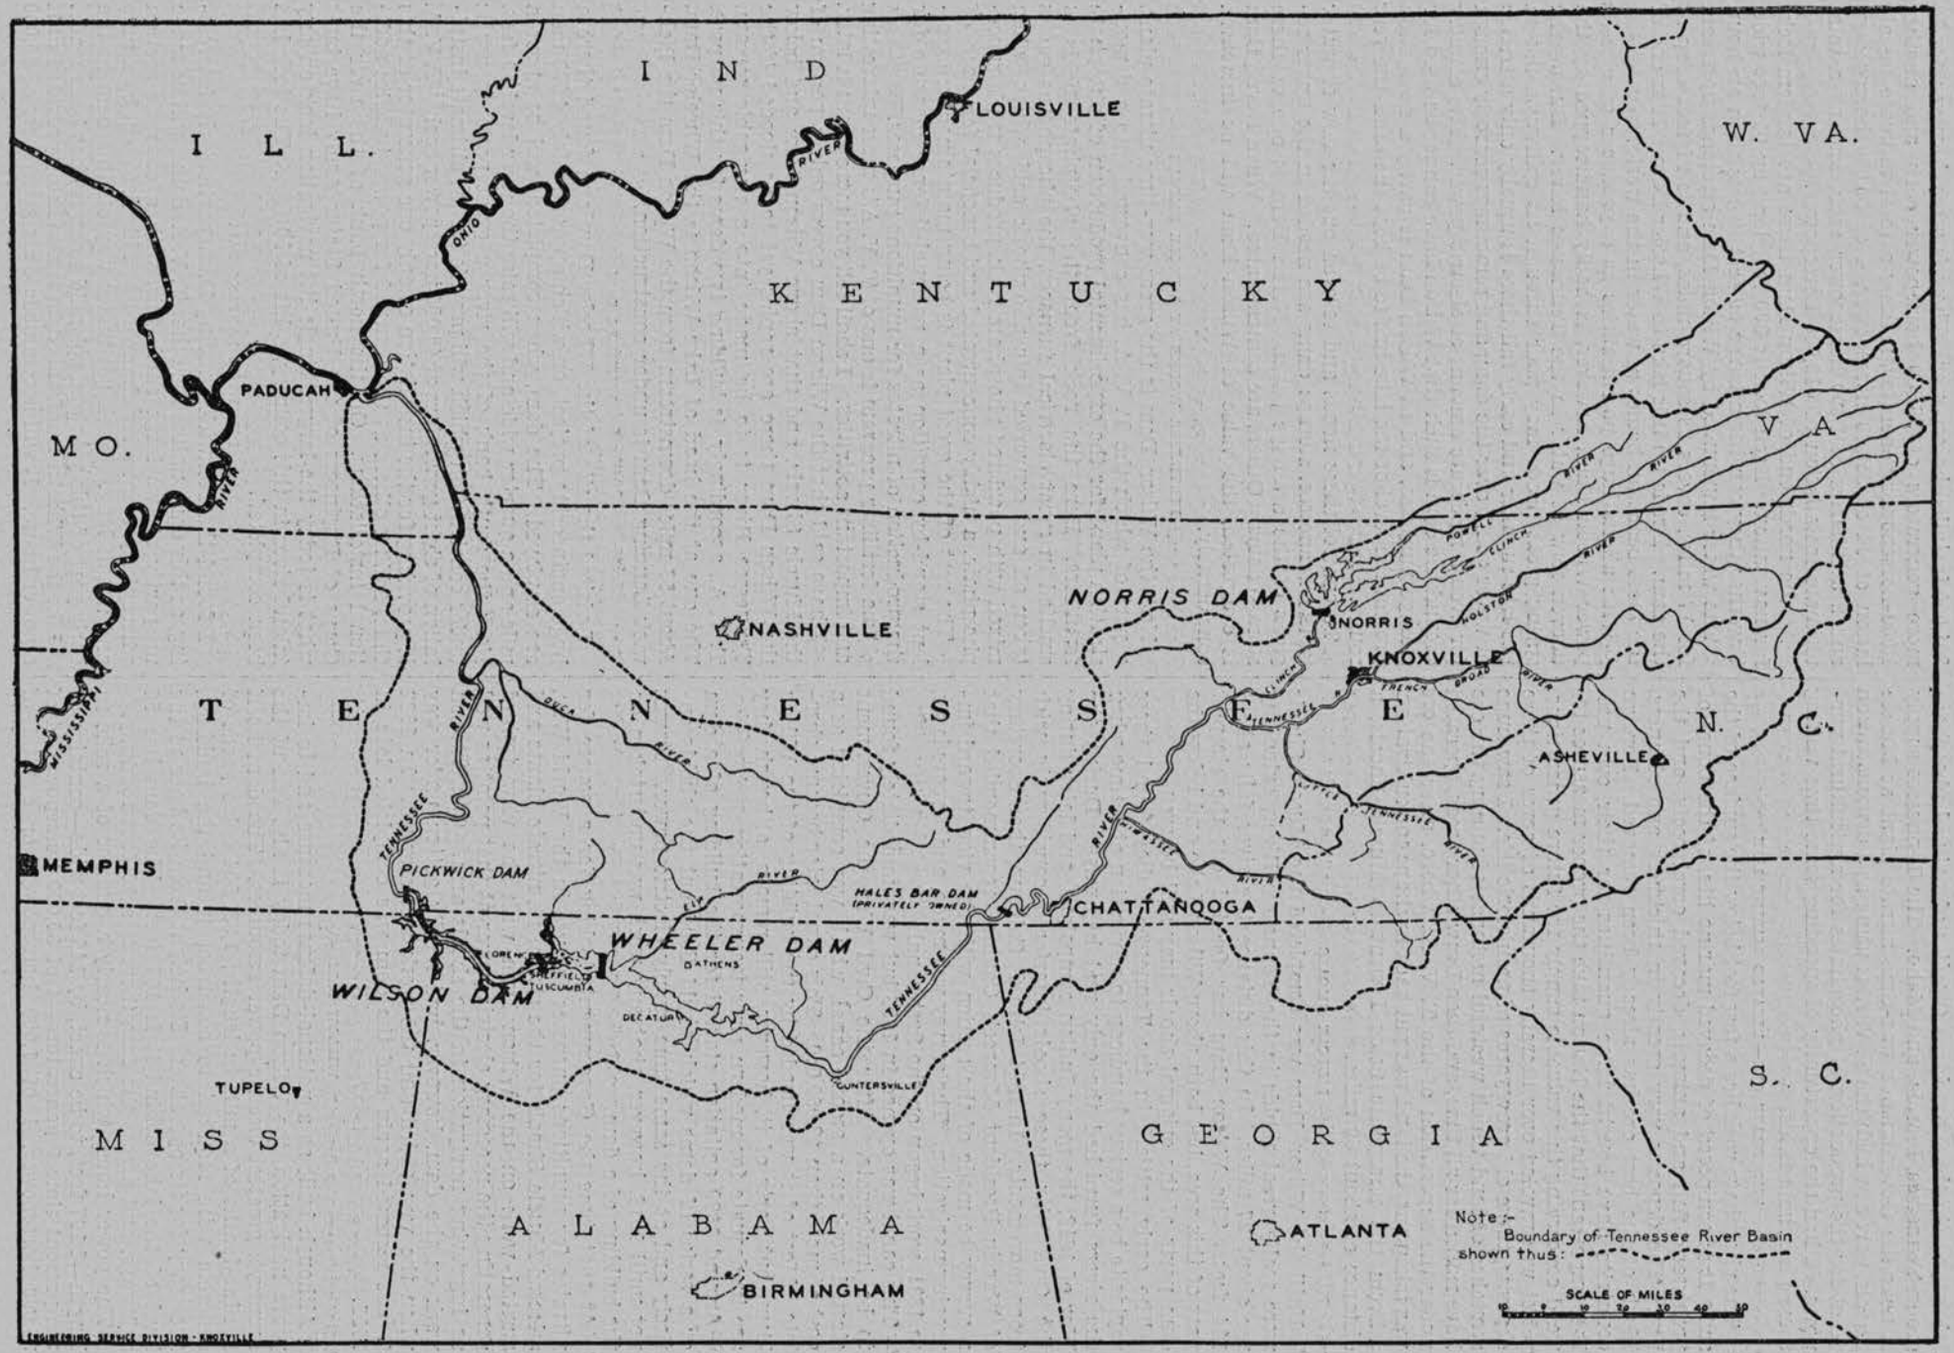
Dr. A. E. Morgan was a distinguished civil engineer, who, having risen to the top of his profession, became interested in education. Shortly after the World War he assumed the presidency of Antioch College at a time when that college had declined to a mere handful of students. Within a few years, under Dr. Morgan's guidance, however, Antioch began attracting Nation-wide attention with the result that today it is one of the leading small colleges in America. When the time came to select a man to head the Tennessee Valley Authority, President Roosevelt turned to Dr. Morgan.

Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, who is not related to Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, has had a long and distinguished career in educational work in the South. He is one of the world's leading authorities on land and agricultural problems. Texans in particular have reason to be grateful to him, for it was due largely to his investigations that the cattle tick was exterminated in Texas. At the time of his appointment to the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, he was president of the University of Tennessee.

David E. Lilienthal, who was only 33 years old when President Roosevelt appointed him to the board, had already distinguished himself as a lawyer and as a specialist in public utilities. A graduate of Harvard University, he set out early in his career to champion the cause of the people against the public utilities. His work in Illinois, where he achieved notable rate reductions for small cities battling the Insull interests, and in the Chicago rate case against the telephone company, attracted the attention of the Governor of Wisconsin, who appointed him to the public service commission of that State, a position which he held at the time of his appointment as a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

These three directors have established a new high record for public service in translating the philosophy of the new deal and of modern good government into concrete achievements. In their relations with their employees they have insisted upon decent standards of living, healthful recreational facilities, proper educational opportunities, and the right of labor to collective bargaining. As a result I am not exaggerating when I say that the Tennessee Valley Authority represents a well coordinated, thoroughly American, human activity, so well managed that there have been no labor troubles, little dissatisfaction, and not much kicking, although the Authority employs today approximately 17,000 people and is operating projects in nearly every part of this far-flung valley. These people appear to be better satisfied—or at least as well satisfied—as any group of people I have ever seen in the United States.

PHOSPHATE FIELDS AND SOIL PROBLEMS



From Norris I went to Muscle Shoals by way of Nashville, which gave me the opportunity to visit the phosphate fields of middle Tennessee, from which the Tennessee Valley Authority draws its raw materials for fertilizer production.

Few of us realize how dependent human life is upon phosphate, and to how great a degree our soils have already become depleted of this essential element of plant food and hence of human life. In fact, the very lack of phosphate in the soil has been responsible to a very large degree for the serious erosion that has taken place in what were once our best lands. The phosphate deficiency problem is not limited to the Tennessee Valley. It is world-wide.

Soil to be productive of vegetation must contain nitrogen, potash, and phosphate. Of nitrogen, which is a gas, we have an unlimited supply; and nature has supplied us with certain plants, the legumes, which can put nitrogen into the soil much cheaper and far more efficiently than man can through artificial fertilization. But potash and phosphate are minerals. They must be restored through other means than through the growing of certain crops.

Plant life draws more lightly upon potash than upon phosphate, so for the time being at least the potash problem is not so acute in the Tennessee Valley. The continued cultivation or grazing of land, however, exacts a heavy toll upon phosphate. Unless this element is restored to the soil, the land becomes steadily less able to support plant life. Without vegetation, land exposed to rain and wind erodes rapidly, filling up rivers and lakes and reservoirs and leaving nothing but sterile subsoil and deep gullies behind.

T. V. A.'s interest in phosphate production and in phosphatic fertilizers is, therefore, closely tied up with its campaign against soil erosion.

I N D
ILL.
LOUISVILLE
W. VA.
OHIO RIVER
KENTUCKY
PADUCAH
MO.
MISSISSIPPI RIVER
V A
POWELL RIVER
CLINCH RIVER
HOLSTON RIVER
NORRIS DAM
NORRIS
NASHVILLE
KNOXVILLE
FRENCH BROAD RIVER
TENNESSEE
E
N. C.
ASHEVILLE
DUCK RIVER
TENNESSEE RIVER
MEMPHIS
PICKWICK DAM
ELK RIVER
HALES BAR DAM (PRIVATELY OWNED)
CHATTANOOGA
WHEELER DAM
FLORENCE
SHEFFIELD
TUSCUMBIA
ATHENS
WILSON DAM
DECATUR
GUNTERSVILLE
S. C.
TUPELO
MISS GEORGIA
ALABAMA
ATLANTA
BIRMINGHAM
Note:-
Boundary of Tennessee River Basin shown thus:
SCALE OF MILES
ENGINEERING SERVICE DIVISION - KNOXVILLE

Fortunately there are large supplies of natural phosphate ore in Tennessee, Florida, and Idaho. The Tennessee supply is near the Government's war-time nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, part of which the T. V. A. is using as a demonstration plant for the production of phosphates for agricultural purposes. I had the opportunity of spending some time visiting these phosphate fields.

PHOSPHATE ORE—DECAYED MARINE LIFE

The phosphate rock lies a few feet below the surface of the soil. It is composed of decayed marine life, of the bones of prehistoric fish and animals, decayed coral reefs, and the like. The deposits vary greatly in thickness and richness. Much of the best ore has already been removed. Foreign countries have bought large quantities for their own use. It is important that the Nation take the proper measures toward conserving this valuable supply for future generations.

Yet we traveled over literally thousands of acres of these deposits, these old graveyards of prehistoric life. I saw huge stretches of land which wasteful methods of mining the ore have ruined for all time, and then I saw other areas, operated under the supervision of the T. V. A., where, after the ore was taken out, the land was put back in shape for cultivation.

From the phosphate fields I went to Muscle Shoals, a distance of about 60 miles.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Until the Wilson Dam was completed the Muscle Shoals were really great rapids in the Tennessee River, extending for about 37 miles. In this distance the river falls about 134 feet. The Wilson Dam has flooded out the steepest part of this area, but both above Wilson Lake and below the dam parts of the original shoals may still be seen.

The early settlers in the Tennessee Valley found these rapids to be a serious handicap to navigation at a time when the rivers furnished the only real highways. During the War of 1812, the many Indian campaigns, and later during the Civil War these shoals interfered considerably with troop movements. In 1824 John C. Calhoun, then Secretary of War in President Monroe's Cabinet, recommended that a survey be made of the section with the view toward improving navigation. The survey was made, and 7 years later, in 1831, work began on the first canal.

This canal was opened in 1836 but was immediately found to be inadequate. After the Civil War the Government started work on a second canal, which was completed at a cost of more than $3,000,000. This canal later became obsolete. Most of it was flooded by the building of the Wilson Dam, but parts of it, however, still remain, although they are inadequate for modern river transportation.

Around 1899 agitation started for the building of a dam or a series of dams which would flood out the shoals entirely and at the same time supply electric power. It was not until 1918, however, that any work was undertaken on the building of a dam.

At that time the Government, looking for a source for nitrates for munitions purposes for use in the World War, selected Muscle Shoals for the site of its nitrate plants and started work on the Wilson Dam with the view toward generating the necessary electric power at that point as well as improving navigation in the shoals area. Construction work on the dam, however, had hardly gotten under way when the war ended and the work was stopped. In 1922 it was resumed again and the dam was completed late in 1925.

WILSON DAM

Although built as a national-defense measure and to improve navigation, the Wilson Dam today is also one of the country's greatest electric-power resources. The dam itself is nine-tenths of a mile in length; 1,331,504 cubic yards of concrete were required to construct it and the buildings necessary for its operation. Its height from its base to the level of the lake behind it is 107 feet. The dam has 58 spillways, and across the dam there is a 20-foot roadway.

The power house which is nearly a quarter of a mile in length—1,197 feet, to be exact, by 145 feet wide—contains at the present time 9 generators—4 of 30,000 horsepower, 4 of 35,000 horsepower, 1 of 1,000 horsepower, or a total of 261,000 installed horsepower. There is room, however, for 10 more generators of 35,000 horsepower each and another 1,000-horsepower generator, making a total ultimate installation of 14 of 35,000 horsepower, 4 of 30,000 horsepower, and 2 auxiliaries of 1,000 horsepower each, making a total ultimate installation of 612,000 horsepower.

At the north end of Wilson Dam there are tandem locks for navigation. Each lock is 300 feet long by 60 feet wide. Together they can lift a barge 89 feet in less than an hour.

The water impounded by Wilson Dam stretches upstream for 17 miles, covers 23 square miles, and is 97 feet deep at the dam. I rode up this lake to Wheeler Dam. It is one of the most beautiful bodies of water in the world.

With all its huge potentialities as a producer of electric power Wilson Dam, however, is badly handicapped by the uneven flow of water in the Tennessee River. During the spring great floods may pour through its spillways, but in the late summer and early fall there is usually only a trickle of water going over the dam, and sometimes scarcely enough for even a moderate amount of electric power. The country around the dam is such that Wilson Lake cannot be used for storage purposes, and as Wilson Dam is partly a navigation project the level of the lake has to be kept the same the year round.

To control these floods and to even out the flow of water in the Tennessee, storage dams are needed in the upper regions of the drainage basin. Norris Dam is one of these storage dams. Others are contemplated. When Norris Dam is completed, the value of Wilson Dam will be increased considerably.

FERTILIZER WORKS AT MUSCLE SHOALS

Near the Wilson Dam is the great war-time nitrate plant, a part of which the T. V. A. has converted into a demonstration plant for the experimental production of phosphate fertilizers. Here the rock from the phosphate fields is smelted in great electrical furnaces, the phosphorus gas is taken off and converted into phosphoric acid, which, when mixed with powdered phosphate rock, produces triple superphosphate, a highly concentrated and beneficial fertilizer.

The rest of the great plant is being maintained in excellent stand-by condition as a national-defense measure for the production of nitrates for munitions purposes.

The fertilizer program is one of T. V. A.'s most interesting and important activities. I shall tell you more about it later.

I have said that the Wilson Dam covers only a portion of the Muscle Shoals, and that above Wilson Lake and below the Wilson Dam there are rapids yet to be flooded if the Tennessee River is to be made into a navigable stream. T. V. A., accordingly, is building two dams for this purpose. The one at the head of Lake Wilson is the Wheeler Dam. About 53 miles downstream from the Wilson Dam the Pickwick Landing Dam is under construction.

WHEELER DAM

I visited the site of the Wheeler Dam and found there a huge engineering project, on which approximately 4,000 men are employed. The dam, when completed, will be about a mile and a quarter wide and will raise the river level 50 feet. Near the south bank of the river a great power house is under construction which will provide for an ultimate installation of eight generators of 45,000 horsepower each. T. V. A. is providing for the installation of only one generator at this time, adding others as the demand for power justifies additional installations. On the north bank of the river the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army have built what is today the largest single-lift navigation lock on any inland river in this country, a lift of 50 feet. The lock has been completed.

PICKWICK LANDING DAM

I found the Pickwick Landing Dam particularly interesting, as this dam, unlike the other T. V. A. dams, will be made up partly of two large earth fills, with a concrete section where the present river channel is. This dam will be a mile and a half long. Work got under way on this dam in the early part of this year and splendid progress has been made.

Like the Wheeler Dam, this dam is also being provided with a power house. It will accommodate six generators of 45,000 horsepower each. No generators will be installed at the Pickwick Landing Dam power house, however, until the demand for power justifies such an installation.

The navigation lock at the Pickwick Landing Dam, which is being designed by the Corps of Engineers of the Army, will have an even higher single lift than the one at the Wheeler Dam. This lift will be 61 feet.

Wheeler Dam will form a lake 83 miles long, providing a 9-foot navigable channel for that distance. Wilson Lake is approximately 17 miles long, and the Pickwick Lake will be about 53 miles long. When the 2 dams now under construction are completed, the central portion of the Tennessee River will contain 3 large lakes, with a total length of about 153 miles, which will provide a navigable channel of 9 feet minimum depth. With the aid of waters released by the Norris Dam, a navigable channel, with a minimum depth of 7 feet, will be provided from Paducah, Ky., near the mouth of the Tennessee River, to Guntersville, Ala., a distance of about 358 miles.

SECOND SECTION

ANALYSIS OF T. V. A. ACTIVITIES

1. AREA AND SCOPE OF THE T. V. A.

The Tennessee River watershed embraces approximately 40,600 square miles, or about 26,000,000 acres, and covers portions of seven States: North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Virginia. In this area approximately 150,000,000,000 tons of water fall every year. The T. V. A. territory includes this watershed and the contiguous areas which will be immediately affected by the T. V. A. development.

2. TRAINING IN AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

The entire project serves in its various activities as a means for building a sound, intelligent, and happy American citizenship. After a study of the many persons directly affected, the T. V. A. personnel appears to be a typical cross-section of healthful Americans.

3. LAND AND WATER

The Tennessee Valley may be considered as a giant laboratory for the whole United States on the subjects of land utilization, and the proper development and conservation of our resources in water—rainfall and consequent waterways—minerals, plant life, animal life, and humanity. The Tennessee Valley was once a great forest. It is still partially a forest, and probably one of the largest potential forest areas in America. It has a wide diversity of minerals, agricultural resources, and a rugged, hardy people.

Properly developed, all of these can make for a good combination of urban and rural life within the region affected. They indicate also the possibility of achieving a better ballance between intersectional dependence and local self-containment.

4. AGRICULTURE, SOIL EROSION, FERTILIZER, AND FORESTRY

An intensive land-use program is under way. Reservoirs behind the dams T. V. A. is building must be prevented from silting. The soils in all parts of the watershed are being studied with the view toward determining the crops best suited to them. Farmers are being encouraged to put lands unsuited for cultivated crops back into pasturage and timber. Forest and mineral resources are being mapped.

In stopping erosion, the Authority is saving hundreds of thousands of acres of land from further destruction; and by restoring the necessary elements of plant food it is restoring them to a condition where they can support plant life and thus check erosion. In this work triple superphosphate fertilizer, made at Muscle Shoals, is playing an important part.

Millions of trees are being planted on the steep hillsides to restore the original forest growth, and farms are being terraced to halt erosion.

5. NATIONAL IMPLICATIONS

The pioneering in conservation being done in the Tennessee Valley will some day be applied to the Nation at large, I feel confident. The method being adopted to stop floods can be used in scores of drainage areas. The Authority's method of establishing an adequate channel for navigation could well be applied to the rivers of the Nation. The land-use program—combining as it does the stopping of erosion, protection and development of forests, use of fertilizer in controlling soil erosion, encouragement of a stabilized agriculture, and land terracing—should and will be applied to other sections of the country.

6. DAMS BRIEFLY DESCRIBED

Norris Dam is a storage plant on the Clinch River. It will help control floods in the valley by holding water back during the dry months. It will generate power and will increase the prime power output at every downstream dam.

Wheeler Dam is on the Tennessee River and will aid navigation, control floods to some extent, and produce cheap power.

Wilson Dam, complete, is already turning out cheap T. V. A. power for homes and farms and industry in the valley. In the third section full facts will be found on the subject of power.

Pickwick Landing Dam, in southwestern Tennessee, will be a mile and a half long and will aid navigation and help prevent floods. No power will be installed until the need for it arises.

Hiwassee Dam is planned for the Hiwassee River in North Carolina. It will be a storage dam, similar to Norris.

Chickamauga Dam is scheduled to be built near Chattanooga.

The site of Guntersville Dam is near Guntersville, Ala. Both Chickamauga and Guntersville, as well as all other dams, will aid in creating a 9-foot channel in the Tennessee.

7. PUBLIC AND PRIVATE OPERATION OF POWER

Public power operation is superior to private operation, because under public operation the public does not have to pay for (1) huge salaries to executives; (2) dividends on watered stock; (3) interlocking service companies' charges; and (4) fees to management companies. Profits which privately owned utilities pay to preferred- and common-stock holders can be used, first, to liquidate the bonded indebtedness, and then be passed on to the public in the form of lower rates. Public operation can—and in the case of the T. V. A. does—pay taxes.

The Federal Trade Commission recently showed that in certain private companies studied there were write-ups of $1,400,000,000. No wonder the private companies do not reduce their rates.

8. ENGINEERING ADVANCES

T. V. A.'s straight-line operation at Norris Dam has been hailed throughout the world as a marvel of efficiency. Rock is blasted from a nearby quarry and carried on endless belts through crushers and screening plant, through a sand-hammer mill, and then to the concrete mixers. The concrete is carried from the mixers to huge buckets, which carry it to the point where it is to be deposited. It is a straight-line, efficient, time-saving installation. Many other engineering advances and new methods have been discovered.

9. COSTS

Despite the high, decent wages it pays its employees, and despite the attractive living conditions it provides, the Authority's unit costs compare favorably with the costs of any dams ever built—and many were built at sweatshop wages. In fact, the unit costs of the Authority are in many instances lower than such costs have been on privately built dams.

10. SALARIES

The $3,000,000 which Hopson, of the Associated Holding Co., admitted receiving during the past 2 years—to give only one example—would pay the salaries of every single one of the 17,000 T. V. A. employees, including all three directors, for nearly 3 months.

The $100,000 salary received by virtually every important private utility executive could hire 25 T. V. A. executives for a year. It could hire hundreds of ordinary T. V. A. workers.

11. LABOR POLICY

The Authority recognizes the right of collective bargaining. It believes in a policy of high wages and it believes in providing decent working conditions, both as to hours and living conditions. All of these things have materially contributed toward the low unit-construction costs which the Authority is enjoying.

12. EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

The educational opportunities of the T. V. A. are a part of the work itself. Men are given an opportunity to learn additional trades or to perfect themselves in their own trade. Some employees necessarily have temporary connections and others permanent connections but in either event the policy is to prepare the citizen for his future life.

Vocational courses in auto mechanics, aviation ground work, carpentry, and a score of other subjects have been established and are free to the workers.

There is, of course, a thorough system of primary- and high-school education for the benefit of the children of the employees. Close by in the city of Knoxville is the University of Tennessee, one of the finest universities of America; and throughout all of the work of the T. V. A. it has received the cooperation of the university, the legislature, and the people of the State of Tennessee and of all other States affected.

13. RECREATION

The Authority is providing healthful and decent recreation to thousands of workers at the dam sites and in the reservoir areas. Library facilities are provided. Sports are encouraged.

In connection with the formation of national parks, recreational facilities will be provided for the American people and it will be of all kinds—involving swimming, boating, fishing, hunting, and including the adventurous and open-air life of the early American. This will be self-supporting but the charges are expected to be very low and within the reach of Americans of the lowest-income brackets.

THIRD SECTION

MAJOR ACTIVITIES DESCRIBED, INCLUDING POWER AND FERTILIZERS

If the electricity rates of the Tennessee Valley Authority were put into effect in the State of Texas, domestic, farm, and commercial consumers would save more than $17,000,000 a year. If the T. V. A. rates were put into effect in New York State, the saving there by domestic and commercial users would be $80,000,000 a year.

I am citing these two States because they represent the extremes of types of population. Texas, my own State, is a huge, sprawling State with a scattered population; and New York, with its Greater City of New York, of 10,000,000 alone, is a good example of a congested area. If the saving in these two States alone from electricity rates the equivalent of those charged by the T. V. A. is nearly $100,000,000 a year, think what would happen if citizens throughout the country would have the benefit of such rates.

Figures compiled by electricity-rate engineers, showing the annual consumption of electricity users in Texas and New York, number of consumers, estimated savings were T. V. A. rates put into effect, and other revealing data, are listed in the following tables.

Estimated savings in Texas if T. V. A. rates were applied

(Based on 1932 census of electrical industries)

Texas, 1932	Farm	Domestic	Commercial (small businesses)	Total
Annual consumption kilowatt-hours	20,016,403	294,498,301	457,582,481	772,097,185
Number of customers	6,329	516,282	123,300	645,911
Total revenue	$691,703	$18,240,328	$18,362,127	$37,294,158
Average annual consumption	3,163	570	3,711	1,195
Average monthly consumption	265	48	309	100
Average monthly bill under T. V. A. rates	$4.64	$1.34	[1] $7.70	[1] $2.59
Average annual bill under T. V. A. rates	$55.68	$16.08	[1] $92.40	[1] $31.04
Total annual bill under T. V. A. rates	$352,399	$8,301,815	$11,392,920	$20,047,134
Total annual savings	$339,304	$9,938,513	$6,969,207	$17,247,024
Percent saving	49.1	54.5	38.0	46.2
Average saving per kilowatt-hour cents	1.70	3.37	1.52	2.23
Average annual saving per customer	$53.61	$19.25	$56.52	$26.70

[1] Includes 10 percent surcharge on commercial.

Estimated savings in New York State if T. V. A. rates were applied

(Based on 1933 data)

New York, 1933	Residential (home and farm)	Commercial (small businesses)	Total
Annual consumption, kilowatt-hours	1,496,910,365	1,482,944,489	2,979,854,854
Number of customers	2,969,068	674,568	3,643,636
Total revenue	$93,462,252	$72,715,364	$166,177,616
Average annual consumption	504	2,198	818
Average monthly consumption	42	183	68
Average monthly bill under T. V. A. rates	$1.24	[1] $5.28	$3.80
Average annual bill under T. V. A. rates	$14.88	[1] $63.36	$45.60
Total annual bill under T. V. A. rates	$44,179,732	[1] $42,740,628	[1] $86,920,360
Total annual savings	$49,282,520	$29,974,736	$79,257,256
Percent savings	52.7	41.2	47.7
Average saving per kilowatt-hour cents	3.29	2.02	2.66
Average saving per annum per customer	$16.60	$44.44	$21.75

[1] Includes 10 percent surcharge on commercial.

T. V. A. RATES IN THE VALLEY ITSELF

Let us see how T. V. A. rates are working out in the Tennessee Valley itself and in nearby points where T. V. A. power is being sold. While electric-rate schedules are often complicated and confusing to the average user of electricity, the bill received at the end of each month's service is a simple and understandable statement of the cost of this service. Here are some typical examples of what average households pay for electricity in municipalities which purchase T. V. A. power at wholesale:

First. In a home where electricity is used for lighting and a few small appliances only, the consumption would be from 30 to 50 kilowatt-hours. Under basic T. V. A. rates this is 90 cents to $1.50 for the month.

Second. If in addition to lighting and a few small appliances is added an electric refrigerator, the consumption would be about 90 kilowatt-hours. This is $2.30 for the month.

Third. If an electric range is added to the refrigerator, lighting, and small appliances, the consumption would be about 255 kilowatt-hours. This is $5.05.

Fourth. With the addition of continuous hot-water service by an automatic electric water heater, the consumption would be about 555 kilowatt-hours. Under T. V. A. rates this would be $7.12 for the month.

The basic rates for residential and farm use in T. V. A. contracts are:

Three cents per kilowatt-hour for the first 50 kilowatt-hours per month.

Two cents per kilowatt-hour for the next 150 kilowatt-hours per month.

One cent per kilowatt-hour for the next 200 kilowatt-hours per month.

Four mills per kilowatt-hour for the next 100 kilowatt-hours per month.

Seven and one-half mills per kilowatt-hour for all over 1,400 kilowatt-hours per month.

Special interests are seeking to thwart T. V. A.'s program and prevent the American public from learning the true cost of electric service. They have tried to becloud the issue with arguments concerning the cost of Wilson Dam. It is well known, of course, that Wilson Dam was built during the World War for national defense. That must be considered.

The historical cost of Wilson Dam is a little under $47,000,000 and not $60,000,000 as opponents of the T. V. A. have charged. Eliminating the waste which occurred in construction and allowing a fair amount for depreciation since the date of completion, the present worth of the dam is $33,000,000.

To apportion the value of Wilson Dam among navigation, national defense, and power, the Authority first set aside those parts of the structure which are of exclusive use to one or another purpose: The locks to navigation, the power house to power, certain buildings and roads—not otherwise useful—to national defense. The remainder—chiefly the long spillway section in the middle—was divided between navigation and power.

The result was to allocate approximately $10,000,000 to navigation, $22,000,000 to power, and $1,500,000 to national defense. These figures are tentative as the study of costs ordered by Congress is not yet completed. All private bids for the plant have been far below this valuation.

FAIR DEAL GIVEN TO PRIVATE UTILITIES ON FIGURING COST

Allocation of cost of dams on the Tennessee River to navigation, flood control, national defense, and power provided for by law is not an advantage claimed by T. V. A. but is a definite national policy which has been made available to private utilities. The Congress in 1930, under a previous administration, authorized that $75,000,000, estimated as the cost of low dams for providing a 9-foot navigation channel on the Tennessee River to Knoxville, should be contributed to States, municipalities, or private corporations if they constructed high dams, such as the T. V. A. is doing. In another river-and-harbor act of Congress a very large contribution—some $12,000,000 of Government funds—was provided to be paid to a private utility, planning a high dam at Aurora Landing on the Tennessee River. This was a national appropriation to a private agency made because the power dam it proposed to construct would aid navigation to the extent of this sum.

COMPARISON OF RATES

It is well known that the cost of generating electricity accounts for but a small fraction of the total price charged residential customers. The generation and distribution costs of electricity are pretty well established. There is very little difference between the rates charged by private utilities and the T. V. A. on these two particular items. The Mississippi Power Co. has contracted to furnish the municipal plant at West Point, Miss., wholesale power at a flat rate of 7 mills per kilowatt-hour. The Alabama Power Co. sells power to the Birmingham Electric Co. at the city gate for as low as 5.8 mills per kilowatt-hour. T. V. A. rates for similar service average 6 mills per kilowatt-hour. But a different story is told when one looks into the rates being charged residential users of electricity by private utilities and the T. V. A.

The average price paid by T. V. A. power users is 2.2 cents a kilowatt-hour. This is less than one-half the national average charged by private utilities.

T. V. A., TAXES, AND LOW RATES

The charge also is made that the T. V. A. does not pay taxes on its electricity operation. This is not true. Not only does T. V. A. pay taxes but it also makes its electrical power available to consumers at rates considerably lower than those of the privately owned utilities. This more than makes up for taxes, although, as stated, T. V. A. pays taxes.

The act creating the Tennessee Valley Authority provides for a charge of 5 percent of gross sales of power to go to those States in which the power is generated. In addition, 7½ percent on the gross sales is set aside so that the combined percentage of 12½ percent will approximate that paid by private utilities for the generation and distribution of power.

Then, too, all cities that buy T. V. A. power and resell it place a tax charge against their municipal plants the equivalent of what such a charge would be against any private utility operating in that city. Tupelo, Miss., the first city to use T. V. A. power, showed a net profit of $25,000 during its first year of operation, despite the fact that from its revenues it extracted taxes, operating expenses, amortization charges, interest on its investment, and all other charges that would be borne by a private utility.

SOME REASONS FOR CHEAP T. V. A. POWER

When the opponents of the Tennessee Valley Authority make up a thousand and one reasons why the Authority should not be selling electricity so cheaply they conveniently forget to give you the many reasons why T. V. A. is able to sell it cheaply.

One reason why the Authority can sell power for such a small sum is because it does not have to pay speculative profits on $1,400,000,000 to insiders, which represents the amount of write-ups in private utilities exposed by the Federal Trade Commission.

Another reason is that the Authority does not have to spend a lot of money in expensive campaigns to influence legislation.

A third reason is that the Authority does not have to pay excessive fees to affiliated engineering and management companies.

And a fourth reason is that the Authority does not pay tremendous salaries to officers similar to those paid officials of holding companies and private operating companies.

It is small wonder that the Authority can sell its electricity cheaper and it is no mystery. If the $1,400,000,000 in water were drained off of the private utilities, a write-up exposed by the Federal Trade Commission, I suppose that those companies could sell their power more cheaply than they do.

ALCORN COUNTY'S EXPERIENCE

The Tennessee Valley Authority also is paving the way for an increased use of electricity in rural areas. Alcorn County, Miss., presents a striking example of what can be done to benefit rural users of power. Citizens of that county formed the Alcorn County Electric Power Association. They took over the distribution facilities from the T. V. A., which had bought them from the Mississippi Power Co. It was believed that the Association would be able to repay the Tennessee Valley Authority within 12 to 14 years for this distribution system, but it is now known that, due to the increased use of power in the county, the association will liquidate its debt to the Authority within 4 years.

The rural and urban users in the county decided at the outset that the welfare of each was dependent largely upon the other and that there should be no discrimination in rates between the two types of users. For that reason a farmer living in a remote section of the county pays the same low T. V. A. rate as does a user who might live within a stone's throw of the Corinth substation.

T. V. A. AND FREIGHT RATES

One of the laughs that is being provided by the private utility companies in their campaign against the T. V. A. is the charge that because of the fact that T. V. A. is given certain reductions in freight rates on certain railroads, it is able to sell its power cheaply. The utilities go on to say that if they were given the same freight reductions they could do likewise. The facts are that land-grant railroads, in consideration of the land originally given them, grant a 33⅓-percent reduction on all Government hauling. The T. V. A. receives this reduction on that part of the equipment and materials used in dam construction which travels over land-grant railroads.

Of the total cost of a dam, however, the freight charges play so small a part that a one-third reduction amounts to three one-thousandths of a cent per kilowatt-hour of power generated. This means a saving of 1 cent for every 3,300 kilowatt-hours used, or, turning this around, the average residential consumer saves 1 cent every 5½ years as a result of reduced freight rates granted the T. V. A. He would have to pay power bills for more than 50 years to save himself a dime.

T. V. A. AND SOIL EROSION

The Tennessee Valley Authority is yielding many national benefits other than through its cheap power.

The subject of soil erosion is not a dramatic one to a city dweller. Farmers understand it better. And yet every ton of good topsoil washed off the land into the rivers may some day very materially affect those living in our populous cities. It has marked, immediate, and drastic effect on the farmers, for the fertile topsoil is the farmer's capital, and capital washed into rivers is of no use whatsoever.

By instituting every known scientific device to prevent soil from washing away, the Authority, working with the cooperation of State extension services and county agents in some instances and directly with members of the Civilian Conservation Corps in other cases, is saving the land of the valley area, is protecting the Government's investment in dams and their reservoirs, and is paving the way for a possible unified attack on erosion throughout the country as a national policy.

It is estimated that each year more than 500,000,000 tons of topsoil and subsoil are washed off the land. If each year a column of 5-ton trucks, 5 abreast and 20,000,000 deep, were filled with earth, carried to the oceans and rivers, and tilted, the full realization of what erosion means would sink home to the average person. It does not work that way, of course, in anything. If, for instance, all of a year's auto fatalities and injuries were saved for 1 day so that newspapers would on that day carry headlines "35,000 killed by autos, 1,000,000 injured", it would not take long to get adequate uniform laws through Congress to cope with the problem. But, instead, in the case of auto accidents, and much more so in the case of soil erosion, the damage is done slowly, in driblets, and, where land erosion is concerned, invisibly.

HOW T. V. A. ATTACKS EROSION

The Authority's soil-erosion-control program is along four fronts: Gently sloping land is being terraced; forests are being restored to their natural condition; gullied land is being checked with small dams and other devices; and adequate fertilizers from the Authority's demonstration plant at Muscle Shoals are being used to promote growth of plant life on sterile and eroded land; and to prove to the farmer the wisdom of keeping his land in cover throughout the year.

To acquire a sufficient supply of seedlings for reforestation purposes, the Authority has established three tree nurseries. Their combined capacity is some 60,000,000.

T. V. A. FERTILIZER

Some unfriendly critics have charged that the T. V. A. is producing fertilizer so that the farmers may grow more cotton and corn and raise more hogs for the Government to buy up. Nothing could be further from the truth.

T. V. A. is producing fertilizer for soil-erosion control. T. V. A. knows that a good deal of soil erosion in the Tennessee Valley and elsewhere is due to farmers growing cotton and corn—the so-called "row crops"—on steep hillsides and land which has not been terraced or properly cared for in the passing years. These row crops require considerable cultivation or plowing to keep them free of weeds and grass during the growing season. The soil is kept pulverized, with the result that it washes and blows away easily.

T. V. A. wants less cotton and corn and hogs produced in the valley and more grass, legumes, small grains, such as rye and oats, which hold the soil during the growing season, and more livestock and sheep. These are needed not only to aid in soil-erosion control but also to produce a more balanced and stable agriculture in the valley. Hence, T. V. A. is making every effort to get farmers to put a certain portion of their steep fields into pasturage.

Also a considerable acreage of gently rolling or nearly flat land in the Tennessee Valley has been taken out of cotton production under the Agricultural Adjustment Act. If these lands lie bare, they will wash or blow away. It is essential that they be planted in something that will hold the soil and at the same time be of some use. Hence, T. V. A. wants such tracts put into pasturage also.

But T. V. A. knows that pastures need fertilization the same as cultivated fields. Constant grazing of land without replenishing it with the necessary plant foods impoverishes the soil and results in erosion, just as the constant cultivation of a field does without crop rotation and fertilization.

The element of plant food which these cotton and corn lands need the most is phosphate. You cannot turn them into successful pasturages without adding phosphate to the soil. Grasses and legumes will not grow without phosphate. But if you put that element back into the soil and then plant legumes, such as the many varieties of clovers, nature will restore the nitrogen, a rich growth of grass will result, and this grass will not only provide food for livestock and sheep but also form the sod or root mat that will keep the soil from washing away.

For that reason T. V. A. is experimenting in phosphate fertilizer production at Muscle Shoals in order to develop new processes that will make phosphate cheaper and more abundant. Far from adding to the agricultural surplus, the intelligent use of T. V. A. fertilizers—and T. V. A. is seeing that its fertilizer is used intelligently—will tend to reduce the surplus through the introduction of newer crops and through creating newer uses for land.

PRACTICAL DIRT-FARM DEMONSTRATIONS

To demonstrate its fertilizer the Authority, with the cooperation of State extension services of land-grant colleges in the seven Valley States, through county agents, is designating certain farms throughout the valley as demonstration farms. These farms are furnished triple-superphosphate fertilizer and demonstrations are being conducted to show the comparatively small amount of erosion on land adequately covered.

To stop erosion on gently sloping land, terracing is resorted to. Farmers of a given county unite, purchase terracing equipment, and amortize the equipment with small charges per acre for land terraced. In July last, alone, 4,619 acres on 209 farms in Tennessee and Alabama were terraced and saved for all time.

On private lands in the valley, where erosion has cut deep gullies, youths of the C. C. C. camps, under T. V. A. direction, are bringing a healing touch. Small check dams of every type, brush matting, and other agencies that stop the rush of water are changing barren stretches into useful land once more.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES RUINED BY WASTE OF LAND AND WATER

It may be well to remind you that other sections of the world have been brought to points of stagnation through just this thing. There are portions of China that once were as fertile as our Mississippi Valley, but that today will virtually support no population and stand gaunt and scarred. The same is true of portions of Greece, Persia, Egypt, Italy, and Portugal. Much of this land has since been reclaimed in these latter countries, but it came only when restoration was forced as a national policy.

Denmark, too, provides a good illustration of what can be done with land. There was a time in Denmark's history when its land was sandy and of low productivity. Denmark's civilization sank to the point where its people knew that unless something drastic were done the nation could not hope to survive. Reclaiming this low-producing land became a national policy; legumes were planted, a firm cover was established, and today Denmark's civilization is high and its land a heavy producer.

You are all familiar with the recent dust storms in the West. Hundreds of thousands of acres of land were covered by this dust which represents only another type of erosion. I have no doubt in the world that if and when the Authority's fertilizer and demonstration farm program is extended to those sections these dust storms will become things of the past. It would be very difficult to have them happen if the land were covered by thick growth of lespedeza or some other cover crop.

T. V. A. EXAMPLE TO NATION

The Tennessee Valley Authority's antisoil erosion battle will bear fruit, not alone in the region but by example throughout the Nation.

Let me speak for a moment about floods and tell you what the Authority is doing to prevent them in the Tennessee Valley.

Its system of dams contains two types of structures. One of these is the storage plant, located in the uplands or mountainous sections on tributaries of the Tennessee River. The other is the run-of-river dam on the Tennessee River itself. The storage dams on the tributaries will catch the immense rainfall the region has and will hold the water in reservoirs behind the dams. This process of holding and storing the water will go on some 8 or 9 months of the year, those months when the Tennessee River has sufficient water to provide a 9-foot channel for navigation and to produce electric power; also holding the water in the storage plants during these months will, of course, prevent it from getting into the Tennessee River and will prevent the Tennessee from reaching an acute flood stage. It is this excess water that overflows the banks of major rivers and causes floods.

Then, when the dry season comes and the Tennessee River falls sharply so that navigation channels are endangered, so that electric-power production is radically reduced, the water in the storage plants will be released. It will pass through the turbines of those storage dams that have power plants, such as Norris Dam will have. It will flow down the tributaries and into the Tennessee, and, of course, it will raise the Tennessee to a higher level than it would be if there were no surplus water to feed it. By this system the navigation channel is maintained, and the prime or firm power output at all the dams along the Tennessee River that have power installation will be more than doubled as a result of the unified system of storage and run-of-river dams. All of these dams will be tied in with high-power transmission power lines, and thus the entire valley will become one vast integrated system, with every drop of water forced to do its work over and over again for the benefit of humanity.

That is what is meant by controlled water.

COMMON SENSE IS TRUE AMERICANISM

Only a short time ago a number of lives were lost in New York State as a result of floods. Millions of dollars in property damage were lost; and yet, if a system of flood-control dams such as is being installed by the Authority in the Tennessee Valley had been in existence in upper New York State, those floods never would have occurred. It seems incredible that we permit such losses to occur in our country when we know how to prevent them. The engineers of the United States Army now are at work making a survey in upper New York State along exactly these lines. I have no doubt that they will recommend the establishment of storage dams which will minimize, if not entirely eliminate, flood losses in the future.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is pointing the way to a period in American history that will unquestionably become known as the "era of common sense", when men will no longer abuse Nature nor allow Nature to abuse them. They will control the waters of the rivers. They will restore their forests. They will rehabilitate land and will make it possible for ordinary men not only to earn a decent living but to enjoy the few years that they spend upon this earth.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, this conference report, which I trust will be adopted without a dissenting vote, brings to an end one of the bitterest battles in the history of this House.

It is really a great victory for the administration and for the American people, and especially for the consumers of electric lights and power. It constitutes a milestone in the progress toward a day when all the American people will enjoy a liberal use of electric energy and electrical appliances at the very minimum of cost.

That will be a new day, a new civilization, if you please, for this and coming generations. I doubt if any man now living can peer into the future and contemplate the marvelous changes for the happiness, content, prosperity, and progress of mankind this electric age will bring, when all of our people are permitted to use, without stint, that great wealth of electric energy with which our country is so bountifully blest. The T. V. A. has become a symbol of cheap electric lights and power, the symbol of hope, the sesame of a new day for the American people. Children yet unborn will bless the day when the T. V. A. was created. It marked a turning point in the economic progress of our civilization.

The T. V. A. is not a local institution. It is a national proposition, and has already benefited the people in every congressional district in the United States by forcing down electric lights and power rates, as a result of the example it has set. As result of that example, the American people are now saving hundreds of millions of dollars a year in their light and power bills, and I predict that in 5 years from today the present T. V. A. rates will be the maximum rates for light and power in every State in this Union. That would reduce the cost of electric energy to the ultimate consumers approximately $1,000,000,000 a year.

Judging by what has taken place in those areas that receive electricity at the T. V. A. rates, the use of electric energy will double and treble, while the use of those electrical appliances that relieve the drudgery and add to the pleasures, comforts, and conveniences of the home, will increase by leaps and bounds.

I congratulate the conference committee on arriving at this agreement, and I want to thank the chairman [Mr. McSWAIN] for bringing this report to the floor of the House and giving us an opportunity to dispose of this question at this time, in order to permit the T. V. A. to proceed unhampered with its wonderful work.

I particularly desire to express my gratitude to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the ranking Democrat on the committee, for the great battle he has waged in favor of this measure. In doing so, he was fighting not only for the people of Alabama, but for the people of the entire United States. But even if his own State alone had been involved, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] would have been justified, and more than justified, in waging this fight in order to help relieve the people of his State from the enormous burdens they are now bearing in the exorbitant overcharges for electric lights and power.

I might say at this point that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] has not only led this fight, but he has stood shoulder to shoulder with the administration in its battle against the plundering of the people of this country by the Power Trust, as have the other two gentlemen from Alabama who sit before me, JOE STARNES and HENRY STEAGALL.

On May 24, 1935, I pointed out to the Members of the House the fact that the American people are overcharged about $1,000,000,000 a year for electric lights and power, and broke that overcharge down by States to show the portion of those overcharges the people in each State have to bear.

ALABAMA

The people of the State of Alabama used 634,292,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy last year, for which they paid the sum of $12,978,651.

Under the T. V. A. rates the cost would have been $6,815,651, a saving of $6,163,000 a year.

Under the Tacoma rates the cost would have been $6,634,651, a saving of $6,344,000 a year.

Under the Ontario rates the cost would have been $5,322,608, a saving of $7,656,043 a year.

Under the Winnipeg rates the cost would have been $6,236,651, a saving of $6,742,000 a year.

Slight reductions in rates have been made in Alabama recently as a result of the example set by the T. V. A., and a recent compilation shows that the overcharges in that State at present are as follows:

Compared with the T. V. A. rates the overcharges for lights and power in the State of Alabama now amount to $4,631,881 a year. It would take 77,149 bales of cotton a year to pay these overcharges in the State of Alabama alone.

Compared with the Tacoma, Wash., rates, the people of Alabama are overcharged $6,217,760 a year. It would take 103,333 bales of cotton a year to pay these overcharges. I shall show in the course of these remarks that the Tacoma rates are absolutely sound, and should prevail in every State in the Union.

Compared with the Ontario, Canada, rates, the people of Alabama are overcharged $6,732,979 a year. It would take 112,213 bales of cotton a year, at 12 cents a pound, to pay these overcharges for 1 year.

Compared with the Winnipeg, Canada, rates, the people of Alabama are overcharged $6,742,000 a year. It would take 112,333 bales of cotton, at 12 cents a pound, to pay these overcharges in the State of Alabama for 1 year.

Prorated on a basis of population, the estimated annual saving in Alabama for residential, commercial, and industrial service under the T. V. A., Tacoma, Ontario, or Winnipeg rates, by counties, would be as follows:

Total saving prorated to counties on basis of population

County	Estimated population	Estimated annual revenue	Estimated saving under T. V. A. rates	Estimated saving under Tacoma rates	Estimated saving under Ontario rates	Estimated saving under Winnipeg rates
Autauga	19,694	$121,738	$34,276	$46,011	$49,824	$49,890
Baldwin	28,289	176,027	49,561	66,530	72,043	72,139
Barbour	32,425	200,704	56,509	75,857	82,142	82,252
Bibb	20,780	129,964	36,592	49,120	53,191	53,262
Blount	28,020	174,382	49,098	65,908	71,370	71,465
Bullock	20,016	125,028	35,202	47,255	51,171	51,239
Butler	30,195	187,543	52,803	70,882	76,756	76,859
Calhoun	55,611	345,474	97,269	130,573	141,393	141,582
Chambers	39,313	245,122	69,015	92,645	100,321	100,456
Cherokee	20,219	125,028	35,202	47,255	51,171	51,239
Chilton	24,579	152,996	43,076	57,825	62,617	62,701
Choctaw	20,513	128,319	36,129	48,499	52,517	52,588
Clarke	26,016	161,221	45,392	60,934	65,983	66,072
Clay	17,768	110,223	31,034	41,659	45,111	45,171
Cleburne	12,877	80,611	22,696	30,467	32,992	33,036
Coffee	32,556	202,349	56,972	76,478	82,816	82,927
Colbert	29,760	185,898	52,340	70,261	76,083	76,185
Conecuh	25,429	157,931	44,466	59,690	64,637	64,723
Coosa	12,460	77,320	21,770	29,223	31,645	31,687
Covington	41,356	256,638	72,257	96,997	105,034	105,175
Crenshaw	23,656	146,415	41,224	55,338	59,924	60,004
Cullman	41,051	254,993	71,794	96,376	104,360	104,501
Dale	23,175	144,770	40,761	54,716	59,250	59,330
Dallas	55,094	342,184	96,343	129,329	140,046	140,234
DeKalb	40,104	251,703	70,868	95,132	103,015	103,153
Elmore	34,280	212,220	59,751	80,209	86,855	86,972
Escambia	27,963	174,382	49,098	65,908	71,370	71,465
Etowah	63,399	393,183	110,702	148,604	160,918	161,134
Fayette	18,433	115,158	32,423	43,524	47,131	47,194
Franklin	25,372	157,931	44,466	59,691	64,637	64,723
Geneva	30,104	187,543	52,803	70,882	76,756	76,859
Greene	19,745	123,384	34,739	46,633	50,497	50,565
Hale	26,265	162,866	45,856	61,556	66,656	66,746
Henry	22,820	141,480	39,834	53,473	57,904	57,981
Houston	45,935	286,250	80,595	108,189	117,154	117,310
Jackson	36,881	228,671	64,383	86,427	93,588	93,714
Jefferson	431,493	2,683,183	755,460	1,014,117	1,098,149	1,099,620
Lamar	18,001	111,867	31,497	42,281	45,784	45,846
Lauderdale	41,130	254,993	71,794	96,375	104,360	104,501
Lawrence	26,942	167,802	47,245	63,421	68,676	68,768
Lee	36,063	223,735	62,994	84,562	91,569	91,691
Limestone	36,629	227,026	63,920	85,805	92,915	93,040
Lowndes	22,878	141,480	39,834	53,473	57,904	57,981
Macon	27,103	167,801	47,245	63,421	68,676	68,768
Madison	64,623	401,408	113,018	151,713	164,285	164,505
Marengo	36,426	227,026	63,920	85,805	92,915	93,040
Marion	25,967	161,221	45,392	60,934	65,983	66,072
Marshall	39,802	246,767	69,478	93,266	100,995	101,130
Mobile	118,363	735,367	207,045	277,934	300,964	301,367
Monroe	30,070	187,543	52,803	70,883	76,756	76,859
Montgomery	98,671	613,628	172,769	231,923	251,140	251,476
Morgan	46,176	286,250	80,595	108,189	117,154	117,311
Perry	26,385	164,512	46,319	62,178	67,330	67,420
Pickens	24,902	154,641	43,541	58,447	63,290	63,375
Pike	32,340	200,704	56,509	75,857	82,142	82,252
Randolph	26,861	167,802	47,245	63,421	68,676	68,768
Russell	27,377	169,447	47,708	64,043	69,350	69,443
St. Clair	24,510	152,996	43,076	57,825	62,617	62,701
Shelby	27,576	171,092	48,172	64,665	70,023	70,117
Sumter	26,929	167,802	47,245	63,421	68,676	68,768
Talladega	45,241	281,315	79,205	106,324	115,134	115,288
Tallapoosa	31,188	194,124	54,656	73,370	79,449	79,556
Tuscaloosa	64,153	398,118	112,092	150,470	162,938	163,156
Walker	59,445	370,151	104,217	139,900	151,492	151,695
Washington	16,365	101,997	28,718	38,550	41,744	41,800
Wilcox	24,880	154,641	43,541	58,447	63,290	63,375
Winston	15,596	97,062	27,329	36,686	39,725	39,778
Total	2,646,248	16,451,160	4,631,881	6,217,760	6,732,979	6,742,000

Divide these overcharges in each county by $60, the amount a bale of cotton will bring at 12 cents a pound, and it will show how much these burdensome overcharges mean to the people of each county in the State, measured in terms of their chief crop.

I know it will be contended by the power interests that this is not a proper basis for the distribution of these overcharges, for the reason that thousands of people in every county in Alabama are denied the use of any electric energy at all. They remind me of the story once told by William Jennings Bryan of a cannibal in New Zealand who claimed title to a piece of land on the ground that he had eaten the owner.

If all the people in Alabama were supplied with electric lights and power, as they should be—and as they must be before this fight is ended—and if their rates were reduced to the T. V. A. rates or the Tacoma rates, the saving to the people of Alabama would run anywhere from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year.

I have before me an advertisement inserted in the weekly papers of Alabama by the Alabama Power Co., which tells the people of that State, under screaming headlines, that—

If the T. V. A. should extend its operations throughout Alabama and pay taxes only on the basis agreed upon, Alabama, its counties and cities, would lose tax revenues amounting yearly to approximately two millions.

Just how gullible the Power Trust thinks the people of Alabama are I am unable to say, but I feel confident they will never be able to mislead the intelligent taxpayers of that State with any such "bunk." It has not a semblance of truth in it, and is an insult to the intelligence of the people of Alabama. They add insult to injury by overcharging them anywhere from four and a half million to seven millions of dollars a year, and then insult their intelligence with such "bunk" as this.

For instance, they tell the people of Covington County that the power company pays taxes amounting to $26,675.14 in that county, but they fail to tell them that they are overcharging them $72,257, according to the T. V. A. rates, and $96,997, according to the Tacoma rates, after allowing for taxes. The only way they can deny these figures is to take refuge behind the fact that a majority of the people of the county are denied the use of any electric energy at all.

Here are the rates, and they are typical of the overcharges throughout the State of Alabama.

In Andalusia, the county seat of Covington County, 25 kilowatt-hours a month costs a resident consumer $1.91. In Tupelo, Miss., under the T. V. A. rates, the cost would be 75 cents. Forty kilowatt-hours a month in Andalusia costs $2.96; under the T. V. A. rates the cost would be $1.20. One hundred kilowatt-hours in Andalusia costs $5.16; under the T. V. A. rates the cost would be $2.50. Thus it will be seen that these people are overcharged more than 100 percent.

In Crenshaw County, this advertisement intimates the power company pays taxes to the amount of $18,942.61, yet the record shows that Luverne, the county seat of Crenshaw County, owns its own municipal plant. While its overcharges are very heavy, they go to the taxpayers of the city and not into the pockets of the Power Trust. Just how it would cost this city any taxes to give them the benefit of cheap electric energy from the T. V. A. is a problem that only a power-trust propagandist can understand.

This advertisement also tells us, or tells the people of Alabama, that in Montgomery County the taxpayers would lose taxes to the amount of $63,473.57 a year, if the T. V. A. should extend its overcharges throughout Alabama. You will note from the above table that the people of Montgomery County are overcharged $172,769 a year, according to the T. V. A. rates, and $231,923 according to the Tacoma rates, and $251,000 according to the Ontario or the Winnipeg rates, after allowing for taxes.

Montgomery is a great city; it is the capital of a great State; it was once the capital of a great nation. Its people are served by the Alabama Power Co., which is owned by the Commonwealth & Southern, a holding company whose president's salary was raised from $43,500 a year in 1929 to $130,000 a year in 1932—in the very pit of the depression.

Let us look at the record and see how the people of Montgomery are being overcharged: Twenty-five kilowatt-hours a month in Montgomery costs $1.55; under the T. V. A. rates, the cost would be 75 cents. Forty kilowatt-hours a month in Montgomery costs $2.30; under the T. V. A. rates, the cost would be $1.20. One hundred kilowatt-hours a month costs $4.05; under the T. V. A. rates, the cost would be $2.50.

Now let me explode this tax argument put out by the Alabama Power Co. We will take, first, the city of Tupelo, Miss., the first municipality to sign a contract with the T. V. A., and therefore the first to enjoy the use of T. V. A. power. Here is the table of rates now charged in Tupelo under the T. V. A. contract:

RESIDENTIAL RATES

Available to all residential customers at local distribution secondary voltage, either 2-wire or 3-wire service, as municipality may require:

First 50 kilowatt-hours per month, at 3 cents per kilowatt-hour.
Next 150 kilowatt-hours per month, at 2 cents per kilowatt-hour.
Next 200 kilowatt-hours per month, at 1 cent per kilowatt-hour.
Excess: Over 400 kilowatt-hours per month, at 0.4 cent per kilowatt-hour.

BASIC COMMERCIAL RATES

Available to commercial customers taking service from the municipality's secondary system:

First 250 kilowatt-hours per month, at 3 cents per kilowatt-hour.
Next 750 kilowatt-hours per month, at 2 cents per kilowatt-hour.
Next 1,000 kilowatt-hours per month, at 1 cent per kilowatt-hour.
Excess: Over 2,000 kilowatt-hours per month, at 0.8 cent per month.

Minimum monthly bill:
5-ampere meter, 50 kilowatt-hours, $1.50.
15-ampere meter, 66⅔ kilowatt-hours, $2.
50-ampere meter, 100 kilowatt-hours, $3.

Surcharge: Basic rate subject to a surcharge initially established by municipality and modified from time to time as net revenues improve of 10 percent. Surcharge to take the form of straight percentage added to customers' bills.

BASIC INDUSTRIAL RATE

Available to industrial power users having demands in excess of 10 kilowatts. Service at primary-distribution voltage or secondary-distribution voltage at discretion of municipality.

Demand charge: $1 per kilowatt per month.
Demand: Maximum integrated 30-minute period.
Energy charge: First 10,000 kilowatt-hours per month at 10 mills per kilowatt-hour; next 25,000 kilowatt-hours per month at 6 mills per kilowatt-hour; next 65,000 kilowatt-hours per month at 4 mills per kilowatt-hour; next 400,000 kilowatt-hours per month at 3 mills per kilowatt-hour; excess over 500,000 kilowatt-hours per month at 2.5 mills per kilowatt-hour.

When these rates went into effect they reduced the light and power bills to the people of Tupelo $80,000 a year, and the consumption of electric energy doubled within the first 12 months. The use of electrical appliances, from water pumps to radios, from electric irons to electric ranges, increased by leaps and bounds.

During the last 11 months of 1934 the city of Tupelo purchased $32,595.81 worth of electric energy which it distributed to its consumers, domestic, commercial, and industrial, who realized a saving, from what they had been paying under the old rates, of more than $100,000. The city electric department paid in lieu of taxes $5,366.43, set aside for depreciation $4,182.07, paid $2,290 interest on its indebtedness, and returned to the city on its equity $3,292.05, and still had a net income of $23,955.61. Add that amount to the taxes paid by the city electric department of $5,366.43 and it will total $27,321.04. That will exceed the taxes even purported to be paid by the power company in any town in Alabama of the size of Tupelo, and yet the people of Tupelo saved more than $100,000 a year on their light and power bills.

The Alcorn County Electric Power Association in Alcorn County, Miss., of which Corinth is the county site, during the last 7 months of 1934 purchased power from the T. V. A. to the amount of $12,410, retailed it to the people at the T. V. A. rates, and out of the profits paid all its operating expenses, to the amount of $26,122.81, including $3,526.87 in lieu of taxes, furnished the people of Corinth and Alcorn County lights and power at rates so far under the rates they had been paying the power company prior to their connection with the T. V. A. as to save the people of the county on an average of $75,000 a year, and still made a net operating revenue of $19,005.36.

But the power trust will come back and say that the T. V. A. is subsidized and that their rates are not justified. That is not true, and they know it. They are transmitting power to West Point, Miss., and selling it wholesale for within 1 mill a kilowatt-hour of what the T. V. A. is charging Tupelo and Corinth.

Let us take the case of Tacoma, Wash. Here is a complete answer to the Power Trust's charge that these low rates are the result of a Government subsidy.

Tacoma has a public plant worth $23,000,000. Last year that plant had a gross revenue of $1,940,994, and paid $145,575 in taxes; gave the city of Tacoma $200,545 worth of free service; set aside for depreciation $400,053; paid interest on its indebtedness amounting to $435,322, and still made a net profit of $508,190, and at the same time gave to the people of Tacoma the lowest light and power rates in the United States.

In a few years, the people of Tacoma will have their plant entirely paid out and can reduce their rates to about one-half of what they are now paying. Yet, according to the Tacoma rates, the people of Alabama are overcharged more than $6,000,000 a year, all of which goes into the coffers of the power interests without any hope or prospect of that burden ever being relieved. Yet the people of Alabama have within their borders the Muscle Shoals plant, one of the greatest power projects in all the world.

If their portion of this power were distributed to all the people of Alabama, at rates based upon the cost of production and distribution, it would be the greatest blessing they have ever known. It would not only reduce the burdens of the people who are now using electricity, by lifting from their shoulders this overcharge of five or six millions of dollars a year, and enable them to enjoy a liberal use of electric energy, as well as the use of electrical appliances, but it would also take these benefits to every farmer in Alabama and build for him and his children a new and lasting civilization, the like of which they have never known.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am glad to acknowledge the debt of gratitude which the American people in general, and the people of Alabama in particular, owe to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] for valiant services in promoting the passage of this bill.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, responding in the best of humor to the remarks of my colleague the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN], I cannot say how good a bill he expected, but I may say that yesterday afternoon Dr. Morgan, chairman of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, telephoned me that in his opinion the bill which the conferees have agreed upon is better than the bill which the directors themselves drew and sent up here asking us to pass. They drew the one that was introduced in the House by myself as well as the one that was introduced in the Senate by the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. How good a bill the gentleman expected to be passed is beyond my comprehension. Dr. Morgan thinks this is the best bill on the subject up to date.

Mr. MAVERICK. I think we should congratulate the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] for being satisfied.

Mr. RANKIN. May I say to the gentleman from South Carolina that the statement I made was it was a much better bill than we expected, and, so far as I am concerned, I am satisfied with the measure.

Mr. KVALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWAIN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KVALE. In line with the gentleman's observation, this morning's paper carries an interview with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] which stated that he was generally satisfied and pleased with the measure.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, on the adoption of the conference report I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 259, nays 90, not voting 81, as follows:

[Roll No. 182]

YEAS—259

Adair	Dies	Hull	O'Day
Arnold	Dingell	Johnson, Okla.	O'Leary
Ashbrook	Disney	Kelly	O'Malley
Ayers	Dobbins	Kennedy, N. Y.	O'Neal
Barden	Dorsey	Kenney	Owen
Beam	Doughton	Kerr	Palmisano
Beiter	Doxey	Kloeb	Parsons
Biermann	Drewry	Kniffin	Patman
Binderup	Driscoll	Kocialkowski	Patton
Bland	Driver	Kopplemann	Pearson
Bloom	Duffey, Ohio	Kramer	Peterson, Fla.
Boehne	Duffy, N. Y.	Kvale	Peterson, Ga.
Boileau	Duncan	Lambeth	Pettengill
Boland	Dunn, Pa.	Lamneck	Pfeifer
Boykin	Eagle	Lanham	Pierce
Boylan	Eckert	Larrabee	Plumley
Brewster	Ekwall	Lemke	Quinn
Brooks	Ellenbogen	Lesinski	Rabaut
Brown, Ga.	Evans	Lewis, Colo.	Ramsay
Brown, Mich.	Faddis	Lloyd	Ramspeck
Brunner	Farley	Luckey	Randolph
Buck	Ferguson	Ludlow	Rankin
Buckler, Minn.	Fiesinger	Lundeen	Rayburn
Burdick	Fitzpatrick	McAndrews	Reilly
Caldwell	Flannagan	McClellan	Richardson
Carmichael	Fletcher	McCormack	Robinson, Utah
Carpenter	Ford, Calif.	McFarlane	Rogers, Okla.
Cary	Ford, Miss.	McGehee	Romjue
Casey	Frey	McGrath	Russell
Castellow	Fuller	McKeough	Ryan
Celler	Gasque	McLaughlin	Sabath
Chandler	Gavagan	McLean	Sadowski
Chapman	Gearhart	McReynolds	Sanders, La.
Citron	Gehrmann	McSwain	Sanders, Tex.
Clark, N. C.	Gilchrist	Mahon	Sandlin
Coffee	Gildea	Maloney	Sauthoff
Colden	Gingery	Mansfield	Schaefer
Cole, Md.	Goldsborough	Marcantonio	Schuetz
Colmer	Granfield	Martin, Colo.	Schulte
Connery	Gray, Ind.	Mason	Scott
Cooley	Green	Massingale	Scrugham
Cooper, Tenn.	Greenwood	Maverick	Sears
Costello	Greever	Mead	Secrest
Cox	Gregory	Meeks	Shanley
Cravens	Griswold	Merritt, N. Y.	Sirovich
Crosby	Hamlin	Mitchell, Tenn.	Sisson
Cross, Tex.	Hancock, N. C.	Monaghan	Smith, Conn.
Cullen	Harter	Montet	South
Cummings	Healey	Moritz	Spence
Daly	Higgins, Mass.	Mott	Stack
Dear	Hildebrandt	Murdock	Starnes
Deen	Hill, Ala.	Nelson	Steagall
Delaney	Hill, Samuel B.	Nichols	Stefan
Dempsey	Hobbs	O'Brien	Sullivan
DeRouen	Hoeppel	O'Connell	Sumners, Tex.
Dickstein	Houston	O'Connor	Tarver
Taylor, Colo.	Turner	Weaver	Wilson, La.
Taylor, S. C.	Umstead	Welch	Withrow
Taylor, Tenn.	Utterback	Werner	Wolverton
Terry	Vinson, Ga.	West	Wood
Thom	Vinson, Ky.	Whelchel	Woodrum
Thomason	Wallgren	White	Young
Thompson	Walter	Whittington	Zimmerman
Tolan	Warren	Wilcox	Zioncheck
Tonry	Wearin	Williams

NAYS—90

Allen	Doutrich	Kahn	Robertson
Andresen	Eaton	Kee	Robsion, Ky.
Andrew, Mass.	Edmiston	Kinzer	Rogers, Mass.
Andrews, N. Y.	Engel	Knutson	Seger
Arends	Englebright	Lambertson	Smith, Va.
Bacharach	Fenerty	Lehlbach	Smith, W. Va.
Bacon	Focht	Mapes	Snell
Bell	Gifford	Marshall	Stewart
Blackney	Gray, Pa.	Martin, Mass.	Taber
Bolton	Guyer	May	Thomas
Burnham	Gwynne	Merritt, Conn.	Thurston
Carlson	Halleck	Michener	Tinkham
Cavicchia	Hancock, N. Y.	Millard	Tobey
Christianson	Hess	Patterson	Treadway
Church	Higgins, Conn.	Perkins	Turpin
Cole, N. Y.	Hoffman	Pittenger	Wadsworth
Cooper, Ohio	Hollister	Polk	Wigglesworth
Crawford	Holmes	Powers	Wilson, Pa.
Culkin	Hope	Ransley	Wolcott
Darden	Huddleston	Reed, Ill.	Wolfenden
Darrow	Jenckes, Ind.	Reed, N. Y.	Woodruff
Ditter	Jenkins, Ohio	Rich
Dondero	Johnson, W. Va.	Risk

NOT VOTING—81

Amlie	Crowther	Imhoff	Norton
Bankhead	Dietrich	Jacobsen	Oliver
Berlin	Dirksen	Johnson, Tex.	Parks
Blanton	Dockweiler	Jones	Peyser
Brennan	Dunn, Miss.	Keller	Reece
Buchanan	Eicher	Kennedy, Md.	Richards
Buckbee	Fernandez	Kimball	Rogers, N. H.
Buckley, N. Y.	Fish	Kleberg	Rudd
Bulwinkle	Fulmer	Lea, Calif.	Schneider
Burch	Gambrill	Lee, Okla.	Shannon
Cannon, Mo.	Gassaway	Lewis, Md.	Short
Cannon, Wis.	Gillette	Lord	Smith, Wash.
Carter	Goodwin	Lucas	Snyder
Cartwright	Greenway	McGroarty	Somers, N. Y.
Claiborne	Haines	McLeod	Stubbs
Clark, Idaho	Harlan	McMillan	Sutphin
Cochran	Hart	Maas	Sweeney
Collins	Hartley	Miller	Underwood
Corning	Hennings	Mitchell, Ill.
Crosser, Ohio	Hill, Knute	Montague
Crowe	Hook	Moran

So the conference report was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Dietrich (for) with Mr. Corning (against).
Mr. Gillette (for) with Mr. Kleberg (against).
Mr. Rudd (for) with Mr. Crowther (against).
Mr. Snyder (for) with Mr. Buckbee (against).
Mr. Berlin (for) with Mr. Short (against).
Mr. Richards (for) with Mr. Dirksen (against).
Mr. Johnson of Texas (for) with Mr. Maas (against).
Mr. Schneider (for) with Mr. Collins (against).
Mr. Amlie (for) with Mr. McLeod (against).
Mr. Haines (for) with Mr. Goodwin (against.
Mr. Bankhead (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).
Mr. Sweeney (for) with Mr. Lord (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Cochran with Mr. Carter.
Mr. Blanton with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Jones with Mr. Kimball.
Mr. Buchanan with Mr. Reece.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Stubbs.
Mr. Hart with Mr. Miller.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Gambrill.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.
Mr. Hook with Mr. Sutphin.
Mr. Cannon of Missouri with Mr. Smith of Washington.
Mr. Jacobsen with Mr. Underwood.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Lucas.
Mr. Crosser of Ohio with Mr. Dunn of Mississippi.
Mr. Moran with Mrs. Greenway.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. McGroarty.
Mr. Somers of New York with Mr. Claiborne.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Harlan.
Mr. Clark of Idaho with Mr. Parks.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Gassaway.
Mr. Hennings with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Crowe with Mr. Knute Hill.
Mr. Lewis of Maryland with Mr. Imhoff.
Mr. Eicher with Mr. Buckley of New York.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Fernandez.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Dockweiler.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Keller.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THE COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (S. DOC. NO. 126)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed:

To the Congress:

Last April I appointed a Cabinet committee consisting of the Secretary of Commerce, as chairman, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Labor to make a survey of the conditions and problems of the cotton textile industry. I am now in receipt of a communication signed by the members of the committee, with which they submit their findings and recommendations.

This letter and these findings and recommendations of the committee I am immediately transmitting herewith for the information of the Congress.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 21, 1935.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I heard what the Speaker said relative to the advancement of the program and I think the Speaker is correct. We want to cooperate, but I wish to make this suggestion. Where bills come up that have important amendments or contain entirely new legislation, we do not think they ought to go through by unanimous consent without any explanation. So I wish to make the announcement now that bills of this character will have to have a rule or recognition by the Speaker for suspension, because we cannot let them pass by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to make this statement in addition to the one made by the gentleman from New York. As has been stated, this is Calendar Wednesday and business can proceed today on other matters only by unanimous consent. The Chair recognized a number of gentlemen yesterday to ask unanimous consent for consideration of bills, some of which were objected to. These Members, quite naturally, desire recognition today, but there are a number of Members who did not have an opportunity to be recognized on Senate bills yesterday and the Chair thinks it only fair to those Members who were not reached upon yesterday to recognize them first, and so far as the Chair can do so, the Chair will follow that policy.

PUBLIC GRAZING LANDS

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3019) to amend sections 1, 3, and 15 of "An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

The Clerk proceeded to read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3019) to amend sections 1, 3, and 15 of "An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes", approved June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269), having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That the first sentence of section 1 of the Act entitled 'An Act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes', approved June 28, 1934, is amended by striking out the words 'eighty million' and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'one hundred and forty-two million.'

"SEC. 2. Section 7 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to examine and classify any lands withdrawn or reserved by Executive orders of November 26, 1934 (numbered 6910), February 5, 1935 (numbered 6964), and May 20, 1935 (numbered 7048), or within a grazing district, which are more valuable or suitable for the production of agricultural crops than for the production of native grasses and forage plants, or more valuable or suitable for any other use than for the use provided for under this Act, and to open such lands to entry, selection, or location for disposal in accordance with such classification under applicable public-land laws, except that homestead entries shall not be allowed for tracts exceeding three hundred and twenty acres in area. Such lands shall not be subject to disposition, settlement, or occupation until after the same have been classified and opened to entry: Provided, That locations and entries under the mining laws, including the Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, may be made upon such withdrawn and reserved areas without regard to classification and without restrictions or limitation by any provision of this Act. Where such lands are located within grazing districts reasonable notice shall be given by the Secretary of the Interior to any grazing permittee of such lands. The applicant, after his entry, selection, or location is allowed, shall be entitled to the possession and use of such lands: Provided, That upon the application of any applicant qualified to make entry, selection, or location, under the public-land laws, filed in the land office of the proper district, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause any tract to be classified, and such application, if allowed by the Secretary of the Interior, shall entitle the applicant to a preference right to enter, select, or locate such lands if opened to entry as herein provided.'

"SEC. 3. Section 8 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 8. That where such action will promote the purposes of the district or facilitate its administration, the Secretary is authorized and directed to accept on behalf of the United States any lands within the exterior boundaries of a district as a gift, or, when public interests will be benefited thereby and such action will promote the consolidation of the land holdings of any owner, he is authorized and directed to accept on behalf of the United States title to any privately owned lands within or without the boundaries of said grazing district, and in exchange therefor to issue patent for not to exceed an equal value of surveyed grazing district land or of unreserved surveyed public land in the same State or within a distance of not more than fifty miles within the adjoining State nearest the base lands.'

"SEC. 4. Such Act is amended by adding the following new section:

"'SEC. 8–A. Upon application of any State to exchange lands within or without the boundaries of a grazing district the Secretary of the Interior shall and is hereby directed to proceed with such exchange at the earliest practicable date in the manner now provided by law for the exchange of lands with the States and to cooperate fully with the States to that end, but no State shall be permitted to select lieu lands in another State. In making such exchange the United States shall patent to such State an equal value of surveyed grazing land or of unreserved surveyed public land. Areas and values of unsurveyed lands within or without grazing districts may be approximated by protraction or otherwise for the purpose of effecting exchanges of State lands. No State, however, shall select public lands within a grazing district in furtherance of any exchange except for the purpose of consolidating its land holdings located in such area. No fee shall be charged the State for any exchange of land made under this Act except one-half of the cost of publishing notice of a proposed exchange as herein provided.

"'Before any such exchange under this section or under section 8 hereof shall be effected notice of the contemplated exchange, describing the lands involved, shall be published by the Secretary of the Interior once each week for four successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in the county or counties in which may be situated the lands to be accepted, and in the same manner in some like newspaper published in any county in which may be situated any lands to be given in such exchange; lands conveyed to the United States under this Act shall, upon acceptance of title, become public lands, and if located within the exterior boundaries of a grazing district they shall become a part of the district within the boundaries of which they are located: Provided, That either party to an exchange under this or the preceding section may make reservations of minerals, easements, or rights of use, the values of which shall be duly considered in determining the values of the exchanged lands. Where reservations are made in lands conveyed to the United States the right to enjoy them shall be subject to such reasonable conditions respecting ingress and egress and the use of the surface of the land as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of the Interior. Where mineral reservations are made in lands conveyed by the United States, it shall be so stipulated in the patent, and any person who acquires the right to mine and remove the reserved mineral deposits may enter and occupy so much of the surface as may be required for all purposes incident to the mining and removal of the minerals therefrom, and may mine and remove such minerals, upon payment to the owner of the surface for damages caused to the land and improvements thereon.'

"SEC. 5. Section 10 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 10. That, except as provided in sections 9 and 11 hereof, all moneys received under the authority of this act shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts, but 25 percent of all moneys received under this act during any fiscal year is hereby made available, when appropriated by the Congress, for expenditure by the Secretary of the Interior for the construction, purchase, or maintenance of range improvements, and 50 percent of the money received under this act during any fiscal year shall be paid at the end thereof by the Secretary of the Treasury to the State in which the grazing districts or the lands producing such moneys are situated, to be expended as the State legislature of such State may prescribe for the benefit of the county or counties in which the grazing districts or the lands producing such moneys are situated: Provided, That if any grazing district or any leased tract is in more than one State or county, the distributive share to each from the proceeds of said district or leased tract shall be proportional to its area in said district or leased tract.'

"SEC. 6. Section 15 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 15. The Secretary of the Interior is further authorized, in his discretion, where lands of the public domain are so situated as not to justify their inclusion in any grazing district to be established pursuant to this act, to lease any such lands for grazing purposes, upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe: Provided, That preference shall be given to owners, homesteaders, lessees, or other lawful occupants of contiguous lands to the extent necessary to permit proper use of such contiguous lands, except that when such isolated or disconnected tracts embrace 760 acres or less, the owners, homesteaders, lessees, or other lawful occupants of lands contiguous thereto, shall be entitled to receive such leases thereto: Provided further, That the issuance of such a lease shall not be construed to prevent the sale, exchange, or other disposition of lands as authorized by this act.'

"SEC. 7. Such Act is further amended by adding the following new section:

"'SEC. 17. The Secretary of the Interior shall have power to select a Director of Grazing and such assistant directors of grazing, graziers, and such other employees, as shall be necessary to administer this Act without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws. The Secretary of the Interior shall give consideration to the practical range experience in public land States of the persons selected for such positions.

"'No assistant director of grazing, grazier, or other employee shall be appointed who is not at the time of appointment or selection a bona fide citizen and resident of the State, or of one of the States, in which such director, grazier, or other employee is to serve.'

"SEC. 8. Such Act is further amended by adding the following new section:

"'SEC. 18. (a) All vacant, unappropriated, and unreserved nonmineral lands of the public domain which are situated in isolated or disconnected tracts of seven hundred and sixty acres or less which, at the expiration of two years after the passage of this Act, as amended, are not included within the boundaries of any grazing district established pursuant to this Act, as amended, and which during such period have not been ordered into the market for sale under the provisions of section 2455 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, or leased under the provisions of this Act, or selected for exchange under the provisions of this Act, are hereby granted to the several States in which such lands are situated for the use or benefit of the common schools of such States.

"'(b) No part of the grant made by this section shall become effective as to any State until such State, through its legislature, shall have accepted such grant, and such acceptance, duly certified, has been received by the Secretary of the Interior. Upon the receipt of such acceptance, which must be made within a period of four years after the date of enactment of this Act, as amended, the grant shall immediately become effective as to such State, irrespective of the action of other States, and the Secretary shall immediately notify the local land offices in such State of such fact. The Secretary shall also cause to be delivered to the proper officials of such State, such maps, records, books, and documents as may be necessary for the enjoyment, control, use, administration, and disposition of such lands.'"

"TITLE II.—BADLANDS NATIONAL MONUMENT

"SEC. 1. The boundaries of the Badlands National Monument, as established by the Act of March 4, 1929 (45 Stat. 1553), shall be, and are hereby, extended to include such lands adjacent or contiguous thereto, in the State of South Dakota, including, but not being restricted to, lands designated as submarginal by the Resettlement Administration, as may be determined by the President, by proclamation, within 5 years following the approval of this Act, to be necessary for the proper rounding out of the boundaries of said Monument or the administration thereof, providing the entire area of such Monument shall not exceed 250,000 acres.

"SEC. 2. That the provisions of the Act of August 25, 1916, entitled 'An Act to establish a National Park Service and for other purposes', as amended, are hereby made applicable to and extended over such lands as may be added to the Monument under the authority of the foregoing section."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
J. W. ROBINSON,
ROY E. AYERS,
HARRY L. ENGLEBRIGHT,
Managers on the part of the House.

KEY PITTMAN,
ALVA B. ADAMS,
CARL A. HATCH,
PETER NORBECK,
GERALD P. NYE,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers appointed on the part of the House for conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3019) entitled "An act to amend sections 1, 3, and 15 of 'An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes', approved June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269)" have agreed to the following amendments:

Page 3, line 21, strike out the word "and" following "(numbered 6910)" and insert in lieu thereof a comma; then, on line 22, preceding the comma which follows "(numbered 6964)", insert "and May 20, 1935 (numbered 7048)."

Page 4, line 18, strike out the word "person" and insert in lieu thereof the word "applicant."

Page 6, line 11, after the word "except", insert the words "one-half of."

Page 6, line 12, strike out the word "hereinafter" and insert in lieu thereof the word "herein."

Page 6, line 14, after the word "exchange", insert the words "under this section or under section 8 hereof."

Page 7, strike out all of lines 19, 20, and 21.

Page 8, line 10, after the word "situated", insert a comma and the words "to be expended as the State legislature of such State may prescribe for the benefit of the county or counties in which the grazing districts or the lands producing such moneys are situated."

Page 9, lines 4 and 5, strike out the words "upon the filing of an application therefor."

Page 9, line 6, after the word "sale", strike out the word "or" and insert in lieu thereof a comma.

Page 9, line 6, after the word "exchange", insert a comma and the words "or other disposition."

Page 9, line 12, strike out the word "and."

Page 9, line 12, after the word "graziers", insert a comma and the words "and such other employees."

Page 9, line 17, strike out the word "or."

Page 9, line 17, after the word "graziers", insert the words "or other employee."

Page 9, line 18, strike out the words "to serve in any State."

Page 9, line 20, after the word "State", insert a comma and the words "or of one of the States,".

Page 9, line 20, strike out the word "or" and insert in lieu thereof a comma.

Page 9, line 20, after the word "grazier", insert a comma and the words "or other employee."

Page 10, line 7, after the comma following the word "act", insert the words "or selected for exchange under the provisions of this act."

Page 11, strike out all of lines 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, as the Senate recedes from its amendment to section 16.

Pages 11 and 12, strike out all of sections 1, 2, and 3 of title II and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"TITLE II. BADLANDS NATIONAL MONUMENT

"SEC. 1. The boundaries of the Badlands National Monument, as established by the act of March 4, 1929 (45 Stat. 1553), shall be, and are hereby, extended to include such lands adjacent or contiguous thereto, in the State of South Dakota, including, but not being restricted to, lands designated as submarginal by the Resettlement Administration, as may be determined by the President, by proclamation, within 5 years following the approval of this act, to be necessary for the proper rounding out of the boundaries of said monument or the administration thereof, providing the entire area of such monument shall not exceed 250,000 acres.

"Sec. 2. That the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916, entitled 'An act to establish a National Park Service and for other purposes', as amended, are hereby made applicable to and extended over such lands as may be added to the Monument under the authority of the foregoing section."

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agrees to the same.

RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
J. W. ROBINSON,
ROY E. AYERS,
HARRY L. ENGLEBRIGHT,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. DEROUEN (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the further reading of the statement.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps that is all right, but the gentleman ought to tell us what is in the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEROUEN. There are no changes, I may say to the gentleman from New York, and I shall yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. SNELL. There must be some change or you would not have had a conference.

Mr. DEROUEN. There was simply some perfecting language, and there was added a rider by the Senator from South Dakota; and beyond this there is no change.

Mr. SNELL. What was the rider?

Mr. DEROUEN. The rider added a certain area in South Dakota. The gentleman from Utah [Mr. ROBINSON] has the report and will explain it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. NORBECK insisted that on this bill there be attached a rider which provided that certain lands in South Dakota be included in the park area, and there was no objection from either the Department of the Interior or the Department of Agriculture, and it was unanimously passed by the Senate.

Mr. SNELL. Is that the only change there is?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The other changes in the bill are a few minor changes. One is an amendment by Senator O'MAHONEY that provides that small sections of land consisting of 760 acres or less, that are not put into grazing districts or that are not offered for exchange lands in any way, or not put up for sale by the Government after 2 years, shall then go to the States if the State legislature so desires. This is an amendment offered by Senator O'MAHONEY that was placed in the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Why should we give these lands to the States?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. They are nonmineral lands.

Mr. SNELL. Why should we give the States any of our public lands?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. These lands go to help build up the schools and colleges and they are small sections of land that are isolated. The language of the bill is "isolated tracts of land which cannot be used for grazing in the grazing areas."

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. If the gentleman will permit, the main reason is that the land is not worth anything.

Mr. SNELL. What help would it be to your schools and colleges if it is not worth anything?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I think they would rather use them for this purpose than anything else.

Mr. SNELL. If they are not worth anything, I do not see how they can help your schools and colleges.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. If they were worth anything they would have been taken up long before this.

Mr. SNELL. I cannot see why you would want them if they are not worth anything. However, I am not going to object to the request.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Does this conference report diminish the powers of the Department of Agriculture in favor of the Department of the Interior in any way?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. No; not in any way.

Mr. CULKIN. It does not give the Department of the Interior any added jurisdiction?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. No; this is an amendment to the Taylor Grazing Act, and the provisions that were formerly not in the act are included here.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT].

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, the original Taylor Grazing Act contained this language in section 3:

> Except that no permittee complying with the rules and regulations laid down by the Secretary of the Interior shall be denied a renewal of such a permit if such denial will impair the value of the grazing unit of the permittee when such unit is pledged as security for a bona fide loan.

It was my contention in committee that this language vested a perpetual right in a private citizen to a part of the public domain and was against public policy. I offered an amendment on the floor to strike that language out, which amendment was adopted. I notice that the Senate has struck out my amendment. Is that correct?

Mr. DEROUEN. That is in the Taylor grazing law. It was put in to protect the loans made by the bankers, which I think was a proper protection.

Mr. MOTT. I am asking the gentleman if my statement is correct.

Mr. DEROUEN. No; the gentleman's statement is not correct. The provision is still the law. The McCarran amendment is still the law. It ought not to be taken out.

Mr. MOTT. I am not asking whether it ought to be taken out. I am saying that the Senate took my amendment out.

Mr. DEROUEN. Yes; and the Senate reinstated the provision as contained in the Taylor Act.

Mr. MOTT. If the gentleman will look at the bill as it passed the Senate, he will find my amendment on page 3, section 2. I have stated the Senate bill takes my amendment out, and I am asking the gentleman if that is correct.

Mr. DEROUEN. What would be the result of the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. MOTT. The effect of my amendment would be to prohibit the Secretary of the Interior from giving to a permittee a perpetual private right in the public domain. I have just read the language of the amendment. It was thoroughly discussed when it was up for consideration at the time the House adopted it. I merely wanted to call the attention of the House to the fact that the Senate has struck it out. The conference committee has concurred in the action of the Senate, and I am therefore opposed to the report of the conference committee.

Mr. DEROUEN. It ought to be stricken out; it had no business in there at this time, for the reason that bankers and other credit agencies should be protected for a few years longer and at the same time help the small cattlemen.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was adopted.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 7167) to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, authorize appropriations, and for other purposes.

WHAT THIS CONGRESS HAS DONE—WHAT THE NEXT SESSION SHOULD DO

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for time during these closing days of this session in order to call attention of the House and the country to some very important measures now pending that certainly ought to receive serious consideration of Congress before adjourning. I also desire to discuss a few of the outstanding measures that have been passed by the Seventy-fourth Congress. When this session adjourns we can have the satisfaction of knowing that some vitally important legislation has been enacted that will relieve suffering humanity and put millions of unemployed and needy people to work, but we must not overlook the fact that many important measures that progressive Members of the House have long advocated have not been enacted. We are going home leaving much unfinished business for the next session which meets in January.

NO LEGISLATION PASSED TO TAKE PROFITS OUT OF WAR

It appears now that this session of Congress will adjourn without passing a bill with teeth in it to eliminate war profiteering. When this House passed the modified McSwain bill last April, more than 5 months ago, I had great hopes that Congress would at last take affirmative action on this question, so vital to world peace. But we are advised that the Senate has abandoned any attempt to pass such legislation at this session of Congress. With black war clouds hanging low over Europe and Africa, it is of tremendous importance that Congress pass legislation to eliminate war profits and quit dillydallying on this question so near and dear to the hearts of our people.

PLEADS FOR FRAZIER-LEMKE FARM REFINANCE BILL

Another measure of vital importance that some of us from the agricultural sections have been sponsoring for a long while and in which our people are especially interested is what is known as the "Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill", which I firmly believe would be a godsend to hundreds of thousands of broke and disheartened farmers throughout the country.

The Frazier-Lemke bill was reported out of the Committee on Agriculture May 3 with a recommendation that the bill should be enacted. But there has been no action and no chance to get a vote in the House, because the Committee on Rules has refused to report out a rule that would permit consideration of this important measure and a vote on its passage. I insist that it is only fair and just and even good sportsmanship that Members of this House be given an opportunity to vote "yes" or "no" on the Frazier-Lemke bill in view of promises heretofore made by House leaders as shown by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. [Applause.]

ISSUE MUST BE MET

This is an issue that must be met. The refinancing of farm mortgages throughout the Nation is a problem that must be solved. Congress cannot continue indefinitely to ignore it. But it seems that the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress will finally close without action on this important measure. I have been for the Frazier-Lemke bill since its inception because I believe it is just, right, and equitable. I contend that we can never have full business and economic recovery while our farmers are crushed down with an overwhelming burden of debt that they must retire at high and unconscionable interest rates. This bill does not intend to increase farm indebtedness but it will refinance existing farm mortgages at low rates of interest and a long-time amortization period so that these homes can be saved from foreclosure.

Farm tenantry has increased at an alarming rate, especially in recent years, and the Frazier-Lemke bill is one measure that will tend to halt this calamity that has befallen so many honest, hard-working but unfortunate farmers, who are entitled to the opportunity of owning their own homes. Nothing would inspire patriotism and love of country in the breasts of our farmers like the opportunity of becoming home owners. [Applause.]

ABOUT FARM MORTGAGE MORATORIUM BILL

It will be recalled that in the closing hours of the last Congress, it being impossible to secure favorable action on the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing measure, a farm moratorium bill was hurriedly passed to give temporary relief. It was a makeshift measure, was not carefully drawn, and was declared unconstitutional. But it did save thousands of farmers from being immediately foreclosed.

Another moratorium bill has been very carefully written by the Judiciary Committee, and I am advised that the objections of the Supreme Court have been eliminated. Yesterday the United States Senate passed the measure and it is now up to this House to take similar action. Feeling that half a loaf is better than no loaf at all, I appeal to the Membership of this House not to adjourn this session until the farm moratorium bill is passed and becomes a law, in order to meet a very distressing emergency among thousands of our farmers.

So that Members may be advised, will say that the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LLOYD], an able member of the Judiciary Committee, at the first opportunity will ask unanimous consent to bring up the farm moratorium measure—S. 3002—and I appeal to the leaders on both sides of this aisle to permit its consideration.

Mr. HOUSTON. Then this so-called "moratorium bill" is not the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. The gentleman from Kansas is correct.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Yes; I yield to the distinguished Republican floor leader.

Mr. SNELL. If the gentleman is going to bring up important legislation like the Frazier-Lemke bill, I think it would be better to bring it in under a rule. Then we would have ample opportunity to understand what is in the bill. There are two of these bills. Some of us are not opposed to both of them. I think the legislation is too important to go through by unanimous consent without some explanation.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Replying to my distinguished friend, the minority floor leader, I will say that I have endeavored to make it plain that while I am enthusiastically supporting the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, yet the bill just referred to—S. 3002—and passed by the Senate is not the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, and certainly there is no reason or excuse for demanding a rule on this measure. Of course, if my distinguished friend wants to accept the responsibility for defeating this legislation during this session of Congress by refusing to permit its consideration, that is his responsibility.

BANKHEAD-JONES FARM-TENANT BILL

Another measure that I feel is of vital importance to the welfare and security of the farmers of America is the Bankhead farm-tenant bill, or the Jones bill, both of which, in brief, propose that the Government aid tenant farmers who have been evicted from their own homes by foreclosure or otherwise to buy a small farm and pay for it at a small rate of interest and over a long period of years. This bill has been passed by the Senate of the United States, and if we cannot secure consideration of the Frazier-Lemke bill at this present session of Congress, certainly there is no reason why this House should not consider the Bankhead-Jones farm-tenant bill that would give relief and security to thousands of farmers throughout the land. This bill is now sleeping peacefully in the Committee on Agriculture of the House. It is my understanding that the difficulty is in ironing out the differences between the author of the bill in the Senate, Mr. BANKHEAD, and the author of a similar bill in the House, Mr. JONES. It is to be hoped that petty differences will be cast aside and that this legislation of so vital importance to the welfare of the Nation will be passed before this Congress shall conclude its work.

The vital importance of enacting legislation to assist farm tenants is clearly shown by figures presented at the Senate hearings, in which it was shown that in 1930, 42.4 percent of all American farmers were tenants. The experts further estimated that because of the rapid growth of tenantry in recent years more than half of all farmers in America are now tenants. In many of the counties of Oklahoma, I regret to say, the percentage of tenantry is considerably higher.

UNDESIRABLE ALIENS SHOULD BE DEPORTED

The coming session of Congress should pass the Dies alien deportation bill, or some similar measure to deport criminal aliens who have refused to become Americanized or civilized, many of whom hate everything American and yet are holding jobs that belong to Americans. A few weeks ago the President by Executive decree ordered a dozen of the most vicious alien criminals deported back to their native lands. This was a step in the right direction and Congress ought to follow the example by passing legislation to deport all undesirable and criminal aliens now within our borders, many of whom were smuggled into this country unlawfully.

RESTORE TO CONGRESS POWER TO REGULATE VALUE OF MONEY

The next session of Congress also should remedy another evil that has long been neglected. I refer to legislation to vitalize that section of the Constitution giving Congress power to "coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin." For many years Congress has surrendered the power to issue money and regulate its value to the Federal Reserve System, owned and controlled by the banking interests of the country. Congress should assert its authority over the issuance of money and take this important power out of private hands, returning it to the Federal Government. Our standpat Republican friends and loud Liberty Leaguers so suddenly interested in keeping the Constitution as it is without a single change, are invited to join in efforts to restore to Congress the power to issue money and regulate its value.

And, incidentally, I am wondering if the Republican Party and the Liberty League, mouthpieces for special interests, have not become suddenly alarmed about the preservation of the Constitution "without the crossing of a 't' or the dotting of an 'i'", because it is known that President Franklin D. Roosevelt favors a constitutional amendment to give the Federal Government power to tax the billions of tax-exempt securities of the country. For my part, I feel that the country is fed up on billions of Government bonds being issued that are tax exempt. The next Congress must do something about it.

PROPERTY RIGHTS VERSUS HUMAN RIGHTS

In their desperate battle for protection of property rights only, and bitterly opposing those who follow the President in his desire to safeguard human rights, the Republican leaders are aided and abetted by the money changers of Wall Street, by the great international bankers, who are horrified that they cannot own, control, or dictate to the man now in the White House.

In their dirty and damnable doctrine of hate and false propaganda they are spreading against the greatest champion of human rights who ever occupied the White House they have the enthusiastic support, not only of the Liberty Leaguers, but also of paid attorneys, high-powered lobbyists, and self-confessed constitutional alarmists who have started their whispering campaign that the President, among other things, would wreck the Constitution.

I have a profound reverence for the Constitution of the United States, and I am not one of those who would wreck the Constitution or divest the Supreme Court of the United States from its proper functions of Government. But amendments to that immortal document to safeguard the rights and liberties of the people have been found necessary in the past and will no doubt be necessary in the future.

ABOUT THE CONSTITUTION

A careful check-up, however, of the record shows that Democrats have been in charge of the Congress of the United States more years than have the Republicans. Of the 74 Congresses in the history of this Republic, 33 have been controlled strictly by the Democrats and only 27 strictly by the Republicans. The others have been whig, nonpartisan, and mixed with the Senate of one political complexion and the House another. Yet of the 62 laws passed by all of the Congresses that have been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, only 20 have been passed by Democrats and 42 have been passed by Republicans. Or only 30 percent of the unconstitutional laws have been passed by Democrats and 70 percent by Republicans. This same Republican Party that has passed 70 percent of the unconstitutional laws has now suddenly become constitutionally-minded and is making dire predictions that the Democrats will wreck the Constitution.

IMPORTANT MEASURES PASSED BY PRESENT SESSION

Turning aside for a few moments from some of the important legislation pending and proposed legislation that I hope the next session of Congress will enact, I desire to name some of the important measures passed by this House the present session, all of which I supported.

First. The Old Age Security Act.

Second. The bill for immediate cash payment of the veterans' adjusted-service certificates.

Third. The bill to regulate utilities and the President's proposal to abolish unnecessary holding companies that absorb millions of dollars of profits made by the so-called "operating companies" which belong to the stockholders and the consumers.

Fourth. The Tennessee Valley Authority amendments, to give cheap electricity to the people of the country.

Fifth. The Jones-Dempsey bill creating the Soil Conservation Service to establish a national program for combating the menace of soil erosion.

Sixth. Amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Seventh. The bill to increase the taxes on excessive fortunes and large gifts, in accordance with the President's recommendations.

Eighth. The McSwain bill proposing Government control and operation of munitions factories to eliminate future war profiteering.

Ninth. The relief bill to put unemployed to work on useful projects in an effort to eliminate the F. E. R. A. dole system.

Tenth. The bill extending the guarantee of bank deposits. It will be recalled that when the banking act was first passed its enemies assailed it viciously as being "unconstitutional." But again the "calamity howlers" were dead wrong. That bill brought order out of chaos so far as bank failures are concerned and saved millions to depositors.

Eleventh. Supported Hayden-Cartwright road bill, giving Federal aid for roads, which also provides that 25 percent of such Federal funds shall be used for farm-to-market roads.

Signed the petition filed in an effort to get a vote on the Frazier-Lemke bill.

Incidentally, I voted against continuation of the so-called "nuisance taxes", including the Federal gasoline tax, because approximately 60 percent of all Federal revenues are now raised by sales taxes and hidden levies against the people less able to pay. Other so-called "administration measures" that I refused to support were the ship-subsidy bill, costing $188,000,000; the Guffey coal bill, setting up a little N. R. A.; as well as other measures carrying appropriations.

Some of the measures passed at this session of Congress will have to be revised and strengthened at future sessions. I feel, for example, that the passage of a Federal old-age pension law is one of the most important things done at this session of Congress. Yet it needs considerable future revising. But although the bill is very imperfect, it is a step in the right direction and can be amended later.

ABOUT SOIL CONSERVATION

At the next session, in accordance with the terms of the Jones-Dempsey erosion bill, I am going to press for an annual appropriation sufficient to make the Soil Conservation Service permanent in nature and to expand its program in keeping with the needs of the Nation. Many soil-conservation projects have been approved in Oklahoma. In fact, the Soil Conservation Service has approved worthy and urgent projects that would cost $12,000,000 with only a million dollars with which to do the job. I give notice now that I shall continue to fight for sufficient Federal funds to carry out a comprehensive, Nation-wide program to conserve and protect the Nation's soil.

CONGRESS HAS DONE REASONABLY GOOD JOB

Despite Republican criticism and attacks of the Economy League, I feel that this Congress has done a reasonably good job and has passed much needed legislation to stimulate business recovery. Petty bickerings and jealousies have held up some of the legislation I had hoped would be passed before now.

In the main, I have been glad to give my whole-hearted support to the President and his program as presented to the Seventy-fourth Congress, believing that the President deserves the support of Democrats in Congress on vital parts of his program important to business and economic recovery. On the other hand, as heretofore stated, I have not hesitated to vote against the administration on matters upon which I have formerly made pledges to my people to the contrary, or in matters where I could not conscientiously go along with the administration. For example, I have for several years advocated the immediate cash payment of the bonus and went on record in favor of that several years ago.

PREDICTS PAYMENT OF BONUS

This session, I regret to say, is going to adjourn without providing for immediate cash payment of the adjusted-service certificates, or bonus. I have advocated payment of the bonus in new currency, because it would not only pay a debt long overdue our World War veterans but also would stimulate business recovery by putting more than $2,000,000,000 of new money into circulation, creating new purchasing power in every township, village, town, and city of the country. During the present session I have had the honor of being a member of the steering committee conducting the fight for the Patman bill, which came within five votes of being enacted into law. I am glad to say, however, that Congressman PATMAN's steering committee has already made plans for bringing this legislation to an early vote at the next session, and we have every reason to hope that the bill to pay the bonus in cash will be one of the first to pass the coming session of Congress, and that when passed it will become a law. In fact, we now have 218 names on our petition, which guarantees that the bonus bill will be one of the first measures to be brought up by the January session.

EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT MUST BE CUT

Time does not permit me to even mention other matters that I had in mind, but before closing I want to say a word of warning against the constantly increasing cost of government. Hon. JAMES P. BUCHANAN, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, of which I have the honor of being a member, has given notice that every effort will be made to curtail expenses of government and balance the Budget at the coming session of Congress. I have personally assured him of my full cooperation in that endeavor. Speaking on this subject heretofore, I said in part:

But my distinguished and able friend, Mr. CRISP, has repeatedly asked the question today, "What do you propose to do about it?" That is a fair question, and I propose to answer it. Aside from increasing the surtax, corporation tax, income tax, gift tax, and estate tax, I would reenact the excess-profits tax that brought in over $300,000,000 in 1921. Then I would cut expenses of the Government to the bone before calling on the people for additional taxes. I would actually abolish countless commissions and overlapping and useless boards and bureaus. You cannot cut too much there for me. I would cut and slash Federal salaries, especially in the higher brackets. Personally, I should gladly accept a cut of 10 percent, 20 percent, or more in order to do my part to assist the recovery program.

MUST ABOLISH OVERLAPPING BUREAUS

My suggestion that we abolish countless commissions and overlapping boards and bureaus is more urgently needed today than ever. Some of us have gone along with the administration in establishing boards and commissions with the assurance that they were only temporary measures to meet emergencies and that they would soon be abolished. The next Congress cannot side-step that issue. These overlapping, obsolete, and useless bureaus are making government topheavy. The next Congress should abolish many of them.

Permit me to add, in closing, that this has been not only the longest session in which I have had the honor of serving, but by all odds the most strenuous. I trust that each and every one of my colleagues will return to Washington at the coming session of Congress with renewed vigor. For my part, the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress has been pleasant and, on the whole, I feel has been profitable to the country, even though I once again insist that it has spent entirely too much money. Here is hoping that the next session of Congress will do an immeasurably better job. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

CONVEYING OLD POST-OFFICE BUILDING, ETC., TO RENO, NEV.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 414, to convey certain lands and buildings to the city of Reno, Nev., which I send to the desk and ask to have read. It is a bill which authorizes conveyance to the city of Reno for municipal purposes of the old post-office building, now abandoned, for the sum of $7,500.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to convey, by quitclaim deed, on behalf of the United States, to the city of Reno, Nev., the hereinafter described parcels of land, located in such city, together with such buildings as may be situated thereon: (1) Beginning at the intersection of the east side of Virginia Street with the south side line of East Front Street, in the city of Reno, Nev., and running thence easterly and along the south side line of such East Front Street 160 feet, thence southerly and parallel with the east side line of such Virginia Street 115.87 feet, thence deflect right 81°46′ for a distance of 133.1 feet, thence deflect left 21°17′ for a distance of 32.33 feet to the insersection of the east side line of such Virginia Street, thence northerly and along the east line of such Virginia Street 144.30 feet to the place of beginning; and (2) beginning at a point on the east side line of Virginia Street in the city of Reno, Nev., 144.31 feet southerly from the intersection of the east side of such Virginia Street with the south line of such East Front Street, and running thence easterly deflecting right 60°29′ for a distance of 32.33 feet, thence deflect right 21°17′ for a distance of 133.1 feet, thence southerly and parallel with the east side line of such Virginia Street 65 feet, more or less, to the northerly boundary of the Truckee River, thence westerly along the northerly boundary of the Truckee River to its intersection with the east side line of such Virginia Street, thence northerly and along the east side line of such Virginia Street, 60.02 feet, more or less, to the point of beginning.

The consideration for said conveyance is the sum of $7,500, lawful money of the United States, to be paid by the city of Reno, Nev., to the Secretary of the Treasury upon the execution and delivery of said conveyance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Let us have some explanation of this.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Speaker, as I have already said, this authorizes the sale of the old post-office building now abandoned by the Government to the city of Reno for the sum of $7,500. The bill is approved by the Treasury Department. It has already passed the Senate and a similar House bill, identical, H. R. 3812, has been approved by the House committee.

Mr. LANHAM. And is it not true that the city of Reno also donated the site for the new building?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. That is true.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

REQUEST TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday last, August 15, there was inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN], under the name of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. EICHER], some remarks which reflect upon me in my capacity as a Member of this House. I do not wish to raise a question of personal privilege and exhaust an hour in discussing the matter, and in lieu of that I ask unanimous consent at this time to be permitted to proceed for 15 minutes to reply to the statements placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at that time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, I want it clearly understood at the beginning of my remarks that I am not going to make an attack upon the gentleman from Iowa, my colleague and friend, Mr. EICHER. Mr. EICHER and I are personal friends. Our relations through the entire winter have been very cordial. I was frequently in his office and he was frequently in mine during the discussion of the utility bill. At the time that he became sick I wrote him a personal note at his hotel expressing regret over his illness and also expressing the hope that he would soon be back to duty, and I repeat that hope at this time. I received a very bitter letter reflecting upon Mr. EICHER from a newspaper publisher in his district.

I replied to that letter and said that while Mr. EICHER and I had disagreed on some matters with reference to the utilities bill, I felt confident he was actuated only by his keen desire to do what he thought was right in the public interest. I sent a copy of that letter to him in the hope that it might do him some good in his district, and, therefore, I am not going to make any personal attack upon the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. EICHER], who is ill at his house at this time. But in view of the statement which was placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Thursday, August 15, by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN], a speech which was never delivered on the floor of the House and which the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] asked to be printed in 8-point type so that it might be well read, and because of some information which has come to me in the last day or two, I feel it necessary, in justice to myself and to my friends back home, that I make a brief reply to that statement which was put in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Thursday last, on page 13275. It is my judgment, Mr. Speaker, that this does not represent the work of Mr. EICHER. It is entirely out of character with Mr. EICHER'S known stability and fairness, and because of the fact that it has come to my attention in the last day or two that Thomas G. Corcoran, who has been well described as the "ambassador to Passamaquoddy", met a group of newspaper reporters the other day who had not seen what was in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the 15th and called their attention to it, and said to them, "This statement is going to be widely circulated", and also said to these newspaper reporters, Mr. Chapman, of the Kansas City Journal-Post, Mr. Flynn, of the Wall Street Journal, and Mr. Cotton, of the City Service News, that the statement could not have been gotten into the RECORD except in the way it was, I am led to the belief that the ambassador to Passamaquoddy, Mr. Corcoran, had something to do with the preparation of this article. Similar information as to Mr. Corcoran's activities in connection with Mr. EICHER'S statement has come to me from other sources, not newspapermen.

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETTENGILL. No; I have not the time to yield at present.

Mr. WEARIN. I wanted to correct that statement.

Mr. PETTENGILL. The gentleman will have an opportunity of doing so. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN] admitted to me the other day that he had read the article before it was placed in the RECORD at his request. In the course of this document I read briefly these words, placed in the RECORD under the name of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. EICHER]:

All a lobby of that kind needs is time. All it needs to ask of those who are to help it is to give it time. Give that kind of a lobby months and months in which to organize innumerable pressures upon particular Congressmen and no bill can stand against it. This is a commonplace of legislation against vested interests for the benefit of the public—the easiest way to emasculate it is to keep it in committee too long. * * *

For nearly 2 months the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was kept in open hearings before a full committee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee with pointless testimony from utility company after utility company simply repeating itself ad nauseum. * * *

The cause of such unnecessary overextended hearings against the wishes of the chairman of the committee was clearly the insistence of those two Democrats who worked the hardest to defeat the program of the administration on this bill, Mr. HUDDLESTON, of Alabama, and Mr. PETTENGILL, of Indiana. Those interminable open hearings before the House committee gave the professional utility lobby 2 months to work. After those 2 months the committee went into executive sessions through subcommittees to consider the bill title by title. I was a member of the subcommittee on title I, on holding companies. The other members of that committee were Mr. RAYBURN, Mr. HUDDLESTON, and Mr. PETTENGILL, the supposed administration supporters, and Mr. MAPES and Mr. WOLVERTON, openly and honestly opposition Republicans. That subcommittee deliberated by itself for over 6 weeks after the 2 months of public hearings were closed. Six more weeks for the lobby to work.

That was on August 15. Now, when the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. EICHER] was on the floor of the House on the 28th of June, discussing this bill, before he was stricken ill, he had this to say, and I am reading now from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 28, page 10358:

May I preface my remarks with a brief digression in appraisal of the public service that is being rendered by our chairman and my associates on the committee? The painstaking and conscientious care with which my associates have carried on their duties is not excelled, I am sure, by any judicial tribunal in the land. Many and serious divergencies of views developed during the consideration of this bill, some of them irreconcilable because involving conflicts of fundamental political thought and philosophy. Our discussions were always on a high plane, never acrimonious, and at all times intellectually inspiring even if not harmonious. Through the trying days and weeks our chairman guided our deliberations with gentle yet steady hand, with never a denial of the fullest opportunity to each member for the most exhaustive presentation of his views.

On that day when Mr. EICHER stood on this floor well and strong and without his judgment distorted by his illness, as I believe it to be at the present time, he said this:

Before commencing my own formal discussion of the question of constitutional limitations, it may be appropriate for me to make some observations for the benefit of my good friend and fellow subcommittee member, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. PETTENGILL], whose intellectual attainments and sincerely patriotic impulses command my genuine admiration and highest respect.

In saying that on the 28th of June the gentleman from Iowa paid me a compliment I did not deserve, but I appeal from "Caesar sick to Caesar well." I appeal from the statements that were placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD without being read on the floor by a gentleman who is sick and perhaps whose judgment is overborne by the advice of those who have something at stake in this matter. I appeal from those statements on the 15th of August to the statements that were made by Mr. EICHER in the full possession of his health and faculties on the 28th day of June.

There have been so many of Mr. EICHER'S friends and my friends who have expressed regret over the attack that was placed in the RECORD on August 15 that I am making this statement in Mr. EICHER'S behalf, because I do not believe that what he said on August 15 represents the solemn, judicial, fair-minded judgment of the man.

Now, I have referred to Mr. Corcoran, the R. F. C. attorney without portfolio. Why did he take it upon himself to give wide publicity to this attack that was placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on August 15 unless it was prepared as a campaign document to be used against me and Mr. HUDDLESTON and other members of the subcommittee and other Members of the House in the campaign next spring and next fall? Why should he exercise himself about it? Why should he call it to the attention of the press and invite them to publish it to the world?

Now, I am going to say something more about Mr. Corcoran. I am getting very well fed up with Mr. Tom Corcoran. [Applause.] Everybody here knows that the first resolution coming from the majority side for an investigation of the lobby was submitted by myself.

I have nothing whatever to fear from any investigation that is made of that matter. If I ever sincerely devoted myself to the consideration of a great and complex question it was the utility bill. [Applause.] The statement that was put in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD under Mr. EICHER'S name on August 15, that Mr. HUDDLESTON and myself had deliberately dragged out these hearings at executive sessions for the purpose of giving the lobby, with millions of dollars to spend, an opportunity to prepare their defense, is a deliberate misstatement of the fact, because the chairman of the committee, Mr. RAYBURN, will himself admit, if he is asked, that the delay was caused by himself. He will admit that. I have no criticism of him because of the fact that he dragged the matter along in order to give the Senate time to act first. I make no criticism of that. The gentleman from Texas was in charge of the bill and he had a right to resort to any legitimate maneuver that he thought was proper in order to obtain what he considered a strategic advantage.

That is the fact of the case and will not be denied by the gentleman from Texas.

Now, as to Mr. Corcoran: I now invite the Rules Committee that is considering the lobby to ask Mr. Corcoran to come before them and ask him whether he made the statements before the newspaper reporters to which I have referred, whether he participated in, encouraged, or instigated what was placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on August 15, whether he has taken additional means to give it publicity throughout the Nation. I want them to ask him if any other people on the Federal pay roll helped participate in the preparation of that attack. I want them to ask him if he did not say to a high officer of the United States Government, a personal friend of mine, with reference to the Casimir Pulaski Memorial Day resolution, in which I and many others were interested, to tell me that unless I softened up in my attitude on the "death sentence" the Pulaski resolution would be killed. I want Mr. Corcoran to be given an opportunity of denying that statement.

There are other things that have been rumored around with reference to public works, in addition to Passamaquoddy, which involve the "ambassador from Passamaquoddy", Mr. Corcoran, and I shall invite the Rules Committee to ask him and others—and I can furnish some names, too—as to their connection with threats or intimidation of other Members of this House besides myself to distort their good judgment on a matter of this sort.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the "ambassador from Passamaquoddy", Mr. Corcoran, has admitted before our committee that he had plunged deep in the New York stock market in times gone by, that he had made and lost a small fortune there, I would suggest that he be asked at this time as to whether he is in the stock market today, especially with reference to utility stocks. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN], on August 15, asked unanimous consent to insert this letter of Mr. EICHER in the RECORD. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] made the request that it be placed in 8-point type. I objected to this request, but I now see that the letter was placed in 8-point type. I should like to know how these gentlemen can have a letter of this kind placed in 8-point type when it is objected to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to give the gentleman any explanation, because the Chair knows nothing about it.

Mr. RICH. I might state, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN] came to me and asked me to withdraw my objection, but I told him I would not withdraw it. I see, however, that the letter is in the RECORD in 8-point type.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests to the gentleman that he make inquiry of the Government Printing Office. The Chair has no information whatsoever.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes on this general subject matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not—I want to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania——

The regular order was called for.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not—I hope we shall get started on the calendar. I am very anxious about it.

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, in view of the fact that I was requested by my colleague, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. EICHER] to insert the remarks in the RECORD, I shall ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes following the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 3286) to abolish the oath required of Customs and Internal Revenue employees prior to the receipt of compensation, and for other purposes.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I object. Was objection not made to my request?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GRISWOLD] objected.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I objected; yes.

Mr. MAPES. I wish the Speaker would submit my request again.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already presented it and the gentleman has objected to it a second time.

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, I objected to the request of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN], not to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I shall not object provided the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN] may have 5 minutes. This must not be a one-sided proposition.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee has the floor. Does the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. I decline to yield just at this time, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

OATH REQUIRED OF CUSTOMS AND INTERNAL REVENUE EMPLOYEES

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 3286) to abolish the oath required of Customs and Internal Revenue employees prior to the receipt of compensation, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. MAPES and Mr. DALY objected.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. What is the regular order today?

The SPEAKER. The regular order is Calendar Wednesday.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Then, Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is Calendar Wednesday. The Clerk will call the list of committees.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (when the Committee on Indian Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 2621) to provide funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Devils Lake, N. Dak., in the construction, extension, and betterment of the high-school building at Devils Lake, N. Dak., to be available to Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman does not qualify to call up a bill on Calendar Wednesday. The gentleman has to be authorized by his committee to call up a bill for consideration on Calendar Wednesday.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS] authorized to call up the bill?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I call up the bill (S. 2621) to provide funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Devils Lake, N. Dak., in the construction, extension, and betterment of the high-school building at Devils Lake, N. Dak., to be available to Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 2621, with Mr. BUCK in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, in respect to this particular bill, may I say it has been necessary for the Congress from time to time since the present session began to make arrangements to take care of the schooling of Indian children. The situation arises for two or three reasons. One of them is that in many sections of the West the people are unable to pay taxes and many school districts have been closed.

In the case of the Devils Lake School, to which this bill particularly refers, the Indian school within 8 miles of the city of Devils Lake has been closed by order of the Department. This has left about 150 Indian children without school advantages. If the pending bill passes the House, it will provide an appropriation of $25,000 instead of $150,000, as amended by the committee, which amendment will be presented to the House. This means that facilities to accommodate these Indian children will be provided by this appropriation, and as time goes on for the next 30 years this money will be refunded to the Government through an accumulation of the tuition which they now pay for the care of Indian children in white schools.

Mr. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. ANDRESEN. Is this money paid to the public schools out there which are the means of educating these children?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes. It is an accommodation for the buildings within which to house the children.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is this not one of a good many similar bills which it is sought to have passed?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is it not true that if this program, if carried out, will mean that the Federal Government will be put to the expense of many millions of dollars?

Mr. BURDICK. No; not at all. The Government will be put to no expense in the final period of 30 years, because they are now paying tuition for these Indian children. It means that a certain amount of the tuition will be set aside annually until the amount is paid which we are now appropriating.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Set aside from what?

Mr. BURDICK. From the tuition that they now pay.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Who pays the tuition?

Mr. BURDICK. The Government.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How can the Government save money by that plan, for it will be the Government's money that they will be setting aside? There will be no saving there.

Mr. BURDICK. They are not saving money, but they are giving the Indians an advantage which they cannot give them now. This comes out of the Indian funds anyhow.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is it not true that up until now the Indian children have been educated principally from their own tribal fund? Does this program not mean that if the Federal Government launches on this program, from now henceforth the Government assumes the responsibility of educating these Indians, while at the same time they have tribal funds which they are not using themselves for educational purposes?

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman evidently does not understand the Indian question.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Maybe I do not, but I know we are constantly being importuned to pay out large sums of money for them for some reason or another.

Mr. BURDICK. I do not know of any tribe of Indians in the United States of America that has large tribal funds.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Well, I do; and I have heard the matter brought up in Congress many times, and I can cite many instances when it appeared that the Indians had large tribal funds.

Mr. BURDICK. The responsibility for the education of these children is twofold: First, they are the wards of the Government; and, secondly, the Indians are citizens of the United States; and they are entitled to the same obligation on the part of the Government, so far as education is concerned, that our own white children are.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. It was brought out here when we had these bills on the Consent Calendar that if the bills were passed the ultimate result would be that the white taxpayers of these communities would have to maintain the public schools for the Indians; that the Indians would not contribute anything from their own tribal funds, not that they were unwilling to do so but because of the financial set-up of the tribal funds they were unable to do so. It was stated further that the white school systems were breaking down because the white people could not pay the taxes; and if Congress began a program of advancing money the Government would be then looked to for an endless expenditure of money to maintain this new school system which was being created here by the Congress without the sanction of educators and without definite information that this was consonant with proper or modern methods of education. It seems to me that this is another raid on the Treasury without having perfected a plan along scientific lines.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. BURDICK. I want this additional time to answer the gentleman from Ohio. I think the gentleman is laboring under a misapprehension of the situation. It is true that the Indian lands in and around these schools, for the most part, are nontaxable, but the Government owes a duty to educate these wards and whenever they can make arrangements with the white-school district to educate these Indian children, the Government then pays tuition to the white-school district. However, I am referring now to these bills which provide conveniences by which the Indian children can get into the school. If you do not pass this bill they cannot get into the school because there is no room for them.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I am not opposed to the gentleman's project at all, but what I want the Congress to understand is what was brought out when we had these bills up before, that the ultimate result will be that the Government will be called upon to pay the school expenses in some sections of the United States when the Federal Government does not pay such expenses in other sections. It is not a function of the Federal Government to educate children. This is purely a function of local government, and we are initiating now a new program for these Indian children. I think they ought to be educated and I am for that, but I am afraid your program is a new, half-baked program. If it is not, I am willing for the gentleman to correct me on the matter.

Mr. BURDICK. I can assure the gentleman that if it were half-baked I would not be for it.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman from Ohio referred to this as a new program. As a matter of fact, there are fewer Indians being educated by the Government now than probably at any time in the last quarter of a century, and the opening of these school projects means the opening of projects that have been in existence for the most part for years.

Mr. BURDICK. The reason this bill is here is because the Government itself, the guardian of these Indian children, has closed the Indian schools we have had here for 40 years. They have no place to go unless we arrange to give this advantage to them. I am referring to the Indian school at Fort Totten, N. Dak.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman, of course, understands the effect of opening the schools for these Indian school children. Let us take as an illustration a case where there are 20 children of the white people, who pay taxes, and also 20 Indian children. They are all attending the same school. Nobody pays for these Indian children at all and the expense of their education must be borne by the white people or the Federal Government, because you cannot tax the land of the Indian for school purposes; and if you do not allow him to pay for it out of his tribal funds, these expenses must be paid for by the white people or by the Government. It is simply a case of preference. If these bills pass, the Government will be paying for the education of some children attending our free public schools in certain localities, while it will not be paying for educating the children in other localities. It will be a clear case of preference.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma is in charge of the bill and has been recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is not a Member rising in opposition to the bill entitled to be recognized for 1 hour?

The CHAIRMAN. In due time the Chair will be pleased to recognize the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] for 1 hour.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Chairman, the proposition with respect to these bills is exactly the same as arose in connection with the 16 bills we passed here in June.

The Indian lands in these various school districts are held in trust for the Indians. They are not subject to taxation for support of the local schools and are not subject to taxation through a bond issue for the building of a local school. It has been the policy of the Indian Bureau for many years to abandon the Indian schools and send the Indian children to the State schools. In this instance the State or the district is paying all the expense of buildings for educating the Indian children—and let me say, Mr. Chairman, this is not a duty of the States—that duty belongs to the Government. These Indians are wards of the Government, and it is the duty of the Government to support and educate its wards.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. Can the gentleman tell us what percentage of the school enrollment is Indian and what percentage white? Just what are the facts in this regard?

Mr. AYERS. In this particular case—and I thank the gentleman for asking the question—there are some 1,300 white children in the Devils Lake school and 160 Indian children in attendance. The Indian children are attending the Devils Lake school without paying one single red cent toward the construction of the building or the maintenance of the schools. A small tuition is paid for the teachers, for the janitors, for the noonday meals, and for transportation from the country to bring the children to the schools.

The authorized appropriation in this bill figures out $156.30 per capita for these Indian children that are now thrown upon this State school by reason of the abandonment of the Indian school that the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] refers to. Now, if the Indian Bureau had to reestablish that Indian school or build a new school, it would amount to something like $775 per capita. Therefore, this bill is in reality and in fact an economy measure.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Who paid for the education of these Indians before this?

Mr. AYERS. Since they have been attending this school, the white people who built the school have, as a matter of course, been paying it.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. But before that who paid for the education of them?

Mr. AYERS. The Government.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How did the Government pay it?

Mr. AYERS. By appropriations from the Government Treasury. In other words, Uncle Sam was then paying it.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Did not the Government take the money out of their tribal funds?

Mr. AYERS. Not always, but in some instances it did.

Whenever they had a tribal fund they were compelled to subscribe to the support of the school.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman realizes that I am entirely friendly to the proposition.

Mr. AYERS. Yes; I appreciate what the gentleman did before. The gentleman has been for us in these matters and I hope he will be with us again.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. We do not have any Indians in the State of Ohio. We may have some figurative Indians but no actual, physical Indians in Ohio, but up in New York State they do have a number of Indians.

I dare say in New York the Indian children are going to the white schools. The people of the community pay for it. If we are going to start a program of this kind, the ultimate result will be that the Indian schools will be abandoned. It may be that they should be. You are going to start a program whereby the Federal Government will be educating these Indian children.

You can appreciate that it is a local matter; being a Democrat, you ought to appreciate it; you ought to appreciate home rule. It will be an endless proceeding and cost millions of dollars. If you decide that that is the thing for Congress to do, it is all right with me. But it occurs to me that you western people should canvass the situation and make some arrangement in regard to it.

The Indians trade with your grocery stores, your hardware stores, and the people in the community ought to educate the children. This is another case of making poor old Uncle Sam carry the burden. You have a Democratic majority of 3 to 1, and I presume your party feels that since the President is spending money like water you should do the same thing.

Mr. AYERS. It is a fact, I am sure—and the gentleman from Ohio admitted it when he withdrew his objection previously—it is a fact that it is the duty of the Federal Government, and not of the State or local school district, to take care of the Indian children. The Indian children are the Government's children, not the State's children; they are the Government's wards. The property of the Indian children and the property of Indian parents is not assessable, it is not on the tax list to help support the Indians. The taxpayers bear all the expenses of school building. If the State does not get help in this respect we will have to go back and reestablish the Indian schools, for Congress must appropriate in some way to educate these wards.

We have no racial troubles whatever. We have the voluntary policy in all the Western States to protect and educate the Indian children in these State schools.

As I figure it out, the Government is paying only about 50 percent of the actual per capita overhead cost, and not a penny for buildings or building maintenance and upkeep. That is the purpose of this bill.

These State schools are now overcrowded, they have to be added to, buildings have to be constructed, and it is only fair that the Government should bear its part of the burden.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I sympathize with the program of trying to bring the Indians into the white schools. I made an investigation of Indian schools a few years ago, and I am sorry to say that my conclusion was that it would be better for the Indian children to be in the white schools. I firmly believe that now; but it looks to me, as I said before, that the program is going to wind around by devious routes itself in—and I repeat myself at the risk of being tiresome—until we are going to find the Federal Government paying out millions and millions of dollars to educate children in some sections of the country.

I don't want the gentleman to give the impression to this Congress that this is not going to cost a lot of money, because we are starting this thing, and putting in the opening wedge, and so long as there is an American Indian living under the present tribal set-up of laws, the Federal Government will have to contribute. And besides the contribution is not fair. The gentleman cannot say that a per capita contribution like that would be absolutely fair to the Government, because you get the benefit in your community of these new school buildings, and you know the Government is going to be behind the matter and the Government is permanent. There are many communities in other sections of the country that would like to have a new school building, but they cannot have it because they must pay for it. But the gentleman can in his district, and the result will be that out through his country fine new school buildings will be put up, not because they are really needed, but because Uncle Sam is back of them and in order to educate a few Indian children it will be found convenient to come down to Congress and ask for a large sum of money every year or so. It is asking too much and the program should not be carried through.

Mr. AYERS. If we do not have this cost now, I can say that it will cost three times as much for the Government to go ahead later and reestablish the Indian schools. And surely everyone will admit that the Government must do one or the other—it must contribute to the building of these State schools or build and reestablish Indian schools.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. COSTELLO. Does not this case differ from the other bills that we have passed, in view of the fact that there are in this particular school district no nontaxable Indian lands, whereas, in the case of each of the other bills that we have passed, as I recall, in the school districts there were nontaxable Indian lands, and by reason of the fact that the school districts are unable to tax that Indian property, those of us here who studied the bills thought the Federal Government ought to contribute to the support of these schools. However, in this instance, the entire school district has taxable lands in it, and it is not because any of the property in the district has been taken out of taxation. Further, the Acting Secretary of the Interior states in his report that it does not appear that the need for increased school facilities can be regarded as being a problem of the Indian Service, as the enrollment of Indians is less than 4 percent of the total enrollment, and there are no nontaxable lands in the district.

Mr. AYERS. In answer to that, it is all the more necessary in this instance, because it is the only school that these children living on the adjoining land can attend.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any member of the committee desire time in opposition to the bill?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. PETTENGILL] seemed to be somewhat amazed, at least he expressed amazement, because he had learned that Mr. Corcoran had something to do with the criticism which was placed in the RECORD last Thursday, and which referred to acts of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. PETTENGILL].

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is not talking to the bill.

Mr. HOFFMAN. This is merely preliminary, a sort of preamble. I am just getting to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan will proceed in order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. This is one of those measures, as I understand it, which is said to be for the benefit of someone in want, this time in need of education. No doubt the purpose of this bill is all right, but the difficulty in this legislation, as has been pointed out many times, and not alone in this particular legislation, but in legislation that comes from the Democratic side, is that while the expressed intention is always good, yet underneath, buried somewhere, there is a provision which gives the Government a little more power, a little more authority. I do not know whether in this particular bill, hidden away somewhere, you have the provision that will give some agent of the Government a little more authority over some of its citizens. In any event its beneficiaries should be safeguarded.

No doubt a large proportion of the money appropriated by these bills will, as has so often been charged, never reach the Indians, the real beneficiaries at all, but will be lost, wasted, or misappropriated somewhere in the course between the Government and the Indians.

One would think that the provisions of that bill which made it possible for the farmers to borrow money on their homes, to purchase personal property, were fair and open, not only on their face but underneath, and I also thought so, except for that lingering suspicion which we on the Republican side, and which so many on the Democratic side, have when we understand that the legislation comes from the "new dealers" and not from the Democrats; that back of all the expressed good intentions is the deliberate plan, the preconceived purpose, on the part of a few to change the form of our government, to destroy our Republic, and to impose upon us a dictatorship, an effort just now being recognized by the newspapers for what it really is; a revolution, a destruction of our constitutional form of government, a campaign carried on under the guise of being a drive for the benefit of the so-called "forgotten man", but which is in reality an effort determined and unrelenting to take from him the liberty which he enjoys, the opportunity which has been his, and to impose upon us a government patterned after the worst form of those oppressive administrations now existing in foreign lands.

After all, I was not greatly surprised yesterday morning when I received a letter from a farmer, not a Member of the House, but just one of those fellows who stayed home, one of those fellows who has a horse, perhaps a cow, a pig, and a chicken, or something like that, and who stays around home part of the time and actually tried to produce something; an honest-to-goodness farmer, a farmer who has callouses on his feet and callouses on his hands, rather than those acquired from sitting on a congressional seat, and this man wrote: "I have a $283 home-loan mortgage to meet." He thanks the Government for the loan, but he wrote, "I lost my barn by fire", and that, of course, was bad. Things went from bad to worse with him—there were crop failures due to the drought and other natural conditions, and finally because of adversities, over which he had no control and which were in no manner due to any fault on his part, he decided that it would be necessary to make a new start in some manner. He needed another horse to do his farm work. He had but one. You know we have to have two horses up in our country; they do not make a practice of using a mule or a cow or something else with a horse. It is said in some places in days gone by that they did hitch a woman with a horse to make one of a team, but our women never have stood for that; they have insisted that if there were to be two mules in a team, one a four-legged one and one a two-legged one, that the head of the family, the man, should be one, and so the reputed practice has never been popular with the men of our country.

Some of you fellows who have been so busily engaged in spending the money of someone else, who have not had time to earn any of it yourselves——

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman should confine his remarks to the bill under consideration.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am talking about this bill.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BUCK). Under the rules governing Calendar Wednesday, debate must be confined to the subject matter of the bill. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. As I understand it, this bill is for the purpose of helping the Indians. What I am getting at is this: If we are to pass some more helpful legislation, such as that which was for the benefit of the farmer, which was to afford relief to those situated as was this fellow who wanted to buy a horse—you fellows from Oklahoma know what a horse is.

Mr. NICHOLS. Does the gentleman know?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I know enough to face its ears when I ride and understand which direction I am going and not look at the tail if I am going the other way. [Laughter.]

Mr. NICHOLS. I did not ask the gentleman anything.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, the gentleman undertook to intimate that I did not know anything about a horse.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. Now, this gentleman, after losing his barn and getting nothing for the seed that he put in the ground—nothing for his plowing, harrowing, planting, cultivating—wanted to buy a horse. Let us not forget that. So he went to the F. E. R. A. fellow in Michigan and he got the money to buy his horse, but the horse was no good. My friend writes me that the F. E. R. A. man who assisted him in buying the horse did not know anything about the horse; and so the gentleman who sold him the horse, according to the farmer's claim, sold him one with a bad disposition, an unsafe animal, one that would kick without the slightest provocation or reason; so, naturally, he wrote to his Congressman about it, the Government having advanced the money and the horse having been selected by a Government official.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, like any other Congressman, it takes a long time to get to the point. I will get there in just a minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The subject matter of this bill, the Chair will inform the gentleman from Michigan, is the construction of a high-school building at Devils Lake, N. Dak. The remarks of the gentleman must be confined to that subject.

Mr. HOFFMAN. To educate the Indians.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Yes; but not horses. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Certainly. But some of these children will need a horse to go to school. Indians, I have heard, ride horses. [Laughter.] In these hard times they cannot all use automobiles or motorcycles or go in airplanes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. So after this gentleman got his horse—and now I am getting to the point; it took me a long time to get there, but you will recognize it without me telling you perhaps [laughter] this man gave a mortgage on his tools and on his household goods and he got his horse from the Government. But the horse was balky; he kicked; he was selected, however, by an honest Government official. [Laughter.] The farmer writes:

I had to agree to carry out the provisions of the papers referred to, which was all right, but furthermore—

He writes—

I must agree——

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is reading a letter about a horse and is not confining his remarks to the matter under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the gentleman is clearly out of order, and he will confine himself to the bill.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Very well. My amendment is this.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Please bear with my ignorance.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I would like to assist the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the bill is not being read for amendment, and the gentleman is offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was about to ask the gentleman if he desired to have the amendment read at this time for information?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; I would like to have it read for information.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be read.

There was no objection.

Amendment offered by Mr. HOFFMAN, for information: On page 2, line 6, after the word "Interior", insert "Provided, That no person receiving a benefit under this act shall be required to enter into any agreement to refrain from opposing any new-deal measure."

[Laughter.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Now you laugh about that. But here is a man who borrowed money to buy this horse. The horse was no good, but they, the Government by his agent, so he writes, made him agree to this. This is what he writes; I read:

I must agree not to say anything at any time against the A. A. A.

Think that one over and laugh, if you can.

Is there any provision connected with this bill of that kind? Must the Indian children be taught new-deal experiments? Must they be taught to refrain from criticizing the alphabetical crazy quilt? I have here the gentleman's address. It is Mr. Volley Keiser, route 1, Plainwell, Mich. Write him.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not talking about either the bill or his amendment.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I have finished, anyway. The point I am trying to make is this, no one is too humble, too low in the economic scale to escape the dictators' blow.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. PETTENGILL] and the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] should not have been surprised when pressure was brought upon them to influence their votes on the so-called "utility bill." From the beginning of this session until today, the administration has used the taxpayers' money, not its own; patronage which was at its disposal, favors which it might grant, punishments which it might inflict to influence the course of legislation, always greedy, always grasping for more arbitrary power, always asserting its will, always requiring obedience unquestioned, to the wildest schemes of its crazy advisers. It has not been content to attempt to influence Members of Congress, to assert its influence upon those who presumably were able because of their financial position to resist that influence, but it has gone out into the country, and has in effect said to those for whose benefit this Congress has appropriated these incomprehensible sums, that they could not have the money which was rightfully theirs until they promised to refrain from criticizing the administration's policies.

Could anything be more unsportsmanlike, more cowardly, more dishonest than this? I read again so that you may not forget it: This farmer writes that he was required to agree, not to say anything in any way against the A. A. A.

An effort of this kind to influence voters by the granting of favors, by the imposition of penalties, by the creating of fear, might be successful in some land other than this, but not in America where we have so long been accustomed to thinking and to acting for ourselves, where regimentation has not succeeded in its purpose. Such a course will defeat itself as is evident from the question which this poor but honest farmer asks in the very next line of his letter, where he says: "Is this still a free country or a fairly well developed dictatorship?"

He has answered it to his own satisfaction, and doubtless he and his fellows will answer it at the first voting opportunity to our satisfaction, to your discomfiture.

I yield back the balance of my time to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN]. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time for the purpose of asking the chairman or some other member of the committee a question. Both the gentleman from North Dakota and the gentleman from Montana have said this legislation was necessary in order to provide funds to educate Indian children. I want to ask a question with reference to their religious education.

During consideration of the Wheeler-Howard bill in the last Congress, criticism was made with regard to certain provisions of that bill and the fear was expressed that it would permit the Indians to return to their pagan practices and would have the effect of destroying the work and accomplishments of the Christian missionaries and their religious teachings and training among the Indians of a great many years. Since the bill was enacted into law the fears then expressed have, as I understand it, been realized, and the churches and those engaged in Christian missionary work among the Indians feel that the predictions of evil with regard to the effect of the Wheeler-Howard Act have all come true in that respect. There is a great deal of criticism on the part of my constituents especially the Christian Reformed Church, in regard to those provisions of the act and of the administration of the Indian Bureau on the part of the present Commissioner.

I should like to ask the Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs if it is the intention of his committee to bring in any legislation correcting these abuses?

In this connection I might add that I read in the newspapers just a short time ago of some celebration amongst the Indians where they had gone to certain extremes on the theory, as the newspapers said, that they had interpreted the Wheeler-Howard Act as giving them almost unlimited license and made them immune from complying with the ordinary laws of the country. Does the gentleman's committee intend to bring in any legislation to correct these things?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Of course, I cannot answer the gentleman's question at this time. We hope in time to be able to help alleviate whatever abuses may exist, but I may say to the gentleman from Michigan that the pending bill has nothing to do with the Wheeler-Howard Act.

Mr. MAPES. The gentleman is aware of the fact that there are a great many criticisms along this line among many splendid and conscientious Christian people?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes; I realize there are criticisms.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield five additional minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. BURDICK. The Indians on this reservation did not avail themselves of the provisions of the Wheeler-Howard Act. We have already taken action in the House that will enable every band of Indians to exclude themselves by a fair process of election.

Mr. MAPES. I voted against the legislation.

Mr. BURDICK. I am speaking now of the Seventy-third Congress. The Seventy-third Congress passed that law.

Mr. MAPES. I voted against it.

Mr. BURDICK. It took a majority of the roll to exclude themselves. Suppose there were 400 Indians on the roll and that 199 voted against going in and 2 voted to accept. Under the provisions of the act passed in the last Congress, the two would win the election and they would join under the Wheeler-Howard Act. Since then, however, Congress has amended the act so that it requires a majority vote of the Indian roll to join in and become a part of the scheme provided by the Wheeler-Howard Act; and this reservation excluded themselves and did not come in. But the gentleman's other statement that there are complaints is very true. They come from all over the United States, complaints against the operation of the Wheeler-Howard Act.

Mr. MAPES. I am glad to hear the gentleman make that statement, and also to hear the chairman of the committee make the statement which he has made. I am glad to know the criticism is not local. There is a great deal of criticism against the Wheeler-Howard Act and against the present policies of the Indian Bureau in my particular district among very substantial Christian people, and I am interested to know that such criticism is general and not confined to my congressional district.

Mr. BURDICK. That is right.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I move that debate now close and that the bill be read for amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $150,000 for the purpose of cooperating with the public-school board of special school district of the city of Devils Lake, county of Ramsey, N. Dak., for construction, extension, and betterment of the public high-school building at Devils Lake, N. Dak.: Provided, That said school shall be available to both white and Indian children without discrimination, except that tuition may be paid for Indian children attending in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided further, That such expenditures shall be subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Page 1, line 5, strike out the sum "$150,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$25,000."

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, the committee amendment is self-explanatory; it strikes out "$150,000" and inserts in lieu thereof "$25,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with an amendment with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill S. 2621, directed him to report the same back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 183]

Amlie	Cummings	Johnson, Tex.	Oliver
Bankhead	Dempsey	Kee	Parks
Berlin	Dietrich	Keller	Peyser
Blanton	Dirksen	Kennedy, Md.	Reece
Brewster	Dockweiler	Kerr	Reilly
Buckbee	Doutrich	Kimball	Richards
Buckley, N. Y.	Dunn, Miss.	Kleberg	Rogers, N. H.
Burnham	Eicher	Lee, Okla.	Rudd
Cannon, Wis.	Farley	Lehlbach	Schulte
Carter	Fernandez	Lloyd	Secrest
Cartwright	Fish	Lucas	Shannon
Chandler	Fletcher	McGroarty	Short
Chapman	Gambrill	McLean	Smith, Wash.
Christianson	Gassaway	McLeod	Snyder
Claiborne	Gillette	McMillan	Stubbs
Clark, Idaho	Gingery	Maas	Sutphin
Cochran	Goldsborough	Mitchell, Ill.	Tobey
Collins	Goodwin	Montague	Turpin
Cooper, Ohio	Green	Montet	Underwood
Corning	Hill, Knute	Moran	Wilcox
Crowe	Hollister	Norton

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and forty-seven Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

On motion of Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment thereto to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

CANNON BALL SCHOOL DISTRICT, NORTH DAKOTA

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 8511) to provide funds for cooperation with Cannon Ball School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $40,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Cannon Ball School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension and improvements of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 1, line 7, strike out "$40,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$30,000."

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment.

THE NATIONAL TEXTILE ACT

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of the House to H. R. 9072, which I introduced on August 8, 1935. This bill provides for the regulation of the textile industry.

REGULATION IS NECESSARY TO SAVE THE TEXTILE INDUSTRY FROM BANKRUPTCY

In 1929, at the height of prosperity for most industries, the textile industry was already well on the downward trend. Extravagantly expanded during the war-time period, the textile industry took a nose dive during the middle twenties from which it has never recovered. Indeed, as early as 1927 it was being referred to as the "sick giant."

According to the manufacturers, the textile industry was on its deathbed in 1933—when the N. R. A. machinery was set up. Under the N. R. A. the textile industry profited measurably, overproduction decreased, and the wages of textile workers increased.

PROVISIONS OF H. R. 9072—THE NATIONAL TEXTILE ACT

The National Textile Act contains fair-trade practices, strictly defined and limited provisions for production control, and minimum standards of labor. It contains no price-fixing provisions. These standards of trade and labor practices are vital and essential, if order is to be brought out of the chaos of the textile industry.

Any employer who agrees to live up to these standards is given a license by the National Textile Commission, established by the act, and is furnished with a label or stamp to identify his products.

Textile goods which are not licensed, and therefore not labeled or stamped, are not permitted to enter the flow of interstate commerce, and are subject to other discriminations which I shall set forth later on.

MINIMUM STANDARDS OF LABOR CONDITIONS

The tremendous excess capacity of the textile industry has brought about constantly recurring periods of overproduction. These in turn have caused periodic break-downs of the price structure, frequent and extensive suspensions of operation, periodic wage cuts, strikes, and frequent and long periods of unemployment.

The textile industry employs over a million people. They have been among the most exploited of any industrial group. Driven by falling prices, due to overproduction, the textile operator has tried to meet competition by obtaining lower costs of operation at the expense of labor. In many cases unscrupulous employers have lowered wages of men and women to such levels that they had to be supplemented by Federal and State relief payments. They have exploited children at miserable wages and extended the hours of work by the well-known "stretch-out" system. Over a million textile workers are receiving wages so low that they cannot approach anything near a decent, an American, standard of living. These million textile workers have not been able to do their part in our system of economic production. They have been unable to be the customers which our industries need to maintain mass production and continued employment in all industries.

The textile industry must be placed on a sound and economic basis for its own good and for the good of our whole economic system of mass production, which can only be balanced and maintained if each industry is on a sound basis and pays wages which permit its employees to play their proper part as consumers and customers. If minimum wage and labor standards are established, below which no manufacturer can go, one of the major unfair competitive practices will have been removed from the textile industry, and it would be well on its way toward stabilization.

The following minimum wage and labor standards are set up in the National Textile Act:

CHILD LABOR IS PROHIBITED

The act prohibits the employment of children under 16 years and the employment of children between 16 and 18 years of age in hazardous occupations and between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. Aside from humane considerations, the employment of child labor while there are millions of unemployed adult workers is an economic blunder and tragedy of the first magnitude.

MINIMUM WAGES

The bill establishes minimum wages for all unskilled workers, men or women, at the rate of $15 for a 35-hour week. With the cost of living continuously rising, $15 is a modest minimum wage. Too, let us not forget that a textile worker does not get anything near complete employment. He is unemployed for as long as 3, 4, and 5 months at a time, so that his annual earnings are pitifully small. The bill also permits the national textile commission to fix wage differentials between the various classifications of skilled employees (occupational minimum wages) where proper differentials have broken down.

MAXIMUM HOURS

The bill fixes a maximum working week of 35 hours, with but one exception—for emergency and maintenance crews. The 40-hour work week fixed by the N. R. A. failed to bring about the reemployment of substantial numbers of jobless textile workers, because the workers seldom averaged even 40 hours a week and because shorter hours were offset by an extension of the "stretch-out."

It has become clear that the basic working week should not exceed 35 hours. Where a conflict arises between an employer and his employees as to work assignments, stretch-out, the commission shall, at the request of either party, arbitrate the dispute; but the decision of the commission is not made binding.

The act contains the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act—the Wagner-Connery Act—on collective bargaining and the right of employees to organize. There are other provisions in the bill relating to wages and labor standards, but those enumerated are the more important.

FAIR-TRADE PRACTICES

Section 28 of the National Textile Act contains such fair-trade practices as proved their value under the N. R. A.

PRODUCTION CONTROL

Excess capacity and obsolete equipment are among the major causes for the depressed condition of the textile industry. Employers, practically unanimously, are insisting that production control is vital to the existence of the industry, at least until the obsolete machinery can be retired.

No one device of production control is deemed by textile experts, both in management and in labor, as generally applicable to every branch of this vast industry. In the hosiery division, for instance, it is the belief of representatives of both manufacturers and labor that machine-hour limitation, and particularly prohibition of the third shift—the graveyard shift—is necessary to regulate production. On the other hand, the carpet and rug division seems to be getting along fairly well under a system of inventory control. The National Textile Act gives the commission power, under strict limitations and with adequate protection to the consumer, to determine and prescribe what, if any, production control is necessary in any particular branch of the textile industry. If such control tends to further monopoly or unduly raise prices, it is to be discontinued at once by the commission.

EMPLOYEES TO SHARE INCREASED EFFICIENCY

I should like to call attention to one other device in my bill. It is partly a production-control provision and partly a wage provision. If the commission permits the operation of three shifts in any division of the textile industry, provision is made in the bill for the employees to share in the increased efficiency by providing for a weekly bonus of 5 percent of the wages so long as the three-shift operation continues. This provision seeks to establish in industry a principle which I believe to be of great importance.

If a plant is permitted to operate on a three-shift basis—a full 24 hours a day—its mechanical devices are used to the fullest extent and its overhead and other expenses are substantially reduced per unit of goods produced.

The profits resulting from such an increase in efficiency should be allotted in part to the employees of that plant, so that they may buy an increased output of industry.

METHOD USED TO INDUCE THE MANUFACTURER TO COMPLY WITH CODE CONTAINED IN BILL

Textile goods produced without complying with the standards of fair trade and labor practices laid down in the bill cannot receive a license from the commission and therefore cannot be moved in interstate commerce. Where production in interstate commerce has a direct effect on interstate commerce, it is included in the jurisdiction of the bill.

The bill further provides that any person who manufactures textile goods in violation of its terms shall not be permitted to use the Postal Service to transmit or sell textile goods produced under inferior standards. All departments, bureaus, and agencies of the United States are prohibited from purchasing textile goods not produced under a license of the commission. No loan is to be made or renewed by the R. F. C. or the United States Government or by any financial institution in which the United States, directly or indirectly, holds the controlling interest to any person who manufactures textile goods in violation of the standards set out in the bill.

So far as the provision regarding the Postal System is concerned, it means this: The Government says to the textile manufacturer, "You can manufacture under any conditions you please; but if you desire our aid and want to avail yourselves of our postal facilities for the disposal of your goods, you must comply with these minimum standards of fair-trade practices and of labor provisions.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that my colleagues will familiarize themselves with the provisions of H. R. 9072, the National Textile Act, which brings order to the chaotic conditions of the textile industry and at the same time raises immeasurably the subsistence level at which 1,000,000 textile workers live.

Anyone who will study these deplorable conditions, and the provisions of my bill which present a solution for them, will, I feel certain, support H. R. 9072.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FORT YATES SCHOOL DISTRICT, NORTH DAKOTA

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8512) to provide funds for cooperation with Fort Yates School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we expected in connection with the previous bill that the gentleman would at least explain it to the House. Not having done that I am going to object to considering this bill without going into the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman not withhold his objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. No; I will not.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. The Clerk read the bill before I had a chance to explain it. Will the gentleman not reserve his objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. No.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8512, with Mr. OWEN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] one-half of my time.

Mr. Chairman, may I make an explanation relative to the previous bill that was passed. We had no intention of passing the previous bill without an explanation or without making a statement concerning it. We thought the Members over on the other side of the aisle had explained to their colleagues and that everything was in agreement. These bills are all alike. They are a group of school bills.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the House is entitled to information in reference to the bills being considered.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I may say that the bill we have just passed is another one of these school bills providing money for the building of a school. The bill we are now considering is the same and, in fact, all of these bills are along the same line.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it the general policy of the Government to build these schoolhouses or is this a new departure?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I may say to the gentleman that we have passed by unanimous consent some 15 school bills during the past few months, and the Senate has also passed the bills. They have gone to the President, and he has signed them.

This is the way the proposition is going to work: The Government is providing the money to build the schoolhouses with the understanding that the tuition paid for the Indian children in the schools will be reserved and the money will pay for these buildings over a period of 30 years. In other words, the school district will now get money to build the school, but it will, of course, not receive money for running expenses for 30 years, or until the Government has been reimbursed for the building of the schools.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Do I understand that these are not free schools?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes; they are free schools.

Mr. CULKIN. From what source does the tuition come?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. It comes from the Federal Government. The Federal Government pays about 25 or 30 cents a day to the public schools for educating the Indian children.

Mr. CULKIN. Of course, that tuition is more or less of a fiction, because it reverts back to the Federal Government.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. It is paid to the school district by the Federal Government.

Mr. CULKIN. It is a polite fiction.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. No; I think not.

Mr. CULKIN. I have no particular knowledge of these bills, but I am interested in the suggestion of tuition, and will the gentleman state, as these bills come along, what the amount appropriated is, together with the number of pupils involved?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes; we will be pleased to give that information.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman do that as the bills come along?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY].

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I may state for the information of the gentleman from New York that these bills are the same kind of bills usually put through every year by the Indian Affairs Committee. They provide for the Federal Government to contribute toward the support of the local schools where Indian children are attending such schools.

In this particular instance there are 150 Indian children in the school and 110 white children. Sixty-five percent of the land in this school district is nontaxable because it belongs to the Federal Government and is Indian land. So the only way the school can be maintained and the Government provide for the education of these Indian children is by a contribution from the Federal Government.

These Indian school bills are practically the same, and there will be four or five more of them, and the report on each bill shows exactly the number of children affected, the amount the Federal Government is contributing, and the reasons therefor.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. It has been suggested that at some places there will be one Indian at a crossroads, and they will erect there a grammar school and a high school.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I know the gentleman thinks enough of the Indian Affairs Committee to know that if that were the case they would never get a contribution from the Government for such a school.

Mr. CULKIN. I did not know the gentleman was on this committee. I have faith in the gentleman's integrity and vigor.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his compliment and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. AYERS].

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Chairman, I do not think there is any need of further explanation. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin has answered the questions involved. I was chairman of the subcommittee of the Indian Affairs Committee that worked out the details on all of these bills that are up today with respect to this Indian proposition.

In this district, for instance, 65 percent of the lands are nonassessable and do not bear any of the burdens of the building or repair of the schools.

Answering the question with respect to tuition, the maintenance of the school involves the hiring of the teachers, the keeping of the building in repair, the buying of coal, and the paying of the janitor, and things of that sort, and this is paid by local assessments on the property in the school district, the land and the personal property. The Indian property is exempt from taxation and the tuition is paid as a contribution for the children who attend the school, and the tuition is used for overhead and general maintenance.

These bills pertain to buildings entirely.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. I yield.

Mr. SEARS. The previous speaker just stated that these lands belong to the Indians, who also belong to the Government.

Mr. AYERS. The Government holds the land in trust for the Indians.

Mr. SEARS. It is still Indian land and has some value.

Mr. AYERS. Yes.

Mr. SEARS. And the Indian pays nothing and the Government pays for everything.

Mr. AYERS. Exactly; I thank the gentleman for the contribution.

Mr. SEARS. It is well to be an Indian during these days.

Mr. AYERS. Yes.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CULKIN. The story is that, under the auspices of the present Indian Commissioner, present educational methods and so-called "civilizing influences" are being eliminated, and the Indian is encouraged, under the present regime, to revert to paganism and to his own language, and so forth. Is this true?

Mr. AYERS. I do not wish to say what the Commissioner encourages, but I can draw my own conclusions from his actions, and I will say to the gentleman that I do not agree with all of the Commissioner's program by any means. I will also say that the program as to this and other bills we are considering today is to put the Indian children into white schools and help to educate and build them up in a modern and progressive manner.

The original Wheeler-Howard bill was, as admitted by Commissioner Collier, drafted by Indian Bureau and departmental men (pp. 676 and 677 of the hearings on H. R. 7781, Feb. 11, 1935). That bill provided that the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to issue certificates of competency should be revoked. The original bill also contained provisions which I interpret as an encouragement of a program bordering, at least, seriously on paganism, and to that extent I believe the gentleman from New York has had the correct story; however, the bill did not get out of our committee with those provisions in it. We struck the entire bill except the title and number, and proceeded to draft a bill which eliminated those matters.

The present Wheeler-Howard bill, under the manner in which the Commissioner and the Bureau are administering it, is not meeting with general approval. The Commissioner and the Bureau have attempted to write a code providing for the things which the gentleman mentions and which our committee struck out, but I am confident that the protests which went up by the committeemen have retarded their nefarious plans in that respect.

The original bill also prohibited inheritances or devises by will. Of course, that was a decided step backward, but that provision also went to the bone yard by our committee action.

As to the school policy advocated by the Commissioner, I will say to the gentleman that the Commissioner testified before the subcommittee of our committee to the effect that he approved of the Mexican school system and that he had a Mexican educator come to this country last fall and for 2 months observe the conditions among our Indians, looking particularly at our schools and then come on to Washington to give his views to the Indian Bureau. This Mexican was a Dr. Saenz, and the Commissioner told the subcommittee that Dr. Saenz had given them (the Indian Bureau) "a lot of mighty good ideas and very severe criticism for our overloaded and overmechanized and unrealistic school system."

In answer to a question as to who had requested Dr. Saenz' appearance here, the Commissioner said, "Dr. Ryan, our Commissioner of Education, and I; we both knew him and knew his work, and we both thought it would be a very good thing to have him come in here and give us the point of view of one who had developed a much more economical and practical system of schools, and he came and did it."

To use the Commissioner's words, it cost the Government "something like $1,500" as expense money to get the benefit of this Mexican advice. The record of that hearing is devoid of any action on the part of the Bureau in getting any American advice, either from the whites or the Indians, on the subject of education.

The purpose of the bill I am now speaking for is quite American. The idea of it is to educate the Indians as we educate the whites, and to do it in white schools under a full-fledged American school system worked out by Americans and not by Mexicans. I am in favor of this plan and not the Mexican plan.

Mr. CULKIN. I think that is very fair.

Mr. AYERS. And I may say to the gentleman from New York that out in the States where we have lots of Indian reservations—and I have six in my own district—we do not have a particle of racial trouble. We have voluntarily taken in these Indian children and we are educating all of them, and we are asking the Government to do its share in this meritorious task.

Mr. CULKIN. What about this $1,000,000 Indian capitol that is being erected?

Mr. AYERS. I am against that, and I am advised that it has been stopped.

Mr. CULKIN. Have the funds been stopped?

Mr. AYERS. I am advised that they simply got the foundation built and that was all.

Mr. CULKIN. Did the gentleman help stop it?

Mr. AYERS. I certainly made my protest. I am not in favor of governments within governments. I think the Indians are a part of this Government.

Mr. CULKIN. I congratulate the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, we do not desire any time on this particular bill.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SEARS].

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to speak on this bill, but I am interested in it. I was a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs for about 14 years. I made a hard fight for the Seminole Indians of Florida. They have no land and are absolutely dependent on charity. They are paupers but still have some high degree of honor that the white man has not been able to take from them.

I was successful in getting $80,000 appropriated by Congress to help these Indians, but the Bureau of Indian Affairs let about $7,000 revert back to the Treasury because they did not believe my policy was the right thing.

I just asked the Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs what they were doing for the Seminole Indians of Florida, and he said nobody had asked anything for them. As I said, they have no land, no money, and we in Florida, with some assistance from the Government, have been trying to educate them by voluntary contributions, and permitting them to go to school. I hope sometime the Committee on Indian Affairs will look into the matter and see that these Indians get the relief they are entitled to.

There are about 500 of them who have refused to move West. There is over $250,000 in the Treasury of the United States in trust for those Indians if they will move West. Of course, they cannot get the money until they move.

Now, I ask your assistance, as I did my former colleague, to do something for these Indians. Although they have been abused and mistreated because of their wonderful independence, there is no reason why same should be continued, and I hope the next Congress will devise some method or plan by which they can be assisted. As I have said, they have no land and no money.

We are appropriating money for school for Indian children out West where the Indians have property and where there are more Indians in the schools than there are white people, and the white people are paying taxes for educating the Indians in the United States. Certainly something should be done for the Seminoles of Florida.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $97,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Fort Yates School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension and improvement of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, the Chairman, Mr. OWEN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 8512, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

TRENTON SCHOOL DISTRICT, WILLIAMS COUNTY, N. DAK.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8513) to provide funds for cooperation with Trenton School District, Williams County, N. Dak., for the extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma calls up the bill H. R. 8513, and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended, from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $10,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Trenton School District, Williams County, N. Dak., for extension and improvements of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. Just a brief explanation of this bill. This is a North Dakota bill. Eighty children attend this school. They are evenly divided, 40 white children and 40 Indian children. The majority of the land is nonassessable because it is Indian land. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $10,000 for building purposes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This does not provide for the building of a new structure, but merely increases the facilities to the end that these Indians may be taken in?

Mr. AYERS. It is repairs to an old building and for equipment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

WHITE BIRD SCHOOL DISTRICT, SIOUX COUNTY, N. DAK.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 8514, to provide funds for cooperation with White Bird School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma calls up the bill H. R. 8514 and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended, from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $4,000 for the purpose of cooperating with White Bird School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension and improvements of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, this bill is a North Dakota bill. It is a small country school, and the bill asks for an authorization of $4,000. Forty-six children are in attendance, one-third Indian children. This is to erect a new building. The building there is entirely dilapidated and inadequate.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

SANISH SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 1, MOUNTRAIL COUNTY, N. DAK.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8515) to provide funds for cooperation with Sanish School District No. 1, Mountrail County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings, to be available for Indian children, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma calls up the bill H. R. 8515, and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended, from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industry Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $30,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Sanish District No. 1, Mountrail County, N. Dak., for extension and improvement of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 7, strike out "$30,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,000."

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. This bill provides for an appropriation of $10,000. There are some 200 children in attendance at this school. Thirty-three of them are Indian children. Sixty-five percent of the land is nonassessable.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

PORCUPINE SCHOOL DISTRICT, SIOUX COUNTY, N. DAK.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8516) to provide funds for cooperation with Porcupine School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma calls up the bill H. R. 8516 and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be expended, from any moneys now available and applicable, or that may become applicable hereafter available, for construction under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933, the sum of $2,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Porcupine School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension and improvements of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all the Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district, subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

This is another bill similar to the one just passed. There is a total attendance of 108 children. Forty are Indian children and 65 percent of the land in the district is Indian, nonassessable, and no other schools are available.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WHITE BIRD SCHOOL DISTRICT, SIOUX COUNTY, N. DAK.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 3092) to provide funds for cooperation with White Bird School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children, which is identical with H. R. 8514, which was passed a short time ago, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma that the Senate bill be substituted for the House bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $7,000 for the purpose of cooperating with White Bird School District, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension and improvements of school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuitions, as other children of said school district: Provided further, That this appropriation shall be reimbursed in not more than 30 years, without interest, either through reducing the annual Federal tuition payments for education of Indian pupils attending such school, by the acceptance of Indian pupils in such school without cost to the United States, or in such other manner as the Secretary of the Interior may direct: Provided further, That plans and specifications shall be furnished by local or State authorities without cost to the United States and, upon approval thereof by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, work shall proceed under the direction of local or State officials, payment therefor to be made monthly on the basis of work in place and upon vouchers approved by a responsible official of the Indian Service.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the proceedings by which the House bill (H. R. 8514) was passed will be vacated, and the House bill will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

WARNER SPRINGS UNION SCHOOL DISTRICT, CALIF.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8726) to provide funds for cooperation with the board of trustees of the Warner Springs Union School District, Warner Springs, Calif., in the construction of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Los Coyotes and Volcan Indian Reservations, Calif., and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $40,000 for the purpose of cooperating with the board of trustees of the Warner Springs Union School District, town of Warner Springs, county of San Diego, Calif., for construction of a public-school building at Warner Springs, Calif.: Provided, That the expenditure of any money so authorized shall be subject to the express conditions that the school maintained by the said district in the said building shall be available to all Indian children of Los Coyotes and Volcan Indian Reservations, Calif., on the same terms, except as to payment of tuition, as other children of said school district, and that accommodations in said school building to the extent of one-half its capacity shall be available for Indian children from the Los Coyotes and Volcan Reservations: Provided further, That such expenditures shall be subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

The author of the bill, my good friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. BURNHAM] does not seem to be present, so I will make a short statement for him with reference to this bill. I reported the bill and know the facts in this case. In this school district in California there are 110 children in attendance. Fifty-eight of them are Indian children and 52 are white children. More than 50 percent of the land in the district is Indian land, and nonassessable. There is no other school available. This bill is equally or more meritorious than the other bill which we have passed today on this subject.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYERS. I yield.

Mr. RICH. It seems to me we are being pretty good Indians today in passing out the funds of the Government.

Can the gentleman tell where we are going to get the money to pay these bills?

Mr. AYERS. If the gentleman will drop over to my office sometime I will be glad to converse with him about it, but I do not think we should take up the time of the House on it today. That matter has been fully discussed heretofore.

Mr. RICH. I have asked every Member of Congress where we are going to get the money, and nobody seems to know.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRIBUTION OF FUND OF WYANDOTTE INDIANS, OKLAHOMA

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 2578) authorizing distribution of funds to the credit of the Wyandotte Indians, Oklahoma, and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a short statement about this bill.

This is a bill to provide for the division of the funds in the Treasury on a per capita basis, to the Wyandotte Indians. It is their own money. It does not cost the Government anything. It makes it possible for the money to be divided on a per capita basis.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How much money is there to be divided?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Ten thousand dollars.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How many Indians are there?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I do not know that I can give the gentleman that information.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman had better get it distributed before we get it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is this for the purpose of making final liquidation of the funds now to the credit of this particular tribe of Indians?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Yes. It is for all the funds they have in the Treasury at this time.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will they receive additional funds subsequent to this?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. There may be funds accruing to them because of properties that they have which may be leased, and so on.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to withdraw from the Treasury all funds remaining to the credit of the Wyandotte Indians, Oklahoma, including the sum of $10,000 appropriated by the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1936, to compensate the Wyandotte Indians for Seneca School lands, as authorized by the act of June 21, 1934 (48 Stat. 1184), and to distribute the same per capita to members of the tribe entitled thereto: Provided, That, prior to the distribution herein authorized, there shall be paid therefrom to Allen C. Johnson or his heirs not to exceed the sum of $500 for services rendered and expenses incurred on behalf of said tribe.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. WOLFENDEN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 184]

Amlie	Crowe	Hill, Knute	Norton
Andresen	Cummings	Hobbs	Oliver
Bankhead	Darden	Holmes	Parks
Berlin	DeRouen	Hook	Peterson, Fla.
Blanton	Dietrich	Huddleston	Peyser
Brennan	Dirksen	Keller	Reece
Buckbee	Dockweiler	Kennedy, Md.	Richards
Buckley, N. Y.	Doutrich	Kimball	Rogers, N. H.
Burch	Duncan	Kleberg	Rudd
Burnham	Dunn, Miss.	Lea, Calif.	Schulte
Cannon, Wis.	Eicher	Lee, Okla.	Shannon
Carter	Fernandez	Lehlbach	Short
Cartwright	Fish	Lesinski	Smith, Va.
Chandler	Flannagan	Lloyd	Smith, Wash.
Christianson	Fulmer	Lord	Snyder
Claiborne	Gambrill	Lucas	Stubbs
Clark, Idaho	Gassaway	McGroarty	Sullivan
Clark, N. C.	Gehrmann	McLean	Sumners, Tex.
Cochran	Gillette	McLeod	Sutphin
Coffee	Goodwin	McMillan	Underwood
Collins	Haines	Maas	Withrow
Connery	Harter	Mitchell, Ill.
Cooper, Ohio	Higgins, Conn.	Moran
Corning	Higgins, Mass.	Moritz

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and thirty-five Members are present, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

PAYMENT OF NON-INDIAN CLAIMANTS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 2608) to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum to compensate white settlers or non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924 (43 Stat. L. 636), but who have been found by the Secretary of the Interior, in conformity with the proviso to section 3 of the Act of May 31, 1933 (48 Stat. L. 108, 109), to be entitled to increased compensation by reason of errors in the amount of award previously allowed, or entitled to original awards by reason of errors in the omission of legitimate claimants. The non-Indian claimants, or their successors, as found and reported by the Secretary of the Interior, to be compensated out of said appropriation to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the amounts found to be due them, as follows:

Within the pueblo of Isleta, $1,876.72; within the pueblo of San Ildefonso, $9,371.52; within the pueblo of San Juan, $23,122.83; within the pueblo of Santa Clara, $2,810.69; within the pueblo of Pojoaque, $2,474.13; within the pueblo of Nambe, $1,985; within the pueblo of Sandia, $368.90; within the pueblo of Picuris, $278.64; within the pueblo of Cochiti, $1,088.90; within the pueblo of Jemez, $2,000; in all, $45,377.33.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, in the last session of Congress, legislation was enacted providing payment to certain non-Indian claimants for land that had been taken away from them. These non-Indian claimants took possession of this land many, many years ago, constructed buildings thereon, built irrigation ditches, and placed various improvements on the land. It was finally determined that these were Indian lands, and the people were forced off and their improvements taken.

The Interior Department caused a survey to be made, and an appropriation was made at their instance to settle these claims. Many of them were settled last year. This bill provides $45,000 to take care of the balance.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Do the amounts called for in this bill arise because of errors having been made in the settlement which came about under the previous act?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In what manner were these lands taken from these claimants?

Mr. DEMPSEY. They were taken away by the Indian Pueblo Board. The Board declared them to be Indian land. The people who settled on these lands originally thought that the rights had been established and as a result caused improvements, but it was finally determined that they were Indian lands, although some of the families had been on there 100 years. The Interior Department has conducted this investigation resulting in this bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill (H. R. 7741) were laid on the table.

DEVELOPMENT OF INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 2203) to promote the development of Indian arts and crafts and to create a board to assist therein, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a board is hereby created in the Department of the Interior to be known as "Indian Arts and Crafts Board", and hereinafter referred to as the board. The board shall be composed of five commissioners, who shall be appointed by the President as soon as possible after the passage of this act and shall continue in office, 2 for a term of 2 years, 1 for a term of 3 years, and 2 for a term of 4 years from the date of their appointment, the term of each to be designated by the President, but their successors shall be appointed for a term of 4 years except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed for the unexpired term of the commissioner whom he succeeds. Both public officers and private citizens shall be eligible for membership on the board. The board shall elect one of the commissioners as chairman. One or two vacancies on the board shall not impair the right of the remaining commissioners to exercise all the powers of the board.

The commissioners shall serve without compensation: Provided, That each commissioner shall be reimbursed for all actual expenses, including travel expenses, subsistence and office overhead, which the board shall certify to have been incurred as properly incidental to the performance of his duties as a member of the board.

SEC. 2. It shall be the function and the duty of the board to promote the economic welfare of the Indian tribes and the Indian wards of the Government through the development of Indian arts and crafts and the expansion of the market for the products of Indian art and craftsmanship. In the execution of this function the board shall have the following powers: (a) To undertake market research to determine the best opportunity for the sale of various products; (b) to engage in technical research and give technical advice and assistance; (c) to engage in experimentation directly or through selected agencies; (d) to correlate and encourage the activities of the various governmental and private agencies in the field; (e) to offer assistance in the management of operating groups for the furtherance of specific projects; (f) to make recommendations to appropriate agencies for loans in furtherance of the production and sale of Indian products; (g) to create Government marks of genuineness and quality for Indian products and the products of particular Indian tribes or groups; to establish standards and regulations for the use of such marks; to license corporations, associations, or individuals to use them; and to charge a fee for their use; (h) to employ executive officers, including a general manager, and such other permanent and temporary personnel as may be found necessary, and prescribe the authorities, duties, responsibilities, and tenure and fix the compensation of such officers and other employees: Provided, That the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, shall be applicable to all permanent employees except executive officers, and that all employees other than executive officers shall be appointed in accordance with the civil-service laws from lists of eligibles to be supplied by the Civil Service Commission; (i) as a Government agency to negotiate and execute in its own name contracts with operating groups to supply management, personnel, and supervision at cost, and to negotiate and execute in its own name such other contracts and to carry on such other business as may be necessary for the accomplishment of the duties and purposes of the board: Provided, That nothing in the foregoing enumeration of powers shall be construed to authorize the board to borrow or lend money or to deal in Indian goods.

SEC. 3. The board shall prescribe from time to time rules and regulations governing the conduct of its business and containing such provisions as it may deem appropriate for the effective execution and administration of the powers conferred upon it by this act: Provided, That before prescribing any procedure for the disbursement of money the board shall advise and consult with the General Accounting Office: Provided further, That all rules and regulations proposed by the board shall be submitted to the Secretary of the Interior and shall become effective upon his approval.

SEC. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any sums in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated such sums as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the board and carry out the purposes and provisions of this act. All income derived by the board from any source shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States and shall constitute a special fund which is hereby appropriated and made available until expended for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this act. Out of the funds available to it at any time the board may make or authorize such expenditures, consistent with the provisions of this act, as it may determine to be necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes and objectives of this art.

SEC. 5. Any person who shall reproduce, counterfeit, or colorably imitate any Government mark used or devised by the Board as provided in section 2 of this act, or shall, except as authorized by the board, affix any such Government mark, or shall knowingly, willfully, and corruptly affix any reproduction, counterfeit, copy, or colorable imitation thereof upon any products, Indian or otherwise, or to any labels, signs, prints, packages, wrappers, or receptacles intended to be used upon or in connection with the sale of such products, or any person who shall knowingly make any false statement for the purpose of obtaining the use of any such Government mark, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be subject to a fine not exceeding $2,000, or imprisonment, not exceeding 6 months, or both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 6. Any person who shall willfully and falsely represent any goods, with or without any Government mark, to be Indian products or Indian products of a particular Indian tribe or group, resident within the United States or the Territory of Alaska, when such person knows such goods are not Indian products or are not Indian products of the particular Indian tribe or group, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be subject to a fine not exceeding $2,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 6 months, or both such fine and imprisonment: Provided, That the fraudulent corrupt offering or display of any such goods for sale shall be deemed a representation within the meaning of this section.

It shall be the duty of each district attorney, to whom the Board shall report in writing any violation of the provisions of this section which has occurred within his jurisdiction, to cause appropriate proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted in the proper courts of the United States for the enforcement of the penalties herein provided.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, this bill creates a commission of five unpaid members, selected from the personnel of the Interior Department, for the purpose of formulating rules and regulations by which trade marks can be established for the identification of Indian goods so that Indians who make art and craft work for sale can have this mark placed on it, and the general public will know they are actually made by Indians. The bill has passed the Senate.

If there are any questions, I shall be pleased to answer them.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill (H. R. 6468) were laid on the table.

PAYMENT TO INDIANS IN THE STATE OF UTAH FOR CERTAIN COAL LANDS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 1968) authorizing an appropriation for payment to certain bands of Ute Indians in the State of Utah for certain coal lands, and for other purposes.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to carry out the act of February 13, 1931 (46 Stat. 1092), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $977,796.78 in payment for 36,223 acres of land, heretofore classified as coal lands, formerly belonging to the Uintah, White River, and Uncompahgre Bands of Ute Indians of Utah, which was taken from them by Executive order of the President of the United States under date of August 14, 1905, and made a part of the Uintah National Forest and for which the said

bands of Ute Indians have never been paid: Provided, That such payment shall be in full satisfaction of all claims of said Indians against the United States with respect to such lands and shall, when appropriated, less attorneys' fees and proper expenses as provided in section 2 hereof, be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the said Bands of Ute Indians and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum and be subject to the laws governing the distribution and expenditures of like funds belonging to said Indians.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to determine and pay a reasonable sum as fees and expenses for services rendered in accordance with certain existing contracts executed by the Uintah, White River, and Uncompahgre Bands of Ute Indians and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the provisions of section 2103 of the Revised Statutes of the United States governing contracts with Indian tribes: Provided, That the total fees allowed and paid shall not in any event exceed 10 percent of the total sum herein authorized to be appropriated and the said fees shall be paid out of the said sum when appropriated by Congress.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word to ask the gentleman to explain this bill. It involves $1,000,000.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I shall ask the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] to explain the bill.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, this bill appropriates money to compensate the Indians for certain coal lands that were taken away from them. Some years ago a bill was passed instructing the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the value of these coal lands. This he has done, and this bill is based on the report of the Secretary of the Interior. The survey and the valuation were made by the Geological Survey.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What was the purpose of taking the lands away from the Indians in the first instance?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I cannot answer that. They were taken away from them.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Who took them?

Mr. MURDOCK. They were taken by Executive order of the President of the United States.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The purpose was because they were valuable as coal land, and the Government wanted the coal.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What did the Government want the coal out there for?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I do not know; but they took these lands.

Mr. MURDOCK. These lands constituted a part of the Indian reservation and were set aside for the Indians. They have gradually been taken away for various purposes, and finally on account of the coal that was contained in them.

The Government has already received from these lands for grazing purposes $855,000 and $663,416 for timber that has been taken from this land.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How much have we expended in the meantime? To make the picture complete, tell us that.

Mr. MURDOCK. Expended for whom?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. By the Government.

Mr. MURDOCK. On the part of the Indians?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. No; on the coal lands.

Mr. MURDOCK. They have not expended anything. The coal lands belong to the Government and there is estimated now that there is on this land 500,000,000 feet of commercial timber, the proceeds of which will be turned into the United States Treasury. In addition to that it is estimated there are 1,500,000,000 tons of coal.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How long ago was this land taken?

Mr. MILLARD. In 1905.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why has there been this delay?

Mr. MURDOCK. The land was taken in 1905.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. How did they get the surface without getting the minerals also? The gentleman says the Government took it over.

Mr. MURDOCK. The land was first set aside for the Indians as a reservation; then the Government by subsequent Executive order took it away from the Indians and when they took it away it was under an agreement that the Secretary of the Interior would proceed to appraise it and the Indians would be compensated for the reasonable value of the land. This was done by the Geological Survey and they made their report. This bill merely conforms to the previous legislation and authorizes the appropriation in conformity with the survey made by the Geological Survey.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. When they paid for the timber and grazing rights did they not pay for the fee simple title?

Mr. MURDOCK. The grazing fees and the timber fees were paid to the Government by white men as proceeds of the land that was taken over from the Indians.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. But when you get title in fee you get all that is on the land and all that is under the land.

Mr. MURDOCK. I do not follow the gentleman's argument.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. In other words, the gentleman says that originally the land was taken by the Government?

Mr. MURDOCK. No.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, here is how it happened. At first it was public domain owned by the Government. Then the Indians were pushed off one reservation after another and finally sent out into my district. That was not their fault. They had to go.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Did they buy the property in the gentleman's district?

Mr. MURDOCK. No. The Government set aside this reservation for them and the Indians were well satisfied and began making their homes on the reservation. Then the Government by Executive order took it away from them and pushed them to another location.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. They were satisfied with what they got in exchange for what was taken?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; they got nothing in exchange.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I thought the gentleman said they were located farther back on another reservation?

Mr. MURDOCK. On this land. Part of them were moved from Colorado to the Uintah Reservation. The Uintah Reservation was created. Then the Government started to take it away from the Indians on account of the valuable mineral lands included in the reservation.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Does the gentleman know how they can estimate the real value of coal underground?

Mr. MURDOCK. I do. They do this by means of drillings, and if the gentleman will take the time to read the report he will see that the survey was very thorough in connection with drillings and in connection with every estimate that was ever made.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. How many acres are involved in this million dollars?

Mr. MURDOCK. Thirty-six thousand acres of coal land. They did pay them for the other land that was not coal land. Then Congress instructed the Secretary of the Interior to appraise the value of the coal lands by means of a thorough survey, which survey was made by the Geological Survey and a complete report made to the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. What is the value per acre you are putting on this coal land, according to this report?

Mr. MURDOCK. The noncoal land was figured at $1.25 an acre, the possible coal land at $10 an acre, and the known coal land at $50 an acre.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Do you not know you can buy coal lands close to transportation at a figure very much cheaper than that, and do you not regard that valuation of the coal land as excessive?

Mr. MURDOCK. I do not; for the reason that the people who fixed this valuation were experts in the matter, while I am not.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. The gentleman knows that an expert always makes a mistake, and there is no such thing as being able to accurately determine the value of coal underground ordinarily.

Mr. MURDOCK. Does the gentleman know anything about this coal land? Was the gentleman ever out there?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I do not know anything about this particular coal land, but I have had experience with coal land.

Mr. MURDOCK. I do not doubt that; but is not the gentleman willing to depend on the only expert agency we have in the Government, which is the Geological Survey, to determine the value of this land?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I would regard any estimate of coal underground as experimental that would carry an appropriation of this amount. It is excessive.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why should anyone get $100,000 as an attorney's fee for the passage of this bill?

Mr. MURDOCK. I am perfectly willing to cut down the attorney's fee. I am not interested in that phase of it; but when my Government has taken from the Indians these lands and has received in excess of $1,000,000 in grazing and timber fees for them, then certainly the Indians should be compensated to some extent for what they have lost.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I cannot understand how the gentleman can say that the Government would take these lands at that time, which was 30 years ago, and not make some provision for the Indians.

Mr. MURDOCK. They did make some provision for the Indians. I have told the gentleman there was legislation providing for compensation, and the legislation provided that the compensation should be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. And they have waited all these years to get it?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; the report was made only a few years ago.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAMSPECK). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. The matter has gone through with all the expedition, in my opinion, that could be expected of Congress. We passed two or three bills here yesterday that went back 18 years. Here are people who were driven from their lands and one Congress provided for a determination of the value and said that then they would be compensated for the land. This determination has been made and, of course, they should be compensated at this time.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. BURDICK. The reason there was a delay in settling about these coal lands was the fact they were waiting for this survey of the land?

Mr. MURDOCK. Absolutely.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman agree to eliminate these counsel fees?

Mr. MILLARD. Will the gentleman agree to make it $50,000 instead of $100,000?

Mr. MURDOCK. I will agree to cut the attorneys' fees down to 5 percent.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why should even $50,000 go to the lawyers?

Mr. MURDOCK. I hold no brief for any lawyer, although I am one myself, but I do believe that the lawyers who have rendered services in this case are entitled to reasonable compensation.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. They have not been very good lawyers if they have not got their case through in 30 years.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Does not the gentleman think $20,000 would be sufficient?

Mr. MURDOCK. I am not in position to say, but I am willing to agree to cut it to 5 percent and then let the Secretary of the Interior fix anything that is reasonable. This is all I want.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Make it not over 5 percent.

Mr. MURDOCK. Yes; not over 5 percent.

Mr. MILLARD. This Executive order was issued August 14, 1905, and then 15 years later another bill was passed. What did that bill provide?

Mr. MURDOCK. That bill provided for compensation for the surface rights of other lands and also provided for a survey to be made by the Geological Survey to estimate the value of the coal lands, which has been done.

Mr. MILLARD. And since 1931 nothing has been done. Have they tried to put this bill through during the last 4 years?

Mr. MURDOCK. I am not familiar with that, but I know they have been waiting on the survey.

Mr. MORITZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. MORITZ. Does the Government give this land to the Indians in fee?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; they do not.

Mr. MORITZ. In other words, does one family of Indians get a lot of land in fee or does it go to them as a tribe?

Mr. MURDOCK. It goes to them as a tribe and then there are individual allotments made.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object to considering this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objection stage has been passed. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill, and move to strike out the last two words.

It looks to me as if this bill would allow somewhere around $30 an acre for 30,000 acres of land.

These coal lands are appraised at two dollars and a quarter an acre. I do not see why we should pay $900,000 for these lands when the classification sets out in the report that they are appraised at $2.25 an acre. Why should we do anything of that kind? I will yield to any member of the committee who will give me any legitimate reason why we should do that.

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman means to say that the question is why we should pay more than $2.25 an acre?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. The report shows that there are 11,900 acres of land, all of which has been determined to contain coal. The land has been determined to contain 1,500,000,000 tons of coal. It is also said that there are 500,000,000 feet of salable timber. The Government has received from the land in excess of a million dollars.

Mr. TABER. How?

Mr. MURDOCK. Grazing fees and timber fees.

Mr. TABER. Well, generally, the Government pays out more than it receives on these operations. I have always understood that these operations resulted in a loss.

Mr. MURDOCK. I understand those are the actual receipts.

Mr. PIERCE. They are a source of real profit in many places in the West.

Mr. TABER. How much?

Mr. PIERCE. Oh, I cannot say, but it must run into a large sum of money.

Mr. TABER. The gentleman cannot say how much?

Mr. PIERCE. No.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAMSPECK). The gentleman from Tennessee makes the point that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and forty Members present, not a quorum.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were closed, the Sergeant at Arms was directed to notify absent Members, the Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 185]

Amlie	Dietrich	Higgins, Mass.	Parks
Bankhead	Dirksen	Hill, Knute	Peyser
Barden	Dockweiler	Hobbs	Reece
Bell	Doutrich	Hook	Richards
Berlin	Doxey	Kennedy, Md.	Richardson
Blanton	Dunn, Miss.	Kerr	Robertson
Brennan	Eicher	Kimball	Rogers, N. H.
Buckbee	Ekwall	Kleberg	Rudd
Buckley, N. Y.	Fernandez	Lee, Okla.	Schaefer
Burch	Fish	Lesinski	Shannon
Burnham	Gambrill	Lord	Short
Cannon, Wis.	Gasque	Lucas	Smith, Va.
Carter	Gassaway	Lundeen	Smith, Wash.
Cartwright	Gearhart	McGroarty	Snyder
Chandler	Gehrmann	McLean	Stubbs
Christianson	Gillette	McLeod	Sullivan
Claiborne	Goldsborough	McMillan	Sutphin
Clark, Idaho	Goodwin	Maas	Underwood
Clark, N. C.	Gray, Pa.	May	Wadsworth
Cochran	Greever	Mitchell, Ill.	Wearin
Collins	Haines	Moran	Werner
Corning	Hamlin	Norton	Wilcox
Culkin	Healey	Oliver
Darden	Higgins, Conn.	Palmisano

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and thirty-six members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of the Interior on July 20, 1931, reported to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House copies of the report of an investigation made by the Geological Survey involving a reclassification and reappraisal of this land, appraising the whole thing at $62,165.75.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Here is what the Secretary of the Interior says about that report.

Mr. TABER. The present Secretary of the Interior thinks that land is worth $977,000. Frankly there is too large a spread there for this Congress to follow along and I do not believe we ought to pass this bill. I think we ought to defeat a bill of this kind right now. If there were only a small spread between two Secretaries of the Interior, we would be justified in following one over the other; but with a spread of 1,000 percent between the two it is ridiculous to pass such a bill.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. I think a bill of this kind should have the attention and consideration of men who sit here to carry out a serious responsibility. I am amazed to read this report and find that we are about to pass a bill of this kind. The taxpayers' money ought to be sacred to us and it should not be squandered. We have already expended enough money and it is time to call a halt on legislation of this type.

What is involved in this bill is that back in 1905 some Indians were pushed off certain lands in Utah and were moved back some distance, and this land, if I read aright this report, has already been paid for.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I shall be glad to in a moment. I call attention to figures that are in this would-be appropriation of practically $1,000,000.

Mr. MURDOCK. On the statement just made. I know the gentleman wants to be fair.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. In just a moment. Here is what you are about to do. You are about to pay $50 an acre or more for coal lands 20 miles from a railroad. I shall be glad to give any man in this House 6,000 acres of coal land with 10 feet of coal under it at $10 an acre and dare you to trade with me, and it is right alongside of a railroad.

Mr. TABER. Is not the land in this bill 63 miles from a railroad?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Maybe. They told me it was twenty-odd miles. That is the proposition we are called on to accept in this bill. We are to pay $1.25 an acre for 6,000 acres, when we already own the surface of it and that takes in the coal and the mineral rights. The Bureau of the Budget opposes it, the President opposes it, as is shown in this report. Mr. Hoover, when he was President, opposed it, and recommended an exchange of land instead of this appropriation. There are 12,000 acres in the bill which you are about to buy at $10 an acre and 17,000 acres at $50 an acre—all 20 miles from a railroad. This is a graft of some sort, and it ought not to be permitted. Such a charge should not be hung around the necks of the American taxpayers. I know if you good men and women are awake to the necessities of the overburdened tax-paying public you will rise up and defeat this bill, and I hope every man, woman, and child votes against it if they are here.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Yes. I cannot imagine any reason why anyone should support this measure. The children of future generations will have this tax burden on them, and that is why I refer to them. [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. They will come on afterward and suffer under this unfair and unjust appropriation.

Mr. MILLARD. And does the gentleman know that the Acting Director of the Budget, in reporting the Senate bill of a similar character, says that this does not meet with the financial policy of the President?

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I am glad to say that is true.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. The fact that I have Indians in my district is not my fault. The fact that they are out there is not their fault. They have been pushed from pillar to post in the United States, from corner to corner, until they have been glad to take whatever we are willing to give them.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman refused to yield to me.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. There are only 1,500 Indians all told that are involved.

Mr. MURDOCK. That is true. Back in 1931 this Congress passed a bill paying the Indians involved so much an acre for the surface rights of some of the lands taken from them.

In that same bill the Secretary of the Interior was directed to ascertain the value of the coal lands so that the Congress could compensate the Indians for those coal lands. The only agency of this Government competent to make a survey and appraisal, the Geological Survey, has passed upon it and recommended that the compensation be at the rate of $1.25 for lands without coal, $10 an acre for possible coal lands, and $50 an acre for lands actually determined to contain coal.

The blackest page in the history of the United States is in our dealing with the Indians who had this country when we came here. On yesterday we passed appropriation bills or authorizations amounting up to $15,000,000 to men some of whom, in my opinion, had no more claim on this Government than I have. I hold no brief for any lawyer who is representing the Indians, but I do feel that the Indians are entitled to compensation and they ought to get it before the people actually damaged have passed out of the picture entirely. The trouble with our dealings with the Indians is that we stall along from one session to another until the Indians actually damaged never get anything, but their posterity, many years hereafter, probably will get this very same thing. Why not compensate them now for lands we have deprived them of and put this money in the United States Treasury, as provided in the bill, to draw interest at 4 percent? If we do not compensate the Indians for the land that is taken away from them, then we must appropriate money from some other source to be expended in their behalf. As wards of this Government their welfare is our responsibility.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I will ask the gentleman if they have not already had the surface of this land paid for?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; not this land. They have had surface rights on some land paid for.

Now, there is one more thing that I want to call to your attention. Our Government has already received from this land taken from the Indians $855,000 for timber and has received $663,000 for grazing fees, making a total of $1,548,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. TABER. On that, Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 59, nays 251, answered "present" 1, not voting 119, as follows:

[Roll No. 186]

YEAS—59

Ayers	Gehrmann	Maloney	Ramspeck
Boileau	Goldsborough	Marcantonio	Robinson, Utah
Buckler, Minn.	Greenway	Martin, Colo.	Rogers, Okla.
Burdick	Guyer	Maverick	Sadowski
Crawford	Hildebrandt	Monaghan	Schneider
Cullen	Hill, Samuel B.	Montet	Scrugham
DeRouen	Johnson, Okla.	Mott	Secrest
Disney	Kvale	Murdock	Stefan
Duffy, N. Y.	Lambertson	Nichols	Stewart
Dunn, Pa.	Lemke	O'Connor	Taylor, Colo.
Eagle	Lloyd	O'Day	Tolan
Ellenbogen	Lundeen	O'Malley	Utterback
Faddis	McCormack	Patman	Vinson, Ky.
Ferguson	McGrath	Patton	Wolfenden
Fitzpatrick	McKeough	Pittenger

NAYS—251

Adair	Cravens	Gregory	Larrabee
Andresen	Crosby	Griswold	Lea, Calif.
Andrew, Mass.	Crosser, Ohio.	Gwynne	Lehlbach
Andrews, N. Y.	Crowe	Haines	Lewis, Colo.
Arends	Daly	Halleck	Luckey
Ashbrook	Darrow	Hancock, N. Y.	Ludlow
Bacharach	Dear	Hancock, N. C.	McAndrews
Bacon	Deen	Harlan	McClellan
Barden	Delaney	Hart	McFarlane
Beiter	Dies	Harter	McGehee
Binderup	Dingell	Hartley	McLaughlin
Blackney	Ditter	Healey	McReynolds
Boehne	Dondero	Hennings	Mahon
Boland	Dorsey	Hess	Mapes
Bolton	Doxey	Hill, Ala.	Marshall
Brewster	Drewry	Hobbs	Martin, Mass.
Brooks	Driscoll	Hoffman	Mason
Brown, Ga.	Driver	Hollister	Massingale
Brown, Mich.	Duffey, Ohio	Holmes	Meeks
Brunner	Duncan	Hope	Merritt, Conn.
Buchanan	Eaton	Houston	Merritt, N. Y.
Buck	Eckert	Huddleston	Michener
Caldwell	Edmiston	Hull	Millard
Cannon, Mo.	Ekwall	Imhoff	Miller
Carlson	Engel	Jacobsen	Mitchell, Tenn.
Carmichael	Englebright	Jenckes, Ind.	Moran
Cary	Evans	Jenkins, Ohio	Moritz
Casey	Farley	Johnson, Tex.	Nelson
Castellow	Fenerty	Johnson, W. Va.	O'Connell
Cavicchia	Fiesinger	Jones	O'Leary
Chandler	Fletcher	Kahn	O'Neal
Chapman	Focht	Kee	Owen
Church	Ford, Calif.	Keller	Palmisano
Citron	Ford, Miss.	Kennedy, N. Y.	Parsons
Clark, N. C.	Frey	Kenney	Patterson
Coffee	Fuller	Kinzer	Pearson
Colden	Gavagan	Kloeb	Perkins
Cole, Md.	Gearhart	Kniffin	Peterson, Fla.
Cole, N. Y.	Gildea	Knutson	Peterson, Ga.
Colmer	Gingery	Kocialkowski	Pettengill
Connery	Granfield	Kopplemann	Pfeifer
Cooley	Gray, Ind.	Kramer	Pierce
Cooper, Ohio	Gray, Pa.	Lambeth	Plumley
Cooper, Tenn.	Green	Lamneck	Polk
Costello	Greenwood	Lanham	Powers
Rabaut	Sauthoff	Sumners, Tex.	Walter
Ramsey	Schaefer	Taber	Warren
Randolph	Schuetz	Tarver	Wearin
Rankin	Scott	Taylor, S. C.	Welch
Ransley	Sears	Taylor, Tenn.	West
Reed, Ill.	Seger	Terry	Whelchel
Reed, N. Y.	Shanley	Thom	Whittington
Reilly	Sisson	Thomas	Wigglesworth
Rich	Smith, Conn.	Thomason	Wilcox
Risk	Smith, Va.	Thompson	Williams
Robsion, Ky.	Smith, W. Va.	Thurston	Wilson, La.
Rogers, Mass.	Snell	Tinkham	Wolcott
Romjue	Somers, N. Y.	Tobey	Wolverton
Russell	South	Tonry	Wood
Sabath	Spence	Treadway	Woodruff
Sanders, La.	Stack	Turpin	Young
Sanders, Tex.	Starnes	Umstead	Zimmerman
Sandlin	Steagall	Wadsworth

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Dickstein

NOT VOTING—119

Allen	Cox	Hill, Knute	Rayburn
Amlie	Cross, Tex.	Hoeppel	Reece
Arnold	Crowther	Hook	Richards
Bankhead	Culkin	Kelly	Richardson
Beam	Cummings	Kennedy, Md.	Robertson
Bell	Darden	Kerr	Rogers, N. H.
Berlin	Dempsey	Kimball	Rudd
Biermann	Dietrich	Kleberg	Ryan
Bland	Dirksen	Lee, Okla.	Schulte
Blanton	Dobbins	Lesinski	Shannon
Bloom	Dockweiler	Lewis, Md.	Short
Boykin	Doughton	Lord	Sirovich
Boylan	Doutrich	Lucas	Smith, Wash.
Brennan	Dunn, Miss.	McGroarty	Snyder
Buckbee	Eicher	McLean	Stubbs
Buckley, N. Y.	Fernandez	McLeod	Sullivan
Bulwinkle	Fish	McMillan	Sutphin
Burch	Flannagan	McSwain	Sweeney
Burnham	Fulmer	Maas	Turner
Cannon, Wis.	Gambrill	Mansfield	Underwood
Carpenter	Gasque	May	Vinson, Ga.
Carter	Gassaway	Mead	Wallgren
Cartwright	Gifford	Mitchell, Ill.	Weaver
Celler	Gilchrist	Montague	Werner
Christianson	Gillette	Norton	White
Claiborne	Goodwin	O'Brien	Wilson, Pa.
Clark, Idaho	Greever	Oliver	Withrow
Cochran	Hamlin	Parks	Woodrum
Collins	Higgins, Conn.	Peyser	Zioncheck
Corning	Higgins, Mass.	Quinn

So the bill was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

General pairs:

Mr. Blanton with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Carter.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Short.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Lord.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Robertson with Mr. Crowther.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Reece.
Mr. Bland with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Goodwin.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Maas.
Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Kimball.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Dirksen.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Amlie.
Mr. Boylan with Mr. Withrow.
Mr. Bloom with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Allen.
Mr. Weaver with Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Gilchrist.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. McLean.
Mr. Cross of Texas with Mr. Burnham.
Mr. Beam with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut.
Mr. Sirovich with Mr. Christianson.
Mr. Thomason with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Mead with Mr. Zioncheck.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Dunn of Mississippi.
Mr. Lucas with Mr. Hook.
Mr. Dietrich with Mr. Gassaway.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Werner with Mr. Parks.
Mr. Hamlin with Mr. Darden.
Mr. Celler with Mr. O'Brien.
Mr. Arnold with Mr. White.
Mr. Greever with M. Quinn.
Mr. Kleberg with M. Cartwright.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Richardson.
Mr. Eicher with Mr. Lewis of Maryland.
Mr. Wallgren with Mr. Claiborne.
Mr. Bell with Mr. Turner.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Knute Hill.
Mr. Rudd with Mr. Underwood.
Mr. Boykin with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.
Mr. Kelly with Mr. May.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Biermann.

Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Dempsey.
Mr. Gasque with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Lesinski with Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire.
Mr. Snyder with Mr. Buckley of New York.
Mr. Clark of Idaho with Mr. Fernandez.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Stubbs.
Mr. Dockweiler with Mr. Gambill.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. McGroarty.
Mr. Sutphin with Mr. Peyser.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I cannot qualify. If I were able, I would vote "no."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Sinclaire, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. J. Res. 169. Joint resolution granting permission to Hugh S. Cumming, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; John D. Long, medical director, United States Public Health Service; Bolivar J. Lloyd, medical director, United States Public Health Service; and Clifford R. Eskey, surgeon, United States Public Health Service, to accept and wear certain decorations bestowed upon them by the Governments of Ecuador, Chile, Peru, and Cuba.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to bills and a joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1374. An act authorizing the survey, location, and construction of a highway to connect the northwestern part of continental United States with British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and the Territory of Alaska;

S. 2888. An act to provide for the disposition, control, and use of surplus real property acquired by Federal agencies, and for other purposes; and

S. J. Res. 65. Joint resolution to extend the period of suspension of the limitation governing the filing of suit under section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended.

The message also announced that the Senate recedes from its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7199) to provide for the donation of certain Army equipment to posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, disagreed to by the House.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 6776. An act to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8632) entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes', approved May 18, 1933."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7167) entitled "An act to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, authorize appropriations, and for other purposes."

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

CLAIMS OF CERTAIN BANDS OF INDIANS RESIDING IN THE STATE OF OREGON

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 2761) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine claims of certain bands or tribes of Indians residing in the State of Oregon, and I ask unanimous consent that the same be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. DISNEY. Reserving the right to object, does the Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs expect to call up the bill H. R. 6682, known as the "Osage civilization fund bill", which passed the House last session and has passed the Senate this session?

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. I hoped we would be able to call that bill up, but from the lateness of the hour and the position of that bill on the calendar it does not look as if it is going to be possible to call it up. I am just as anxious to call it up as the gentleman is to have it considered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the Court of Claims with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party, as in other cases, to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment (a) in any and all legal and equitable claims, arising under or growing out of any treaty, agreement, act of Congress, or Executive order, or for the failure of the United States to pay any money or other property due, which those Indian tribes or bands, or portions thereof, and their descendants, described in the ratified treaties of September 10, 1853 (10 Stat. 1018), September 19, 1853 (10 Stat. 1027), November 18, 1854 (10 Stat. 1122), November 25, 1854 (10 Stat. 1125), January 22, 1855 (10 Stat. 1143), and December 21, 1855 (12 Stat. 981), may have against the United States; and (b) any and all legal and equitable claims arising under or growing out of the original Indian title, claim, or rights in, to, or upon the whole or any part of the lands and their appurtenances occupied by the Indian tribes and bands described in the unratified treaties published in Senate Executive Document No. 25, Fifty-third Congress, first session (pp. 8–15), at and long prior to the dates thereof, except the Coos Bay, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Tribes, it being the intention of this act to include all the Indian tribes or bands and their descendants, with the exceptions named, residing in the then Territory of Oregon west of the Cascade Range at and long prior to the dates of the said unratified treaties, some of whom, in 1855, or later, were removed by the military authorities of the United States to the Coast Range, the Grande Ronde, and the Siletz Reservations in said Territory.

SEC. 2. That if any claim or claims be submitted to said courts hereunder they shall settle the rights therein, both legal and equitable, of each and all the parties thereto, notwithstanding the lapse of time or the statutes of limitation; and any payment which may have been made under any claim or agreement shall not operate as an estoppel but may be pleaded as a set-off, and the United States shall be allowed to plead, and shall receive credit for all sums, including gratuities, paid to or expended for the benefit of the respective tribes or bands of Indians. The claim or claims of each tribe or band may be presented separately or jointly by petition, subject, however, to amendment and consolidation in proper cases. Such action or actions shall make the petitioner or petitioners party plaintiff or plaintiffs and the United States party defendant; and any nation, tribe, or band the court may deem necessary to a final determination of such suit or suits may be joined therein by order of the court.

The petition shall set forth all the facts upon which the claims are based and shall be signed and verified by the attorney or attorneys employed to prosecute such claim or claims and who are under contract with said Indians approved in accordance with existing law. Any and all claims against the United States within the purview of this act shall be forever barred unless suit be instituted or petition filed as herein provided in the Court of Claims within 5 years from the date of the approval of this act.

Official letters, papers, documents, and public records, or certified copies thereof, may be used in evidence, and the departments of the Government shall allow the attorney or attorneys access to such treaties, papers, correspondence, or records as may be needed by said attorney or attorneys.

SEC. 3. That upon the final determination of such suit, or suits, the Court of Claims shall decree such fees not exceeding 10 percent of the amounts recovered as it shall find reasonable to be paid the attorney or attorneys employed therein by said Indians or bands of Indians, under contracts negotiated and approved as provided by existing law, together with all necessary and proper expenditures incurred in the preparation and prosecution of the suit or suits.

SEC. 4. The proceeds of all amounts, if any, recovered for said Indians, less attorneys' fees and expenses, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians decreed to said court to be entitled thereto, and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date of the original judgment or decree and thereafter shall be subject to appropriation by Congress.

THE FRAZIER-LEMKE FARM-MORATORIUM BILL

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, I have just voted for a few thousand Indians; now I should like to say a few words for a few million white men if the House will bear with me for just 2 minutes. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I undertake to say that there is no bill pending which is of more genuine concern to more Members of the House than the Frazier-Lemke farm-moratorium bill. [Applause.] This bill passed the Senate on Monday. The Senate debate, which I have read, indicates that it is the opinion of the ablest constitutional lawyers in that body that the bill in its present form is constitutional. Farm disturbances in a great Midwestern State, a genuinely American State, are indicative of the deep distress amongst the farmers of that State, and the distress of the farmers of that State is indicative of their condition in many States of the Middle West and the West.

The farm moratorium bill, passed in the closing hours of the last session of Congress, accomplished some good, even though later declared unconstitutional, and it paved the way for this bill. It fell to my lot to get the first action under that law in the State of Colorado, saving the rights of a farmer within an hour of the time when the sheriff was to deliver the final deed to the creditor under a decree of court. It would be too long a story to tell here of the long distance wiring and telephoning and turning hither and thither necessary to get action on 48 hours' notice under a new law, the administrative machinery of which had not yet been set up.

At this time I feel justified in placing in the RECORD a copy of a telegram which I sent the President from my office in Washington in behalf of the bill on June 26, 1934, when I was advised that the President still had under consideration the question of signing the bill.

The reasons I advanced to the President in favor of that bill were proved by experience, and they are just as pertinent to the pending bill, and I respectfully submit it to the perusal of Members. The telegram was as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26, 1934.

The PRESIDENT,
White House.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: As one familiar with western farm conditions, I beg leave to submit one consideration in favor of the Frazier-Lemke mortgage moratorium bill. Under foreclosure many thousands of these farms will find no buyers. They will lie vacant or fall into the hands of shiftless tenants who will skin them. I sincerely believe the bill is a conservation measure and that it would be best for the mortgagees if the owners could be given the stay provided by the bill.

It is also suggested that the act will induce lower interest rates, resulting in much refinancing through existing set-ups, and restrain many foreclosures. I doubt whether the act will result in wholesale bankruptcies.

Very respectfully,

JOHN A. MARTIN,
Member of Congress, Third District Colorado.

Mr. Speaker, either by unanimous consent or by suspension of the rules before this Congress adjourns we ought to pass the Frazier-Lemke farm-moratorium bill. [Applause.]

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. There is a great misunderstanding. Some Members of the House seem to think there is just one Frazier-Lemke bill, but we understand the gentleman refers to the bill which grants a moratorium of 3 years, and not the refinancing bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Furthermore, the Committee on the Judiciary, I think, unanimously reported this measure and I think it is a good bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I thank the gentleman for the information concerning the action of his committee. That, then, is an additional reason why it ought to be passed. Before this Congress adjourns we ought to extend to the farmers of this country this relief which will not cost the United States Treasury anything. I wish we could end this day with a good deed by passing the Frazier-Lemke bill.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. The Committee on the Judiciary is standing by hoping to call that bill up at the very first opportunity.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Does the gentleman think it will be called up for a certainty before we adjourn?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Just as soon as we can get recognition; and I am doing my best. I understand the Chair is going to recognize me for that purpose.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I thank the distinguished Chairman of the Judiciary Committee for his assurance.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the committee having the bill in charge can ask the Rules Committee for a rule. The Rules Committee has been handing out all kinds of rules in the last few days and certainly we could get a rule on that.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that the bill ought to pass the House by unanimous consent and not need a rule. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill were laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to call to the attention of the Members of the House the fact that this is Calendar Wednesday and that only bills that may be taken up on Calendar Wednesday can be considered except by consent, and the Chair recognized the chairman of the committee which had the call for today under the rules of the House.

The gentleman from Oklahoma is recognized.

MUSKOGEE OR CREEK TRIBE OF INDIANS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 3182) authorizing an appropriation to carry out the provisions of section 26 of the agreement with the Muskogee or Creek Tribe of Indians, approved March 1, 1901.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withdraw the point of order for a moment?

Mr. SNELL. I withdraw it for the time being.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

A bill and joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and under the rule referred as follows:

S. 2027. An act consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas, for the regulation of imports of petroleum and its products, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. J. Res. 173. Joint resolution providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to belligerent countries: the prohibition of the transportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent states; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting, or importing arms, ammunition, or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 6361. An act to amend the Filled Milk Act;

H. R. 7380. An act authorizing the Virgin Islands Co. to settle valid claims of the creditors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7927. An act to authorize the Secretary of State to lease to citizens of the United States any land heretofore or hereafter acquired under any act, Executive order or treaty in connection with projects, in whole or in part constructed or administered by the Secretary of State through the International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, American section; and

H. R. 8473. An act to provide for the compiling and publishing of the Official Register of the United States.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1763. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust the compensation of certain employees in the Customs Service", approved May 29, 1928, as amended by the act of December 12, 1930;

S. 1787. An act to add certain lands to the Pisgah National Forest in the State of North Carolina;

S. 1817. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., against the United States in respect of loss of property occasioned by the breaking of a Government dike on Squaw Island;

S. 1832. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide by agreement with Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District, a subdivision of the State of New Mexico, for maintenance and operation on newly reclaimed Pueblo Indian lands in the Rio Grande Valley, N. Mex., reclaimed under previous act of Congress, and authorizing an annual appropriation to pay the cost thereof for a period of not to exceed 5 years;

S. 1864. An act for the relief of the State of Nebraska;

S. 2649. An act to provide for a recreation area within the Prescott National Forest, Ariz.;

S. 2681. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Lake Champlain at or near West Swanton, Vt.;

S. 3194. An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended;

S. 3270. An act to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia;

S. 3353. An act providing for the exchange of certain park lands at and near Western Avenue and West Beach Drive for other lands more suitable to the development of Rock Creek Park and the street system of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

S. 3336. An act to repeal titles I and II of the National Prohibition Act, to reenact certain provisions of title II thereof, to amend or repeal various liquor laws, and for other purposes.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 3462. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, approved March 4, 1913", and for other purposes;

H. R. 5711. An act to provide aid for needy blind persons of the District of Columbia and authorizing appropriations therefor;

H. R. 6510. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act;

H. R. 6623. An act to amend the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia in relation to providing assistance against old-age want;

H. R. 8421. An act granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8422. An act granting pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8423. An act granting increase of pensions to certain former widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8424. An act granting increase of pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8425. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain helpless and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War;

H. R. 8426. An act granting pensions to certain soldiers of the Civil War; and

H. R. 7617. An act to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. CROWTHER, for the balance of the session, on account of illness.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I renew my point of order.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Will not the gentleman withdraw his point a moment?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, at the request of the gentleman from Missouri I withdraw the point of order.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Does the gentleman desire to speak on the same subject he discussed Saturday?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Yes. I could raise the question of personal privilege, but I prefer not to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, my attention has just been called to remarks inserted in the RECORD last night by my friend the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SADOWSKI], in which he refers to my statement on the floor relative to the so-called "strike" in Detroit. The gentleman from Michigan is a very useful Member of the House and is assiduous in the service of his district and his constituents, and it is natural that he should champion the cause of the women who come to Washington from his district, however misguided their mission.

They object to my reference to them as foreign and to my statement that Communists were associated with their activities. My information on both points is supplied by the dispatches of the Associated Press and the United Press, which reports that the assaults on purchasers of meat was "to the accompaniment of an angry babble of foreign tongues", and that the strikers had their headquarters in the hall of the International Workers, an organization of Communists.

They also give the mayor of the city as authority for the statement that Communists participated in the disorder. I have always found both press associations accurate and no evidence to the contrary has been adduced in this case.

But whether they are foreign or whether they are Communists is immaterial. The matter at issue is whether their demonstrations are in furtherance of the campaign of the processors against the farm program of the administration. No one who met these women can believe their agitation is wholly voluntary. They are uninformed and incapable of conceiving or executing unprompted the advertised objective of their visit to Washington.

When they appeared in my office yesterday they could not even state intelligibly the purpose for which they came but read from a paper which someone had prepared for them. By the widest stretch of the imagination they could not have prepared copy for the pamphlet Plan of Work, which was circulated in organizing their strike, and, according to their own admission, they did not have money to pay for printing it.

They were not only uninformed but were obviously insincere. In the presence of the newspapermen who accompanied them I attempted to discuss with them the price of pork against which they were protesting. I asked them the price in Detroit. They replied they paid 35 cents for bacon and 38 cents for ham. I called their attention to advertisements of local retailers in the Detroit News of August 16, 1935, pricing bacon at 18 cents to 21 cents and smoked ham at 21 cents to 24 cents. They replied that the stores which sold pork at these prices were too far down town for their convenience.

Apparently they were deliberately misstating the price at which meats are being sold in Detroit and still more patently they were offering false testimony when they stated the stores were too far down town. No normal housewife would insist on trading at her neighborhood store when she could secure supplies at half the price by taking a car down town. When this suggestion was made they abandoned all attempt to adhere to the facts and said that the meats advertised at this price were poisonous. It is a matter of common knowledge that the health regulations of Detroit do not permit the sale of deleterious foods, and that all meats on sale in these shops are Government inspected. As a matter of fact, one of the dealers in Friday's issue of the Detroit News gave their customers the choice of Swift's Premium and Armour's Star at 21 cents per pound, two standard brands, universally recognized as of the highest quality. When this discrepancy was called to the attention of the women they declined to further comment on the matter they had come to discuss, and, although treated with the utmost courtesy, abruptly left the office.

My good friend, Mr. SADOWSKI, suggests that the women were not criticizing the farmers and were directing their protests to the packers; but the denunciation of the packers is plainly an afterthought, as it does not appear in any of their numerous newspaper interviews until after my speech of Monday, and their stock phrases when they attempted to talk without referring to their lines were "the processing tax" and "the little pigs killed by the farmers."

The timely way in which their strike fits into the packers' assault on the processing tax is not an accident. It seems to have been carefully planned in advance. As early as last March one of the executives of a State chamber of commerce, speaking for the processors, threatened a buyers' strike if the Government's farm-relief plan was insisted on. He wrote:

> There is both opposition and support of the various features of the Government's farm-relief program on the part of our board members.

Clearly he represented only a part of his chamber in opposing the relief program. But he makes still plainer the identity of the opposition. He continues:

> Business firms which we represent, engaged in food processing or distribution, feel that they would be most detrimentally affected by the amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and wish to be recorded as opposing the passage of the amendments.

To be certain his clients are not confused with local retailers, he adds:

> I am sure I need not remind you that these firms are not just local in character. They are the outlet for the farm products of this entire region. I hope you will not regard us as presuming to speak as your constituents, since we have our own Congressmen, but as speaking the sentiment of an element in the community on a matter of State-wide concern and effect. There is the deepest concern on the part of the food processing and handling firms which we represent over the delegation of powers by these particular amendments.

And then he makes the significant statement toward which he has been leading. He says:

> Certainly there is reason to anticipate a buyers' strike on certain commodities.

He is a prophet. He predicts events and they come to pass. In March he threatens a buyers' strike if the Government's farm-relief plan is persisted in. And here in August five women from the foreign section of Detroit, elaborately publicized and followed by a train of newspaper reporters, photographers, and radio men, march on Washington in defense of the little pigs the farmers are killing.

It is a most opportune time. The packers have just filed over 400 suits against the Government to enjoin the collection of the processing tax. It is not only an assault on the farm-relief program, which is functioning so efficiently, but it is a shameful attempt to mulct the American people of a stupendous sum of money—in excess of $8,000,000 in one Federal court district alone.

If they should win these suits, millions of dollars of the people's money would go to the processors, who have rendered no pretense of service in return. The processors have collected, and are still collecting, huge sums of money from the consumers from day to day; and, if not required to pay it to the farmer as provided by law, no individual consumer could afford to bring suit or would bring suit for the return of his personal contribution, and the packers and millers would retain legal possession of unearned sums of money so vast as to shame the wealth of Midas. In view of the extent of the plunder at stake, is it to be wondered that the processors are organizing a fake farm organization here in Washington to misrepresent the processing tax with a stool pigeon from Kansas as its nominal head, and a buyers' strike in Detroit with a Mrs. Zuk as its ostensible leader, in order to secure some semblance of public support.

Even if it were bona fide, the whole theory of consumer protest against high food prices is built on a false assumption. Low prices do not contribute to the wide distribution of foodstuffs or ample supplies of pork. On the contrary, low food prices are invariably accompanied by starvation and bread lines. Food was never so plentiful as in 1919, when it was highest. And hunger was never so wide-spread as in 1932, when prices were lowest. Pork was cheaper in Detroit last year than ever before in the history of the city, and a huge percentage of the people of Detroit were on relief. Cheap pork and low prices are not the answer. The solution of the problem is to give employment and pay the consumer wages that will enable him to buy freely. That is exactly the function of the processing tax. It gives the farmer buying power and enables him to buy the products of labor and industry, as he did in 1919 and as he is doing today.

The factory cannot sell unless the farmer can buy and the factory cannot employ labor unless it has a market for its wares. Smoking chimneys and whirling wheels and roaring plants in every industry today are the direct and immediate result of paying the farmer an honest wage for his labor, a fair return on his investment, and $12.40 for his hogs. In the language of the much-maligned Constitution, the processing tax is today establishing justice, insuring domestic tranquillity, and promoting the general welfare—and no substitute has yet been suggested which will do it as effectively.

(Mr. CANNON of Missouri asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.)

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts and Mr. RICH objected.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 358.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

> Resolved, That during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress it shall be in order for the acting majority leader or the Chairman of the Committee on Rules to move that the House take a recess, and said motion is hereby made of the highest privilege; and it shall also be in order at any time during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress to consider reports of the Committee on Rules, as provided in clause 45, rule XI, except that the provision requiring a two-thirds vote to consider such reports is hereby suspended during the remainder of this session of Congress.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, this is certainly a novel procedure, but we are accustomed to that by this time.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is the usual resolution.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I have never seen such a resolution that included the Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I did not draw it.

Mr. SNELL. Who did?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I did not draw it.

Mr. SNELL. It is entirely different from anything we have ever had heretofore.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is the usual resolution offered at the end of a session, except that this does not cover suspensions.

Mr. SNELL. There is no way we can stop it, but it is an entirely novel resolution. I do not think there is any need especially for it if we are going to adjourn this week, as the gentleman claims we are.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I did not make that claim. Do not put me in that claiming category.

Mr. SNELL. What is the object in offering the resolution at this time?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman well knows that before the close of any Congress, in order to save time a resolution is offered so that we may recess rather than adjourn because of the long reading of the Journal.

Mr. SNELL. That is all right; but the gentleman says we are not going to adjourn this week, so what difference does it make?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have no control over that matter. I would have adjourned long ago if I had anything to say about it. Then, the second point is that in order to call up rules they have to lay over 24 hours.

Mr. SNELL. There is a regular provision covering that matter.

Mr. O'CONNOR. We have not heretofore fixed the time of adjournment before the actual day of adjournment.

Mr. SNELL. Oh, we always did when somebody was at the head of the program that knew something about it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. When the gentleman was Chairman of the Rules Committee we never did.

Mr. SNELL. We did. We always have known in advance 4 or 5 days before we adjourned.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Not in my memory.

Mr. SNELL. I challenge the statement of the gentleman.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The rules provide the last 6 days for suspension. In the 13 years I have been here nobody has known in advance the last 6 days of a session.

Mr. SNELL. We have, all the time.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is like the last car on the train, if taken off, there is always another last car.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. GREENWOOD. We have changed the method of adjourning a session of the Congress. Formerly half of the sessions of Congress were adjourned by operation of law on the 4th of March and, of course, you could always tell what would be the last 6 days of a session. Under the present situation I think such a resolution is necessary.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I called up the resolution. It is not subject to objection because it was reported yesterday.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, I am interested in the matter of the recess. The only purpose of a recess, as the gentleman stated, is to avoid the morning procedure?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Principally.

Mr. MICHENER. Has the gentleman anything else in mind in reference to postponing a legislative day?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; I have no such thing in mind. I have passed the point where I have anything in mind, really. [Laughter.]

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman is not going to have anything in mind and is going to be the dictator, why does he not get Mr. Roosevelt into this?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, this is Calendar Wednesday, and I object to the consideration of the resolution as not being privileged on Calendar Wednesday.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think the resolution is privileged on Calendar Wednesday.

Mr. SNELL. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular program.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, This is Calendar Wednesday.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Since the last 6 days, under the rules of the House, are days on which Members may be recognized for suspensions, would the effect of this resolution be that we adjourn automatically in 6 days?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; it has nothing to do with adjournment.

Mr. SNELL. If it did, I would be inclined to favor it.

Mr. MICHENER. Is it the purpose to adjourn or recess tonight?

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, This is Calendar Wednesday.

AMENDMENT OF PUBLIC ACT NO. 435, SEVENTY-SECOND CONGRESS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I call up the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 215) to amend Public Act No. 435, Seventy-second Congress.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and eighty-one Members are present, not a quorum.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

IMPAIRMENT OF HUMAN RIGHTS AND LIBERTIES IN GERMANY

Mr. HIGGINS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, with the advent of the totalitarian state in Germany we have witnessed many manifestations of cruelty and persecution, which are quite at variance with the noble nature of the German people themselves. A militant minority, having seized the reins of government, seeks to perpetuate itself in power by stirring up racial and religious hatred at a time when the German Nation, like our own, needs unity in order to overcome its economic ills.

Although all denominations of Christians have been subject to persecution in the German Reich, the brunt of the attack, as so often happens in Central Europe, falls upon the Jewish people. This is particularly unfortunate, because the Jews in Germany have distinguished themselves as useful, patriotic citizens, making their rich contribution to every phase of cultural, artistic, educational, technical, and social life. Wherever the music of Mendelssohn is loved or the heart is stirred by the lyric poetry of Heinrich Heine, there is a proper realization of what Jewish-German genius has meant to the civilization of the world.

Furthermore, during the World War, the Jewish soldiers who fought in the trenches for their country gave an example of fidelity and valor which won for them the admiration of their comrades in arms. In that dread hour, when the Fatherland was in danger, there was no question of racial or religious discrimination. The Jewish war veteran is now astonished, after pouring out his blood for his country, to find that he is not only despised, hunted, and outlawed, but that he is denied the most fundamental of human rights in the field of education, marriage, and business. Once more, he is driven across that frontier on the Rhine or on the Vistula, which in the years of 1914–18 he had learned to defend at the risk of his life. If he was German enough to be a shield for his country in time of war, Mr. Speaker, I submit that he is patriotic enough to deserve equality under the law in time of peace.

Of course, I am aware that many pretexts are employed to attempt to justify this persecution of the Jews. The charges and accusations which have been leveled against the Jews of Germany are no secret. Without taking up each one in detail, Mr. Speaker, I wish to lay down this broad, general principle which I believe will commend itself to most fair-minded people. It is this: If members of any race or religious group commit a crime or are guilty of unpatriotic conduct, there should be found a remedy at law. For that reason we have our courts, our judges, and our juries. If the law is evaded, then other statutes should be provided to cover the case.

On the other hand, arbitrary punishment of a whole group is tyranny of the worst form. It is no rectification of the wrong, but rather an incentive to further crime and violence to see unauthorized bands of youthful storm troopers or Nazi youth smash the windows of Jewish shopkeepers indiscriminately, to assault Jewish-German citizens who are encountered on the common highways, to boycott all Jewish stores. Under a system of this kind the doors are opened to the venting of personal spleen, to the stirring up of old animosities, and to the petty uses of jealousy and revenge. Arbitrary use of force can never be a substitute for reason and law.

What is worse, this illegal baiting of the Jews occasions wide-spread suffering not merely among the few individuals who may have offended in one way or another, but also among thousands of innocent men, women, and children. Here in the United States we would not for an instant tolerate the condemnation and punishment of a whole class or race or group. We would realize that such indiscriminate action would work keen injustice and redound to the ultimate disadvantage of the state. We refuse to punish a thousand innocent persons in order to bring justice to one speculator, one embezzler, or one dishonest banker. The latter, one by one, are brought to trial, given all their constitutional rights of defense, and visited with penalties decreed by law only after they have been proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt. This is the American method. I may add that it is the method sanctioned by the law of God and the dictates of right reason.

Is it not distressing, therefore, to view the spectacle of a whole race suffering persecution? Is not racial and religious persecution a matter of concern to the civilized world? Have we not as citizens of the United States the right to raise our voice in protest against injustice, against the continued violation of fundamental human rights? Can any one justly construe such protest as intervention? Indeed, is not such protest, in the words of our own Declaration of Independence, justified "by the law of nature and nature's God"? How else can we understand those ringing words of our ancestors at Philadelphia appealing to a "decent respect for the opinion of mankind"?

In our own country the Jews have been prominent not only in enriching the great science and art of law and medicine but also for their patriotic services to the Republic in every crisis in history. In this connection it should be recalled that the first step which led eventually to the War of the Revolution was the signing of the nonimportation resolutions of 1765 by merchants of the Colonies. Among these signers were nine Jews. Citizens of the colony of Georgia issued a protest against the blockade of Boston Harbor and taxation without representation, and this was signed by the prominent citizens of the Colonies; among the signatures appeared the names of two Jews.

A large number of the soldiers and officers who fought in the Revolutionary War were Jews, and among the leaders who deserve mention I may cite the names of Col. David S. Franks, Col. Solomon Bush, Col. Isaac Franks, Maj. Benjamin Nones, Capt. Jacob de la Motta, Lt. Abraham Seixas, and Lt. David Sarzedas.

A Jewish heroine of the Revolution was Esther Hays. Her husband, David Hays, was in the patriot army. She was left with her children at home in Bedford, N. Y. In July 1779 Tories entered her home and demanded information regarding patriot plans which she was supposed to possess. When she refused her home was fired and she and her children were saved by a faithful Negro servant.

Another Jew, Isaac Moses, helped out Robert Morris by pledging 3,000 pounds to the patriot cause. Philip Minis advanced $7,000 toward paying troops of Virginia and North Carolina in the State of Georgia.

Haym Salomon rendered invaluable service to the Government during the darkest days of the Revolution. It is estimated that the advances made by Salomon were no less than $200,000 in aid of the Government during its struggle for independence.

Forty-three Jews are recorded in the War of 1812, among them Brig. Gen. Joseph Bloomfield, Col. Nathan Myers, Capt. Myer Moses and Mordecai Myers, and Capt. Levi Charles Harby, who fought also in the Mexican War and the Seminole War in Florida.

Fifty-seven Jews are recorded in the Mexican War, among them Gen. David deLeon, who received the thanks of Congress twice for his gallantry.

In the Civil War the records of soldiers who fought on both sides are better kept than in the earlier wars. From these records it appears that over 7,500 Jews fought in the northern and southern armies, a larger number in proportion to the number of Jews who were then in the United States—about 150,000—than was furnished by any other religious denomination; 7 Jews received medals of honor from Congress for conspicuous gallantry. Of staff officers who were Jews, 4 are mentioned; there were 11 Jewish naval officers. There were 9 generals, 18 colonels, 8 lieutenant colonels, 4 majors, 204 captains, 325 lieutenants, 48 adjutants, and 25 surgeons of the Jewish faith.

For the Spanish-American War 2,451 Jews enlisted in the Army and 42 in the Navy; 32 were officers.

It was in the World War that Jewish military valor attained its apotheosis. Limitations of space permit consideration here only of the American Jews' record in this respect. As closely as can be estimated, the Jews contributed 250,000 men to the several branches of the service, exceeding by more than one-third their quota on a proportional basis. The combined number of Jewish commissioned officers in Army, Navy, and Marine Corps was nearly 11,000, including a rear admiral and a brigadier general. There were 31 rabbis in the Chaplains' Corps.

Eleven hundred Jews were cited for conspicuous valor. Of the 78 Congressional Medals of Honor—the Nation's supreme military decoration—3 were bestowed upon Jews. The Distinguished Service Cross went to 150 Jews. France awarded the rare Medaille Militaire to 4 American Jews and gave the Croix de Guerre to 174. Altogether, the foreign citations for valor of Jewish members of the A. E. F. were: French, 223; British, 25; various other allied commands, 75.

In view of the eminent contributions which the Jewish people have made to the national life, it is not surprising that the Massachusetts House of Representatives condemned the Nazi persecutions in Germany, as abhorrent to the humane and liberal sentiments of the people of our State. The Massachusetts House of Representatives had excellent precedents for its action. It has frequently gone on record in favor of the traditional American principles of religious liberty.

They had a perfect right to take this action in the name of humanity. When it is impossible in the free parliaments of mankind to condemn tyranny and oppression and to be solemn in the face of outrages that afflict the moral sense of the civilized world then indeed we will know that despotism has extended its sway over the entire world. To express sympathy for those who are persecuted and to protest against the extremes of injustice to which the Christian and Jewish people of Germany have been subjected is an elemental duty of conscience. The duty devolves itself upon groups and upon State and national legislators as well as upon our individual citizens of all creeds.

I am happy to express my sentiments of warm commendation and approval for the courageous, enlightened action of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. Their action was in keeping with the history and ideals of our great State.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, it is a happy privilege to pay a warm tribute of admiration and respect to the Honorable JOHN J. BOYLAN, my distinguished colleague from the State of New York. Ten years ago Mr. BOYLAN was almost alone in vindicating on the floor of this House the great traditional American principle of religious liberty. He called attention in eloquent language to the outrages and injustices that were being perpetrated upon both Jews and Christians in Mexico. In speaking upon this subject, therefore, among my colleagues of the House I cannot pass over this opportunity of recording my humble appreciation of the fine leadership which Congressman BOYLAN has consistently and nobly displayed on behalf of human freedom.

Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of recorded history that as soon as I took my place among the national legislators I was instant in demanding that some cognizance be taken of the persecution of Jews and Christians in Mexico. I did this, Mr. Speaker, because I believe in the universal, eternal principle of freedom of religious worship for all groups. The conscience of man cannot be constrained, should not be coerced. And, as the chairman of a voluntary House committee, which represented the express wishes of 250 Members of Congress, I was happy to receive assurances from the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, that he, speaking for our people and our Government, was in entire sympathy with all those people who make it clear that we favor freedom of religious worship, not only in the United States but also in all other nations.

It must be clear, Mr. Speaker, that the President's declaration applies not only to the situation in Mexico but also to the persecution in Germany. Of the facts of persecution no one can doubt. The most impartial news agencies have brought us account of the most clearly authenticated cases of oppression and absolutism in the realm of conscience.

It is not enough, Mr. Speaker, to content ourselves with repeating that religious persecution is an unholy and an unnatural thing and that in the end right will prevail. In the meantime, many innocent men, women, and children are being driven into exile, despair is being instilled into many youthful hearts, a fate worse than death is awaiting those who surrender to expediency. How, then, can we remain silent? Do we not have the obligation to show our solidarity with the rest of our fellow men? Is this not another case where "silence is not neutrality, but consent"?

POTATO-CROP REDUCTION

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, potatoes have long been the food of the poor man. Poor families have lived upon potatoes when food is high and they have been unable to provide themselves with meat or other forms and kinds of foods.

With the policy of want and scarcity to raise values, prices, and wages, and with the reduction and destruction of other farm food crops, the poor have gone back to using potatoes upon which to live.

But the potato-control amendment will cause the same want and scarcity in the potato crop for food and will leave the poor without a resort for food available for subsistence.

But we are told that other farm crops have been raised or lifted in price by the same tax and allotment plan, and this is to equalize the benefits to all food growers of the country. But experience has shown that raising the price of pork, by limitation and reduction of the supply, in advance of a corresponding increase of wages and income has worked a great hardship upon the laboring classes. The price of pork is prohibitive for use, and a great housewife strike is on. And this reduction of the potato supply and the tax to be imposed to raise prices will only increase the hardships of the laboring classes in towns and cities, coming before a corresponding increase of wages.

The potatoes grown in back yards, in gardens, and parts of truck lots will be supervised and directed from Washington, and an exacting and diligent inspector will first deal out the allotments and will come back later to measure up the crop.

The farmers or gardeners who have not grown potatoes, for any reason, during the past few years will, or may not, be allowed to grow potatoes and will be shut out of the market, and inspectors will be sent even to him to see to it that he grows none for sale or trade.

There are three or four million small potato growers who sell or trade in a surplus of their crop, over what they raise for their own personal use. But the requirements for special tags and stamps, and for special wrappers and containers, will make the sale or trade of their small surplus so inconvenient, difficult, and burdensome, that growing a small surplus of potatoes to sell or exchange at the store for other articles or prepared foods, will be impractical and prohibitive.

These special tags, stamps, wrappers, and containers will virtually create a monopoly for less than 30,000 potato growers at the expense of 120,000,000 consumers, and millions will be compelled to pay more before and without more earnings and wages to pay with. They will be left with less food to use and their hardships will be greatly increased.

Some of the newspapers of Cincinnati reported that certain commission men had dumped several carloads of potatoes into the Ohio River to keep up the price. The people were horrified and conscience stricken at this wanton destruction of food.

In passing this bill to prevent production, we are dumping several train loads of potatoes to decrease the supply and raise prices, while more people are suffering and hungry, awaiting an economic and recovery measure.

Congress, in full inquiry, found and it was agreed by all economic students that the panic or depression was caused by a failure of the buying and consuming power; the inability of the people to take and consume the products of farm, factory, and workshop. And it was further found by Congress that this failure had resulted from a fall of values, prices, and wages, which had destroyed the earnings and incomes of the people, their surplus over taxes and debts, which is their buying and consuming power.

And Congress further found and it was likewise agreed that a return of prosperity required a rise of values, prices, and wages to restore earning and incomes over taxes and debts, the buying and consuming power of the people.

Under our specialized industrial system each and every class is dependent upon another. Producers are dependent upon consumers, and consumers in turn upon producers. No one class can live independent of another; all must be maintained equal as producers and consumers.

Under this dependent and specialized system of industry all property values, commodity prices, and labor wages must be brought up and restored to an even, common level. Raising some values, prices, or wages without a corresponding rise of others will work a great hardship upon some people to the advantage of others.

If the price of clothing or clothing material is raised to a higher level without increasing prices or wages for the people who must buy clothing, the people dependent for clothing will be compelled to pay more for less without more earnings and income to pay with. If they are compelled to pay more for less, they can buy and consume less and the consumer will not only suffer but the producers must suffer loss as well. The demand for their product will be decreased and they must produce and sell less.

The producer's increased price will be offset by decreased demands, and the recovery merits of the policy of restoring values, prices, and wages, will be neutralized and defeated, with failure of accomplishment and realization.

This reduction of the potato crop to increase the price to potato growers without restoring the wages and incomes of the people who must buy potatoes is repeating an error already made in the recovery program. It will compel people to pay more for less without more earnings and income to pay with.

It will cause suffering and distress among the unemployed, the poor, and needy already in want of a sufficient food supply. It will reduce the sale of foods by the amount of the increased price to pay. And it will not bring prosperity to the growers. The increased price they will receive will be offset and neutralized by the decreased sales resulting.

There must be a rise of values, prices, and wages to restore the buying and consuming power. But this must come abiding the principles of equality, justice, and right to all. There must be a general and gradual rise of all values, prices, and wages coming to all people at the same time.

Full, adequate, complete prosperity requires that the general price rise must come while maintaining plenty and abundance of all the vital necessaries required to live. It must come with increased earnings to all, and when the people are compelled to pay more they must be receiving more to pay with.

Let it be kept eternally in mind that it is a false policy and fatal error, an economic injustice and moral wrong, and a vain and futile recovery policy, to require people to pay more without more to pay with.

There is an industrial policy to restore all values, prices, and wages to an even, equal level, bringing all values, prices, and wages gradually back to normal, evenly, alongside, at the same time, without increasing the burdens upon any and restoring prosperity to all.

And the law for this program has been enacted, signed, and entered upon the statute books. The law to bring about a gradual rise of all values, all prices, and all wages, without requiring a part to pay more for less, without receiving more to pay with and without reduction or destruction of the vital food supply.

This law was enacted May 12, 1933, and to restore values, prices, and wages without creating scarcity and want, and to restore prosperity to all classes with plenty and abundance for all. But this law remains on the statute books, a dead letter without administration or enforcement.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 54 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, August 22, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

482. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the District of Columbia (H. Doc. No. 302); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

483. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of a bill to amend existing legislation relative to the union passenger terminal in the District of Columbia, to permit the construction of a siding or sidings for the transportation of freight and express cars to and from the Government Printing Office; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

484. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a bill to impose annual taxes on domestic shipping and on yachts and pleasure boats; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mrs. O'DAY: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. House Resolution 350. Resolution requesting that the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization be requested to continue the stay of deportation in the cases of aliens of good character in which deportation would result in unusual hardship until Congress had had adequate time to consider proposed legislation; without amendment (Rept. No. 1861). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WARREN: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. S. 2632. An act to provide for the construction of 10 vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work; without amendment (Rept. No. 1862). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 4452. A bill to regulate the detailing of Army officers to duty in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1865). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 4453. A bill to prohibit Army officers from rendering outside services for pay or reward in connection with Government contracts, property, or business relations, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1866). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 4454. A bill to amend the Articles of War to provide a 10-year period of limitations on prosecutions by court martial for offenses involving frauds against the United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 1867). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ADAIR: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 3374. An act for the relief of the State of Indiana; with amendment (Rept. No. 1868). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LLOYD: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6427. A bill to prohibit statements and publications advocating overthrow of the Government by violence, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1869). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BUCK: Committee on Ways and Means. H. R. 9185. A bill to insure the collection of the revenue on intoxicating liquor, to provide for the more efficient and economical administration and enforcement of the laws relating to the taxation of intoxicating liquor, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1870). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. HARTER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 5747. A bill for the relief of Gordon McGee; without amendment (Rept. No. 1864). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SIROVICH: A bill (H. R. 9196) to provide for the extension of the civil service; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. CALDWELL: A bill (H. R. 9197) to provide for extending credit to aid in the conservation and operation of forest lands, to establish a forest credit bank, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mrs. NORTON (by request): A bill (H. R. 9198) to amend the Gasoline Tax Act of April 23, 1924, etc.; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SIROVICH: A bill (H. R. 9199) to provide for the extension of classification in the field service of the civil service; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. CASTELLOW: A bill (H. R. 9200) authorizing the erection of a marker suitably marking the site of the engagement fought at Columbus, Ga., April 16, 1865; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. FIESINGER: A bill (H. R. 9201) to amend the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALTER: A bill (H. R. 9202) to provide conditions for the purchase of supplies and the making of contracts, loans, or grants by the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TOLAN: A bill (H. R. 9203) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN: Resolution (H. Res. 360) to authorize payment of expenses of investigation authorized by House Resolution 271; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. DISNEY: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 395) designating United States Highway No. 66 the Will Rogers Highway; to the Committee on Roads.

By Mr. KENNEY: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 396) to create a Commission on National Banking Policies; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. NICHOLS: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 397) authorizing the erection of a memorial to Will Rogers; to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ARNOLD: A bill (H. R. 9204) granting an increase of pension to Anna L. Dick; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BULWINKLE: A bill (H. R. 9205) for the relief of Joe McIntosh; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9206) granting a pension to John Norton Smith; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9207) for the relief of Harry W. Sturrup; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COLDEN: A bill (H. R. 9208) for the relief of Foot's Transfer & Storage Co., Ltd.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DORSEY: A bill (H. R. 9209) granting a pension to Phillip A. Sager; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GEARHART: A bill (H. R. 9210) for the relief of Frank Bowlin; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. HANCOCK of New York: A bill (H. R. 9211) granting a pension to Anna Murphy; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H. R. 9212) for the relief of Agnes Ewing Harter; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida: A bill (H. R. 9213) to provide a preliminary examination of the Hillsborough and Withlacoochee Rivers, and their tributaries, in the State of Florida, with a view to the control of their flood waters; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. QUINN: A bill (H. R. 9214) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, consider, and determine the claims of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

9328. By Mr. REED of Illinois: Petition signed by F. R. Goodall and 31 others, of Harvard, Ill., requesting that the Federal gasoline tax be eliminated; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9329. By Mr. TINKHAM: Resolutions adopted by the General Court of Massachusetts, relating to acts of persecution reported to be committed against the members of religious faiths and their institutions in Germany; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

9330. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Department of Ohio; to the Committee on Memorials.

SENATE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, July 29, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, August 21, 1935, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

ORDER FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] to the request I am about to make. I ask unanimous consent that when the unfinished business shall have been disposed of the Senate shall proceed to the call of the calendar for the consideration of unobjected bills.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, in that connection, I do not wish to intrude against the leader's program, but I cannot but give notice again that I shall at any appropriate opportunity urge the consideration of Senate bill 2665, being Calendar No. 1204, what is known as the bill to change the name of the Interior Department, and so forth. I wish to inform my able friends that I will do so during the consideration of the calendar or when opportunity affords me to do so.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I hope the proposal of the Senator from Arkansas will be agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request for unanimous consent preferred by the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the agreement is entered into.

WILL ROGERS

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. President, yesterday I received a telegram advising me that the funeral of Will Rogers will occur today at the Hollywood Bowl in Hollywood, Calif. I was asked to send a telegram for the occasion. I ask unanimous consent to insert the telegram in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AUGUST 21, 1935.

Hon. A. A. COHN,
Collector of Customs, Los Angeles, Calif.:

Will Rogers was universally beloved by the American people. He is the only man in recorded history, so far as I know, who never had an enemy. This is a unique tribute. It is evidence of the extraordinary qualities of his mind and heart, of his unsullied character, and of that remarkable spirit as well as philosophy of democracy which guided his life. He contributed daily to the enjoyment of millions by his delightful humor, his painless but clever satire, and his essential love of humanity, which punctuated his writings and imbued his daily life. His death removes a great figure. His friends weep because he is gone; they will always rejoice that they were privileged to enjoy his friendship and to bask in the sunshine of his smile.

W. G. MCADOO.

REPORT OF NOMINATION OF ALBERT LEE STEPHENS

Mr. LEWIS. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask for a roll call.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold the suggestion for a moment?

Mr. LEWIS. I withhold it.

Mr. ASHURST. Out of order, and as in executive session, I report favorably from the Committee on the Judiciary a nomination, which I will ask to have read and then placed on the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the nomination.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Albert Lee Stephens, of California, to be United States district judge, southern district of California, to fill position created by act approved August 2, 1935.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nomination will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

CONVENTION WITH ARGENTINA

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I have a letter addressed to me by the Secretary of State in reference to Executive O, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, being a convention with Argentina with reference to sanitary regulations concerning plant and animal products. The Secretary of State desires that this convention and the letter addressed to me be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the letter and the convention were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AUGUST 20, 1935.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR PITTMAN: In view of the wide-spread misapprehension which has arisen concerning the sanitary convention between the United States and Argentina, signed May 24, 1935 (Executive O, 74th Cong., 1st sess.), I am writing this letter requesting that the text of that instrument be made public by the Senate before adjournment so that interested parties may have an opportunity to examine it thoroughly. The text has already been made public in Argentina.

Numerous inquiries addressed to me contain mistakes of fact, which I hope will be corrected by the publication of the text. Many correspondents do not realize that the convention covers only sanitary measures affecting plant and animal products and that it does not relate to live animals, or to the duties on either animals or plant or animal products. The embargo against live animals from all parts of Argentina will not be changed in any particular by the convention.

One of the chief objects of the trade-agreements program is to restore and promote the exportation of our great agricultural surpluses, such as hog and corn products, tobacco, cotton, fruits, and other commodities. Many nations have erected import restrictions and barriers against these commodities by way of retaliation against measures adopted by the United States which they consider excessive and arbitrary. International trade cannot be restored until unreasonable barriers, both here and abroad, have been removed.

A serious barrier to international trade is found in sanitary measures which restrict trade more than is necessary to accomplish the purposes for which they are imposed. For example, on January 22, 1929, the United Kingdom placed an embargo on animals, hay, straw, and alfalfa meal imported from Colorado. The reason given for the embargo was an epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease then prevalent in California. Protests were made, and following the determination of the fact that the disease was restricted to California the embargo on products of Colorado was lifted in February of that year. On May 2, 1932, because of an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in California, an order was issued in the United Kingdom prohibiting importation of live ruminants, swine, hay, and straw from any part of the United States. On May 21, it having been discovered that the outbreak was local to California, an amending order was issued limiting the prohibition to products originating in California. In the meantime, however, the application of the prohibition to the whole of the United States had acted to the detriment of noninfected districts. I cite these examples to show the harmful effects of embargoing products of a whole country when only part of that country is subject to infectious or contagious disease. It is difficult to make representations against such practices by foreign countries when we ourselves have a section of the tariff act which appears to foreign countries to be a glaring example of such legislation. Our own practice is even less defensible than the examples which I have cited, when, as in the case of Argentina, the embargo on meat applies against a large section of a country which our own experts hold to be free from foot-and-mouth disease.

Ratification of the sanitary convention with Argentina would be in keeping with the principle expressed in a resolution adopted at the Fourth Pan American Commercial Conference which met in Washington during October 1931. This resolution reads:

"1. To acknowledge as fundamental principles that sanitary police regulations effective at the present time, or enacted in the future to regulate the inter-American traffic of vegetable and animal products must not have in their practical application the character of protective customs measures.

"2. That in the application of all restrictions of a sanitary nature in the inter-American traffic of animal and vegetable products, in order to determine the origin of the product, the term "infected zones" be used instead of "infected countries"; upon condition that the country of origin give all necessary facilities to determine its sanitary condition.

"3. To recommend to the American countries the negotiation of agreements for the regulation of the foregoing principles."

The convention with Argentina would not deprive this Government of the right to impose the most rigid sanitary embargo against every foot of territory which this Government judges to be affected with or exposed to foot-and-mouth disease. This convention was negotiated with the assistance of experts of the Bureau of Animal Industry and the Division of Plant Quarantine of the Department of Agriculture. The Department of Agriculture stated that there is understood to be—

"Nothing in the convention which will materially affect import regulations of the Department aside from those based upon section 306 (a) of the Tariff Act of 1930, relating to fresh and frozen meats, and that in respect to these ratification of the convention would merely remove from the prohibition of that section such meats originating in the remote region known as "Patagonia", which at present is considered to be free from dangerous diseases of livestock."

Foot-and-mouth disease, the Department is reliably informed by the experts of the Department of Agriculture, has never been known to occur in Patagonia during the 30 years that records have been kept. That territory is amply protected from exposure to the disease by deserts, mountains, and the sea. Control is simple because of the few points of export. It is planned that the experts of the Department of Agriculture will periodically reexamine the situation in all territories in Argentina to determine their freedom from diseases and exposure to diseases.

The effect of the convention with Argentina will be to restore insofar as concerns that country the provisions of the first sanitary embargo that was imposed by our Department of Agriculture in January 1927, under Order 298, which authorized the prohibition of imported meats from any part of the world, whether from a country or a region or area of a country, but which permitted imports from uninfected areas of a country. This order of the Department of Agriculture continued in operation until the Smoot-Hawley Act wrote it into law, but so enlarged it that embargoes are required against every part of a country in which infection exists or which has been exposed to infection, even though well-defined areas of the country were known never to have been affected with or exposed to the foot-and-mouth or any other objectionable disease.

The effects of the convention on imports into the United States of meat from freezing establishments only in Patagonia, which is almost exclusively a sheep-raising territory, would be negligible. A careful study of the possibility of Patagonia's exporting lamb and mutton to the United States was made in connection with this convention. There are only three plants in Argentine Patagonia physically equipped for exportation to the United States market. The market is, for reasons of consumers' prejudices, regarded as impractical, and the market for lamb would not be on a commercial basis owing to the short killing season in Patagonia from mid-February to mid-April, which does not coincide with the favorable season for frozen lamb in New York and other coastal cities, ranging from mid-November to mid-March. Without any charge for overhead, but including American import duties on lambs, the cost of Patagonian frozen lambs c. i. f. New York is 14 cents per pound dressed weight, whereas current c. i. f. prices are 12½ cents to 14½ cents. The necessary overhead charge for profitable operation is estimated at 5 cents per pound dressed weight, which would increase the c. i. f. New York price to 19 cents. Regular steamers now serving Patagonian ports have refrigerating capacity for only 25 tons weekly.

London is the natural market for Patagonian lamb. The price differential for Patagonian meat in New York and London is strongly in favor of shipments to London. The duty on lamb meat imported into the United States is 7 cents per pound, while such meat enters Great Britain free of duty.

Allow me also to invite your attention to the state of our trade with Argentina.

Prior to 1930, Argentina was one of the most important of our foreign markets. In 1929 our exports to that country were valued at $210,288,027, while our imports of Argentine products amounted to $117,581,273. The tariff increases and the sanitary embargo in the Tariff Act of 1930 reduced Argentine exports to the United States. Since that act came into force, Argentina has changed her former policy of opening her markets on equal terms to all countries to a policy of "buy from those who buy from us." The carrying out of this policy has naturally adversely affcted American exporters. Exports from the United States to Argentina in 1934 were valued at only $42,696,263 and imports amounted to only $29,487,327.

American cattle raisers have a vital interest in the removal of unreasonable trade barriers and in whatever can be done to increase the sale and export of American meats. The domestic purchasing power of consumers of beef and beef products is much reduced when producers of agricultural and other surpluses are shut off from foreign markets. It is clearly of interest to American producers of surplus agricultural products to do away with unfair and artificial trade barriers which have proved to be a boomerang and have prevented access to foreign markets, especially when no injustice is done to American cattle raisers.

It is the Department's considered belief that opposition to this convention by stock-raising groups would be a short-sighted policy which would in the long run prove of grave cost to American agriculture as a whole. The failure to ratify this convention and the persistence in an embargo from the whole of Argentina on sanitary grounds, when the experts of the Department of Agriculture recognize that it is without foundation so far as Patagonia is concerned, would be taken as notice that this Government does not intend to deal fairly or frankly in trade matters. We cannot afford to acquire such a reputation.

In conclusion, it may be stated that the Department has given the most thorough consideration to every phase of this matter. It has consulted every available expert in the Government service and has obtained reports from its consular officers in Argentina. Imports which, as stated, would be negligible in any event would come only from an area which the records of the past 30 years show to have been free from foot-and-mouth disease, and the experts of the Department of Agriculture would pass upon each shipment on its arrival at a port of this country.

It is not planned to enter into a similar convention with any other country, and if the question should arise such a convention would not be signed with another country unless it was clearly shown that parts of its territory were entirely unaffected by and unexposed to infection by rinder pest and foot-and-mouth disease. The Department considers that this convention is outside the scope of the most-favored-nation clause of every treaty to which the United States is a party. It is for all of the foregoing reasons, as well as in order to remove a measure which is so unfair to Argentina and has been productive of ill-will and economic retaliation in our relations with that country that I earnestly support this convention.

If you perceive no objection, I should be glad if this letter might be read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD in order that the foregoing statements may be brought to the attention of persons interested in the convention.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

CONVENTION WITH ARGENTINA WITH REFERENCE TO SANITARY REGULATIONS CONCERNING PLANT AND ANIMAL PRODUCTS

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to obtaining the advice and consent of the Senate to the ratification thereof, I transmit herewith a convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Argentina with reference to sanitary regulations concerning plant and animal products. The agreement is described and explained in the accompanying report of the Secretary of State, to which the Senate's attention is invited.

The purpose of entering into this convention is to establish cooperation in the prevention of the introduction and spread of infectious and contagious plant and animal diseases and insect pests and to facilitate the visits and studies of Government experts engaged in surveys in regard to these matters. The interests of this Government are fully protected in article III which reserves to the respective governments the right to prohibit importations from any territories or zones which it finds to be affected with or exposed to contagion or infestation.

The same article provides that neither country may prohibit the importation of products from territories of the other, which it finds to be not affected or exposed to such contagion or infestation, because diseases or pests exist in other territories or zones. This provision operates to prevent the use of sanitary regulations as a disguised means of restriction of importations for protective purposes, and accordingly fulfills as between the United States and Argentina Resolution No. XXVIII of the Fourth Pan American Commercial Conference, held in Washington in October 1931.

The convention also provides for consultation as to the application of sanitary laws and regulations and for the establishment of a committee of experts, in the event of disputes as to sanitary regulations, with power to submit recommendations to the two Governments.

In view of all of the foregoing considerations, I believe this convention to be highly desirable, and I ask the Senate to advise and consent to its ratification in the interest of trade and good understanding between the two countries.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

(Accompaniments: Convention; Report of the Secretary of State.)

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 5, 1935.

The PRESIDENT:

I have the honor to send you herewith a convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Argentina with respect to sanitary regulations concerning plant and animal products, signed at Washington, May 24, 1935. This convention has been signed, in accordance with the full power issued by you, subject to ratification, and accordingly it is sent to you with a view to transmission to the Senate for the purpose of receiving the advice and consent of that body to its ratification, if you approve thereof.

This convention formulates measures of cooperation between the two Governments toward the accomplishment of their mutual desire to prevent the introduction and spread of infectious and contagious plant and animal diseases and insect pests.

Article I provides for prompt notification by each Government to the other Government of the appearance and extent of plant and animal diseases and insect pests, dangerous to human, animal, or plant life.

Article II provides for the exchange of official and scientific information. It permits, and requires the facilitation of, visits of experts of the Government of one country engaged in studying and observing the existence, distribution, and methods of control and eradication of diseases and pests in the territory of the other country.

Article III provides that each party recognizes the right of the importing country to prohibit the importation of animal or plant products originating in or coming from territories or zones which it considers to be affected with or exposed to plant or animal diseases or insect pests. That article also provides that neither country may prohibit importations from territories or zones in the other country which it finds to be free from, and not exposed to, contagion or infestation for the reason that diseases or pests exist in other territories or zones.

This article of the convention will fulfill as between the United States and Argentina Resolution No. XXVIII adopted by the Fourth Pan American Commercial Conference held in Washington in October 1931, which reads as follows:

"The Fourth Pan American Commercial Conference Resolves:

1. To acknowledge as fundamental principles that sanitary police regulations effective at the present time, or enacted in the future to regulate the inter-American traffic of vegetable and animal products, must not have in their practical application the character of protective customs measures.

"2. That in the application of all restrictions of a sanitary nature in the inter-American traffic of animal and vegetable products, in order to determine the origin of the product, the term "infected zones" be used instead of "infected countries"; upon condition that the country of origin give all necessary facilities to determine its sanitary condition.

"3. To recommend to the American countries the negotiation of agreements for the regulation of the foregoing principles."

Article IV of the convention provides that certificates of origin or inspection of plant and animal products issued by the appropriate officers of either country shall be accepted as proof of such origin or inspection; but such certificates do not preclude further investigation or inspection by the importing country.

Article V provides for consultation with respect to the application of sanitary laws and regulations. In the event of disagreement as to the application of such laws and regulations, this article provides that a committee of technical experts shall be constituted to consider the matter and make recommendations to the two Governments. Provision is also made for consultation prior to the application of any new sanitary measure.

The approval of this convention will do much toward strengthening friendly intercourse between the United States and Argentina, and will place their relations with respect to sanitary laws and regulations upon a just and scientific basis, without impairing the sovereign right of either Government to impose sanitary measures deemed necessary in its judgment for the protection of its livestock and agricultural interests.

Respectfully submitted.

CORDELL HULL.

(Enclosure: Convention.)

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 4, 1935.

The United States of America and the Republic of Argentina, being desirous of cooperating to prevent the introduction and spread of infectious and contagious plant and animal diseases and of insect pests, have agreed to conclude a convention for that purpose, and have appointed as their respective plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America: Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State of the United States of America;

The President of the Republic of Argentina: His Excellency Dr. Felipe A. Espil, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Argentina at Washington;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Argentina will notify each other promptly, through the usual diplomatic channels, of the appearance and extent of plant and animal diseases and of insect pests dangerous to human, animal, or plant life.

ARTICLE II

The two contracting Governments will exchange the official regulations, periodicals, and other publications that may be issued in the respective countries on the subject-matter of this convention and likewise information concerning changes and substitutions which may be developed in the methods of prophylaxis, control, and care of plant and animal diseases and insect pests.

Each Government will permit visits to or stationing in its territories of experts and representatives of the other Government for the purpose of studying and observing on the ground the existence, distribution and methods of control and eradication of such diseases and pests as may appear in its territory. Each Government will facilitate, so far as possible, the studies and observations of the experts or representatives of the other Government.

ARTICLE III

Each contracting party recognizes the right of the other party to prohibit the importation of animal or plant products, originating in or coming from territories or zones which the importing country considers to be affected with or exposed to plant or animal diseases or insect pests dangerous to plant, animal, or human life, until it has been proved to the satisfaction of the party exercising such right that such territory or zone of the other party is free from such contagion or infestation or exposure to contagion or infestation. Neither contracting party may prohibit the importation of animal or plant products originating in and coming from territories or zones of the other country which the importing country finds to be free from animal or plant diseases or insect pests or from exposure to such diseases or pests, for the reason that such diseases or pests exist in other territories or zones of the other country.

ARTICLE IV

Certificates of origin or inspection of plant and animal products, issued by duly authorized sanitary officials of either of the contracting countries, shall be accepted by the authorities of the other country as proof of such origin or inspection, as the case may be, but the issuance of such certificates by the authorities of one of the contracting countries shall not preclude further inspection of the products by the authorities of the other country, or further investigation with respect to them, to determine their freedom from infection or infestation or exposure to disease or insect pests, before entry is permitted.

ARTICLE V

The Government of the United States of America or the Government of the Republic of Argentina, as the case may be, will accord sympathetic consideration to such representations as the other Government may make regarding the application of sanitary laws and regulations or the protection of human, animal, or plant life.

In the event that the Government of either of the contracting countries makes representations to the Government of the other country in respect of the application of any sanitary law or regulation for the protection of human, animal, or plant life, and if there is disagreement with respect thereto, a committee of technical experts on which each contracting Government will be represented shall, on the request of either Government, be established to consider the matter and to submit recommendations to the two Governments.

Whenever practicable each Government, before applying any new measure of a sanitary character, will consult with the Government of the other country with a view to insuring that there will be as little injury to the commerce of the latter country as may be consistent with the purpose of the proposed measure. The provisions of this paragraph do not apply to actions affecting individual shipments under sanitary measures already in effect or to actions based on pure food and drug laws.

ARTICLE VI

This convention shall be ratified and the ratification shall be exchanged at the city of Washington as soon as possible.

The convention shall come into force on the day of exchange of ratifications and shall remain in force until sixty days after either contracting party shall have given notice to the other party of its intention to terminate the convention.

In witness whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done in duplicate, in the English and Spanish languages, at the city of Washington this twenty-fourth day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-five.

CORDELL HULL. [SEAL]
FELIPE A. ESPIL. [SEAL]

PROTECTION OF DOMESTIC SOURCES OF TIN

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 1421, Senate bill 3381.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill, which the clerk will report by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 3381) to provide for the protection and preservation of domestic sources of tin.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I inquire, what does the bill provide?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read the bill.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the interest of national defense, it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress and the purpose and intent of this act to protect, preserve, and develop domestic sources of tin, to restrain the depletion of domestic reserves of tin-bearing materials, and to lessen the present costly and dangerously dependent position of the United States with respect to resources of tin.

SEC. 2. There shall not be exported from the United States after the expiration of 60 days from the enactment of this act any tinplate scrap, except upon license issued by the President of the United States. The President is authorized to grant licenses upon such conditions and regulations as he may find necessary to assure in the public interest fair and equitable consideration to all producers of this commodity.

SEC 3. Any violations of the provisions of this act shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment of not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey from what committee was the bill reported?

Mr. BARBOUR. The bill has been reported favorably by the Committee on Military Affairs, and I may say that a similar bill passed both the Senate and the House at the last session. It was vetoed, however, by the President, although it had the approval of the several departments which were concerned. But, as I understand, the State Department felt that as the bill related to exports a definite necessity for its passage should be more clearly shown, and the Department suggested, if I recall correctly, that hearings be held to establish this national need and necessity.

In the meantime, therefore, there have been very exhaustive hearings held in the House, and the Military Affairs Committee of the House has reported favorably a similar bill in that body. As I understand, there is the hope of expectancy, by some special rule or order, the House bill may pass today in the other Chamber.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Senator that the bill passed both Houses at the last session, but was vetoed by the President, I shall have to interpose an objection.

Mr. BARBOUR. If I may, let me ask the distinguished Senator from Arkansas please to be good enough to withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. BARBOUR. Let me stress again that the objection on the part of the President, as I understand it, was that there had been no hearings at that time or other establishment of natural necessity as need. I took up the matter myself originally with the President last year and he favored it, and it was at his direction that I took the whole subject up in detail with all the different departments involved which, in turn, have sanctioned it. They did so at the last session and they have done so again now.

I feel—and I am very earnest about this matter—in the light of these exhaustive hearings and the favorable reports we have from all the interested departments, particularly may I stress, in the light of the appearance unhappily, of an emergency at just the present time in respect to our national defense that it would be a great pity, a great mistake, if I may say so, if the bill were not allowed to pass at this time.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. BARBOUR. I yield gladly to the distinguished Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. May I ask the Senator, this being a Senate bill, if the House may act today, why not wait until the House bill comes to the Senate and act on that bill, instead of on the Senate bill?

Mr. BARBOUR. Well, Mr. President, it seems to me that would certainly be a distinction without a difference and no particular purpose served. As a matter of fact, if we could now pass the Senate bill, it would undoubtedly help the situation in the House. And, please remember that, so far as I know, there is no objection to the bill from any quarter.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I inquire what was the ground of the Presidential veto?

Mr. BARBOUR. As I understand and as I tried to explain earlier in the discussion, it was felt that insufficient cause or necessity had been shown. In other words, there had been no hearings when the bill was to the fore in the last session.

Mr. BORAH. Has that objection now been obviated?

Mr. BARBOUR. I honestly think so; absolutely. There have been very exhaustive hearings in the House anyway, and those hearings show definitely that necessity does exist.

I want to point out, too, that we must remember that there is no domestic source of tin in the United States. The only source of tin is in its recapture; and there is—or, at least, has been—a large industry in that business, a useful industry and one of national value, particularly in respect to our national defense.

Mr. President, let me point out further that the interruption which took place in relation to that source of supply, so far as its availability to this country was concerned, was caused by the Japanese, who began buying up all the scrap tin and ran the price up from, I believe something like $2 a ton—I think that was the unit—to $20 a ton, as I understand it, and, because of their low labor rates and levels, they were able to pay almost any price for scrap tin. The domestic purchasers of scrap tin, however, who recapture the tin—and that, as I have stated, is our only source of supply of tin in the United States—were unable to pay these high prices because of their labor cost, and for that reason they were unable to purchase the scrap tin any longer. That situation, as I have said, was brought to the President's attention last year. He seemed entirely sympathetic with it, and it was at his direction, as I have previously mentioned, that I took the matter up, as I recall, with the War Department, the Department of Commerce, and the State Department. They all approved, as I remember, and the bill passed both Houses, but the President vetoed it for the reasons already stated.

My understanding is that in some later ruling the State Department stated that it felt that a greater need must be demonstrated than simply was evidenced by the bill itself. And that need has now been demonstrated, I believe, by the hearings in the House. To repeat, the report of the House committee is favorable, the report of the Senate committee is favorable, and the reports of the departments are all favorable.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ROBINSON. I observe, Mr. President, that the Secretary of War, commenting upon the bill—and, apparently, expressing a favorable view regarding it—said:

> For the above reasons, the War Department would impose no objection to the enactment into law of H. R. 9275.

Which, I understand, is identical with the Senate bill.

I do not feel justified in interposing an objection in view of the record.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRODUCTION COSTS OF WOOD PULP OR PULP WOOD

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate Resolution 195 was agreed to, and will avail myself of an early opportunity to discuss the matter with the author of the resolution.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator to what the resolution relates?

Mr. ROBINSON. The resolution relates to the cost of production of wood pulp or pulp wood.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion will be entered.

Mr. ROBINSON subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that the motion which I entered a few moments ago to reconsider the vote by which Senate Resolution 195 was adopted be now voted upon. I will state it is my purpose to ask that the resolution go to the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be placed on the calendar.

REPORT ON INACTIVE AND PERMANENT APPROPRIATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States (supplementing his report of Feb. 27, 1935; H. Doc. No. 115), transmitting, pursuant to law, a further special report on the survey made by his office of the inactive and permanent appropriations and funds on the books of the Government, and also certain funds in the custody of officers and employees of the United States in which the Government is financially concerned for which no accounting is rendered to the General Accounting Office, and recommending certain changes in existing law relating thereto, which, with the accompanying special report, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Howard Friends League, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against alleged repression and persecution of the Jews, Catholics, and Masons in Germany by the Government of Germany, and favoring the severance of diplomatic relations with that Government, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the national executive committee of the United Typothetae of America, at Washington, D. C., favoring administration of the Works Progress Administration in such manner that the printing in connection therewith may be purchased from private printers and suppliers rather than from the Government Printing Office, which were referred to the Committee on Printing.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia, favoring the enactment of House Joint Resolution 237, providing for the establishment of the Cliver Wendell Holmes Memorial Fund, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HOLT presented petitions of members of the congregations of the First and Second United Brethren Churches, of Martinsburg, W. Va., praying for the preservation of peace and the outlawry of war as a national policy in the settlement of international disputes, which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 3453) limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to certain counsel, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3783) for the relief of George W. Rhine, doing business under the name of Rhine & Co., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1443) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4178) for the relief of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1444) thereon.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 1550) for the relief of Douglas B. Espy, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1445) thereon.

Mr. WHITE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 1299) giving jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1446) thereon.

Mr. TYDINGS, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7974) to withdraw and restore to their previous status under the control of the Territory of Hawaii certain Hawaiian homes lands now in use as an airplane landing field, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 3257) to amend the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1448) thereon.

ORIGINAL JOINT RESOLUTION REPORTED BY COMMERCE COMMITTEE

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 175) to extend the time within which contracts may be modified or canceled under the provisions of section 5 of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1934, which was read twice by its title and ordered to be placed on the calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. STEIWER:

A bill (S. 3456) for the relief of the legal guardian of Roy D. Cook, a minor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 3457) for the relief of B. A. Duffy and his wife, Merle Duffy; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLACK:

A bill (S. 3458) for the relief of George Smith and Ketha Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HATCH:

A bill (S. 3459) authorizing the Farm Credit Administration, Federal land banks, and other Federal agricultural loan agencies to make loans upon lands in drainage, irrigation, and conservancy districts notwithstanding the existence of prior liens for special benefits conferred by such districts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry;

A bill (S. 3460) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the persons entitled to compensation on account of private claim 111, parcel 1, Nambe Pueblo grant; to the Committee on Indian Affairs; and

A bill (S. 3461) for the relief of members and their dependents of the Russian Railway Service Corps, World War; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) to provide a medium for the adjudication of the remaining claims of American nationals against the Government of Germany, contemplated under the terms of the Treaty of Berlin, dated August 25, 1921; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

SALE OF LANDS TO HOT SPRINGS, N. MEX.

Mr. HATCH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 7024) to authorize the sale by the United States to the municipality of Hot Springs, N. Mex., of the northeast half of the southeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 6, township 14 south, range 4 west, Hot Springs, N. Mex., which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 2203. An act to promote the development of Indian arts and crafts and to create a board to assist therein, and for other purposes;

S. 2608. An act to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933; and

S. 2761. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine claims of certain bands or tribes of Indians residing in the State of Oregon.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2621) to provide funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Devils Lake, N. Dak., in the construction, extension, and betterment of the high-school building at Devils Lake, N. Dak., to be available to Indian children, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 8511. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Cannon Ball school district, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children;

H. R. 8512. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Fort Yates school district, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children;

H. R. 8513. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Trenton school district, Williams County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children;

H. R. 8515. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Sanish School District No. 1, Mountrail County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children;

H. R. 8516. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Porcupine school district, Sioux County, N. Dak., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children; and

H. R. 8726. An act to provide funds for cooperation with the board of trustees of the Warner Springs union school district, Warner Springs, Calif., in the construction of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Los Coyotes and Volcan Indian Reservations, Calif.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1763. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust the compensation of certain employees in the Customs Service", approved May 29, 1928, as amended by the act of December 12, 1930;

S. 1787. An act to add certain lands to the Pisgah National Forest in the State of North Carolina;

S. 1817. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., against the United States in respect of loss of property occasioned by the breaking of a Government dike on Squaw Island;

S. 1832. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide by agreement with Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District, a subdivision of the State of New Mexico, for maintenance and operation on newly reclaimed Pueblo Indian lands in the Rio Grande Valley, N. Mex., reclaimed under previous act of Congress, and authorizing an annual appropriation to pay the cost thereof for a period of not to exceed 5 years;

S. 1864. An act for the relief of the State of Nebraska;

S. 2649. An act to provide for a recreation area within the Prescott National Forest, Ariz.;

S. 2681. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Lake Champlain at or near West Swanton, Vt.;

S. 3194. An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended;

S. 3270. An act to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia;

S. 3336. An act to repeal titles I and II of the National Prohibition Act, to reenact certain provisions of title II thereof, to amend or repeal various liquor laws, and for other purposes;

S. 3353. An act providing for the exchange of certain park lands at and near Western Avenue and West Beach Drive for other lands more suitable to the development of Rock Creek Park and the street system of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6361. An act to amend the Filled Milk Act;

H. R. 7380. An act authorizing the Virgin Islands Co. to settle valid claims of its creditors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7927. An act to authorize the Secretary of State to lease to citizens of the United States any land heretofore or hereafter acquired under any act, Executive order, or treaty in connection with projects, in whole or in part constructed or administered by the Secretary of State through the International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, American section; and

H. R. 8473. An act to provide for the compiling and publishing of the Official Register of the United States.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO BOY SCOUTS

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an inspiring address delivered last evening by the President of the United States over a Nation-wide radio broadcast to the Boy Scouts of America.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

For more than a year I had been looking forward to taking part in a great National Scout Jamboree to be held in Washington. The best-laid plans sometimes go awry. A splendid program and a wonderful camp had been prepared for the reception of 30,000 Boy Scouts and Scouters in the National Capital. You were coming here from every point of the compass, and in addition to the American Scouts, our brother Scouts from 27 other nations had accepted invitations to send delegations.

But, alas, a rather serious epidemic of infantile paralysis arose in the vicinity of Washington and on August 8 the United States Public Health Service and the health officers of the District and the nearby States concluded that to hold the jamboree would be a hazard. With great reluctance, therefore, we had to call it off.

But for this unfortunate happening I would have reviewed this day the thousands of Scouts lined up the length of Constitution Avenue, and later we would all have had a party on the White House lawn. I want you, in your own home towns, to know how sorry I am that I cannot be with you myself. I am in spirit with each and every one of your gatherings tonight.

You boys, old and young, in every part of this broad land—present Scouts and former Scouts—your numbers running into the millions—constitute a very real part of our American citizenship. We are bound together in a democracy operating under a Constitution whose purpose was and is "to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

DEVELOPS UNSELFISHNESS

The success of that constitution is dependent on the attitude of mind and the degree of the spirit of unselfish cooperation that can be developed in individuals. Scouting is essentially and clearly a program for the development of that unselfish, cooperative attitude of mind. Scouting revolves around, not the theory of service to others, but the habit of service to others. Scouting makes the individual boy conscious of his obligation to his patrol, to his troop, to his community, to his State, and to his Nation.

Even before you become of voting age you actually have a part in civic affairs and you bear responsibilities in your home communities. We older citizens are very proud of the many contributions that individual Scouts and Scout organizations have made to the relief of suffering, to the maintenance of good order and good health, and to the furtherance of good citizenship and good government.

You who are active Scouts are, in addition, learning many useful things—knowledge which will stay with you all your lives. You are having opportunities to fall in love with and understand the great outdoors. Do not ever fall out with Nature and her wide-open breathing spaces. Love them. They will sustain and strengthen you in later years when confining circumstances of life may tend to narrow the spirit or soul that is in you.

I do not have to tell you to throw yourselves, with all the enthusiasm and the energy that you have, into your Scout work, into the programs of your patrols and troops and councils. But I do want to express to you the very deep hope that when you grow older and get out into the stream of life you will retain that same enthusiasm and energy and that you will apply it through every day and every year of your lives. The Scout motto, "Be prepared", applies just as much to the wider service which is your opportunity when your full civic responsibilities are attained.

Just as you are individually a necessary part of your patrol or your troop today, so will you become necessary parts of the citizenship of your communities. I do not have to remind you that one individual who lags behind slows up the whole troop. In the Navy we have an old saying—that the speed of a fleet is no greater than the speed of the slowest ship.

When you go out into life you will come to understand that the individual in your community who always says "I can't" or "I won't"—the individual who by inaction or opposition slows up honest, practical, far-seeing community effort is the fellow who is holding back civilization and holding back the objectives of the Constitution of the United States.

We need more Scouts—the more the better—for the record shows that, taking it by and large, boys trained as Scouts make good citizens.

I hope a jamboree, in place of the one we missed this year, will be planned for some time in the future. In the meantime, I send you my warm greetings, personally, and as the honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America.

Good luck to you and carry on.

DEMOCRACY IN INDUSTRY

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article written by William B. Dickson, formerly associated with the United States Steel Corporation, more latterly with the Midvale Steel & Ordnance Co. until 1923. The article illustrates in a very lucid and accurate manner some of the fundamental reasons for favorable action upon Senate bill 3363, which I recently introduced for the regulation of commerce among the States.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The following brief sketch of the business experience of the writer is given so that the reader may have some information on which to form an opinion as to his qualifications to deal with his subject:

As a boy of 15 he was employed in manual labor in the Homestead Steel Works of the Carnegie Steel Co. during a period when the plant was operated on two turns of 12 hours each and in some departments 7 days a week, night and day work alternating each week.

After 8 years in the mills in various occupations he was transferred to the Pittsburgh office and later became a junior partner and managing director.

Upon the formation of the United States Steel Corporation in 1901 he came to New York with Mr. Charles M. Schwab, and for 10 years was a vice president of that corporation.

In 1911 he retired from business. Four years later he helped to organize the Midvale Steel & Ordnance Co. and was vice president, treasurer, and director until it was merged with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation in 1923.

DEMOCRACY IN INDUSTRY

"History shows that great economic and social forces flow like a tide over communities only half conscious of that which is befalling them. Wise statesmen foresee what time is thus bringing, and try to shape institutions and mold men's thoughts and purposes in accordance with the change that is silently coming on.

"The unwise are those who bring nothing constructive to the process, and who greatly imperil the future of mankind, by leaving great questions to be fought out between ignorant change on one hand, and ignorant opposition to change, on the other."

One of the gravest errors in dealing with social and economic problems is to assume that our democratic institutions are static and self-perpetuating. We live and plan as though our social order were as changeless as the Arcadian scene depicted on Keats' "Grecian Urn."

The universe is not static but terribly dynamic. We are only beginning to realize that human relations, social, economic, and political, are subject to this same law of change. We live in an era in which the tempo of change, from the material standpoint, has been so accelerated that we are in grave danger of losing the ability to control the interrelationships of these three phases of civilization.

The men of 1776, who achieved our independence, were nearer akin economically to the Egyptians of the Exodus, than to their own descendants of the present generation with its bewildering inventions.

Most of the men who fought from Concord and Lexington to Yorktown, were farmers or men of occupations in close economic contact with farms. When they went to war, the older men, women, and children continued the regular routine of the farm, which supplied practically all the family needs: wood for building and fuel; cattle for milk, butter, and cheese; poultry for eggs and feathers; sheep for wool and flax for linen; the increase of flocks and herds for meats, leather, and candles; fields, gardens, and orchards for hay, grain, vegetables, and fruits. In brief (and this is my principal theme), each family was an independent economic unit.

These were the people to whom we owe the establishment of our republican form of government, based on democratic principles. Let us now try to appraise the men (and the enfranchised women also) on whom we must depend for the maintenance of democratic institutions.

In 1776, politics and religion were the principal cohesive factors in the social organization. Manufacture and commerce, while important, had not yet become absolutely essential, for the reasons mentioned above. This condition was not changed greatly until after the Civil War, when the machine age brought economics to the front as a large factor in social relations. Since then, the development of the use of machinery and the growth of large industrial units, have produced social and economic changes, which, to future ages, no doubt will be the mark of a distinct era in history. Like all transition periods, this change has produced unforeseen results, not all of them beneficent.

Until the beginning of this century, men who were restless, or whose ambitions had been thwarted, or who had been unable to adapt themselves to the new industrial conditions, could find an outlet for their energies and their zeal for independence, by taking Horace Greeley's advice, "Go west, young man"; and it is to such men that we owe the building up of our great western Commonwealths. That avenue of escape is no longer open. Even if the land were available, recent events indicate that production in food products is nearing the saturation point.

We are face to face with the problems of the industrial age, from which there is no escape by change of environment. Let us now consider some of these problems.

When a man, or a number of men, for their own ends, create an industrial unit, they assume an obligation toward the human elements in that unit, and through them to the social order, which cannot be canceled nor suspended arbitrarily, without grave injustice to individuals and danger to the social order.

In a completely natural society every family, by reason of close and continuous contact with land and other natural resources, would be an independent economic unit. When this natural condition has been abandoned, whether voluntarily or otherwise, and men and women have become the servants of others, they have given up a natural right, and the employer has assumed an equivalent obligation. In social relations, as in physics, action and reaction are equal and opposite. The fact that neither the employee nor the employer has been conscious of this exchange, and that both have acted from purely selfish motives, does not alter the elemental fact which, in the great social aggregate, constitutes the unsolved problem of our age; the fact which is the basis of all social unrest.

This brings me to the heart of my theme. Not long ago I read in a paper a statement that a large corporation employing thousands of men and women might close its mills. The officers were quoted as follows: "We have had the matter under consideration, but we are not quite ready to announce a definite decision", etc. That "we", of course, meant the directors and officers, and, based on the past history of that company, there was no probability that the persons having the most vital interest in the decision had even been consulted.

To ultraconservatives this statement no doubt will sound like socialistic rant; but a calm consideration will convince any fair-minded person that it is true. Only a small percentage of the people owning stock in our industrial corporations have risked their entire fortune in the stock of any one company. They therefore have a distributed risk, so that the temporary passing of dividends by one company will affect them only to a limited extent. On the other hand, the vast majority of the employees of these corporations are dependent on their daily earnings, and to them the sudden cessation of employment spells disaster to their families. The gravity of this condition is evidenced by the report of the Department of Commerce showing over 6,000,000 persons unemployed in January.

There are two respects in which the modern worker differs radically from the worker of 1776. A marked characteristic of the present age is the high degree of specialization in factory work. The much-discussed moving platform at the Ford plant is the best example of this trend. Here we have men whose tasks are limited to a few motions, perhaps the placing of one bolt in its proper hole. The next man will screw it up. Men accustomed to such simple tasks and having no training in any other, when confronted with unemployment, are as helpless as babes. They differ from the founders of the Nation—

First. In that they have no voice in the consideration of questions which affect the continuity of their employment.

Second. When confronted by unemployment they lack both the ability and the opportunity to find any means of providing for the maintenance of their families.

They have ceased to be independent economic units, and have become serfs in an industrial feudal system, minus the stability of the ancient feudalism, for the reason that the modern feudal lord assumes no responsibility for their welfare when unemployed. And yet these men and women are the voters on whom depend the maintenance of our form of government. What is the answer? In my opinion, there is only one adequate answer—industrial democracy.

Democracy in political relations was achieved by the Revolutionary fathers. No man could then have foreseen that in a few generations there would come a revolution in industry which would produce a condition where the industrial relation of citizens to each other would be vastly more important in its effects on living conditions than their political relations.

Our free institutions are not static, but dynamic in the highest degree, and every generation must learn to adapt the vital forces of democracy to its own requirements. Our Government, republican in form, democratic in principle, is not an achievement in the sense of being a completed work. It is rather a process which must be subjected to the constant supervision of patriotic men if we are to avoid the melancholy fate of other democracies and prevent a retrogression to the crude forms of government by classes, which must be supported by force instead of reason. We need to emphasize the meaning of that phrase of the fathers: "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

In our generation, this vigilance is not to be directed so much to influences outside of our national boundaries as to tendencies within. The protection of our free institutions from outside aggression is a simple proposition and one which, if the occasion ever arises, will find our people united in a common purpose. Those developments within our own social structure which tend to undermine our free institutions are more dangerous, because more insidious, and therefore difficult to resolve into clear issues.

To be specific, the workers of America must be restored to a status of economic independence. This restoration can only be accomplished by applying democratic principles to industry. The individual cannot hope to deal with the corporation on equal terms. If he cannot do so, and is barred from association with his fellow employees in determining conditions of employment, he is no longer a free man but a serf, and the serf can have no place in a democracy.

It would be the utmost folly to seek a remedy by turning our industries over to organized labor as at present administered. This would be simply the exchange of a responsible autocracy for an irresponsible one.

A philosopher has said that the greatest tragedies are due, not to conflicts between right and wrong but to those between right and right.

The tragedy of the present conflict between organized capital and organized labor lies in the fact that a victory of either of these opposing forces over the other will only tend to perpetuate the vicious idea that they are necessarily arrayed in hostile camps; and that their normal relations are those of warfare, or at best, an armed truce.

Public opinion has rendered an adverse verdict against unrestrained combinations of capital, and Congress has attempted to provide methods of restraint such as the Sherman and Clayton Acts. In the light of experience it is probable that these will be modified, but this will be done carefully and in the public interest.

Public opinion has also rendered a favorable verdict on the abstract question of the right of workmen to organize for common defense. But the arbitrary and selfish use of the power of association by workmen is also a menace to the public welfare. The law should guard jealously the right of workmen to organize. This is the natural and inevitable corollary of the right of individuals to organize as stockholders. But having provided this protection in the fullest measure for the employees of a corporation, they should not be permitted to menace the public welfare by joint action with the employees of other corporations. This issue may be expressed thus:

Decentralization of control of American industries by organized labor is as essential to the public welfare as decentralization of control by organized capital.

This can only be accomplished by bringing labor organizations under control of the same Federal laws which safeguard the public from combinations of capital. This, of course, requires the incorporation of labor organizations, preferably into company associations, the membership of which will be limited to the employees of a single corporation.

These company associations, by their elected representatives, acting as shop committees, should have constant contact with the management for discussion of questions affecting their mutual relations.

As an officer of a large corporation I had close contact with the representatives of a company association. When the adoption of the plan was under consideration by the board of directors some fear was expressed that these men would meddle with questions which they were not competent to discuss, and which in any efficient organizations must be decided by the officers and directors.

From this experience there remains a most vivid impression of the manifest desire of these men to play fair, and, above all, their hunger for leadership. The only thing they demanded was absolute sincerity on the part of their leaders.

One of the causes of industrial weakness in the past has been the comparative aloofness of the management from labor. The managers, if fit for their positions, are the natural leaders of the workers, and will be so regarded by them if they will fulfill the elemental requirement of sincerity and will maintain the constant elbow touch. On the other hand, if they fail in these respects, the workers inevitably will seek outside leaders whose personal interests are remote from those of their followers and who too often degenerate into demagogues and disturbers of the social order.

Close contact with the members of the above-mentioned company association, superimposed on memories of a youth spent in the steel mills, has left me in no doubt of their ability to appreciate democracy (which, after all, is only another definition of the Golden Rule), and that the ethical standards of workingmen are not inferior to those of their employers, and they are equally able to weigh evidence and reach sound conclusions when fully informed and free to act.

How inconsistent, to fear to share with employees, business responsibilities which directly affect their livelihood, while at the same time they have in their hands the political power to enact laws which may affect business most profoundly.

The employees should also have equal representation on the board of directors. In no other way can the status of equality be maintained.

Mr. Carnegie was once asked: "Which is the most important factor in your business—capital, management, or labor?" He answered: "Which is the most important leg on a three-legged stool?" This is a complete answer, and, in its implications, presents not only a realistic picture of the problem confronting our age but also indicates the solution of that problem.

This ideal must be realized by giving each of these three partners a voice in all decisions which affect vitally the general welfare of all.

This will involve some radical changes in the method of administering industrial corporations. At present the management partner is usually the dominant factor in corporate administration. This is as it should be, with this proviso: The managers now derive their power from and act as the agents of the capital partner. Their functions should be enlarged so that in the consideration of all questions vitally affecting the general welfare they will give equal consideration to the labor partner. In fact, the interests of the labor partner should have first consideration as, in the long run, this attitude will work for the general good of all three partners.

Some of my readers may object to the idea of company associations of employees because they are apt to be dominated by the management. There can be no doubt that this feeling is entirely justified from the past history of most of our large industries. The autocratic attitude of employers, however it may have been tempered by benevolent welfare plans, has been too much in evidence to permit this changed status to remain in their control.

The remedy lies in three safeguards:

First, the innate spirit of American manhood; the same spirit which was manifested at Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill.

If our American workers are lacking in this spirit, there is no hope for the survival of democratic institutions, either in government or industry.

Second, the equal representation of the workers on boards of directors. This will be the seat of Mr. Carnegie's three-legged stool, binding it together and insuring fair dealing between the three partners.

Third, the right of appeal to the Federal Government, which will have exclusive jurisdiction over all corporations whose business extends beyond the limits of a single State. See suggestion below.

Chief Justice Marshall defined a corporation thus: "An artificial being, invisible, intangible, and existing only in the contemplation of the law."

There is a striking parallel between the history of some of our corporations and that weird tale, "Frankenstein", by Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley. Frankenstein, a Swiss scientist, having solved the secret of the generation of life, conceived the idea of constructing an artificial man.

He succeeded in making a monster 8 feet high but of such a repellent aspect that his maker, on observing his handiwork alive, abandoned him, fleeing in terror. The monster escaped, and, after a series of adventures, killed several members of Frankenstein's family, and, finally, was the cause of the death of his creator.

Like the Frankenstein monster, these modern artificial persons, our great corporations, have been abandoned, to a large degree, by their creators, the States, and now dominate our industrial life in such a manner as to endanger their creators.

These monsters (in power at least as compared with the individual citizen) by their autocratic attitude toward labor and the general public, may arouse passions which will destroy our social order.

And yet they are a necessary factor in modern trade and industry. How can the State foster them and still safeguard American democratic ideals?

This problem is inextricably interwoven with that of the proper relation of capital and labor.

The wonderful advances which have been made in living conditions, by discoveries in science, and by inventions, have changed the old status of family independence to one of mutual dependence. This is especially marked in the employees of our great industries, who are numbered by millions.

Within the experience of the elders of the present generation, our industries were on a comparatively simple basis. The employer was in close personal touch with his men and often worked with them.

The workers could see the intimate connection between their work and the source of their wages; and understood the processes of trade by which money was transferred from the consumer of their products to themselves.

Today this process has become so complex that it is not unfair to say that most of the workers have lost this realization of cause and effect which is so essential to right thinking.

A remarkable instance of this state of mind was shown by the naive protests of New York artisans against the high rents which they were compelled to pay, while these very men, by their unsocial practices in the building trades, as disclosed by the Lockwood committee, were the direct cause of these high rents.

Today we are confronted by the problem of the relation of capital to labor. This is the supreme issue of our generation. Like the traveler before the Sphinx, we must solve this riddle—or be destroyed.

I am not proposing these changes in our industrial system as a mere alternative to the present system but as an alternative to inevitable fascism on the right hand or chaos on the left.

There are too many signs of the rapid disintegration of the present autocratic system, to justify any policy of laissez faire.

The proposed system should be established, not as an act of grace on the part of the employer, but as a concrete recognition of the essential identity of interest of the three equal partners—capital, management, and labor.

The small State of Delaware has probably created more corporations than any other State in the Union. How much control has this State exercised over these artificial men? Practically none.

The remedy for this dangerous situation lies in taking from the States their power to create organizations over which they can exercise no efficient control, placing this power exclusively in the Federal Government, at least so far as corporations doing an interstate business are concerned.

The hazard of unemployment, the fear of which is the most unsettling factor in the relations of capital and labor, must be met by establishing by law unemployment-insurance funds, made up entirely of contributions by employer and employees. I will not attempt to determine the details of this plan. These should be worked out for each company, or for each class of industry, with the assistance of experienced insurance actuaries.

Some of my readers may raise the cry of "socialism." To any such I suggest a rereading of the quotation at the head of this article.

In this connection, it may be of interest to review briefly the history of a change in our industrial system which, when first proposed, was considered as a socialistic assault on our American ideals of individual responsibility.

Some years ago the writer was appointed president of a commission to make a study of the laws affecting employers and their workmen injured in the course of their employment. The commission was composed of 2 employers, 2 representatives of labor, and 2 members of the legislature. For more than a year the commission studied this question, holding many public meetings and inviting all interested persons to present their views. We were able to profit by the experience of New York, which had enacted a workmen's compensation law which had been declared unconstitutional.

At these public meetings we received little or no encouragement from employers. Their attitude was one of blind opposition to any change in the legal status. Our report, which included a proposed bill, was presented to the Governor, who passed it along to the legislature with his approval. A public hearing was held which was literally jammed with employers to whom an alarming appeal had been broadcast by the officers of their association. The attitude of unreasoning opposition was so apparent and so futile that a few days later the bill passed both houses with only one dissenting vote, and in the United States became one of the first practicable laws on this subject.

I venture the assertion that today no intelligent employer would desire to return to the old status, so marked by damage suits and ambulance-chasing lawyers and so unjust to both parties, when he can so easily cover this inescapable hazard by modern methods of insurance. The removal of the hazard of unemployment, so disturbing a factor in our social order, can and should be accomplished by the same methods.

The final step in securing the economic independence of the worker requires the adoption of definite plans for participation in profits. The details of such plans would differ according to circumstances, but to illustrate I suggest the following tentative plan:

Every corporation should be required by Federal legislation to maintain a system of accounting which should follow approved modern methods, taking into account all the hazards of business, such as fire, depreciation, bad debts, obsolescence, etc., and setting up ample reserves for each hazard.

It is most extraordinary that the Federal Government has not enacted such a law, in view of the great revenue, the income tax, which must be based largely on corporate accounting.

It has already done so in the case of national banks and railroads, where its interest is more remote. As an aside, I suggest that such a law might also prohibit the use of the word "surplus" in corporation statements. To the uninitiated, this word presents a vision of definite funds which can be used in an emergency, whereas it is simply a balancing figure to indicate the excess of the estimated assets over the estimated liabilities and, as a matter of fact, may consist to some extent of doubtful accounts, bricks, and mortar, and obsolete equipment. The item should read: "Excess of assets over liabilities, as above stated."

In the organization of an industrial unit three elements are essential—capital, management, and labor. All three of these must be attracted to the venture by the same lure, namely, wages. How shall the wage rates be established? There is only one practicable way; they must be determined by the existing social order—that is, by the rates prevailing at the time—for similar services.

If capital is to be lured from hidden places, it must have a reasonable guaranty of such a return as could be secured by investment in a Government bond in which the risk of impairment of principal is practically negligible, or a deposit in a savings bank. To be very conservative, let us say 3 percent. Please remember that as yet we are dealing only with the wages to be paid to each of the three partners.

In addition to the wages above mentioned, each partner must receive certain "safety" emoluments. Managers and workers must be protected by old-age and unemployment insurance, to which they should contribute, and by workmen's accident compensation as established by law.

Capital must be protected against impairment of principal by payment of an additional 3 percent on actual capital invested.

After the above wages and other emoluments have been charged against the cost of operations there should be a substantial profit remaining in normal times if the existence of the industry is justified. How should it be divided?

The fairest measure is found in the wages required to attract each individual member of the three classes. In other words, each person ceases to be considered as a member of a class and is treated as a separate unit. He receives his share of the profits in the same ratio that his wages bear to the aggregate wages paid to all of the three classes.

If it is deemed inadvisable to distribute in money all of the profits earned, the portion so withheld should be issued to the stockholders, managers, and workers in the form of stock or other evidence of ownership, using the same ratio as above.

If our industries could have faced the business collapse of 1929 with the three elements, capital, management, and labor, as equal partners, each appreciating the essential identity of interest, the further demoralization which is inevitable under the dole system could have been averted.

Instead of trying to lift ourselves by our boot straps as we are doing by limitation of production, greatly reduced hours of labor, and the futile attempt to maintain wage rates which were not being earned by the industries (and in the long run, wages must be earned before they can be paid to either of the three partners), every individual would be seeking to further the welfare of the company by any means in his power.

Referring again to the company whose officers were quoted above, the question may be raised as to what procedure other than a shut-down would have been in order.

